Andreanof group of islands had been occupied without opposition by United States troops, supported by naval forces.

Announcement Gives No Details

The American announcement gave no details of the date and extent of the operation, beyond saying that it was carried out "recently". Later, the United States navy reported air forces were operating from fields in the Andreanof group.

The United Nations have obtained a base close to the enemy through the landing of an American force in the Andreanof group. The Japanese have a base at Kiska, in the Aleutians but have withdrawn from Attu and Agattu Islands.

Though the exact position of the landing was not given, the distance from the nearest point of the Andreanof Islands to Kiska is only about 125 miles, and the farthest point is less than 400 miles.

Reason To Be Proud

Mr. Macdonald said the fact a Canadian naval force took part in the Aleutian operation provided yet another instance of how Canadian forces are co-operating with other forces of the United Nations.

"We have reason to be proud", he said, "of the work which our navy has been doing in the Atlantic ever since the first day of war. It has been both defensive and offensive, defending our coasts and our convoys, and taking offensive action against the enemy whenever our ships could contact him".

By its share in the Aleutians action, the Canadian Navy had helped to put the United Nations in better positions to attack the Japanese.

TOUGH LITTLE

official silence shrouded the details of the trip.

The St. Roch herself, spick and span in a new coat of white, looked none the worst for her feat. She had been forced completely out of water more than once by crushing ice packs, but she was built—14 years ago—to take just that kind of punishment.

The route she had followed was not revealed. But presumably it retraced in a general way that negotiated by Amundsen and his five seamen in the Norwegian sealing sloop "Gjoa."

Amundsen entered Lancaster Sound, at the top of Baffin Land and far above the Arctic Circle. He worked his way down Boothia Peninsula and to King William Land. After a long stay there, he travelled laboriously along the Northern coast of the mainland to King Point, where his craft was frozen in for months before breaking free of the ice to reach open water.

Purpose Not Disclosed

The St. Roch and her master were no strangers to the Arctic. They had been bucking the ice floes together since the ship's launching in 1928, and men who were familiar with Arctic travel said no better combination for the legendary voyage could have been brought together.

A curly native of Denmark, Harry Larsen has been called "the best Arctic skipper alive." He joined the seagoing branch of the Mounties in Vancouver, and since the St. Roch's launching in 1928 he has been in command of her.

Her regular beat has been the northwest Arctic, travelling around Point Barrow to bring supplies to the R.C.M.P. posts and other isolated points. She had been out to the Aleutian Islands, too.

Equipped with two-way radio, the St Roch was believed to have been in touch with R.C.M.P. headquarters during her long absence. Her crew were well posted on current events when they landed, though when they sailed the war was young and France had yet to fall.

WENDELL WILLKIE

rection he was travelling. They landed some distance ahead of the handcars, but the party left the railway, walked for 30 minutes along a sunken road for the sake of safety and then motored the rest of the way to its destination.

Willkie took the shelling calmly. "It looks as if the Japs were really after us," he remarked. "I'm complimented they pay me so much attention."

On his arrival at Chungking from Russia last Friday Willkie said that at one point his plane had been delayed by a Japanese aircraft. He gave no details of that incident, but minimized the possible danger by saying:—

"There is much more danger of my being killed by the kindness of the Chinese than by enemy bullets."

Saw Japs Moving About

From the Chinese-held south bank of the Yellow River Willkie peered 800 yards across the stream today into the muzzle of a Japanese gun poking from a cave-like implacement high up on the north bluffs.

Through a strong telescope in a Chinese artillery observation post he saw three Japanese soldiers moving about in front of the enemy position. There was no activity aside from the earlier brief shelling.

In a well-hidden concrete gun position Willkie inspected a polished Chinese six-inch piece and questioned the crew. In his chat with the Chinese he recalled he was an artillery captain in the First Great War.

In the afternoon he reviewed 10,000 officers and men of a division in depth, after a luncheon at which he was treated with wine recaptured from the Japanese by Chinese raiding parties.

At conclusion of his front-line tour he said: "I was impressed with the organization, training and qualities of the individual soldiers I saw. I have not the slightest doubt that if they were provided with adequate equipment they would perform superbly."

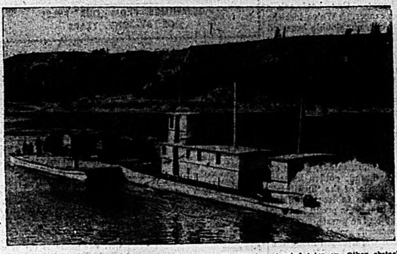
FERRY SERVICE ALONG NEW ALASKA HIGHWAY



Wide rivers were among the obstacles encountered while constructing the Alaska highway. The army built this sternwheeler on the spot as a ferry for barging vehicles across the river. Cut on the far bank marks the spot where permanent bridge will be constructed later on. Other obstacles were glaciers, swamps and mountains, all solved according to their nature.

IN PLANE CRASH

U.S. army authorities have disclosed that ten persons were killed and eight injured when a seaplane with 37 persons aboard crashed at Botwood, Newfoundland. One of the injured was Col. Alfred C. McNevin, ABOVE, of New York. He is associated with the Judge Advocate General's office. Most of those killed or injured were U. S. army officers.

Heart Disease—The Country's Outstanding Medical Problem

It is interesting to see how our various health problems one by one various health roblems one by one and, sometimes rapidly and other times slowly, achieve such gratifying results.

It is not more than thirty years ago since the problem of tuberculosis occupied the minds and energies of health departments and the battle has been now won.

Once it was realised that tuberculosis, so widespread yet everywhere concentrated among poor people, was largely the responsibility of health departments, constructive steps were taken, one after another by health officers and physicians so that within one generation tuberculosis institutions can accommodate more patients than apply.

It is with the above picture of the conquering of tuberculosis in mind, that the Metropolitan Insurance Company, in its information service, points out the need for a similar campaign against the ravages of heart disease.

"Heart disease is the country's outstanding medical problem today and will become increasingly serious as increasing numbers of people, owing to gradually lowering death rate, reach the advanced ages when heart disease is more common". A joining of forces by the private physician and the public health officer, which served so well to put down tuberculosis, is necessary if similar results are to be obtained".

How can heart disease be prevented. What can physicians and health agencies do about heart disease?

"Public health agencies must now intensify their preventive efforts against rheumatic fever and syphilis which are most important causes of heart disease in children and young adults". Also the problem of the proper handling of the large number of cases of chronic heart disease in older persons must be worked out. Many of these useful lives can be prolonged.

Most of us can do our share in preventing heart disease by plenty of bed rest during and after an illness, and by the removal of infected tonsils, teeth, gall bladder, or other infection, in ourselves or our family.

TAKE COVERS FOR SCRAP

Fairmont, W. Va., Oct. 9—(AP)—Director James D. Cain of the city department looked at a gaping manhole, commented: "There's such a thing as carrying this scrap collections too far." Zealous collectors had carried off several manhole covers.

A TIDY LITTLE FORTUNE

Big Timber, Mont., Oct. 9—(AP)—A brown-leafed mountain plant interested George Campbell who took it to a chemist where it was identified as henbane, used as a drug. Campbell gathered 10,000 pounds and sold it to a pharmaceutical company at $1.25 a pound.

MACKEREL RUNNING PLENTIFUL

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 9—(AP)—Mackerel are running so plentifully that some fishermen earned more than $250 a day this week. The 14-man crew of the Gertrude De Coste caught 150,000 pounds in six hours yesterday and each crew member expects a share of $325, which would be at the rate of $53 an hour. Nineteen seiners out of Gloucester landed 1,349,000 pounds there and in Boston yesterday, one of the largest catches on record for Gloucestermen. The fishermen work under a plan whereby they share in the proceeds of the catch.

THE WAR TODAY

By GLENN BABB
Associated Press Staff Writer

The last 10 or 12 weeks have been a period of retreat for the Japanese. On three major fronts they have yielded ground, much of it bitterly won at high cost in men and weapons. On the others they have given no convincing signs of new advances in preparation.

It would be easy, thinking wishfully, to suggest that the tide of Japanese conquest that spread so rapidly and disastrously for the United Nations throughout the first half year of the Pacific War has begun its end. But wishful thinking is always dangerous and there are indications aplenty that the resourceful enemy is doing what he can to encourage us in that enjoyable, but weakening occupation. For example, he will be wise to examine with all possible skepticism those hints issued by Doctor Goebbels' propaganda machine that the attempt to take Stalingrad is about to be abandoned.

Nevertheless let's take a look at the recent record in the Pacific, reading the map from North to South.

All the evidence is that the Japanese have abandoned two of the three far western Aleutian Islands they seized last June as a sideshow to their disastrous dash across the international dateline toward Midway and Hawaii. Fliers report no signs of life on Attu and Agattu; and it appears that only on Kiska is sorely-battered Japanese garrison is trying to dig itself underground in the hopes of remaining and so justifying the Tokyo government's boast that its forces hold north American territory.

In China, still the main battleground for the Japanese army, a summer's conquests have evaporated. There probably is some justification for Tokyo's claim that the retreats in China were according to plan and to permit new dispositions of Japanese forces, but the fact remains that territory and strategic railway lines won at the cost of tens of thousands of casualties and months of valuable time have been yielded to the stubbornly-fighting Chinese armies. Something like 30,000 square miles overrun by the Japanese in northern Kiangsi, western and southern Chekiang and southern Kwangtung Provinces early in the summer have been reoccupied by the Chinese.

At the Southern extremity of the Pacific front United States Marines have slashed into the farthest fringes of the Japanese area of conquest and wrested from the Mikado's warriors in the Solomons beachheads and islets tiny in extent but of vast potential importance strategically. In New Guinea the Australians, commanded by Gen. Douglas Macarthur and supported by American air forces, have compelled the invaders to abandon all their gains south of the Owen Stanley Mountains and turned their landing at Milne Bay into a disastrous fiasco.

Against these setbacks in the active war zones Japan has no offsetting gains in other theatres, and if we assume that time fights against her — an assumption that seems justified by the disparity between current rates of war production in the United States and Japan — her enemies have gained valuable months. Since Midway the Japanese fleet, so far as we know, has not ventured from its Western Pacific bases. The Japanese armies that marched through Burma to the borders of India have been quiescent for months, and whereas six months ago the Japanese threat to India was accounted one of the gravest dangers for the United Nations now there is growing discussion of the prospects of an Allied drive into Burma to reopen the main avenue of aid to China.

Doctor R. A. Flynn

The sudden death of Dr. "Dick Flynn has removed one of the most beloved physicians of the city and he will be missed by an extremely wide circle of friends and patients. His cheerful disposition endeared him to everyone who made his acquaintance. His ready smile, calm manner and keen ability won him a leading place among the members of the medical profession here. Since coming to Belleville eleven years ago he has held an honored place in the hearts of a host of patients, for no matter what the hour, he was always willing to go to the assistance of those in trouble.

His unwillingness to consider himself led to overwork with consequent damage to his health and it is no over-statement to say that he died in the service of those to whose sides he was called.

He gave willingly of his time to his service club of which he was past president and was, also, past president of the Belleville Medical Association.

The city is the poorer for the loss of a valued citizen and the sincerest sympathy of all is extended to Dr. Flynn's family in their time of bereavement and sorrow.

Crossing Accidents Increase

According to figures just released by the C.P.R. the number of accidents involving cars and trains has shown a remarkable increase during the past three years. In 1939 there were 19 accidents in which twenty persons were killed and seven injured. In 1940 twelve were killed, twenty injured in 25 accidents. Last year there was a big increase, there being 35 accidents in which seventeen were killed and sixty-one injured.

There is no explanation given for the increase but one of the causes may be, that with so many people getting employment that they have not had for many years they have purchased cars with their newly-accumulated wealth. Not having as much experience as those who have driven for years, possibly they are taking chances on beating the train to the crossing and are meeting with disaster. The speed of a train is very deceptive because of its size and it is very easy to misjudge the time it takes to reach the crossing.

Also there may be some carelessness in observing that fine slogan of STOP, LOOK and LISTEN. This is a good rule for anyone to observe but we doubt if there is one in a hundred drivers who take it to heart but depend on a casual look behind or to the side and continue on with but a slight decrease in speed. We wonder how many who read this can say what the legal speed is over railway crossings even though signs are usually posted along the highways. Well, the speed is twenty miles per hour. However, these signs are not placed near every crossing but mostly on the provincial highways.

We know of drivers who always slow down and place their cars in low gear so that if they have to make a sudden spurt there will be no danger of stalling the motor. This seems like a good practice to follow, particularly when there is a sharp grade leading to the crossing as there so often is. Snowstorms, heavy rain, fog, and driving at night are hazards that lead to accidents of this kind and particular care should be used when such conditions are present.

The railroads are vitally interested in reducing the number of crossing accidents. If all those in charge of vehicles crossing over railway tracks would be very conscious of the ever-present danger, a substantial decrease in deaths and bodly injuries would be obtained. No one is in such a hurry to save a few minutes that life is endangered. We just need to reflect on the fact that we are a long time dead when we take chances of this kind.

Dr. M. W. Locke, the Williamsburg foot specialist, left a fortune of $345,000. An estate created, literally, at a dollar a foot, comments the Ottawa Journal.

This is Fire Prevention Week, and the wise householder, shopkeeper, factory manager will check his premises for sources of possible trouble. Every fire is economic waste, and waste of any sort helps Hitler.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

THE PASSING OF THE CHICKEN SUPPER

Chalk up another debt against the Moustached Menace of Berchesgaden.

Armies may move on their stomachs, but when any dictator, no matter how big or small "socks" Canadians in the midriff then something is liable to happen.

For had not the ex-corporal paper-hanger not become prepossessed of maniacal aspirations for world domination, one of the finest Canadian institutions, the community chicken supper, would not now be headed for the realm of things that were.

We've been hit in the gasoline tank, the pocket book, the tire rim, the sugar, tea and coffee boxes. Our beefsteak is liable to become scarce. We've lost the cuffs of our trousers, our double breasted jackets, and a lot of our vanity. Thus far we've retained our shirts, but that's another tale.

This blitz on our gastronomic region is one that will not easily be forgotten or forgiven by those who love mass consumption of Madam Hen in all the tasty styles.

We can never forget the cheery camaraderie; the genial hospitable atmosphere of country church basement or community hall on Chicken Supper nights; the long tables laden with jellies, pickles, sauces, home made buns, salads, plates of cold meats, snowy bread, golden butter; the hurry and bustle of the "Institute" members preparing the tables; smiling, rosy-cheeked rural maidens proud in their work of "waiting" on the guests.

Nor the big moment when steaming platters of chicken were passed along the tables. Hungry eyes gazed avidly at the large pieces of "white" and dark meat, the generous legs and meaty wings. Or if you preferred it you could dig deeply through inches of flaky crust to the amber gravy of the famous pot-pie.

Snowy mounds of mashed potatoes, generous helpings of peas, turnips or other vegetables took up that part of the plate not submerged beneath its cargo of chicken, with the whole garnished with pads of jelly and other "trimmings." It was a banquet fit for a king.

And lest we forget, the luscious pies, made only as rural Canada can make them. Apple, "punkin," berry, cream, custard and other varieties. And if you smiled sweetly at the lady attending your gastronomic wants, you could usually "wangle" a second piece. Or during the first part of the dinner, another "bowl of gravy."

To lowly Madam Hen must go the credit of assisting to cement happy associations between rural and urban life. The chicken supper provided a common meeting ground for people from all walks of life. Here, bankers, lawyers, doctors, rubbed shoulders with their brothers of the soil. Business executives chatted over a chicken bone with the lesser members of their staffs. Industrial executives passed the chicken to a store janitor—and liked it. Surely, Biddy has made a great contribution to our democratic way of living.

But because a war-crazed idiot in Berlin saw fit to set the world aflame, these things apparently cannot be. Perhaps we can add this sacrifice to the steadily mounting debt he owes to humanity. Time will tell.

The chicken supper will never be destroyed. Like the rural fair and the circus, it is an institution that occupies a prominent place in the hearts of all Canadians. It will rise again in a new born popularity.

In the meantime—Sherman was right.

TOMATOES OUST BLOOMS

Northern Ireland glasshouses must be devoted to growth of tomatoes for at least six months of the year unless they already have been planted with permanent crops, according to a Ministry of Agriculture regulation issued at Belfast. Fruits are encouraged in addition to tomatoes, and flower production must not exceed 25 per cent of the pre-war acreage.

BRITAIN'S CATS IMPERILED

British cats are being stolen to obtain fur for coats and necklets, Sir Robert Gower reported at the London office of the Royal Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Numerous complaints of cat stealing have caused the conclusion, he said. Reports from London's East End and from large provincial towns indicate a racket at work.

FACT AND FANCY

The more that I learn of my Nellie the more it astonishes me;
She abandoned the dreams of her girlhood my lifetime companion to be.

The years have been forty or nearly since vows to be partners we said,
But there's nothing about me whatever, like him she was hoping to wed.

Her dream man was strikingly handsome, broad-shouldered, fair-visaged and tall,
Well-mannered and graceful and clever, and I am not like that at all.

Sometimes she has glimpsed him in pictures. I've known as together we've sat
In the darkness my Nellie was wishing that she had a husband like that.

I'm short and I'm ugly and pudgy. I'm careless of manner and dress
And I often do that which I shouldn't. All faults I am quick to confess.

My Nellie is all that I dreamed of! Still lovely and fair as a rose!
It's I am the big disappointment! But that's how it frequently goes!

The Judgment of the Guilty

New York, Oct. 9—The President's statement warning that persons responsible for crimes against international law committed during this war would be punished, thereafter, and that enemy peoples as a whole would not be held responsible, has a double significance.

It is an answer to what has become Hitler's strongest internal propaganda: namely, that if Germany loses the whole German people will be exterminated in revenge for the atrocities in Europe.

In fact, it almost seems as if the Nazis are pursuing the atrocities with a political purpose in mind that goes beyond the subjection of the conquered: namely, the conscious creation of such hatred of Germany that the Nazis can warn the German people, "Either we win or all perish together"

As a matter of fact Hitler said just this in his last speech.

The answer to that is Roosevelt's statement: "The number of those found guilty will undoubtedly be extremely small compared to the total enemy populations."

I do not know exactly what the President means by "extremely small." One-half of 1 per cent. of the German population would be 400,000. It is an error to believe that a mere handful of people are alone responsible for the unexampled atrocities perpetrated in Europe by the occupying forces. One can bring a case against the entire Gestapo and the entire S.S., whom even the Germans call under their breaths "Die Mordbuben" (the murder-apaches).

Nor are all the crimes being committed in the occupied countries. There are the organized crimes committed in Germany itself—crimes which will presumably be left to the vengeance of the German people.

No Compromise Peace

The effectiveness of the President's statement, as part of a psychological campaign, will depend upon how it is exploited and how specific it is made.

Its second significance is that it closes the door to any compromise peace with the criminals presently ruling Germany. The President, in calling these war criminals the "ringleaders," points to the Nazi gang. But we know that there are generals—for instance, Stulpnagel in Paris—who are equally guilty of every conceivable breach of humane practice or international law. And this means that a compromise peace with such men is equally out of the question.

This should be made clear to the German people, and they should be advised, in the interest of saving their own skins, to sever any connection they may have with the guilty.

It seems to me that this requires two actions: First, a definition of what constitutes guilty acts, and second, the devising of a means by which the innocent can create alibis for themselves.

The Declaration of Independence with its "decent respect for the opinion of mankind," draws up a specific bill of accusations against the oppressors of the American Colonists.

A similar specific bill of accusations ought, it seems to me, to be drawn up by the Office of War Information and widely publicized, not only abroad, but at home. I would like to see posters plastered over walls from one end of this nation to another, listing the crimes against which we are fighting.

For we risk losing our ethical sense, which is the basis of righteous indignation, and it is not clear in people's minds, either here or abroad, that there are certain things allowable in the practice of civilized nations and under international law, and there are others that neither war nor conquest condone, legally or ethically.

Practices Not Allowable

Such things are:

The shooting of innocent hostages without semblance of trial or any presumption, even, of personal guilt—a pure instrument of terrorization.

Forced labor of prisoners of war, outside prison camps and especially for military purposes. There is an international obligation given by all countries that prisoners of war must be fed rations equal to those of the armed forces of the nation holding them prisoner. This is why the Nazi and Japanese internees in this country are so well fed—we are keeping our obligations. The Germans are treating different groups of prisoners in different ways — British prisoners, for instance, fairly well because Britain holds German prisoners and the Germans fear reprisals.

Forcible drafting of civilians from occupied countries for war work in German factories. Absolutely unheard of in the history of modern nations.

Forcible induction of the women of conquered countries into brothels for the German Army. There is documentary evidence to prove this in Poland.

Systematic extermination of populations by interference with marriage laws, by shifting of whole populations from one area to another, by separating married couples from each other and from their children; by depriving them of medical aid, and by starvation.

Reprisals for individual deeds carried out against whole villages.

Extermination of intellectuals and massacres of students, carried through for the purpose of removing any potential leadership for a future national life.

Day of Judgment at Hand

Enemy peoples should be presented with a bill of atrocities and informed that, unless they devise means of dissociating themselves from these crimes, they will be held responsible, and we should put our wits to work trying to help them find such means. We should say to the German people and German soldiers: Every victim who survives by reason of your help is a testimony for you. And to the peoples of the occupied countries: Prepare your dossiers on the decent as well as on the wicked. For the day of judgment is at hand.

ALFALFA BILL MURRAY

Former Governor William Henry ("Alfalfa Bill") Murray of Oklahoma has one of the best known nicknames in American political life.

Murray was born in Texas in 1869 and edited newspapers and practiced law in the Lone Star State for several years before he removed to Indian Territory in 1898.

He settled at Tishmoningo and grew the first alfalfa ever planted south of the Canadian River, which divides Oklahoma into two nearly equal parts.

About 1903, because of the low price of cotton, Murray began to urge the farmers in that section to diversify their crops and to plant Irish potatoes.

At a meeting in Tishomingo early in 1903 a group of farmers raised enough money to buy two carloads of seed potatoes for the experiment. When the seed-potato business was concluded, George W. Watkins suggested to the gathering that Murphy make a speech on how to grow alfalfa. Murray responded, and later, at the request of Indian Territory farmers, made many speeches on the advantages of growing alfalfa.

A young man from Michigan named Arthur Sinclair had attended the meeting and saw humor in the transaction. Arthur Simpson, editor of the local paper, met Sinclair outside while the meeting was still in progress and asked him what the news was. "When I got up there they were planting potatoes," replied Sinclair, "but when I left they were contemplating planting Alfalfa Bills, and Alfalfa Bill himself was making a speech." Simpson put the crack in his paper. A few weeks later a farm paper printed near Muskogee got Murphy to write a series of articles entitled "Alfalfa and Hogs," in which he pointed out the most profitable way of combining the two.

The editor put the first article on the front page and headed it "Alfalfa by Alfalfa Bill Himself." Presumably he had seen Sinclair's statement in the Tishomingo paper.

In a letter to the author of "You'd Be Surprised," Alfalfa Bill" says:

"From then on the nickname stuck and I adopted it because all my life I have had some nickname and I used this one because it was a good one for identification. Hence it has stayed with me ever since. In a political way it has both helped and injured me, as the great body of farmers and the multitudes in general took to the name, but it was a little too 'rustic' for the effete of the population. It has also impressed the general public that I was too much of a rustic to be a scholar."

PERSONALS

Miss Marjorie Quinn, who underwent an operation at Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, is progressing favorably.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Carr, Gravenhurst, formerly of Belleville, are in town visiting their daughters.

Mr. Alex Dunlop, 54 Everett St., has been confined to his home through illness for the past few days.

Members of the Belleville Hospitality Club and the St. Michael's Club were among the guests at the enjoyable dance held last evening at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School. Interesting numbers were introduced and the evening was most successful.

Friends of Mr. William Fairhead, College Street, who for the past month has been a hospital patient in Toronto, will be pleased to learn that he has now returned to his home with doctors hoping for complete recovery from his major operation.

Miss Nora Lynch and Miss Helen Symons will be hostesses at the Belleville Golf Club tomorrow. This will mark the closing of the series of "tea-less teas" for this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Darlington were hosts at a delightful party at their home on Charlotte Street, Wednesday night, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Phil Huddleston who leave shortly for their new home in Toronto. The guests of honor were presented with a handsome sandwich tray and a brief address to which they made appropriate reply. Mr. Huddleston, who has been transferred with his branch of the Canadian National Railways leaves early next week for Toronto. Mrs. Huddleston will follow at an early date.

To Make Better Coffee

IN these days of coffee rationing, ability to make uniformly good coffee means much. For this, proper care of your equipment is very important. To get best results, follow these simple rules:

1 Keep all utensils, whatever kind, scrupulously clean. Use a slender brush for spouts, tubes, crevices and grooves.

2 Sediment and stains affect flavor. Ordinary washing will not remove them, so scour often with a suitable scouring material.

3 Never put your coffee maker away after use without washing with clean, hot, soapy water. Then rinse with boiling water, drain and dry.

4 If you use a cloth filter or bag, wash it after use with water and baking soda—not soap. Rinse and keep it submerged in clean, cool water.

5 You can only get best results from good coffee—correctly ground for your method of coffee making.

MAXWELL HOUSE is a blend of the very finest coffees the world produces, roasted by a special process that captures every atom of its extra flavor and rich, full-bodied goodness. It offers you precisely correct grinds for each type of coffee-maker—DRIP and REGULAR.

Because it comes sealed in a Super-Vacuum tin by the Vita-Fresh process, Maxwell House Coffee reaches you as fresh as the very hour it left the roasting ovens. It is always:

"Clothing Repair" Is Wartime Activity For Canadian Women

With conservation such a vital issue during war time, Mrs. W. E. West, director of Women's Voluntary Services is suggesting "clothing repair depots" as one activity for Women's Voluntary Service Centres.

"We must not do any buying that is not essential until this war is over and we are faced with the importance of making the things we have last as long as possible" Mrs. West pointed out. "Our budgets will be restricted at the end of this month by the new income taxes and we feel there are thousands of Canadian women who would appreciate help on how to make their precious dollars go further."

Many married women with families have had no training in patching and "making over" Mrs. West states and when clothes wear out they have no alternate but to turn them over to the salvage collector and buy new ones.

Registered with the Women's Voluntary Service Centres in Canada are many dressmakers and former household science teachers in addition to hundreds of amateur seamstresses who have offered their services to the centre in war time.

These talents could be used, Mrs. West believes, in the establishment of clothing repair depots, where the trained volunteer would give the untrained, instruction in patching, mending and making over. Cost of such a venture would be negligible because it calls only for a room and sewing machines. The materials on which the class would work would be their own worn out garments.

WEDDINGS

MALLORY—JACKSON

A wedding of local interest took place on Saturday, Sept. 12, in St. George's Anglican Church, Goderich, when Dorothy Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Jackson, Goderich, became the bride of Arthur Raymond, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Mallory, Stirling. The Rev. W. N. Dunbar officiated assisted by Rev. D. Wren of Stratford.

The bride was very attractive in her dress of pink wool with brown accessories and carrying a prayer book arrangement of orchids and bouvardia. Miss Helen Jackson of Detroit, wearing sea green and carrying Butterfly roses and bouvardia was her sister's only attendant.

Following a reception at the home of the bride, the happy couple left on a wedding trip, the bride travelling in a burma brown tailored suit with accessories to match and wearing a corsage of orchids.

On their return they will reside in Guelph, where the groom is on the staff of the Ontario Agricultural College. The bride is a former graduate of Macdonald Hall and the groom of O.A.C.

Contact Club Honors Miss Jessie Martin Leaving for Guelph

Mrs. H. R. Lockwood Will Assume Duties of Y.W.C.A. Secretary of War Services

At the regular Thursday afternoon meeting of the Contact Club for airmen's wives, held in the Y, Miss Jessie Martin of the Y.W.C.A. War Services who has been in charge of activities here has been transferred to O.A.C., Guelph, was honored by the club members. Mrs. McCallum the chairman, on behalf of the members presented Miss Martin with a gift in appreciation of the splendid work she had done here. Regret was expressed at Miss Martin's departure and best wishes were extended for her future success.

Miss Martin who was taken greatly by surprise graciously thanked her friends for their thoughtfulness and for their co-operation which had made her work here so pleasant. In introducing her successor, Mrs. H. S. Lockwood, Miss Martin felt sure that the same co-operation would be extended her.

Mrs. Lockwood who will assume the duties of Y.W.C.A. representative in the War Services maintained here by this organization, the Rooms Registry, the providing of recreation and social contacts for the wives of airmen, and assisting in the entertainment of girls in the services, is no stranger to this vicinity. Before her marriage Mrs. Lockwood was Miss Barbara McDonald of Point Anne. Her husband is overseas with the Canadian forces.

Another interesting event at the Contact Club meeting yesterday was the presentation of a complete layette, the gift of the club, whose members co-operated in the making of the many lovely little garments to St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. Mrs. Collier, who was in charge of the preparation of the layette was introduced and the gift to be sent overseas, was donated to the Chapter. Mrs. E. J. Neate, regent, and Mrs. R. A. Backus, secretary, were present, and on behalf of the Chapter and of the needy folks in Britain who will prize the gift, Mrs. Neate thanked the Contact Club for their donation and for the time and care which went into its preparation. Mrs. Neate also thanked the Club for the ditty bag which they had also completed for the navy. The Club members also took a supply of wool from the Chapter for making more garments which will be completed as soon as possible.

The Contact Club at which wives of airmen in this district are welcome meets each Thursday and the facilities of the Y are open to the members that day. A bowling team is being entered in the Y league from the Club.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of W.M.S. was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Harry Twiddy. The president, Mrs. Ray Lockyer opened the meeting with a song service after which Mrs. Davis led in prayer. The Scripture readings were given by Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Twiddy and Mrs. Empson.

The theme for October was "Building a Community of Christian Homes" and Mrs. Mills gave a reading on "The Church in My Community." Hymn 394 was sung after which instead of the usual roll call a verse on "The Home" was read in unison.

A few minutes of silence was held in memory of Mrs. E. Hall, who was a former member of the Cannifton W.M.S. and for the Rev. A. Armstrong, a former pastor.

During the business part of the program the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Empson and in the absence of the secretary, Miss Ida Boyce was appointed to act as secretary for the evening. It was decided that Mrs. Mills send for the usual Christmas cards and two ladies were appointed as delegates to the Rally in Plainfield.

Mrs. Harry Brenton was in charge of the program for the evening and opened with the National Anthem, after which Hymn 517 was read by all as a prayer. Betty Twiddy gave a piano solo; Ida Boyce a missionary reading and Mrs. Davis a vocal solo. The speakers for the evening were Miss R. Fox and Miss D. Johnson, Belleville. Miss Fox gave a splendid talk on the "School for Leaders" which was held at Whitby and gave many good reasons for every society sending a delegate. Miss Johnson very capably introduced the new Study Book and told something about the author which was very interesting. Both talks were very much appreciated.

A vote of thanks was given the girls for their splendid talks and also to Mrs. Harry Twiddy for opening her home for this open meeting.

The collection was taken by Betty Twiddy and after the dedication, the hymn "Blest be the tie that Binds" was sung and the meeting closed with all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

While the hostess served apples and grapes the president conducted a "True or False" contest on the Bible.

Science Now Aids Beauty

Brenda Joyce finds a trip to the beauty shop a relaxing experience.

By HELEN FOLLETT

When hair-dressing parlors became beauty shops a great change took place. Only the ancient and honorables among as remember the uninteresting establishments to which one trailed to get a marcel for the grand social occasion. Shampooing was done at home, a manicure was an exciting treat. Facial treatments were unheard of.

The beauty salon of today has to keep to a high standard of service and sanitation to survive. The cash customer demands the best, keeps an eye open, notes if linens are immaculate, combs, brushes and manicuring instruments sterilized. The industry becomes more scientific every year.

Women don't expect miracles or speedy rejuvenations. Shop owners know exactly how far they can extend their services without stepping on the toes of the doctors. Physicians who treat nervous troubles and cases of despondency suggest the beauty shop as a means of getting back to normal.

Facial and scalp treatments are based on sound principals, the main purposes being to stimulate blood streams, tone tissues and strengthen underlying fibers.

The use of the electric needle for the removal of superfluous hair has made many a victim of this blemish happier. Properly done the treatment will remove the fuzzers permanently.

St. Julien Chapt. I.O.D.E., Reports War Work Activities for Aug. and Sept.

At the regular monthly business meeting of the St. Julien Chapter, I. O. D. E., this week the following gratifying reports were read:

Treasurer gave a detailed account of receipts and expenditures of the war account for Aug. and Sept., which was most gratifying to all who had worked so hard to get these monetary results.

The War Services conveners reported 198 articles knitted goods turned in by our knitters. Shipments were made as follows: To Polish Relief, 239 articles; to bombed areas, 137 articles. A complete outfit for a 12-year-old girl consisting of 28 articles made and donated by the Girls' Guild of Tabernacle Church, city, per Mrs. H. R. Gibson.

To Belleville Boys Overseas

c/o Lieut. Plummer: 52 prs. sox. To Municipal Chapter I. O. D. E., Toronto: 2 large cartons ties for jerkins; to Navy League 14 articles.

Educational Sect's. Report of Shipments

To I. O. D. E. Magazine Exchange, St. John, N. B., 330 magazines, 26 books and 6 packs playing cards.

To I. O. D. E. Camp Library, Halifax, N. S.: 91 bound books; To Halifax for Navy: 923 magazines; To Local Branch of Navy League: 2 cartons bound books and many magazines.

14 knitted articles were handed to Belleville boys in the Services.

Donations to Chapter were made by 8th line Tyendinaga I. O. D. E. Aux. of 46 articles.

Young Girls' Guild of Tabernacle Church donated an outfit for a 12-year-old girl.

Moira Chapter I. O. D. E., Madoc, and from Mesdames Lancaster, Geo. Graham and Oats: Furs.

Bridge St. War Unit and Mesdames C. A. Moore, G. Freeman and Miss Lavoie: clothing.

Wallbridge W. I.: Man's shirt and work done on pinafores from Chapter material.

Miss L. White: knitted afghan; Mrs. Shanks, 1 quilt and Mrs. W. Perry, 4 prs. sox.

Corby Public Library: 91 books and Mesdames Bob Brown, McCormack, Keough, Bunnett, LaVoie, A. Carmichael, Denyes, Beavis and Doug. Maybee: books and magazines.

Grateful thanks to all the above donors also to the following who donated to our booth at the local fair: Officers and members of the Fair Board for the concessions allotted the Chapter without charge; Mr. Mack Robertson; Harper's Dairy and Citizen's Dairy; Mr. A. Thomas, Trent Rd.; Mr. McVeigh of Kresges; Mr. McMullin, Metropolitan Store; Mr. Frances of Can. Dep't. Store and Mr. Grant Ashley, and all who in any way contributed to the success of our three days' operations at the fair; results of which were beyond expectations.

The Chapter sponsored a very successful Tag Day for the Chinese War Relief Fund and many members assisted in tagging for the Canadian Institute for the Blind. Cheques were voted to the following projects: $25.00 to British Sailors Society; $25.00 to Canadian Institute for Blind; $10.00 to I. O. D. E. Cigarette Fund for prisoners of war in Hong Kong and $25.00 to I. O. D. E. Provincial Headquarters Camp Library Fund to purchase books for the boys of the navy, and other Services, as the library in Halifax in very depleted. Anyone having good bound books to spare for these camp libraries would be helping in a big way by contacting Mrs. Neate, 50 Cedar St., or Mrs. Backus, 38 Bridge St. West.

Surprise Silver Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband and I are extremely devoted to a couple who are going to have their Silver Wedding anniversary in November. We would like to give them a surprise party, and since they have never had any kind of party given for them, we would like to give them as happy a party as we can. We plan to invite about thirty guests.

Although I know that the Twenty-fifth Anniversary is the Silver Wedding anniversary, this couple happens to have a great deal of silver, and I know for a fact that they just couldn't use any more silver. Our idea is to ask the guests to contribute to a sum to buy them a coffee-table. What do you think of this idea? If you approve, will you please tell me how to get this idea across in the invitations? Should the invitations be written as notes?

N. N.

Under the circumstances, I think you're very wise to steer your guests away from bringing silver gifts. You could easily in your notes of invitation, make this suggestion, make this suggestion against gifts of silver, but whether or not it would be good taste for you to ask them to contribute to one important gift depends on whether or not the guests are all close friends of the couple. In other words, if they are close friends of you and your husband, you would not have the right to ask them for "contributions" towards a gift, but if they are also close friends of the celebrants they would probably be delighted at the opportunity to contribute toward the one gift.

In your invitations, state a definite sum — you will arrive at this by the number of guests and the cost of the coffee table. People prefer, and rightly so, to be asked for a certain sum, rather than vaguely for "a contribution toward a gift."

Pre-operation Preparation Important When treating Thyroid Gland Disorder

Persons who have toxic goiter often are not relieved by treatment with medicines. An operation is required to remove part of the thyroid gland. When this operation is done, relief follows in most instances.

A disturbance of the thyroid gland may cause much trouble for the patient because this gland controls many of the chemical processes in the body. If an excessive secretion is formed by the gland, the basal metabolism is speeded up; that is, the rate at which the chemical processes go on when the patient is at rest. However, the mere fact that the basal metabolism test is normal does not necessarily mean that an excessive thyroid secretion is not present.

In patients with excessive thyroid secretion, the ethyroid gland may or may not be enlarged. Many times, when the condition is present for a prolonged period, damage to the heart occurs so that the heart beats more rapidly than normal, and the heart muscle is weakened. Another condition which develops in these patients is a lessening of the ability to use sugar. This is thought to result because the liver does not store the sugar properly.

The usual treatment for toxic goiter consists in operation and removal of most of the thyroid gland. However, it is important that these patients be prepared in the right way for operation so that they may withstand it properly. First of all the patient must be put to bed and have absolute rest and quiet. It is important that the patient not be disturbed in any way. Any mental excitement may serve to make the disorder worse.

Another part of the treatment is to give the patient an iodine solution three times a day. Occasionally, the iodine may have to be given by injection into a vein. If given by mouth, it is well to put it into milk. Sleep-producing drugs are used as the physician directs. The diet of the patient is one which is rich in starches, sugars and protein foods, and free from fat. If the patient vomits a great deal, fluids, such as sugar solution, may be given by injection into a vein. Blood transfusions also may be useful.

With this sort of treatment the patient's condition usually improves so that in from ten days to three weeks the operation may be carried out. It is well at the end of this time to take another basal metabolism test. If the rate is lowered, it is further proof that the patient's condition has improved and that he is ready for operation.

After the operation the patient is put to bed in a semi-sitting position until healing has occured. Sedative drugs are given, and again glucose solution is injected into a vein. There may be some inflamation of the windpipe. The breathing in of steam in helpful in relieving this difficulty.

The first symptoms of toxic goiter consists of sweating, loss of weight, nervousness, restlessness and rapid heart beat. Should these symptoms occur, immediate examination by the physician is advisable so that a definite diagnosis may be made and proper treatment started before important body tissues are permanently damaged.

COURTESY TIP

These towering crowns on this season's hats are bad news when we have to sit behind them in the movies. Lady, please, have a heart — take off your hat in the movies. That movie may be the only one that soldier or sailor sitting behind you may be able to see before he leaves for "an unknown somewhere."

PRESENTATION

On Wednesday evening, friends and neighbors of the fourth concession of Sidney and members of Trinity Anglican Church gathered in the Parish Hall to honor Miss Helen Morrow and Mr. Harold Thompson, whose wedding takes place Saturday.

Rev C. L. Harding was chairman for the evening and Mrs. George Burkitt read an address to the bride and groom on behalf of the church and community. The young couple were then presented with many beautiful gifts for which they sincerely thanked their friends.

A dainty lunch was then served and a social half hour spent.

HALF-WASHED SHIRTS!"
THEN SHE EXPLAINED
NO MATTER HOW YOU DO YOUR WASH YOU NEED SUNLIGHT'S "EXTRA-SOAPINESS" FOR THOSE EXTRA-DIRTY SPOTS!

See every bit of your wartime washes come sparkling clean . . . safely!

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE to get next week's wash brighter and sweeter than ever. Not a streaky, cloudy white. Not "half-washed" looking. But spotlessly bright all over!

OF COURSE YOU WOULD! Then just do this: Put a touch of Sunlight Soap on all extra-dirty spots. Sunlight leaves a busy film of soap wherever it comes in contact with clothes. It whips up into the richest lather ever— and loosens grease and grit without rubbing.

Safe for colors

TRY SUNLIGHT on the hardest things you have to wash. See how dazzling bright they come. Don't ever let people say that your clothes look "half-washed"! Get Sunlight now! It's all pure soap . . . safe for colors and so kind to hands.

See How Easy Dishwashing Can Be!

● Try Sunlight's "extra-soapiness" on greasy pots and pans. You'll be thrilled to see how quickly it cuts grease— gets everything shiny clean in much less time. Sunlight's good for all cleaning . . . tile, woodwork and windows. And it goes a long, long way even in hard water.

KROLL TO START AGAINST R.C.A.F. IN WEEKEND GAME

Former Western University Football Star to Play for Hamilton

HURRICANES FAVORED

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Joe Krol's promised return to big-time football gives Hamilton Wildcats a backfield triumvirate which should make Hamilton and Windsor fans feel equally happy.

Windsor, of course, isn't represented in the Ontario Rugby Football Union. But Wildcat officials say Krol will start against Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes at Hamilton in Saturday's O. R. F. U. feature contest, and his presence on the half-line beside Mike Hedgewick and Al Lenard will be of more than passing interest to the border city. All three learned their football there before gravitating to other centres.

Krol formed a fearsome combination with gridiron glamor guy Tony Golab at Windsor's Kennedy Collegiate before leaving for the University of Western Ontario at London. Little has been heard of Krol in the last three years because of the blackout of intercollegiate sport, but in 1938 with Western Colts and in 1939 with Western Mustangs he was recognized as one of the finest running halves in the game.

Mustangs won the intercollegiate title in 1939 and Krol, teaming with Harry Szumlinski, Alf Hurley and Lyn Thompson, was one of the big reasons for their success. Unless he has forgotten a lot in three years Hurricanes will be in for a large afternoon Saturday in the game that will decide the O. R. F. U. leadership.

Hurricanes Favored

Even with Krol in the lineup, flying officer Lew Hayman's Hurricanes will be favored.

Flyers, already a reasonable facsimile of former great Toronto Argonaut teams under Hayman's coaching, will be without Mike Ozarko, Art West and Jack Taylor when the game gets underway. Ozarko suffered a fractured nose against Beaches while West and Taylor are ill with influenza.

At the other end of the scale, Beaches and Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers will battle to get out of the cellar in the second game of a doubleheader at Varsity Stadium in Toronto. Coach Alex Ponton, still shaking his head over the 40-6 trimming Beaches took last week from Hurricanes, will change his usual "T" formation and use an open formation.

The two second-place teams, Toronto H. M. C. S. York and Toronto Oakwood-Indians, will meet in the curtain raiser. The game will mark the return to action of Navy's fleet Elwin Morris, who passed up the excitement last week to allow three cracked ribs to mend.

Beaches and Kitchener-Waterloo will meet in Toronto on Monday in a Thanksgiving Day game.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Oct. 9 (CP)—The King's growing stable is to have a new trainer—six foot Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochfort who comes of an Irish family distinguished for generations for its soldiers and horsemen.

His Majesty's racers now under the care of W. R. Jarvis at Egerton House, and also the Royal yearlings to put into training next spring, will be transferred early in 1943 to Boyd-Rochfort's stables at Newmarket.

Boyd-Rochfort, one of the leading British trainers for several years, trained for the American sportsman, Marshal Field, until Field recently disposed of his British stock. Jarvis was appointed trainer to the Royal Stables in 1926 and won the 1,000 Guineas for King George V with Scuttle in 1928.

Horses trained for the King by Fred Darling, included Sun Chariot, most outstanding filly in years, and two-year-old Tipstaff, will remain in Darling's charge at Beckhampton. One of the finest prospects in the stable is Sunblind, daughter of Hyperion who was the sire of Sun Chariot. She may run in Royal colors at next season's classics.

Speaking of Sun Chariot—and everybody over here is since she won all three classics she entered this season—she most likely will remain in training for another season and not be retired to the National Stud of Ireland from which she was leased for her racing career by the King. Opinion is that another season of running would not affect her as a brood mare.

The King's Big Game, also leased from the National Stud, probably will be sent to stud in England. After winning the 2,000 Guineas, the big colt failed dismally in the Derby, finishing sixth in the greatest upset of the season.

Incidentally, the Derby winner, Lord Derby's Watling Street who Sun Chariot beat in the recent St. Leger classic, also will go to stud. He has won $20,000 in stake money in a two-year career.

Approximately 20 of Lord Derby's horses may be sold at the end of the season to make room for yearlings. The stable has had a good season and includes Garden Path, sister of Watling Street.

SCHMIDT, DUMART MAY GO OVERSEAS

Famous Kraut Line Will Not Play as Unit This Winter

Ottawa, Oct. 9 — (CP) — The Ottawa Citizen in a sports page story today said that hockey's famous Kraut line of Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer, all of Kitchener, Ont., "will not patrol the ice lanes as a unit for the duration."

The story said Schmidt and Dumart have been posted for overseas duty and that Bauer may follow them as soon as he has completed his training.

The former star players for Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force last winter.

Toronto, Oct. 9 — (CP) — Spring in Toronto: Ten to Ace is the greatest horse in Canadian racing history; Autumn in Toronto: Fred Schelke's Shepperton is the best Canadian three-year-old ... Ten to Ace no longer rates top play in these parts and when Harry Giddings' Kings Plate winner ran third behind Tinted Chick and Little Kingpin on Woodbine's getaway day the newspapers gave the race only casual mention ... Shepperton got the play for his Breeders' Stakes victory and Lou Davies, western Canada's noted authority, agreed with Eastern experts that Ontario-owned Shepperton is the Dominion's best.

Football or Fight:

An R. A. F. soccer team from North Battleford, Sask., including former English and Scottish league stars, was beaten 5-1 by a Pacific Coast All-star eleven at Vancouver. Stu (Vancouver Province) Keate: "Saturday's soccer match was a disappointment for some reason or other we expect big things from Old Country soccer players when recent exhibitions prove that Canadian boys are just as good if not better at the game." Comment: The R. A. F. is tops — and they can forget their soccer.

Puck Patter:

Harry (Calgary Albertan) Scott reports Tiny Thompson, one of hockey's greatest goalies while with Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings, has been offered a contract by Chicago Black Hawks, whose manager is Brother Paul Thompson ... but Harry says Tiny is unwilling to come out of retirement and probably will winter at Vancouver where he has a chicken ranch ... army teams in Regina and Moose Jaw may be managed respectively by Murray Armstrong, the former Brooklyn star, and Butch McDonald, veteran of minor pro leagues ... Dave MacKay, former Chicago defenceman, is signed to coach Nanaimo Clippers in the Vancouver Island league again and possibly will have as a player another former Black Hawk, Bill Carse of Edmonton, who is now an army corporal.

Love from Art:

Freddy (Fort William Times-Journal) Edwards quotes a letter from Art Ross explaining Boston Bruins were unable to train at the lakehead this year as planned: "We will be glad, however, to donate five hundred dollars to help your junior team along and a cheque for this amount will be sent to you at your request."

Yes, Freddy?

Junior Football Schedule Drawn

The Bay of Quinte Interscholastic pigskin chasers will pry off their six-man C.O.S.S.A. football lid with the finalists of 1941 clashing in the opener that sees the two city secondary schools in common gridiron battle, with the league champion St. Michael's Academy sextette squaring off to the Belleville Collegiate Institute squad next Wednesday.

Paul R. Goyette, of Albert College and convener of the Bay of Quinte six-man junior Interscholastic group today released the season's schedule consisting of six home and home games played between St. Mike's, B.C.I. and Albert College. The senior six-man league schedule was not arrived at. The schedule reads as follows, however:—

MANN CUP FINALS SEEN AS BATTLE OF NETMINDERS

Bert Large For Combines Appears to Have Edge Over Scuby

PLAY TONIGHT

Toronto, Oct. 9 (CP)—The best-of-five Dominion championship lacrosse series between New Westminster Salmonbellies and Mimico-Brampton Combines shapes up today as a duel between rival netminders.

Most of the 5,418 fans who watched Combines triumph 10-7 in the first game of the finals at Maple Leaf Gardens Wednesday night felt that the three-goal difference between the teams adequately reflected Bert Large's netminding superiority over 19-year-old Billy Scuby of New Westminster. Scuby was good, too, but he failed to approach the wizardry displayed by Large.

Large will be replaced in the Mimico-Brampton nets for the second game of the series tonight by Bill Anthony, formerly of New Westminster. Large will be back for the third game next Monday, Thanksgiving night.

Scuby, who led the regular goalies on the British Columbia coast with 66 per cent saves, found his toughest customer to handle in the first game was Kenny Dixon, scoring leader of the Ontario Lacrosse Association this season. Dixon scored four unassisted goals.

Salmonbellies, however, now expect better things. Coach Jack Woods is confident that scoring ace Clayton (Blackie) Black, scoreless so far, will have his big guns loaded and firing tonight.

PROPOSED SERIES IN WEST IS OFF

Canadian Army Team and R.C.A.F. Will Not Go to California

Ottawa, Oct. 9 (CP)—The Ottawa Citizen said in a sports page story today that a proposed hockey series in California between teams representing the Royal Canadian Air Force and the army was off.

The Citizen quoted a prominent R.C.A.F. official as saying: "As far as the air force is concerned, the series never was on. We would be pleased to co-operate with Washington to stimulate interest in the sale of American war bonds but we will not send a hockey team for any series unless an official request is made."

The story said a request had been received from California asking that the R.C.A.F. allow its team to compete against the army in the proposed series. It added "only a request from the United States government would be given approval by the air force" and said that since no such request had been received, the series was off.

The army team for the proposed series has been selected and now is practising at Verdun, Que.

The Citizen story said: "The Army . . . in company with the R.C.A.F. athletes, was to have departed over the week-end for Los Angeles and the hockey games."

Counting four owners, one head coach, a general manager two tub-thumpers and two trainers, the National pro football league now is represented by 208 men in the armed forces. Five or six active players have enlisted and are awaiting calls to duty. Billy Soose, ex-middleweight champ, sends words that he and Bill Duffy are giving boxing exhibitions at various naval establishments in the Aleutians.

LIVESTOCK LOST IN BLAZE

Prescott, Ont., Oct. 9 —(CP)— Fire Thursday destroyed a big barn on Oscar Carson's farm at Maynard, six miles from Prescott. The season's crop of grain and hay, three horses, a bull and several calves were lost in the blaze. It was believed a spark from a threshing mill might have caused the fire. No estimate of the damage was available.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

LAST WEEK THE SAD NEWS of an 18 to 2 defeat of the Belleville Grand Trunks at the hands of the Toronto Hillcrests 20 years ago was recalled, but today it's a greater piece of reminiscing. With over 5,000 jamming the old Fair Grounds (immediately south of the present Exhibition Park) the Toronto Hillcrests steamed into Belleville with more betting cash in their jeans than had ever been seen in the history of sport in the Quinte City. The chief money-handler for the haughty Hillcrests, was Freddie Hamilton, then manager of the Toronto Oalers, but now Controller in Toronto. Reports at that time would have one believe that Hamilton dropped $1,500.00 alone, while several other Queen City slickers outguessed themselves laying odds as high as three to one on the mighty Hillcrests. There were a goodly number of takers in sight and not a penny escaped the faithful Belleville supporters.

AS FOR THE SECOND GAME here, it was a thriller of the first water with Jack "Lefty" Williams besting the combined efforts of Artie Lancaster, who was shelled from the Toronto mound in the eighth, and Ed "Cannonball" Scott. Belleville won 9 to 8, as the teams battled at rather even terms until the eighth when Belleville scored three to assume a 5 to 4 lead. The next two frames were thrillers. In the bottom half of the eighth Belleville added three more and what a blessing that turned out to be, as the Hillcrests showed their power in the top half of the ninth to score four runs and have three men on base before Belleville got two hands down. Harry Samuels, one of the Hillcrests' best hitters, stepped to the plate and lined as hard a hit ball as had been hit that day to Vern Weir's right. Vern made a running stab, came up with the ball and with a rifle-like throw beat Samuels to first by a fraction of a second. Bedlam then broke loose.

LIONEL CONACHER, Hillcrest left fielder, ran out to protest the decision to Base Umpire Larry Bradley, of Hamilton, and one of the biggest free-for-all fights ever seen was in progress within the twinkling of an eye with fists flying in every direction. It was only after some time and many black eyes that police restored order and Quinte district baseball fans finally realized the mighty Hillcrests had been beaten. Vern Weir won a suit of clothes that day for collecting the greatest number of hits for the Grand Trunks, getting a double and single. Wickie Ross and Peeney Mills each hit triples. Williams struck out ten of the mighty Hillcrests, including such men as Samuels and the great Lionel Conacher, who led the Toronto team's "murderers' row." Manager Walt Gerow used the same line-up for his "Trunks" as when downed 18 to 2 the previous week, except, however, Williams did the pitching. All even a third and final game was ordered by the O.B.A. to be played in Peterboro later.

REMEMBER WHEN Joe Medwick was taken from the seventh game of the World Series "for safety reasons" eight years ago today when left field bleacher fans became enraged after he had a run-in with Marvin Owen at third base in the sixth inning at Detroit. The St. Louis Cardinals won the game 11 to 0 to take the series over the Detroit Tigers four games to three. Eight years later the Cardinals again won baseball's fall classic and the top honors of the World Series.

NEW OFFICERS were elected for the Reliance Company Sports Club with Billie Hughes and Tilly Donihee heading the athletic programs of the plant's sports for the ensuing year. Already plans for bowling and hockey are under way, while basketball may be added later and other indoor sports for the recreation of the plant employees for fall and winter.

TWO NEW TEAMS will face the barrier in the Major "A" bowling league at the Recreation Alleys this season, the newcomers being No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers," and the Reliance A. C. The league met last night and the old standby clubs to give assurance of continuance were C.N.R., Dennis's, Belleville-Sargent and Belleville Golf, league champions. President Walt Jackson announced today that all games must commence at nine o'clock and any deviation from this ruling will cost the offenders points in the league standing this year. The Major "A" trundlers commence operations next Thursday night.

THIS AND THAT . . . Jack Parry starry centre fielder and outstanding athlete at No. 5 I.T.S., has been transferred to No. 1 R.C.A.F. Command in Toronto . . . Parry played football with the Air Force last Saturday, starred and the rest can be guessed . . . At least one new face will be seen on next week's wrestling card here when Ivan Kalminoff, the Russian Bear, meets one of the Burns boys . . . Earl McCready accepted Jerry Monnahan's challenge and that one should provide plenty of action, as McCready is "hot" of late . . . The St. Louis Browns finished 88 percentage points higher this year than in 1941 . . . and the rumor is out now that the world champion Cardinals barely escaped financial disaster, the winning of the fall classic bringing them out of the red . . . Their farm system collapsed in a monetary sense, which may be the reason why Branch Rickey will be the business manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1943 . . . The last time a St. Louis Cardinal was given the heave-to by an umpire was a year ago last June when Johnny Hopp was banished for arguing over a called strike. . . . Now it's your turn.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 9. (AP) — There hasn't been any great drop in attendance at Belmont Park since the trains stopped running, and off-the-trail Rockingham has decided business is good enough that they won't have to cut purses after all. . . Apparently it takes more than lack of transportation to discourage a guy who thinks he can beat the races. . . Although it was the first time in years that Ford Frick, National League President, had a chance to help celebrate a World Series victory, he didn't join in the fun after the Cards won. He was home, sick in bed.

Guest Star

John P. Carmichael, Chicago Daily News: "The Cardinals went out of New York on a plain, ordinary railroad train, a fact that New York probably wouldn't believe. Nobody would have been surprised if they'd gone via magic carpet or disappeared from Yankee stadium in a cloud of smoke".

One Minute Sports Page

If those Valdina horses, running practically every day at every major track, had you a bit confused this year, wait till next season. Owner Emerson Woodward has 55 yearlings down on the farm that will be ready for the races next Spring.

Par-A-Graph

George Treadwell, a Memphis golfer, has come up with the stunt of making an even-par score for nine holes without parring a single hole. . . He turned in three birdies, one eagle and five bogies. . . Just to make it more confusing, George shot seven pars and two bogies on the second nine.

Crux of Fighting Shifting to Stop Counter-Attack

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A growing impression that the crux of the fighting in Russia is shifting from Stalingrad itself to the Soviet counter-attack in the Don-Volga corridor finds its most specific support to date in a broadcast relayed from London and credited, of all places, to Rome.

It told of Russian bridgeheads established on the west bank of the Don. If that is true, the Nazi "barrier" position across the forty-mile Don-Volga corridor, vital to the siege of Stalingrad, is in grave jeopardy. It could be turned from the west, thus exposing Nazi supply routes across the Don bend, far in the rear of the Stalingrad siege lines, to Red raiding.

Italian reports from the Russian front are subject to suspicion. The authority on which the Rome broadcast was based, if any, was not stated. However, it certainly reflects something less than chagrin in Italy that Hitler is finding the going increasingly tough in Russia. And it is within the range of possibility that it is Italian troops which are bearing the brunt of the Russian relief attack at the west end of the Don-Volga corridor. In effect, at any rate Italian reports of Soviet advances there sound like urgent demands for the shifting of the Nazi shock forces from the Stalingrad attack to back up wavering Axis lines on the Don.

And that is exactly what Moscow says is happening. Reserves which the Nazis intended to throw into the stalled Stalingrad drive, including picked first-line units, are being moved, it says, to the northwest front due to intensifying Soviet pressure against the corridor barrier. If that is true, it must result soon in a lessening of the non-stop German attack on Stalingrad. It depends on the availability of succeeding waves of reserves to replace the physically exhausted survivors of previous attacks. They must be withdrawn for rest, reorganisation and re-equipment before they can be used again.

The nature of the attack on Stalingrad, as it has now raged more than forty-five days without cessation indicates that Italian or other Axis forces have long ago been withdrawn from the main front for duty on the flanks. There seems no doubt that one German commander has been purged for his failure to smash Russian resistance and another of tougher mettle has been assigned to replace him.

A new commander taking over the task, however, would be likely to demand the hardest-hitting Nazi troops, not Italian or other less dependable forces, be placed at his disposal for storming operations, and Hitler's need to take the Volga city is so urgent that any such condition by the man to whom he turned over the job would certainly be met.

That Rome report of Russian crossings of the Don to accentuate the dangers facing the Nazi left flank in the Stalingrad bulge is, therefore, highly important. It means that the Nazi corridor protection is aflame with aggressive Russian action virtually throughout its whole length. The Nazi High Command cannot long ignore the danger in which it stands of being caught out in the open by another Russian winter.

A shift of front to meet the Soviet flanking threat in the corridor inevitably must force upon Hitler the bitter prospect of admitting failure and a retreat to winter lines before the snow falls. That is the end Russian strategy is aimed at, and it cannot be very long before the evidence of its success or failure becomes too clear for question.

Point Traverse

Myriads of Shad At Point Traverse

Point Traverse, Oct. 9. —Swimming in the cool waters of Lake Ontario is proving popular as yet, with several of the R.A.F. men stationed on the bombing range.

Machinery Salvaged

According to information given this paper, salvaging operations for machinery from the sunken tug "Florence", off Timber Island, has been completed. Boilers, condenser and engine has been taken to Kingston for repairs, and will be placed in service aboard a lake tug for winter operation.

Myriad of Shad

Commercial fishermen operating from this fishing colony, report that their ciscoe nets were infested with myriads of shad, when taken from deep waters this week. Several fishing craft have been laid up until the fall run of herring, which will arrive in eastern waters in November.

Personals

Mr. Wm. Croft, vice-chairman and Mr. C. A. Ward, Secretary, Toronto Transportation Commission and Mr. H. N. Cousins, Toronto, were guests at the "White House" this week.

Congratulations to Miss Theda Frost and Mr. Earl Lobb, who were quietly married on Saturday last.

Picton and District

Picton, Oct. 9—Many from Picton attended the meeting of Prince Edward Deanery in the Town Hall, Wellington on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Green, who has lived at Fort George, in the diocese of the Arctic, described the mission there, the Indian residents and the work of the teachers, nurse, and missionary at the Indian residential school. Rev. Mr. Green showed many slides to illustrate her talk.

Mrs. Strothers of Carrying Place was elected the new Deanery Secretary. The meeting next year will be held in Belleville with the W.A. members of St. Thomas' Church as hosts. The offering on Tuesday amounted to over thirty-five dollars of which $5.00 is to be sent to the "S. S. by Post"—$10.00 to Miss Emily Ruttan, Dorcas Sec.; $10.00 to the Columbia Coast Mission and $10.00 for the use of Mr. Green at Fort George.

Mrs. Wright of Belleville, W.A. President, gave a comprehensive report of the 57th annual meeting at Winnipeg. The need of shoes and clothing for the Japanese who have been moved inland was spoken of. Continual prayer on St. Andrew's Day in our churches was suggested; and the dearth of candidates to work in our residential schools stressed.

Miss Emily Ruttan explained the requirements for the bales of clothing to be sent by the branches this year to these Indian schools.

Rev. Mr. Hutchinson of Trenton made a strong plea for the religious training of our youth, lest our young people grow up to be civilized pagans. "What kind of a world will it be," asked the speaker, "even five years from now, unless our children grow up Christians?"

Following the Benediction the ladies of St. Andrew's, Wellington, served afternoon tea.

W. J. Morrison Speaker

Members of the H. & S. Association enjoyed immensely their opening meeting on Wednesday night when Mr. W. J. Morrison, Supt., of the School for the Deaf, with Miss Nurse, a talented teacher and four bright little deaf girls from the school demonstrated voice training, lip reading, spoken and written language. The demonstration was most interesting. Mrs. Wm. Rankin formerly of Belleville introduced Mr. Morrison while Mrs. Ray Clapp moved the vote of thanks

Musical numbers were two choruses by twelve girls: "Merrily the Cuckoo" and "The Sun Shower" with Mr. Walden at the piano; and a piano duet by Misses Joan Rutter and Eleanor Calnan.

Mrs. Harry Carter gave an excellent paper on the work of the League of Nations. The President Mrs. Rutter had charge of the meeting.

LANDS 10-POUND PICKEREL

Westport, Ont., Oct. 9 — (CP) — Ten-year-old Phillip Goodell of Westport went fishing in Little Rideau Lake near here, using a line of cotton string and a cheap spinner. He returned to his home with a 10-pound pickerel he hooked and landed with the help of his father.

AT THE BELLE

Glenn Miller and his band, who have for the third time been voted America's most popular Orchestra are starred in "Orchestra Wives", 20th. Century-Fox picture that takes you behind the scenes of America's musicmakers. The film, which stars, too, George Montgomery and Ann Rutherford, opens at the Belle this week-end with a special Sunday Midnight show.

AT THE CAPITOL

Jean Arthur in a scene from the super western "Arizona" now playing at the Capitol with the added action thrill drama "Riot Squad."

AT THE McCARTHY

Clifford Evans, star of the outstanding motion picture "The First Commando," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. "Dudes are Pretty People" is the laugh-packed second feature. In addition this evening a sneak pre-view showing of a new feature everyone will rave about.

AT THE BELLE

"A-Haunting We Will Go"

The entire cast and crew signed a pledge not to divulge the mechanics of the vanishing woman stunt, performed by Dante, the world's most famous magician, in Laurel and Hardy's newest comedy, "A-Haunting We Will Go" now on the Belle theatre screen.

Sheila Ryan is the disappearing beauty in the film, but she reappears happily to share romantic honors with John Shelton.

Mystery Film Goes Over

A dead man walks, talks and kills in the lightning action film designed for thrills and chills in the new Michael Shayne mystery, "The Man Who Wouldn't Die" the fifth in this series of thrilling detective stories to be presented as the thrilling co-hit.

Lloyd Nolan is starred as Private Detective Michael Shayne, Marjorie Weaver shares the romantic interest in the story.

"When Air Raids Strike" shows Canadians what to do and what not to do in the event of an air raid.

Top Band in Top Musical Hit

"Orchestra Wives" which arrives at the Belle theatre this week-end with a special performance Sunday after Midnight 12.05 is a jam session of laughs, love and alluring young ladies high-lighted by the music that all America loves to sing and swing to the music of Glenn Miller and His Band. Co-starred with Miller are George Montgomery and Ann Rutherford. Featured is a cast of beauties including Lynn Bari, Carole Landis, Virginia Gilmore and Mary Beth Hughes as well as Cesar Romero and the Nicholas Brothers.

AT THE McCARTHY

Sneak Pre-View

Just like it is done in Hollywood, this evening the McCarthy Theatre will have Belleville's first Sneak Pre-View showing of one of the top feature hits of the year. No person knows the name of the feature which will flash on the screen for the first time, everything is kept a secret.

The regular advertised program is first presented and then instead of the evening's performance ending, the feature which no person knows what it will be is on the screen. There is no extra charge, the ticket purchased to attend the regular night's advertised show, also admits you to see the pre-view show. Briefly you see two completely different programs on pre-view night, for only the one admission price.

The regular program this evening is the two features "The First Commando" and "Dudes Are Pretty People," followed at 10 o'clock by ? ? ? Belleville's first sneak pre-view of a feature hit that you'll be back to see a second time, upon its return to the McCarthy.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Riot Squad"
(First Belleville Showing)

"A riot of activity" is the descriptive phrase which comes to mind in relation to "Riot Squad," the Monogram drama which opened at the Capitol Theatre last night. From first to last, the picture is an unbroken succession of tense situations and thrilling incidents.

Richard Cromwell and Rita Quigley head the cast of this picture, and both are completely up to the requirements of their roles. As the lovers of the story, they contribute romantic moments to a picture which is basically a fast-moving story of villainy and intrigue. John Miljan, as always, is forceful and sinister as the gang leader, and eight-year-old Mary Ruth justifies her selection as one of Hollywood's outstanding child actresses. Others who do good work are Herbert Rawlinson, Mary Gordon, Jack C. Smith, Donald Kerr and Noel Cravat.

"Arizona"

Turbulent adventure, set against the rich romantic tapestry of early Arizona, the memorable love story of Phoebe Titus, titan of a woman and dashing Peter Muncie, Sergeant, U.S.A.!

Mighty spectacle! Tempestuous stampedes! Lawless raids! War! Intrepid men and women! At last, in all its wild magnificence, the motion picture drama of Arizona's birth! Wesley Ruggles' "Arizona" now showing at the Capitol starring Jean Arthur, William Holden, Warren William, Porter Hall and a cast of thousands.

A colored cartoon and the ninth chapter of the thrilling serial of "Spy Smasher" make an entertaining program for the whole family.

Loss Estimated About $40,000

Belle River, Ont., Oct. 8. (CP)—Losses suffered by local citizens holding safety deposit boxes in the Provincial Bank of Canada when the bank's vault was cracked by robbers Sunday night, Sept. 27, today were estimated to be in the vicinity of $40,000.

The estimate was made following interviews with a number of box holders who said the greatest loss was in unregistered bonds.

Considerable cash, War Savings Certificates, and many personal papers also were lost in the robbery, it was said.

J. U. St. Pierre, manager of the bank, said he could not release any information on the robbery as it was against bank regulations. Previously it was reported that $13,000 was lost in the robbery.

Inspector George Mackay, special investigator from the Attorney General's office, now on the case, announced today that an army deserter was being held as a possible suspect in the robbery. He was to appear in County Police Court, Windsor, today on a charge of false registration after his arrest in Belle River.

The man held was arrested by Inspector Mackay and Provincial Constable Len Neil at his Belle River home.

It is believed too that if police solve the robbery they also will be enabled to solve the June robbery committed at the same bank.

Ross Munro Now in Britain

Somewhere in the United Kingdom, Oct. 9 — (CP) — Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent who reported the attack on Dieppe Aug. 19, returned today after a five-week stay in Canada.

While in Canada Munro made a series of addresses at the home towns of the seven regiments which participated in the Dieppe attack. He will take to the regimental camps news and messages from relatives and friends of the men in Canada.

"First of all I'm going to visit the Essex Scottish." Munro said as he stepped out of the plane in which he flew from Canada. Munro spoke to 15,000 friends and relatives of Essex Scottish men at Windsor Aug. 30 after a Trans-Atlantic flight to New York. He was made an honorary life member of the regiment.

With Munro was Scott Young, formerly of Winnipeg, who left head office of The Canadian Press in Toronto to join the staff of the London Bureau.

COAL IS MISSING

Toronto, Oct. 9 — (CP) — Apparently anticipating a cold winter, a thief stole a truck loaded with a ton of coal here yesterday. Police later found the truck, but the coal was missing.

All cosmetics made in Uruguay or imported require approval by the Ministry of Public Health before they may be advertised or placed on sale.

Undertaker Victim Of an Unusual Hoax

Goderich, Ont., Oct. 9 — (CP) — Floyd Lodge, undertaker, was the victim of an unusual hoax when he answered a telephone ambulance call to the farm home of George Laithwaite, three miles east of Huron Road. He found no one injured or ill at the Laithwaite place and suddenly remembered he had left his store door unlocked. He also thought of $40 cash he had left in his register.

When he returned he found the cash missing. The telephone call was traced to a pay station.

RAISED OVERNIGHT

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 9—(AP) — A fighting ship for the Royal Australian Navy was launched today from a New South Wales shipyard where a year ago there was nothing but a grassy slope. Because of war needs, a modern shipyard was raised there almost overnight and production of warships started. Size of the vessel launched was not stated.

WEARS PARACHUTE FOR DRESS

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 9 —(AP)— Mrs. W. E. Evans has put the parachute to practical use — an evening gown. The discarded parachute was sent her by her son in the Army Air Force. She made it into such a flattering piece of attire she wore it recently at the wedding of a niece.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Plans for Reunion

In the apartment she turned on the lamp over the divan and ripped open the envelope with gloved hands.

"Dearest,

"I should like to spare you this hurt but there is no way out and so little time.

"I am not returning to New York, Judith. I have been instructed to proceed directly to Venezuela to a job which will be long and tedious. I told you, my darling, that we could not fight distance and that I never promised not to leave you. I would change my work if I could but it is too late now. I am as desolate as you believe me, and I shall have left Florida when you receive this because the sound of your voice over the telephone would make it all the more difficult. The only thing that cheers me is that you are coming down in March during the vacation that is due you. I love you.

Max

Incredulously Uudith read it again, but the words were still the same. January. . . .February. . . .March. . . . Five weeks to the first of March. She would go! A one-way ticket to the address at the top of the page, yes, a one-way ticket because she would not be coming back.

Standing very still in the quiet room, she drove back anger that he had not telephoned her, that he had denied her a decent good-bye. But she could not drive back the tears. Anger fought with excuses for him. Couln't help this. He had orders. It was his work. She understood that he had tried to spare her. She understood. She must and she would go to him in March. She would go to stay. But disappointment and hurt were in her eyes while she stood there, her thoughts leaping ahead, plans forming in her mind, plans forming fast because she would not admit how bereft she felt and how desperately lonely. No ugly thoughts, no lack of faith, no lose of confidence would she permit in her mind.

Presently she straightened, reached for her handkerchief, thinking, "It won't be long. Five weeks . . . .Oh, it'll be fun meeting him there. . . .I won't be unhappy about this. We'll be married there."

She took off her things and went toward the kitchen. But all desire for food had left her. Later she felt a little ill when she sat down. Then she got up, entered the bedroom and wrote to Max, wrote with light-heartedness and gayety about coming to him . . . but it was the sort of light-heartedness and gayety you feign when you are afraid.

The next day she went to Giles Benson's office and asked about her vacation. He was vague until he realized how determined and anxious she was and then promptly told her that the first three weeks in March would be fine with him. The third week she was taking at her own expense.

"Planning something special?" he asked.

"I'm going to South America." She would not tell him that she was going to be married.

At noon she hurried to a travel agent who told her about ships and rates. Thereupon she made a deposit on a reservation and walked back to the store, pausing occasionally to look into shop windows. There was time enough for clothes. There was time, too, to tell her family that she was going. Should she tell them she was going to Venezuela to be married to a man they had not met? She did not know how she would manage her family.

Max's short, loving notes still came and the clerk always smiled when he gave them to her. Max was delightful that she was coming. He wrote, "I'll see to it that I'm free the entire time you're here. It's lovely here and the climate is perfect. We'll be very happy again, darling."

She went shopping in her free moments, and her closet was soon filled with bright, light clothes and several vivid felt hats. On the day she brought her wedding outfit, an all-blue ensemble, she came home to find a letter from Emily.

In part Emily wrote, "I have half a dozen nurses here and I'm waited on hand and foot. Everybody is so good to me. My old school friends drop in to see me. The boys, too. I've been to church and played bridge, and maybe after a while I won't remember I ever went away. I'm feeling almost well. Tim wrote me from Palm Beach. I don't answer his letters and soon he'll stop writing, I hope. He writes the way he is in person, but I couldn't be honest if I wrote to him. I'd have to say how much I love him still.

"How long does it take, I wonder, to get over it? Every morning I wake up hoping that, as if I had a disease, I'll be cured. I suppose Max is back and you're happy again. I saw him only that one time, you know, and I knew he was terribly in love with you. Have you seen Phyllis and Ames? Have you found someone to live with you?"

The agony of waiting for something that was never going to happen you could read between the lines of Emily's letter.

To answer Emily's question she called Phyllis and told her that she was coming one evening that week. Not for dinner, she hastily explained, knowing that Phyllis' cooking had not improved and that she found it task enough to cook for Ames and herself.

When she pressed her finger to Phyllis apartment bell and Phyllis opened the door, she was only slightly shocked at the scene that greeted her. Emily had prepared her weeks ago. For the odor of cigarettes long extinguished filled the living-room where magazines where the accumulation of seve-where the accumulation of several days' dust lay over the new furniture and polished floor. The doors to the bedroom and kitchen were open and she saw that the twin beds were still unmade and that the sink was filled with soiled dishes. But Phyllis looked lovely in a green velvet housecoat, her red hair perfect, her face made up.

"Come in, Judith! This place is a sight, but Ames goes to a meeting every Wednesday night and doesn't come home to dinner." She smiled. "I've been lazy all day. New magazines came and it was too cold to go out. Let me show you some new clothes I've just got."

Frequently, Judith suspected, Ames came home to an unmade bed and to dust and dirty dishes. Poor meticulous Ames who had met a charming red-head at a party and fallen in love with her and married her. . . .Why didn't Phyllis try to please him as she had tried to please her advertising manager? Was marriage something to be taken advantage of because it was supposed to be a life contract, a job from which you couldn't be fired?

Judith had not told Phyllis about Max and she was sure that Emily had not. She said simply, "I'm going to South America on my vacation next month."

"Oh, Judith, how marvelous, darling! I'm talking Ames into taking me abroad, but he says he can't afford it. I'd like to get over before something happens over there. Ames thinks it will this year. But he wants a house and and his father wants us to have a house. I don't want a house in the country. I had enough of country when I was a kid."

"Ames' father is probably thinking about grandchildren, Phyllis . . . ."

Phyllis looked indignant. He can think something else! I'm not ready to have a child yet! I had a miserable childhood, and until I married I had to work to support myself, putting up with cranky bosses and going out in bad weather. I deserve some leisure and fun. I don't want to be tied down to a child yet. I don't know anything about babies."

Later she said, "I mustn't forget to tell you we're having a party in two weeks. I haven't set a definite date yet. I want you to come. Bring Sid Biddison along or anybody or nobody—as you chose. It doesn't matter. There won't be many. I wouldn't know what to do with a lot of people. Some people we met on our honeymoon are going to be in town and I thought it would be amusing to see them again. Now tell me about Emily. I've been intending to write, but I've been so busy."

Ames came in then and Judith saw anger and embarrassment in his eyes as they swept over the untidy apartment which was to have been the first real home he had had since his mother died and he and his father had lived in a hotel. How careful he had been in selecting the furniture and rugs and china before he and Phyllis had been married! Now the furniture was covered with dust, the rugs with ashes and the china had not been washed since yesterday.

He seemed genuinely glad to see Judith. "Why, Judith, I thought you'd forgotten us."

"On the contrary, I thought you'd forgotten me."

"Seems like old times to see you and Phyllis together. Any news?" He bent down and gave Phyllis a husbandry kiss.

"I was just telling Judith we were planning a party and I was asking about Emily when you came in."

"How is Emily, Judith?"

"She's coming along beautifully and she has a devoted family to help her."

"Good. I saw her ex-boy friend tonight."

"Tim?"

Ames smiled rather cynically. "Yes. Dad and I stopped in at a bar for a drink after a meeting and Tim was there with another chap and two girls. They were all pretty high. I don't know whether they were coming from a party or going to one."

"What sort of girls?" Phyllis asked.

"You call them glamor girls or cafe society. Tim didn't recognize me. He was too busy with the blonde. I hope Emily—"

In the taxi going home her thoughts darted from Phyllis and Ames to Tim, and then to Max, lingering on the latter because certainly it was pleasanter to contemplate their joyous reunion than to think of Phyllis' carelessness, Ames' embarrassment and Tim's actions.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading his mail at breakfast and ma was reading hers, saying, Oh dear, what an uninspiring batch of letters to start the day with. If this is an omen of how uninteresting my whole day is going to be, I sincerely hope not, she said.

Would you like —to have your mail pepped up with an invitation to the wedding of Mrs. Agnew Chumworth's daughter Prissilla, followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents? he said. I can arrange it for you? he said, and ma said, William, you're joking. That's the most talked of and exclusive social event of the season. How could I possibly receive an invitation? she said.

Because I have certain connections and I can see that you get one, pop said, and ma said, Why William, how thrilling, but it's utterly out of the question, I mean I'd feel like a lost sheep in a strange meadow. I mean I wouldn't know a sole there except by hearsay or their pictures in the society collums, she said.

Nobody would know you either, not even the hostess, so honors would be even, and just think how you'd laugh in your sleeve as you enjoyed the general atmosphere of surprise and suspicion, pop said, and ma said, Well, it would be rather a doubtful pleasure, I must say. But anyway, how could you get me an invitation for land sakes? she said.

I've already got it for you, pop said. The invitations were printed by, the man who does some work for the Company, and he gave me one as a sample of his work. Here it is, my dear, beautifully engraved and all yours, he said.

And he took an envelope out of his pocket and took a card out of the envelope and handed it to ma, and ma called him a crazy thing and claimed she was going to keep it anyways just for the novelty.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Oct. 9—(CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $11.60.

Dressedweight: Chatham $16.75, Hamilton $16.25 delivered, Hull $15.70 plus transportation, London $16.10 delivered, Stratford $15.75 plus transportation.

Brantford later reported prices unchanged at, dressedweight $15.75 plus transportation.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 9 (AP)—Bullish contingents continued the offensive in today's market but they had to contend with a little more short-selling and profit-cashing on Thursday's first 1,000,000-share rally of the year.

Initial gains of fractions to better than a point were reduced and minus marks were in evidence here and there near the fourth hour.

Canadian stocks were mixed. Dome Mines declined 1-2 and McIntyre 1-4. Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker gained 1-8.

Among stocks numerous new tops for 1942 or longer were recorded. These included N.Y. Central, General Motors, Standard Oil (NJ), Texas Co., Consolidated Edison, General Electric and International Nickel. Supported were American Telephone, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney, Sears Roebuck and U. S. Gypsum. Several eventually slipped. Santa Fe, Paramount Pictures and Chrysler wavered.

Gold stocks failed to do much in the recovery line as producers prepared to obey the W.P.B. order closing all mines within a week for the purpose of releasing between 3,000 and 4,000 miners for nonferrous metal operations.

AUCTION SALE

Dressed Poultry Market Maintains A Firm Condition

Toronto, Oct. 9 (CP)—The dressed poultry market maintained a firm condition, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Receipts of fowl and chicken were heavy and were clearing daily with supplies of chickens insufficient for the demand. Broiler receipts were practically nil. A few fresh turkeys of fairly good quality were arriving costing 35 cents per lb. No ducks or geese were arriving. Frozen turkeys were moving well but top grades were almost depleted. The local demand was good and out-of-town enquiries such that they could not all be filled, only small lots going forward to eastern Canadian points and Newfoundland. One car of fowl arrived from the prairie provinces costing 24 1-2 cents lb. grade A, 5 lbs. and over and 1-2 cents lb. less on the 1-2 lb. average and 1 1-2 cent lb. less for grade B.

Dealers were quoting producers and country shippers:

Broilers: Grade A milk-fed, 25 cents lb; Grade B, 23 cents lb.

Chicken: Grade A milk-fed, 5 lbs. and over 28 1-2-29, 4 1-2 to 5 lbs. 27-28, 4 to 4 1-2 lbs. 27, under 4 lbs. 25; Grade B milk-fed, 5 lbs. and over 27 1-2-28, 4 1-2 to 5 lbs. 26-27, 4 to 4 1-2 lbs. 25-26, under 4 lbs. 24-25; Grade A, 5 lbs. and over 27 1-2-28, 4 1-2 to 5 lbs. 26-27, 4 to 4 1-2 lbs. 25-26, under 4 lbs. 24-25; Grade B, 5 lbs. and over 25 1-2-26, 4 1-2 to 5 lbs. 24-25, 4 to 4 1-2 lbs. 23-24, under 4 lbs 22.

Fowl: Grade A, 5 lbs. and over 22, 4 to 5 lbs. 21, 3 to 4 lbs. 20; Grade B, 5 lbs. and over 20, 4 to 5 lbs. 19, 3 to 4 lbs. 18; Grade C, all weights, 13.

Mysterious Civilian Prisoners Have Been Sent to Britain

An East Coast Canadian Port, Oct. 9—(CP)—Mysterious prisoners—civilians said to have been rounded up in Canada and proceeding to Britain—sailed for overseas with the latest movement of troops from this Dominion. Safe arrival of the convoy was announced today.

These enemy civilians, several dozen strong, clambered aboard a transport here guarded by grim Polish troops. Nothing could be learned about them, except that they had been caught in Canada.

They were clad in nondescript civilian clothes, free from the usual prisoner-of-war markings, carrying makeshift bundles and seemed little worried about the trip across. One, a short, dark man stopped on the gangway to talk to a Canadian soldier. Behind him a Polish guard grunted something in his native language, and the prisoner shrugged and said, "I can't understand that."

Menacingly, the guard motioned with his bayonet and the prisoner quickly moved along.

Grinning, the Canadian soldier said, "Well, Buddy, you can sure understand that."

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Oct. 9. (CP) — Cattle Prices were generally 25 cents higher on the Livestock Market here this week. Calves recovered 50 cents from last week's drop. Hogs were up $1.10 cwt. Lambs were steady while sheep gained fifty cents.

The supply of slaughter cattle was better in volume than for some time. Most of the good steers and heifers were sold to be slaughtered outside of Toronto at prices well over levels compatible with price ceilings on beef. Weighty steers sold at $9.50 to $10.75 cwt. Butcher steers and heifers were $9 to $10.50 and fed yearlings $10.50 to $12.25. Butcher cows sold at $7 to $8.75. Bulls were $8.50 to $9.75. Stockers sold at $10 to $10.50 for good quality with stock calves up to $11.25. Plainer stockers sold downward to $8.50. Good milkers and springers brought $125 to $150 each.

Calves closed at $14.50 to $15.50 for good and choice vealers with common downward to $9.50. Grass calves were also higher, selling generally at $9.

Hogs brought $16.35 dressed for the basic grade with sows at $13 dressed.

Lambs sold at $13 for good ewes and wethers with some up to $13.25. Bucks sold at $12 to $12.25 and culls at $9.50 to $11. Sheep were stronger at $9 to $10 cwt. for good light ewes with culls selling from $4 to $6.50.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

CANADA PROTESTS FETTERING OF PRISONERS

Issues Warning Germans Here To Be Shackled

Action Will Be Taken Today Unless Nazis Rescind Order By Noon

VIOLATES CONVENTION

Ottawa, Oct. 10 (CP).—The Canadian government, protesting "in the strongest terms" against the fettering of Canadian prisoners of war by German authorities, announced Friday night through the External Affairs Department it would manacle German war prisoners should the Germans fail to rescind by noon E.D.T. today an order for the chaining of Canadian servicemen held by them.

The External Affairs Department issued its warning in a communication handed the Swiss consul-general, who represents German interests.

The department's statement said the fettering of prisoners was a "measure of reprisal" which violated the Geneva convention for the protection of prisoners of war, and that the Canadian government and people have learned of it with amazement and regret."

Follows Conference.

The government's announcement, the outcome of a long conference of senior officers of the Department of External Affairs, preceded by urgent communications with the British government, informed the Swiss consul-general the government would be "very glad" to cancel the order placing German prisoners in chains upon receiving information the German order for chaining the Dieppe prisoners had been cancelled.

The Germans announced Thursday they had chained 107 officers and 1,268 non-commissoned officers and men captured in the Dieppe attack.

The Canadian government said "an equivalent number" of German prisoners, including both officers and men, would be put into chains unless the German order was countermanded.

No official announcement has been made of the number of Canadian prisoners captured in the Dieppe assault, as the Germans have not yet supplied Ottawa with an official list through the International Red Cross. It is believed, however, that a considerable number of the more than 2,500 Canadians reported missing after the battle are in custody.

British Presumed To Have Carried Out Order Which Was Threatened

NAZIS REJECT PROTEST

London, Oct. 10 — (CP) — The British authorities were presumed to have carried out their order to shackle 1, 376 German prisoners of war at noon today in counter-reprisal for the Nazi action last Thursday in fettering the same number of British and Canadian prisoners captured in the Aug. 19 raid on Dieppe.

There was no immediate official word from the British government or from the Germans who threatened yesterday to resort to the additional measure of manacling three times as many British prisoners if the British authorities carried out their order.

(A statement issued in Ottawa Friday night said the Canadian government will "reluctantly take immediate counter-action" and put German war prisoners in chains if an order for the fettering of Canadian prisoners of war is not rescinded by noon Saturday.)

The reprisals and counter-reprisals started when the Germans, rejecting all British protests, alleged that the British forces bound German prisoners in the Dieppe raid and in another sortie against Sark Island.

The British war cabinet discussed the German action yesterday and Prime Minister Churchill is expected to make a full statement on the British position when the House of Commons reconvenes.

There was no indication from British sources as to extent to which the German prisoners would be shackled; whether they would be handcuffed or chained hand and foot.

The German reprisals were interpreted in London as indicating that the commando raids had shaken the Germans considerably and that they took their drastic action in the hope of discouraging further such attacks.

Commissar System In Soviet Army Is Abolished

Moscow, Oct. 10—(AP)—Soviet Russia abolished the political commissar system of her Red Army today and ordered the military command to absorb the commissars as regular officers.

The supreme Soviet decree was signed by President Michael Kalinin.

A supplementary decree was issued by the commissariat of defence and signed by Premier Stalin to establish details of the organization.

Stalin's order formally relieved the commissars of their duties—which included direction of entertainment, maintenance of morale and political instruction—and instructed war councils to give them appropriate officers' ranks within a month.

Company and battalion commissars who already have had military training are to be promoted quickly.

Commissars inexperienced in battle tactics are to be trained in two-month courses which the premier ordered organized by Oct. 20. From 180 to 250 men will compose the student body at each such course.

The personnel department of the Red Army was directed to establish advanced courses by Nov. 1 for 200 regimental commanders and 600 battalion commanders.

ENGINEER KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Fire Kept From Several Tank Cars Loaded With Gasoline

Marionville, Mo., Oct. 10—(AP)—Flaming wreckage — the aftermath of a head-on collision, between two Frisco freight trains—endangered this southwest Missouri town of 1,227 last night as the fire crept toward several tank cars of naphtha and gasoline.

Shortly after midnight, however, the flames were controlled. The fire reached one car of naphtha but a seam burst and it failed to explode.

Floyd Burgett, engineer of the eastbound train, was killed in the collision.

Supt. M. M. Sisson of the Frisco eastern division said the crash might have resulted from "possible misinterpretation of orders.

U. S. FORTRESSES PROVING WORTH IN BOMB RAIDS

Weight of Friday's Attack Greater Than Nazi 'Blitz' Of September 1940

FOUR BOMBERS LOST

London, Oct. 10 (CP).—More than 100 American Flying Fortresses and Liberator bombers with an escort of 500 Allied fighter planes including two Canadian squadrons, home from the greatest Allied daylight attack yet launched against Hitler's war foundry, again have amazed British war experts, who know from grim experience the hazards of daylight operations.

Return of all but four of the United States bombers which stormed over occupied France yesterday and unloaded tons of bombs on factories and railroad yards apparently erased any doubts experts may have had concerning the Fortresses. All of the fighters returned safely.

British air correspondents said the weight of the attack far exceeded the daylight efforts of the Germans during the "blitz" of September, 1940. Fifty German bombers and 200 fighters over Britain in daylight then constituted a "big raid".

On the last day of the Battle of Britain, Sept. 15, 1940, the Germans sent over 500 planes in two groups of 250 each and lost at least 185 of them.

Five Nazi Fighters Shot Down.

The Allied fighters reported shooting down at least five German fighters yesterday and the score of the bombers has not been tallied officially.

Two R.C.A.F. fighter pilots, Flt. Lt. George Murray, D.F.C., of Halifax, and Sgt.-Pilot E. L. Gimbel, Chicago—shared in destruction of one German Focke-Wulf 190. Murray and Gimbel are members of the Spitfire squadron commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. Keith Hodson, D.F.C. of London, Ont. ,

None of the German planes used against Britain could carry the loads which the four-motored bombers transported to Lille yesterday. The Fortresses can carry three tons of bombs, the Liberators four.

Bombers "Good Bait".

The Liberator crews claimed the destruction of seven Nazi fighters for the loss of one of their own planes.

Attempts to Capture City Like Reaching For Moon Says Nazi

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 10—(AP)—An eye-witness account of the battle of Stalingrad by a German officer, who compared attempts to capture the city with reaching for the moon, was relayed here today from Berlin, where it was published in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

Although the city has been bombarded heavily for many days and large sections have been reduced to ruins, "the Russians not only have held defensively but have unleashed attack after attack," the officer was quoted as saying.

His account, re-published in the Basel National Zeitung said the continued Russian resistance is "a riddle to military experts."

"In three days," the officer said, "we advanced 1,300 yards. Yesterday and today we were only able to turn in our holes in the earth. As Columbus first saw land, so we look toward Stalingrad, of which we are talking as one talks of the moon."

He said obstinate infantry battles have been raging for days for possession of the centre of the city. He added that Russian reserves are crossing the Volga nightly by rafts and canoes to enter the conflict.

"First we take five houses and then must give up two," the account went on. Thus the fighting rages back and forth . . . .

"The soldiers talk of what they would do if Stalingrad were behind them. Already it is growing cold."

OTTAWA DELAYS ANNOUNCEMENT OF LIQUOR POLICY

Believed Government Will Reduce Alcoholic Content of Beer, Spirits

GIN MAY DISAPPEAR

Ottawa, Oct. 10 —(CP)— The government has put over at least until next week announcement of its new liquor policy. It had been forecasted for this week but cabinet changes are believed to have delayed it.

Transfer of War Services Minister Thorson to the Exchequer Court has left the cabinet committee studying the liquor question without a chairman and no decision yet has been made whether Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, Mr. Thorson's successor to the war services portfolio, also will take over the job of heading the liquor committee.

The brewers of Canada met here during the week under the chairmanship of Norman Dawes of Montreal and had conferences with Revenue Minister Gibson and his officials. It is understood they had no program ready to meet the pressure on the government for curtailment in beer consumption.

The government is being urged to reduce consumption of alcoholic beverages by Temperance organizations, which argue the people are drinking too much, particularly in war time. In addition National Selective Service officials contend too many men are used in beer distribution and service in the beverage rooms who should be in essential war work.

10 AXIS FIGHTERS SHOT DOWN ON EGYPTIAN FRONT

Ten Others Are Damaged When Enemy Aircraft Attacked on Ground

TRAIN BLOWN UP

Cairo, Oct. 10 — (AP) — Allied planes made large-scale attacks on Axis landing grounds in the forward area of the Egyptian front yesterday and shot down 10 Axis fighters and damaged 10 others in air battles, a communique said today.

"Numerous direct hits were scored and considerable enemy aircraft on the ground were destroyed and damaged by low-flying attacks," said the communique, issued jointly by the R. A. F. and Middle East headquarters.

Explosives and cannon shells loosed by light bombers and long-range fighters destroyed the locomotive of a German-Italian train and ammunition cars were blown up, it was announced.

Bengasi harbor shipping also was attacked and the communique indicated the scope of the operations in reporting that a dozen aircraft are missing.

ALLIED AIRMEN BOMB JAP SUPPLY BASE AT RABAUL

Spread Sixty Tons Of Explosive And Incendiary Bombs On Many Targets

START HUGE FIRES

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 10 — (CP) — Allied airmen lashed out last night at the Japanese supply base at Rabaul, New Britain, spreading 60 tons of explosive and incendiary bombs among enemy supply dumps, barracks and jetties in the largest single air raid yet carried out in the Southwest Pacific by Allied heavy bombers.

The raid started fires that were visible for 60 miles.

Australian ground forces meanwhile were pushing into "the gap" in the Owen Stanley Mountains of New Guinea in pursuit of retreating Japanese troops.

Headquarters announced that "our forward elements have established contact with the enemy's patrols in the Myola-Templeton's crossing area. This area includes the Gap, 6,000 feet up in the mountains, from which the trail drops sharply toward the enemy's advance base at Kokoda, a spokesman said.

No Large Concentration Sighted

It was the first time in two weeks that Allied forces had been in direct contact with the withdrawing Japanese. A spokesman said no large concentration of Japanese had been sighted, however.

The spokesman said the raid on Rabaul was the most destructive carried out in this area. The planes flew through an intense barrage of anti-aircraft fire at a low altitude to reach the targets.

"Sixty tons of explosives and incendiaries were dropped, scoring direct hits on jetties, machine shops, supply dumps, barracks, anti-aircraft and searchlight positions," the communique said. All the planes returned.

Buka Also Raided

Seeking to pin down ships, airplanes and supplies which the Japanese might send against the United States Marines in the Solomons, bombers also raided Buka at the extreme northern tip of the Solomons, starting many fires. Again, all planes returned safely.

The bombers continued to pound at Japanese strong points in New Guinea and one formation dropped 16 tons of bombs on Japanese supply dumps, airdromes and other installations at Lae.

In the Tanimbar Islands north of Australia, Allied fliers attacked a merchant vessel, which had been damaged earlier off Saumlaki, "completing its destruction," the communique said.

City's Garrison Repulses Renewed German Efforts

Official Reports Indicate Relative Stabilization Of Front Lines

47TH DAY OF SIEGE

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 10 (AP) — Tank and infantry attacks so ferocious that observers believed them to be the German high command's supreme bid for a quick decision in the battle of Stalingrad were reported continued today and Red army troops entrenched for positional-warfare against the Nazi flank northwest of the city.

A front line correspondent of Izvestia said there was every reason to believe that Hitler's field officers expected finally to master the battered industrial centre but "this expectation was not fulfilled."

A tank division and a motorized infantry division were among several fresh German units which led the latest offensive, a four-day-old action concentrated on a workers' settlement northwest of Stalingrad and aimed at cutting through the city's heart to the Volga.

80 Air Assaults in Day

Izvestia said as many as 80 assaults were launched in this phase of the battle, the greater part falling utterly and others gaining a few dozen yards in various areas.

The army newspaper Red Star said that recently more than 2,000 German flights were made over Stalingrad in a single day with 50 to 75 bombers detailed to a single objective.

But now it said the Germans were compelled to reduce the number of flights and even to take a day or two off while bombers were being repaired. During these lulls only fighters appeared over the city.

Most of City Ruined

Izvestia said three-fourths of Stalingrad was in flames or ruins after the first German raid on August 23, carried out by more than 1,000 planes. Later the Nazis dropped leaflets calling for the city's surrender in the mistaken belief that it had been crushed.

Despite the savage air pounding the Russians continued to ferry reinforcements across the Volga. The captain of one ship, the Abkhazetz, named for the rugged Caucasian Abkhazetz region, was reported to have made 500 crossings under fire while his family remained in the flattened city area now occupied by the Germans.

SOLOMON ISLANDS CAMPAIGN ENTERS SECOND MONTH

Started as Limited Thrust But Now Assuming Vast Proportions

U. S. MARINES HOLD

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 10 (CP).—The campaign in the Solomon Islands has entered its second month with sporadic but bitter land, sea and air fighting in which the Japanese are attempting to regain control of the strategic airport on Guadalcanal and American Marines to maintain and strengthen their precarious hold on the beaches.

The marines, who landed on the beaches of Guadalcanal, Tulagi, Gavutu and Tanambogo on Aug. 7, still hold grimly to their hard won footholds while American air and sea units search far and wide among the islands to beat back Japanese attempts to reinforce their garrisons.

Rally To Save Port Moresby.

Farther to the west, Australian troops have rallied to save Port Moresby on New Guinea in a continuation of the Allied campaign to hold the supply line between North America and Australia. The two operations, although under different commanders, are part of the same campaign which started as a defensive move and now gives every sign of leading eventually to a general offensive against the Japanese-held islands in the Rabaul-Bougainville area. But that, everyone in Washington agrees, is looking a considerable distance into the future.

The campaign in the Solomons, which started as a limited thrust, has developed into an engagement of vast proportions in which large numbers of ships, planes, men and equipment have been thrown. It has not resulted so far in large areas being wrested from Japan's control but it has led to severe losses of planes and ships for the Japs and it has removed the threat of Japanese encroachment on the North American supply line, at least for the time being.

U. S. Controls Airport

Meanwhile, American forces are in control of the Guadalcanal Airport and the potentially valuable harbor at Tulagi. They are not only valuable at the present time but their retention may make it possible eventually to take further offensive steps to the north, toward the main Japanese bases of Bougainville and Buka.

64 Netherlands Seamen Arrive From Arctic Port

London, Oct. 10 (CP) — 64 Netherlands seamen, who were cast away on the barren northern shore of Novaya Zemblaya Island, high in the Arctic after losing their ship in a convoy to Russia have arrived here, Aneta, Netherlands news agency, reported today.

It said the men had been granted special leave to recover from their experiences. One seaman lost his legs from frostbite.

In their lifeboats, the men chanced upon an American freighter which could not take them aboard but replenished their food supplies. After six days, the boats reached the north coast of the island which juts far into the Arctic north of Russia's Arctic coast.

7 'Lifers' Escape Illinois Prison

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 10—(AP)—The full facilities of Illinois' law agencies were in operation today in one of the most widely-flung manhunts in the state's history to effect the capture of seven life-term convicts who made a daring escape from Stateville prison yesterday afternoon.

Two of the convicts, leaders in the break over the prison walls, are Roger (Terrible Touhy), 44 and Hugh Basil (the Owl), Banghart, 41, at one time the United States top-ranking public enemies. They were serving 99-year terms for kidnapping.

Two guards and a civilian employee were wounded in the daylight assault by the convicts, five of whom fled in a guard's automobile parked outside the prison.

"Shoot-to-kill" orders were issued as police patrolled highways and barricaded intersections, particularly leading toward Chicago, 40 miles northeast.

Warden E. H. Stubblefield said it was not for some time after the break that guards found two other convicts were missing. They were Edward Darlak, serving 99 years for murdering a policeman, and St. Clair McInerney, 31, serving a life term as a habitual criminal.

2 SHIP'S STOKERS FATALLY BURNED

Vessel Catches Fire While Docked at Halifax Pier

Halifax, Oct. 10 (CP).—Two ship's stokers lost their lives this morning when trapped in the smoke-filled forecastle of their vessel, afire at a pier here. Three others were seriously burned, two requiring hospital treatment, and it was feared others might have lost their lives also.

The fire broke out about five o'clock this morning, and the forecastle, used as the fire crew's sleeping quarters, was filled with smoke and fumes. Three of the trapped stokers groped their way up the companionway to the deck as city firemen battled the flames.

Rescue workers then fought their way into the cabin, and dragged out three more men who had been overcome by smoke and badly burned. Two were rushed to hospital. Another body was not recovered.

The shipping company in charge of the vessel said that there were more than seven firemen in the crew. It was feared at first the death toll might be higher, but some of the men had leave last night, and it is thought likely they had not returned to the ship.

Names of the victims could not be learned immediately.

Canada-U. S. Co-operation is Cited As Example of International Amity

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Oct. 10 (CP).—Canada's minister to the United States, Leighton McCarthy, expressed the hope today that "surely in the future . . . we will have enough sense to realize that for Pan-America as for Europe and Africa and Asia peace can only be preserved by an acceptance of the fact that it is indivisible."

The minister, in an address prepared for a meeting of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, sponsored by Columbia University and the National Broadcasting Company's Inter-American University of the Air, dwelt on peaceful relations and co-operation between Canada and the United States as an example of international amity.

He mentioned also the dual position of Canada as an American nation and a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, but added:

"No universal league for peace, whether on the Geneva (League of Nations) model or otherwise, can . . . hope to succeed if it disregards . . . regional associations or unions. But no regional unions can be fully effective unless they accept and participate in any wider association which may be established on a sound basis. Geneva may not have been entirely successful. But I venture to suggest Pan-Americanism will not be fully effective as an agency of peace if it is not able successfully to collaborate with Geneva's successor."

President Praised

McCarthy said no man has done more for inter-Americanism than President Roosevelt. He repeated the President's words at the opening of the 1936 Pan-American Conference when Mr. Roosevelt said: "Each of us has learned the glories of independence. Let us all now learn the glories of interdependence."

Letter Sent by Cassidy to Stalin Piece of "Journalistic Genius"

London, Oct. 10 (CP)—The letter from Henry C. Cassidy, chief of The Associated Press Moscow Bureau, to Joseph Stalin which brought the Russian Premier's answer last week-end calling for the Allies to "fulfil their obligations fully and on time" was described in the News Chronicle today as a piece of "journalistic genius."

Under the title "scoops" in the "Saturday Essay" column, Robert Lynd recounted the "astonishing" story of how Cassidy delivered his letter to the Kremlin and received Stalin's comment on the second front in reply.

"You or I would not have thought of sending a note around to be dropped in the letter box at the Kremlin," Lynd wrote. "That, it seems to me, was an impulsive notion of which only journalistic genius was capable."

AWNING BURNED AT TELEGRAPH OFFICE

Thought to have been caused by a lighted match or a cigaret butt, fire did considerable damage to the awning over the front of the Canadian National Railways telegraph office on Front Street at an early hour on Saturday morning. The awning was in its folded position and the fire apparently had been smouldering for a considerable time before being noticed by a passerby who turned in the alarm to the firemen. The entire centre portion of the awning was eaten away, it was reported by a telegraph official this morning who stated a new one would have to be purchased.

EDDIE STROUD COMES TO THE ARENA OVER THE HOLIDAY

Music lovers come into their's over the holiday week-end when two outstanding dance bands provide entertainment at the Hume Arena Gardens in the last holiday week-end before winter comes. PLAN ARRANGEMENTS FOR GRAND PARADE

Arrangements for a grand parade of city and district military and air force units and veterans of the First Great War to inaugurate the Third Victory Loan drive here, are now under way.

It is expected that personnel of district air stations, the 34th Battery R.C.A., the Argyll Light Infantry, (Tank); the C.W.S.F. and a detachment of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) as well as veterans will comprise one of the largest parades to be seen in the city.

Four bands will turn out to march the parade to the Cenotaph where a brief ceremony will be held. The date has been set for 3.30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 18.

LEAVES FOR WEST ON HARVEST DUTY

Bob Gibson, son of Mr and Mrs. Roy Gibson, Foster Avenue, left for the West on Wednesday with the contingent of Queen's University students who will assist the western farmers with their harvest and threshing.

Thomas York Heads Veterans

Comrade Thomas York was elected president of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada Unit 201, for the ensuing year at a meeting held in Memorial Hall. President York has long been actively connected with the work of the War Veterans Association and for some time has been on the association executive.

During the evening president-elect York spoke in glowing terms of the fine work that has been attained by the club during the years in which Past President Wm. Ford held the chief office of the organization.

In appreciation of two years' service as president of the Army and Navy Veterans here Past President Ford was presented with the conventional past president's jewel and also a beautiful electric lamp. Past President Ford personally thanked the comrades for their thoughtfulness and congratulated the organization upon their selection of such capable officers for the year.

The officers elected for the Army and Navy Veterans, Unit 201, were as follows:

Past President — Wm. Ford.
President — Thomas York.
Vice President — Robert Browning.
2nd Vice President Joseph Samain.
Sergeant - at - arms — Marshall Gerow.
Sergeant Major — William Lindsay.
Executive committee — Guy Harris, Frank Gillett, Jack Clark, Wm. McKenna and Arthur Galbraith.
Chairman of House Committee—Cecil Reid.

A musical program and social evening concluded the entertainment.

Ducks, Chickens Feature Market

Apples and grapes again predominated on the local produce market this morning with attendance being the largest seen in some time, both on the inside and outside markets.

Good grade McIntosh apples brought up to $2 per hamper with basket lots selling at 40 cents. Talman Sweets brought $1.75 per bushel with baskets bringing 35 cents. Most varieties of cooking apples sold at from $1 to $1.25 per bushel. Concord grapes sold at 45 cents the basket, and Roger Reds at 50 cents, while pears brought 50 cents the basket.

Eggs Firm At 50 Cents.

Eggs held their previous high level of 50 cents the dozen with mediums being quoted at 48 cents. Butter sold generally at two pounds for 85 cents although a few vendors asked straight 40 cents the pound. Ducks appeared in quantity on the market with prices ranging up to $2 each although the average figure quoted was from $1.40 to $1.60 each. Price by the pound was approximately 30 cents. Fowl was also largely offered with prices ranging up to $1.90 each for well finished spring chicken. Price per pound asked for chicken was around 32 cents with older fowl bringing 28 to 30 cents.

Fall vegetables were offered in quantity with carrots, beets, parsnips bringing 40 cents the peck and Spanish onions 60 cents the peck. Watermelons and muskmelons, said by farmers to be the last for this season, were quoted at the usual prices. Cauliflower was quoted up to 35 cents each, while potatoes held firm at $2 per bag with several vendors asking as high as $1.75 per bushel.

Raspberries Offered.

One of the features of the market was the offering of six boxes of fresh raspberries, these being quoted at 35 cents the box.

Whitefish sold at 30 cents the pound with perch bringing 20 cents and suckers three fish for 25 cents.

By actual count fifteen farmers offered young pigs on the market with prices ranging from $6.50 to $7.50 each. One load of mixed cordwood was quoted at $8 per cord.

W. E. Van Steenburg Now Full Colonel

Lieutenant-Colonel W. E. Van Steenburg, former officer commanding the 34th. Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery here. has been promoted to the rank of Colonel and given command of A. I. Canadian Army Training Centre at Petawawa Camp, according to information reaching here today.

Col. Van Steenburg is well-known in this city, having been associated with the Dominion Entomological Laboratory here prior to the war. During that period he commanded the 34th. Battery here with the rank of major, and his efficiency as a gunner commander was one of the chief factors in raising that unit's status to one of the finest field artillery units in Canada.

After war was declared he mobilized the 3/47th. Battery in Cobourg. Later he commanded the 7th. Light Anti-Aircraft Battery but was unable to take that unit overseas due to a low medical category.

Colonel Van Steenburg is now in England on three months' exchange duty, but will assume command of the Petawawa training centre on his return.

POLICE BLOTTER

A model T Ford truck, reported stolen off McAnnany St., on Thursday night, was recovered when found abandoned by police late Friday. The vehicle, of questionable vintage, had apparently been taken by joy riders and abandoned when the gasoline supply became exhausted.

Police were asked to assist in a search for 13-year-old Freddie Little, who left his Station St. home on Friday.

City police apprehended no less than three motorists driving at excessive rates of speed on city streets Friday. Summonses to appear in court on charges of speeding will be issued in all cases, as well as motorists who continue to violate the community's one-hour parking bylaw in the downtown area, it was officially disclosed today.

Stirling

STIRLING FAIR FEATURED BY HOLSTEIN SHOW

Entries in All Classes Lower Than in Previous Years But Quality High

VARIED PROGRAM

Stirling, Oct. 10 — Holstein cattle stole the spotlight at the Stirling Fair yesterday as entries from all parts of Hastings County competed in the largest cattle breeders' show of the season. The Black and White Day sponsored for the third consecutive year by Hastings County Holstein Breeders' Club, Stirling Agricultural Society and the Ontario Livestock Branch has become a feature attraction of the Stirling Fair and the Agricultural Society is to be congratulated in assisting to sponsor the project, which is a real step in herd improving.

Displays in Building

Within the Agricultural Hall were displays of roots and vegetables, seeds and grain, fruits, canned goods and ladies' work. Although the numbers of entries in these classes were less than in former years the quality was high and competition keen in every division. A display by the school children drew a great deal of attention and grown-ups and youngsters alike eyed the examples of manual training and handicraft as well as domestic science. Model planes and fine examples of carpentry were among the displays shown by the school boys. Another attractive booth in the hall was one directed by members of the local Chapter of the I.O.D.E. where tickets on a draw were available and other worthy enterprises in war effort given the paramount spot in promotion. Keen competition was also displayed in various classes for horses, sheep and swine, beef cattle and poultry.

Good Midway

While many encircled the lower end of the race track to enjoy the trials of speed the infield was transformed into a midway, of concessions of all types, games of chance and a few sideshows that attracted many of the younger folk. Meals and lunches were available at the booth operated by the ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Prominent competitors in the classes for horses were Heath Brothers, Bonarlaw; LeBarge, Thomasburg, M. E. Bird, Belleville; Robt. Downey, Crookston; W. J. Woods, Tweed; J. W. Yates, Corbyville, and J. C. Gay, Stirling. Largest exhibitors in sheep and swine were C. U. Heath and R. T. Garbutt. Largest and best in the prizewinners for roots and vegetables were Ivan Caldwell and R. Bush, Stirling, and C. Ketcheson, Belleville. Elmer Woods was prominent in the dairy cattle competition with a good herd of prize winners.

Fourteen splendid cheese were entered in the cheesemakers shows with a total of seven makers of the district competing. The honors of the day in this division went to Ken Kingston and Blake Johnston and Tom Heath, winners of first three honors in that order. Prominent competitors in the ladies work division and the domestic science branch included Mrs. J. E. O'Donnel, Miss Gena Spry, Mrs. Gordon Bailey, all of Stirling, Mrs. L. E. Bryant and C. Ketcheson

Agricultural Display Interesting

One of the most interesting displays in the building was that of the parasite control division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, directed by Mr. G. H. Hammond in charge of the bureau at Marmora. A study of the damage created by dreaded insects on various Ontario crops was made possible by a large group of wax models skilfully arranged. This project is furthered through co-operation with the Bureau of Entomology at Belleville.

Sports Events

For the benefit of the sporting public several interesting track races were held including running horse races, trials of speed and bicycle races. In the last mentioned which was of great interest to the boys and girls the following were the winners: boys 15 and over, Gerald Scott, J. Chambers, C. Ashley; boys under 15: Richardson, Chambers and J. Bush; girls' race: M. Haggerty, D. Gay, B. Morrison.

Race Results

2:15 Class

Tony Grattan (R. Caldwell)	111
Widower Grattan (B. Payne)	222
Jimmy Grattan (D. Reid)	333

Time: 2:16; 2:20; 2:17.

2:25 Class

In the final trials for speed for the 2:25 class, Messrs. Caughey, Caldwell and Stinberry were winners in interesting races.

Black and White Show Best Ever

Admirers of pure bred cattle spent most of the day encircling the south enclosure, where the Holstein breeders took part in keen competition as a result of the show, which was the largest of its type in the county. A county herd was selected to compete in the Eastern Ontario Show at Roseneath on Oct. 10. Breeders with herds in the show included: W. K. Caskey, John Burnside, Geo. Burnside, Philo Harris, Longwell Bros, Emile Masse, Thos. E. Neal, and Herb. Watt. Winners and owners of champions were as follows:

Senior champion bull, K. Caskey, Madoc; reserve senior champion bull, E. Masse, Belleville; reserve junior champion bull, J. Eagleson, Stirling; grand champion bull, E. Burnside, Madoc; reserve grand champion bull, J. Eagleson, Stirling; senior champion female, Earl Burnside, Madoc; reserve senior champion female, Earl Burnside, Madoc; junior champion female, E. Burnside, Madoc; reserve junior champion female, M. Burnside, Madoc; grand champion female, E. Burnside, Madoc; reserve grand champion female, E. Burnside, Madoc.

Assisting in the direction of this show were Mr. Robt. Holtby, well-known executive of the Canadian Holstein Breeders' Association, H. L. Fair, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Mr. A. E. Runyons of the Kemptville Agricultural School who acted as judge.

A county herd was then arranged and cattle from the herds of H. Watt, Foxboro; K. Caskey, Madoc; E. Burnside, Madoc G. Burnside and Son, Madoc; J. Burnside, Madoc; J. Eagleson, Stirling will compete at the Eastern Ontario Field Day Competition held at Roseneath.

A special number supplied by the program committee for entertainment was a show troup which gave a series of performances throughout the afternoon, Brown Bros. Buckaroos. A show was given in the Stirling Community Theatre at night followed by a dance with old time music provided by the Brown Brothers orchestra.

Officials were well satisfied with the day's activities and much credit is due to the committee workers for the success of the event.

Obituary

LATE DR. R. A. FLYNN

The funeral of Dr. R. A. Flynn took place this Saturday morning from the family residence, 24 Queen Street, to St. Michael's Church, where Solemn High Mass of Requiem was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V. G., with the Rev. A. L. O'Donnell as Deacon, the Rev. C. E. Baker as Sub-Deacon and Flt. Lt. the Rev. G. F. Martin as Master of Ceremonies.

The following clergy were present in the Sanctuary: Very Rev. E. M. Leacy, Napanee; Rev. C. F. O'Gorman, Marysville; Rev. J. Kennedy, Bancroft; Flt. Lt. the Rev. G. Mulligan, Montreal, and Flt. Lt. the Rev. D. J. Mulcahy of Mountain View.

During the offertory Mrs. G. Clapp sang a solo and at the close of the Mass a solo was rendered by Mr. Harold Barrett.

The church was filled with friends and the cortege to St. James' Cemetery was very large. At the graveside the committal prayers were said by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G.

Honorary bearers were Doctors G. S. Cronk, R. S. Gibson, J. B. Byrne, Trenton and J. J. Robertson.

Active bearers, Messrs. George A. Lee, John Trudeau, Wilfrid Laporte, John McIntosh, Clifford Baragar and A. B. Collins, all members of the Kiwanis Club.

There was a wealth of floral tributes and the Spiritual Offerings were many in number.

MISS MILDRED BELLE BROWN
(Formerly of Belleville)

Miss Mildred Belle Brown died at her home in Toronto on Thursday, Oct. 8th. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Brown, who resided in this city some years ago, her father being engaged in the house furnishings business She is survived by her mother. Friends here will regret to learn of her death.

Interment took place in Belleville cemetery early this afternoon, the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

LATE WM. FRY
(Burnbrae)

Marmora — The funeral service for the late Wm. Fry, who passed away at his home at Burnbrae on Sunday, October 4th, aged sixty-four years was held in Burnbrae Presbyterian Church on Tuesday afternoon and interment took place in the cemetery adjoining the church. The funeral was under L.O.L. auspices.

The late William Fry had been ill for several years with a heart condition. He is survived by his wife, formerly Gertrude Nayler, of Marmora, and seven children. He is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. Albert Nayler, of Marmora, Mrs. LaMorre of Trenton and Mrs. Annie Nayler of Healey Falls, widow of the late Theodore Nayler, and two brothers, George and Thomas of Seymour Township.

NOW GIRL BURGLARS

New York, Oct. 10 — (AP) — Staten Island police today sought two blond "glamor girls" in slacks who apparently have invaded what is generally a male occupational field —burglary. Police said they entered the home of Louisa Marraccino yesterday, taking $700 cash and jewelry valued at $230. Police said there have been one-a-day robberies by two girls in slacks for the four preceding days in Sunnyside.

CANADA U. S.

He reminded his hearers that "it is probably true that Canadians and Americans are more alike than the people of any other two foreign countries. In many respects we appear to be almost one people."

McCarthy pointed out also that during the 30 years from 1901 to 1931 approximately 350,000 immigrants entered Canada from the United States while during the same period 3,500,000 Canadians moved into the United States, so that "one-third of all the people of Canadian origin now are living in the United States."

These population movements, he said, "constitute a good foundation for Canadian-American co-operation."

Resolved By Arbitration.

The minister declared that the differences which have arisen between Canada and the United States during the "last 100 years and more" have not resulted in bitterness but have been resolved by arbitration instead of fighting.

In the field of defence, he pointed out, "we have become one continental community. The Ogdensburg agreement of 1940—an agreement incidentally, which goes further in the way of inter-American co-operation in this vital field than any agreement under the Pan-American system, of which Canada is not formally a part—this Ogdensburg agreement laid down the principle of full solidarity in defence."

The United States, he added, can call up Canadians for armed service and Canada can do the same thing with Americans.

"In neither case, I venture to say," he declared, "does the alien so conscripted feel very acutely that he is in a foreign army."

OTTAWA DELAYS

Production Ceases Nov. 1.

Chemicals Controller Sterne last week issued an order that the distillers after Nov. 1 may make no more portable liquor but turn their entire facilities to making alcohol for war production. Because of the quantities of liquor now in the process of ageing this is not expected to cause a shortage in supplies available for sale in Canada for three or four years at least. Canadian gin which does not require the maturing that rye whisky does, however, may soon disappear.

The liquor being aged is held in bond and the delegation which waited upon the government last month from the United Church Council pressed that the government reduce consumption by limiting the amount of spirits permitted to be released from bond.

The distillers are understood to contend that as they can make no more portable liquor after Nov. 1, they will, in their own interests, reduce the amount of spirits they sell the public in order to make sure their well-known brands do not go off the market before they are able to replenish.

SOLOMON ISLANDS

It is probably true that the Solomons campaign and the fighting in New Guinea have not stopped the Japanese from making a gradual southerly advance in the Gilbert and Ellice Islands but as long as the Allies hold their flank positions, the Japanese can do little effective damage in this area and will be in no position to cut the vital supply line.

U. S. Air Force Superior

One thing the Solomon campaign has demonstrated is the quality, perhaps not the quantity, superiority of American air strength over the Japanese with Japanese losses running four and five to one.

Although the Solomon fighting started out as a diversion and primarily as a defensive operation, it is increasing in intensity and proportion all the time. It is bound to absorb more and more strength and energy on both sides. Although the time has not yet come for it, the Japanese may find, unless they win major victories in the meantime, that they cannot defend themselves in the South Seas and conduct major offensive operations elsewhere.

CITY'S GARRISON

The mid-day communique said Russian forces northwest of Stalingrad threw back five counter-attacks, killed about two hundred German infantrymen, destroyed five mortars and other material and blew up an ammunition dump.

Within the battered city, Red Army men were declared to have "continued to defend the positions they had occupied and repulsed attacks by enemy infantry."

Official Soviet reports indicated a relative stabilization of lines in the greatest battle of the German-Russian conflict, the siege of Stalingrad now in its 47th day.

A possibility that Axis shock troops would be diverted against the Volga-Caspian shipping lanes at Astrakhan, on the Volga's mouth, was implied yesterday in a dispatch of the government newspaper Izvestia, which reported for the first time the German drive across the Kalmyck steppes.

(The Germans claimed several weeks ago an invasion force had driven to the Caspian southwest of Astrakhan after capturing Elista, the Kalmyck capital 160 miles south of Stalingrad and 180 miles west of Astrakhan. Later Berlin broadcasts have been silent upon developments in that region.)

Fortify Positions

Digging in of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's relief forces northwest of Stalingrad after almost three weeks on the offensive across the Don-Volga corridor was announced in the midnight communique.

Amid artillery duelling, scouting operations and local fighting on various sectors, they "fortified their

A German hint that assault troops would be withdrawn from Stalingrad, leaving the field to siege guns and bombers, was again ignored by the Soviet High Command. But artillery is among the best-publicised of the Red Army's weapons and the Russians probably would welcome a shelling duel there.

A Tacit Admission

Withdrawal of Nazi infantry would be regarded here as a tacit admission the German High Command had again miscalculated the strength of Russian resistance, as it did at Leningrad, at Tula and upon the approaches of Moscow last year.

A Red Army force encircled for several days was declared to have broken through the enemy ring after a hard battle and occupied defence positions at a workers' settlement.

"Guards and mortar men in the course of the day disabled two German tanks, set 13 trucks on fire and killed about 300 enemy officers and men," the communique said.

About a company of German infantry was reported wiped out at Stalingrad's outskirts during two vain attempts by tank-led riflemen to smash through the defences toward the Volga.

Ammunition Trucks Destroyed

A reverse was announced on the northwestern front, an indefinitely defined area between Rzhev and Leningrad. The communique said Soviet troops lost two communities before an assault of German infantrymen and 30 tanks.

Ten Nazi ammunition trucks were destroyed and about 300 Germans killed in the Mozdok area of the central Caucasus by Red Army men in beating off several attacks by a tank-supported regiment, the communique declared.

This was supplemented at noon with a statement that "in the Mozdok area our units repulsed enemy attacks," three in one sector costing the invaders a number of tanks, trucks and about a company of riflemen.

German infantry tank groups, reinforced after a three-day battle in the western Caucasus southeast of Novorossisk, penetrated to the outskirts of a Russian-held settlement, but "our troops are fighting stubbornly wiping out the Hitlerites who have broken through," it was announced.

Six enemy bombers were declared shot down by Russian anti-aircraft gunners at the approaches of Leningrad.

U. S. FORTRESSES

Fighter pilots called the American bombers the "best bait" ever put up for the German air force because the Germans send up all available planes to stop them. They then get a chance at the German fighters.

In recent months the R.A.F. has tried everything in sweeps to entice the German fighters into combat, but the only serious challenge was during the Dieppe raid.

Threat of "Reprisals".

The German radio broadcast a threat of "reprisals" for the raid last night, but there was no elaboration. The German high command earlier had issued a communique claiming the destruction of sixteen Allied aircraft, "some" of them Fortresses.

It was the first time the Nazis mentioned Flying Fortresses, although this was their fourteenth raid over Western Europe. It appeared that the Germans have been withholding from their people news that American air forces are participating in European activities.

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said in a joint communique today there was "nothing to report" last night. It was assumed that bad weather over the continent prevented the R.A.F. from resuming its bombing of German targets during the night.

Only Brief Alert.

Flight of a single German plane over the home country caused a brief alert in London this morning, the ninth daylight alarm here this year. Authorities said no bombs were dropped.

A southeast coast town was bombed by a German raider who flew in from the channel under the cover of low clouds.

One German plane was shot down over Britain last night by anti-aircraft fire. The pilot was captured.

There was no confirmation of reports that two more German planes had been brought down.

Matching refrigerators, storage cabinets for food that does not require chilling have been invented to be placed on top of refrigerators.

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney—The world-wide communion was solemnly observed at Aiken's Church on Sunday morning with Rev. L. W. Scott in charge of the service.

On this day Christians all over the world, far apart in their thinking and forms of worship, came together in the unity of a spirit of love, carrying out their Lord's command, "Do this in remembrance of Me".

A duet "Dear to the Heart of Jesus" was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Westover, during the service, and there was special music by the choir with Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton as church organist.

A large number attended the Auction Sale held on Tuesday at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. John Orr.

Mr. Orr has sold his farm to Mr. and Mrs. Langstaff, who will be taking possession in the near future.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Orr and Mr. Wilkie Orr are pleased that they are not leaving the neighborhood, having reserved part of the farm home, where they will continue to reside.

AC2 Gordon Spafford of the R.C.A.F., now in training at Victoriaville, Quebec, spent the weekend at his home here.

Mrs. Arnold Masters and children of Melrose, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wheeler.

Miss Bessie Finkle of Stirling, spent the weekend with Miss Ruth Spafford.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Grills and daughter, Betty Jane, spent Sunday in Peterborough with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ash and family.

Miss Bessie Beatty, who has been a patient in the Belleville Hospital, is convalescing at the home of her aunt, Mrs. McLaren in Belleville, and expects to return to her home here, in a few days.

A delightful afternoon was spent on Tuesday when former friends of Mrs. Roy Finkle, were entertained at the home of Mrs. Stanley Spafford and Miss Ruth Spafford. Mrs. Finkle, who now resides in Stirling, is spending part of this week with Mr. and Mrs. Spafford.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

How Fire-Safe is YOUR Home?

Do you realize that your home can be made a lot more fire-safe? If your roof is a patch-work of loose shingles ready to catch sparks, replace it with a fire-resistant roof of asbestos or asphalt. If you have to force your furnace dangerously to keep your home warm insulate and eliminate this hazard . . . and make your walls safer, too. And don't forget the importance of good "housekeeping" in attic and basement . . . clean up those loose papers and oily rags NOW!

Annual Guest Day of United Church W.M.S Features Interestingly Arranged Program

United Church W.M.S.

West Huntingdon — Over forty ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. John Moorcroft on Thursday for the October meeting of the United Church W.M.S. It was the annual guest day and a number of visitors were in attendance including a group from Eggleton United Church W.M.S. and Beulah W.M.S. A delicious dinner was served at noon. Mrs. Sandy McCurdy presided over the afternoon's program, familiar hymns were sung including the National Anthem. Mrs. Clifford Elliott read the Scripture lesson and each member responded to the Roll Call with a verse containing the word "Build." Mr. Kenneth Stewart gave an address on the theme word "Build," and Mrs. W. J. Fitchett sang "Building For Eternity," with Mrs. Russel Stapley as accompanist. Watch Tower readings were given by Mrs. Melville Reid, Mrs. Frank Hammond, Mrs. John Moorcroft and Mrs J. R. Stewart. Mrs. Geo. Cook was in charge of the W.A. business and Mrs. Elmer Post, Mrs. Geo. Cook, Mrs. Mac Sarles and Mrs. John Moorcroft were appointed a supper committee for the county Sunday School convention. The special address was interestingly given by Mrs. Percy MacMullen of Mount Pleasant. Mrs. MacMullen is one of the outstanding workers in the W.M.S. and her address was packed with inspiration and help that she had gained at the recent Leaders Conference held in Whitby. Mrs. Foster Wilson expressed the appreciation of the group to Mrs. MacMullen. Mrs. Frank Palmer expressed the joy of the guests in receiving the invitation and the opportunity offered them to join in so profitable a meeting. Prayer by the President concluded the meeting.

Anniversary Services

The West Huntingdon United Church held a very successful anniversary service on Sunday with the minister, Mr. Kenneth Stewart conducting both morning and evening service, speaking from the text "Jesus Wept". A Brighter Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving this year should have a significant meaning to all of us. Last year at the same season the future looked dark, and we all looked ahead to the future with considerable misgiving and worry.

The Russian were being pushed back farther every day for we could not foresee that their armies would be able to hold off the German offensive, which was rolling over the Russian countryside without pause. It seemed that the defenders must soon collapse under the hammer blows of the enemy and again Britain would be forced to stand alone just as she did in 1940.

The United States had not joined us in our struggle for existence, and while the majority of her citizens sympathized with the Allied cause there was room for vast enlargement of her assistance to Britain. Her people had not attained that frame of mind which calls for all-out war effort. The situation over there was, also, complicated by a small but powerful anti-Britain group that was doing its best to thwart Mr. Roosevelt's Lease-Lend aid to Britain.

The submarine menace continued to be great in the Atlantic and the Allies were losing merchant ships at a rate faster than they could be replaced. Britain's navy was overstrained to keep open the lines of communication that were vital to her welfare. The navy was doing a magnificent job and no doubt the American navy was giving quiet assistance but Britain bore the brunt of the work and losses.

It was, indeed, a dismal outlook last Thanksgiving, but times have changed. We have seen how the Russianswe re able to hold their own against what seemed to be insuperable odds, and not only that, but begin an offensive of her own that succeeded in driving the enemy back from the very outskirts of Moscow.

Then there was the treacherous Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor that put the United States in the war on our side. This nation with her tremendous resources, and a people full of the fighting spirit was our active ally. We have seen the almost miraculous transformation of a people accustomed to peaceful ways of living become imbued with the will to fight and destroy once and for all the threat of the gangster nations.

With the United States navy full-out on our side there undoubtedly has been a proportionate destruction of U-boats although there has been a big loss of ships on the west side of the Atlantic. However, since the Americans entered the war her ship construction is beginning to catch up with the losses. Improved methods of detecting enemy submarines has made it tougher for the Axis craft to attack and destroy our ships. A gigantic flow of war material is coming from the assembly lines and is being distributed to areas where it will do the most good. Large units of the American army have been landed in Britain and the Middle and Far East where they wait until the time when a concerted offensive will be started, in conjunction with our Empire forces, that will ultimately end in victory.

We have seen great strides in our own war effort in Canada which, in some cases of production, such as naval guns and small arms, amounts to over 36 times the production of 1941. Canada's contribution in foodstuffs is one of the most important phases of the work that is being done in this country. Canada will continue to do her share and more.

There have been sharp disappointments and setbacks during the past year but when we consider how much the Allied position has improved we feel that there is real cause for looking ahead on Thanksgiving day this year with courage and optimism. There will be dark days ahead, but we should bow our heads in prayer that we have been spared the suffering that has been the lot of other nations and trust that when another Thanksgiving Day comes there will be signs this war for freedom of all mankind will be drawing to a close.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

SHOULD OLD ACQUAINTANCE?

By yon ivy wall and by yon fireproof hall
The vans pack tight at the curbing
Where me and my neighbors are out to hit the road
Because the sounds we make are so disturbing!

Oh, you move to my house
And I'll move to your house
And I'll get my rugs down before ye,
But me and my neighbors will never meet again—
And I hope the sounds they make never bore ye!

The foyer is rugged and the radio is plugged
And ice on the make in the kitchen
While me and my neighbors must get together now
To learn what we won by our switchin'.

Oh, I moved to your house
And you moved to my house
And thought of that labor makes me sober,
But bless me! the neighbors have followed in our tracks
And now we'll move again come next October!

—Charles Malam in the New York Herald Tribune.

MRS. MINIVER AND THE VICTORY LOAN

In the light of the forthcoming Victory Loan, the now famous speech of the minister in the motion picture "Mrs. Miniver" is especially timely. In the ruins of his little church, the rector addresses his small congregation with the following words:

"We, in this quiet corner of England, have suffered the loss of friends very dear to us. Some close to this church. George West, choir boy; James Ballard, station master and bell ringer, and the proud winner, only an hour before his death, of the Beldon Cup for his beautiful Miniver Rose. And our hearts go out in sympathy to the two families who share the cruel loss of a young girl who was married at the altar only two weeks ago.

"The homes of many of us have been destroyed and the lives of young and old have been taken. There is scarcely a household that hasn't been struck to the heart. And why? Surely you must have asked yourselves this question. Why in all conscience, should these be the ones to suffer? Children, old peaple, a young girl at the height of her loveliness? Why these? Are these our soldiers? Are these are fighters? Why should they be sacrificed?

"I shall tell you why. Because this is not only a war of soldiers in uniform, it is a war of the people, of all the people—and it must be fought, not only on the battlefields, but in the cities and in the villages, in the factories and on the farms, in the home and in the heart of every man, woman and child who loves freedom.

"Well, we have buried our dead, but we shall not forget them. Instead they will inspire us with an unbreakable determination to free ourselves and those who come after us from the tyranny and terror that threaten to strike us down. This is the People's War; it is our war; we are the fighters. Fight it, then. Fight it with all that is in us. And may God defend the right."

THE PROPER PLACE TO LOOK, PERHAPS

The latest Front Street story going the rounds is about the lady, who having dined in a local restaurant with her husband, missed her gloves after leaving the place. Returning, she searched the table and chairs, and, not locating the missing articles, lifted the table cloth, stooped over and looked beneath the table.

Whereupon a waitress came over and said sweetly: "Pardon me, madam, but the gentleman is over there by the door."

BROADCAST RECORD

A certain Toronto lady radio commentator apparently established a world's record for broadcasting recently, according to the Cobourg Sentinel Star. Commenting on the broadcast the lakeside weekly scribe wrote: "She mentioned the locality as being a heavy producer of wild rice, a plant which she spent several months describing during the course of her broadcast."

Well, it could have been worse. She might have chosen acorns for her subject.

Nazis May Leave Stalingrad For New Winter Line

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The Berlin radio forecasts of abandonment of the attempt to take Stalingrad by storm are all the more significant because of Hitler's reiterated assurance to his people that the Volga city's occupation would be "concluded."

That was the nubbin of his long harange of Sept. 30. He was at pains to explain the urgent necessity of taking Stalingrad for purely military reasons. The Volga must be cut, he said, adding:

"The aim was to make for a district between the Don and the Volga, at Stalingrad. It was chosen exclusively because it is strategically an important place. And you can be of the firm conviction that no human being shall ever push us away from that spot."

Yet Berlin now strongly hints at a retreat from Stalingrad to a winter line on the Don. Moscow notes as yet no abatement in the fury of frontal attacks; but something is brewing in Nazi lines that needed advance explanation to the German public.

The suggestion from Berlin that big gun fire and dive-bombers can force surrender or evacuation of Stalingrad is ridiculous. That Volga stronghold sitting atop a river bluff is too big a target. It just can't be done and Nazi generals know it. There is shelter aplenty for the garrison in the ruins of its modern buildings, its deep bombproofs and caves.

Verdict of Generals

Occupation could come only at the point of the bayonet. Stalingrad can neither be surrounded and starved out, due to its river position, nor gunned and bombed into submission. The reported change in Nazi tactics therefore means something else.

The obvious first impression is that it is a tacit admission from Berlin that the siege has been a failure. Willingly or unwillingly, Hitler must have been forced by his generals to accept the verdict, and accept it now to avert a disaster of greater proportions if winter closed down upon his armies still trying to storm their way to the banks of the Volga.

A Moscow report that Nazi forces are seeking to over-run the Kalmyck region south of Stalingrad and west of the Volga, may offer a clue to the alternative forced upon Hitler. That is wild, in hospitable country, a mixture of deserts and swamps and filled with tribesmen of often-proved daring and skill at guerilla warfare. The Germans have mostly shunned it up to now.

Yet if Stalingrad cannot be taken the Nazis must seek some other position on the west bank of the Volga to anchor a winter front, or fall back into the Don bend or even into the Donets basin. The implication of the Kalmyck operations is that they are trying to set up a winter line behind the Don and from its southeastern face to the Volga, far below Stalingrad.

To Avert Disaster

It would be an unhappy substiture to Hitler and his troops for Stalingrad. While Volga traffic could be cut off from other west bank positions, nowhere except at Stalingrad is there potential winter housing for any substantial number of troops. There is not another city or even a town of consequence on the 700 miles of river between Stalingrad and Astrakan.

Hitler made the strategic importance of Stalingrad his excuse to his people for the German bloodshed in the attempt to storm it. If he has now been overruled by his generals to stop heavy personnel losses and to avert another winter disaster, it might be the beginning of the end of his Nazi dictatorship.

By his own admission, his clash last year with his army commanders, leading to their displacement and his assumption of the military command, came close to wrecking Germany. Only Providence then saved Germany and the German Army in Russia, Hitler has said. And then as now the clash unquestionably was over the hour when a halt had to be called in order to face winter realities.

Hitler "intuition" supplanted last year the realistic approach of professional Nazi soldiers to military problems. By every sign, the soldiers are back in the saddle dictating a stop-loss halt in Russia before it is too late. What that might portend in the war trends is anybody's guess, but it could prove a decisive moment in the struggle.

More Canadian Paratroops Go To Fort Benning

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 10 (CP). Additional numbers of Canadian parachute troops are being sent to Fort Benning, Ga., for training with the United States army, it was learned today.

To assist the United States parachute school there in looking after the Canadians a number of trained Canadian paratroops are being loaned to the Americans for service as instructors.

Some of the Canadian instructors going to Fort Benning are men who secured their training overseas with the British army and some are from the first group of Canadians who got their training at the Georgia school and returned to Canada to form the nucleus of the 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion.

Maj. R. F. Routh, officer commanding the 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion, is expected to be one of the Canadians going to Fort Benning to serve as instructors.

Led First Group.

Recently Maj. Routh led the first group of some 25 officers and men to qualify for the Canadian parachute battalion back from Fort Benning and out to Shilo where the Battalion is to be organized.

Parachute training requires a steel jumping tower and many other pieces of apparatus and owing to priorities and other factors this equipment has not yet been made available.

Simultaneously with the training of Maj. Routh's first group of Canadians at Fort Benning another group selected from the Canadian army overseas received training with the British army.

The plan is that these two groups, coming together to form the administrative and instructional staff of a Canadian parachute training school and later of Canadian parachute battalions would be able to incorporate in the new Canadian methods of training and operations the best features of both the British and United States parachute technique.

China Assured Her Rights By Britain, U. S.

By WADE WERNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 10 —(AP)— China today had British and American assurance that her post-war sovereignty will be free of the fetters of extra-territoriality.

In simultaneous London and Washington announcements, timed to coincide with the 31st anniversary of the revolution by which China became a republic, the two governments made known last night their intention to join with China in abolishing the system of extra-territorial rights and special privileges for foreigners which Chinese long have felt impinged upon their freedom.

Speaking for the United States, the Acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, told Chinese Ambassador Wei Tao-ming a draft treaty soon will be submitted to his government providing for the "immediate relinquishment" of such rights by the United States.

Ambassador Wei promptly issued a statement hailing the move as the beginning of a "new era in China's relations with the Western Powers."

It will put an end, he said, to an "out-dated and out-worn system," greatly encourage China in her fight for freedom, and provide "definite assurance to all freedom-loving peoples of the world that the efforts of the United Nations are directed toward achieving political freedom everywhere and equality of rights among all nations."

Abolition of the system of special rights under which foreign governments have maintained their own courts in China and exercised other privileges such as garrisoning troops on Chinese soil has been one of the principal aims of Nationalist China since the 1911 revolution.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R. C. A. F. Somewhere in England, Oct. 10 — (CP) — Flt. Sgt. George Walls of Banff, Alta., is as good a reporter as he is a flier. Back from the Middle East with Flt. Sgts. Bert Kainne of New Westminster, B. C., John Swan of Regina and Bill Cameron of Cape Breton Island, he dismissed his own experiences as the "usual," and told of the adventures of other Canadians.

He told the story of Warrant Officer Del Ward of Regina and his Wellington bomber crew, WOs. Arnie Armstrong of Toronto, navigator, and Rosy Rosson of Ottawa, second pilot, and Sgt. George Oldstrom of Toronto, rear gunner.

Over Bengasi harbor the crew found their elevators had been blown off and 30 miles east of there Ward told the crew to jump. He managed to maintain height for another 300 miles and bailed out south of El Daba.

For five days and six nights he wandered over the desert without food or water. He was ready to lie down to die when two Egyptian soldiers found him and took him to an advance patrol which took him to hospital.

Oldstrom bailed out with an English front gunner. They started walking east, dodging enemy cars and patrols by night and sleeping by day. On the second day the English gunner, whose leg had been badly injured, couldn't go any farther and insisted that Oldstrom carry on. Oldstrom left him his water bottle and rations and plodded across the sands until he was picked up two days later by some Arabs who turned him over to a long-range patrol.

Oldstrom was taken to a desert outpost and three of his companions came in while he was there. Armstrong had been on his own. He found a desert well and got along nicely. Rosson had caught a donkey but the animal wouldn't move and he continued on foot.

The crew was missing for 31 days before they rejoined their squadron.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

All that was wrong of yesterday
Tomorrow will be evil still,
Nor all the years will sweep away
The human code of good and ill.
Today, tomorrow, men will strive
That truth and honor shall survive.

Though changes come, as come they must,
Today, tomorrow, world-wide round
There will be pride in being just
And generous rather than profound,
Nor all the force of tyrant might
Will ever make oppression right.

No matter who may come to rule
And find the way to crown and throne,
Mothers will send their young to school
And maids want homes to call their own.
Friendship and love and faith and skill
Will stay life's best bestowals, still.

Today, tomorrow, down the years
The self-same joys will cheer us all,
The self-same sorrows start our tears
However kingdoms rise and fall,
For all the wars which tyrants start
Will never change the human heart.

"Three generations from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves," is an American saying generally ascribed to Andrew Carnegie, Scottish-American industrialist and philanthropist.

The nearest approach to this saying in any of Carnegie's known writings is in a letter in which he wrote:

"Even in Yorkshire the proverb is 'Three generations from clogs to clogs.'"

In this Yorkshire proverb, often quoted in English literature, "clogs" apparently refer to stout, clumsy working shoes.

At the outbreak of the present war Egypt, rated as an independent kingdom, immediately severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

But Egypt has not yet declared war against the Axis nations and regards herself as neutral.

From 1841 to 1914 Egypt was a semi-independent state within the framework of the Turkish empire. The viceroy of Egypt, whose position was hereditary, was styled the Khedive (pronounced "ke-DEEVE), derived from a Persian word meaning prince.

In 1914 the British, who had declared a protectorate over Egypt, deposed the pro-German Khedive and put in his place Hussein Kemal who assumed the title of Sultan, which is from an Arabic word signifying "dominion."

Sultan Hussein Kemal died in 1917 and was succeeded on the throne by his brother. Upon the termination of the British protectorate in 1922 the Sultan was proclaimed King of Egypt.

Britain recognizes Egypt as an independent kingdom but by treaty has the right of maintaining naval bases and military garrisons in and of moving troops across the country in case of war, in return for which Britain is under obligation to defend the country against invaders.

Ninety percent of the population of Egypt is illiterate. Most of the illiterates in Egypt belong to the peasant class known as fellahs. In Arabic "fellah" literally means husbandman or farmer. The true plural of "fellah" is "fellaheen."

The true antipodes of the United States is not China, as popularly supposed, but a region in the Indian Ocean west of Australia.

Cannifton's Oldest Resident, Thomas Smith, Celebrates 90th Birthday on Saturday

Former Employee of Corby's Distillery for Thirty-Eight Years

IN GOOD HEALTH

As an employee he saw the one time Corby's Distillery grow from a small industry employing only 15 workers to its present importance as one of the leading branches of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company. He has seen Corbyville and Cannifton grow from places containing only a few houses into today's flourishing villages.

He is Mr. Thomas Smith, Cannifton's oldest resident and veteran distillery ex-employee, who today marked his 90th birthday at the home in which he has resided for the past fifty-three years.

Born in Little Port, Cambridgeshire, England, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Smith, the veteran Cannifton resident came to Canada with his parents when only 18 years of age. They homesteaded at Turner's Settlement, near Holloway, in the 8th Concession of Sidney Township.

Five years after arriving in Canada he married Miss Margaret Gibson, a Belleville girl, but the young Mr. Smith and his bride did not take to farming on the homestead. "There were too many stone", related Mr. Smith this morning.

Turning to industry for his livelihood, Mr. Smith chose one of the few flourishing concerns in the Belleville district at that time and fifty-five years ago became employed with the late Mr. Harry Corby, proprietor of the then Corby's Distillery.

A Pretty Small Place

"Corbyville was then a pretty small place", recalls Cannifton's oldest resident, "and there were only twelve or fifteen men employed at the distillery".

He has now been retired from employment with the distillery for seventeen years, after thirty-eight years' service. He retired on the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage. Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Smith celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Smith died in March, 1941.

To Have Plum Pudding

His birthday is a two-fold celebration for Mr. Smith, in that it marks the day upon which he was married. And every year, in true English style, the day never passes without the traditional "plum pudding" gracing the Smith dining table.

Until two years ago Mr. Smith's wife superintended the making of the plum pudding that marked the dual celebration, but since her death in 1941, this important task has fallen to a daughter, Mrs. Cora E. Billings-Steele, formerly of Victoria, B.C., who now resides with her father.

"Father complimented me on the success of the pudding after my first attempt", laughed Mrs. Billings-Steele. "He said that it was 'almost' as good as mother used to make".

Although his partner in life has now passed on, the celebration which for 67 years has marked the dual anniversary in the Smith home, took place as usual today. About twenty guests attended, including two of Mr. Smith's children, and friends from the district.

Still Quite Active

Mr. Smith is still active despite his advanced age and "gets around" much better than many men years his junior. He has never smoked nor drank and attributes his longevity much to the fact that he has always been a "teetotaller". He is slightly hard of hearing but wears glasses "only to read".

House cleaning, in preparation for the annual celebration, was the order of the day at the Smith household when this reporter called and Mr. Smith was later seen busying himself with erecting the clothes lines upon which to clean rugs. "choring round" is his daily occupation.

Belongs to S.O.E.

Originally a member of the Baptist Church, since his residence in Cannifton, Mr. Smith has attended the Methodist and United Church, although for a few years he and his wife attended Baptist Church in Belleville. Fraternally he is a member of the Sons of England, Lydford Lodge No. 184, Belleville, and in politics has been a lifelong Conservative.

He has three children, Mr. Ernest E. Smith at home; Mr. Harry L. Smith of Edmonton, Alberta; and one daughter, Mrs. Cora Billings-Steele, also at home. There are three grandchildren, Ernest S. Smith, Cannifton; Miss Eleanor Smith, Ottawa, and Mrs. J. N. McCallum Edmonton. One great grandchild, Susanne Smith, is the daughter of Mr. Ernest S. Smith, a former Belleville baseball pitcher.

Corporal Did Good Work With Grenades

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Oct. 10. (CP)—A group of Germans surrendered to the Canadians who assaulted Dieppe. The Canadians disarmed them. During the charging of the Casino a corporal did good work with grenades.

He would crawl up to throwing distance while a Bren gun kept the snipers heads down. This Canadian group took an all-around defence position at the front of the Casino.

There were snipers and machine-gunners in the buildings across the Square. Under orders from the captain, the Canadians kept potting away at their positions.

There were some strong posts on a hillside to the right. One of these, along by the end of the stone wall, was silenced. A sniper appeared at the window of one of the hotels. He got a couple of bursts and did not move any more.

To make certain the attackers put another magazine into the room. Almost immediately smoke and flame came out of the window and in two or three minutes the whole building was on fire.

"Later on", said one man in his description of the action, "we noticed two men in the archway between two of the hotels. We held our fire to make sure who they were. When they came into view they turned out to be our men. But they were trapped by fire from a post on a hill to the right.

Laid a Smoke Screen

"A corporal got a two-inch mortar and laid a smoke screen across the open space and we neutralized one machine-gun post with our Bren. At the same time one of our tanks took care of the main gun position on the hillside.

"We gave the men the high sign and they rushed across to the Casino. One was slightly wounded.

"A man now missing, lay quite safe from fire behind the wall. He looked back to the beach and saw a corporal hung out on the fence nearby. He got a pair of wire-cutters and went out to the beach under heavy machine-gun fire and cut the corporal loose. He brought him back to the shelter of the wall.

"About 11.30 hours a runner got through to us from somewhere and told us to fall back to the beach because the assault landing craft were on their way to pick us up".

Had to Walk Across Open Beach

At the beach, the men able to walk helped those seriously wounded. It was found that to get to the craft the man had to cross the open beach, a matter of 700 yards.

Bullets were knocking up the sand and shells were bursting right along the beach. The Nazi gunners took a heavy toll.

"It was hard to see the boys knocked out after all they had done", said one soldier. "Those left crawled and dragged a pal along with them until they got near a boat.

"Then, others who had been fighting on the right side of the river, helped to get them aboard. Our troubles weren't nearly over yet for the Germans kept sniping at men on deck of the boats and sure got their mark time and time again.

"At last we were picked up by a destroyer which cruised back and forward under a smoke screen and then set sail for England."

Ottawa, Oct. 10. (CP) — The chain of airfields across northern British Columbia and the Yukon to Alaska forms valuable link in North American defence, but even in wartime officials here are not forgetting the future, peacetime value of the fields as part of a commercial air route to the Orient.

When the Canada-United States joint permanent defence board gave the go-ahead signal, the Transport Department went to work on new fields at Grand Prairie, Alta., Fort St. John and Fort Nelson in British Columbia, and Watson Lake and Whitehorse in the Yukon.

For months now they have been used to ferry supplies and men into the remote northwest.

J. A. Wilson, director of Air Services, is one of the big boosters for the peacetime value of the route. For visitors to his office he takes down a big globe and stretches an elastic band from Chicago to Shanghai.

Where does the band lie?— It passed over Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta; then along the northern airbase chain to Alaska; across the Bering Strait into Siberia and down the China coast.

Except for Edmonton, southern anchor-point on the chain, the bases lie virtually on the Chicago-Shanghai "Great Circle" route. And the "Great Circle" route is always the shortest distance between any two points in the world.

Some seventy years ago the Ojibway Indian signed a treaty with the Great White Queen, and in honor thereof their chiefs received a medal as big as a saucer and the right to wear smart blue uniforms with a broad red stripe down the trouser leg.

A group of today's chiefs visited Ottawa this week. One lunch hour they sat on benches below the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill.

"What strange uniforms", mused a passerby. "I guess they must be some branch of the navy".

The chiefs kept puffing their pipes, looked at their interpreter —but kept their peace.

Something new has been added . . . . Tom Reid, Liberal Member of Parliament for New Westminster, has gained not a little fame because he plays the pipes. . . . It used to be he was only on hand when Parliament was in session, but now there's a war expenditures committee and it sits between sessions, with Mr. Reid a Member. . . .The other night the Central Block was just about in darkness, with a single light on the fifth floor. . . . Through the open window, skirling across the wide lawns, was Mr. Reid's music.

It's the same government but only half the Members of the 1935 King Cabinet still hold portfolios. . . . Besides Mr. King they're Mines Minister Crerar Pensions Minister Mackenzie who used to be Minister of National Defence, Air Minister Power who was Pensions Minister, Finance Minister Ilsley who headed the National Revenue Department, Transport Minister Michaud who was Minister of Fisheries until this week, Munitions Minister Howe who in 1935 headed the Transport Department, and Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

When Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche was sworn in this week as National War Services Minister he took no changes . . . .It's a tradition that each time a minister is sworn he is presented with the Bible used in the ceremony. . . . Incidentally the General was swept right into his new job by his predecessor . . . Hon. J. T. Thorson was sworn as president of the Exchequer Court at the same time and afterwards hauled a long telegram out of his pocket. . . . London Express Praises Canadians

London, Oct. 10 (CP).—The Daily Express, commenting on the latest arrival of troops from Canada, said today that the British public offers its "sympathy and admiration" to the Canadian forces.

"They have been in Great Britain since within a few months of the outbreak of war and their numbers have been constanttly expanding," the newspaper said.

"They have had only one taste of action and that, at Dieppe where they suffered grievous losses which have been made up by fresh reinforcements. But they did not grumble or complain. The fighting qualities of the Canadians have been enhanced by this experience.

"We in Britain should praise and be thankful for the presence of these fine men, all of them volunteers from a great dominion."

Chungking, Oct. 10 — (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie is homeward bound today from a fact-finding mission in thirteen countries during which he urged speedy establishment of a second European front and increased Allied aid for China.

He left Chengtu, capital of Szechwan province in Central China, at dawn yesterday after an inspection of some of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's front-line troops.

The announcement was withheld until today for his safety, to conceal his movements from the Japanese.

Willkie is expected to go directly to Washington to report to President Roosevelt.

Inspection of the Chinese-Japanese front on the Yellow River wound up his visit.

Willkie is carrying numerous souvenirs from Chinese organizations and officials.

PEOPLE ARE SAYING

"Tell us what you want. We know that this war must be won. What matters money when life is at stake? What is mere self-denial compared to sacrifices of our men at Dieppe? We're ready for self-denial. We'll tighten our belts; we'll go without. We'll lend our money. We'll do everything to insure Victory. But tell us what we should do and let's get on with it."

• • • •

Very well, then, you must SAVE and invest your savings in Victory Bonds:

What's your share of this Savings job? Well, the average Canadian would have to lend to Canada, to meet Canada's need, $1 in every $5 of income left after taxes and compulsory savings have been collected.

But the average may not fit your case.

Your own circumstances are distinctly your own. You may be able to do better both out of your current income and out of your accumulated savings in the bank—or you may not be able to reach the average. Your share of voluntary savings is every dollar you can possibly spare.

• • • •

Up to now most of us who stay at home haven't suffered very much. We haven't had to practice much self-denial. On the contrary, most of us are earning and spending more money. Yet the price of this spending is being paid for by the blood and sacrifice of others.

We who stay at home must deny ourselves before we can claim to bear our share in this struggle. We must economize; go without; tighten our belts. We must save and buy Victory Bonds until we really feel the "pinch" of war's demands. We must learn that freedom must be paid for as well as fought for.

WEDDINGS

CALLAHAN—DORAN

St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church, Tweed, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Monday morning, September 21st at ten o'clock, when Mary Elisabeth Rita, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Doran, became the bride of Mr. Kenneth Daniel Callahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Callaghan, Read.

The altar was beautifully decorated with standards of gladioli, Autumn flowers and ferns. Very Rev. Dean Cullinane united the young couple in marriage with Rev. Father L. La Marche present in the sanctuary. Rev. Sister M. Sheila played the wedding music and during the ceremony, Mr. John Marchen of Belleville, rendered solos "Ave Maria" and "Panis Angelicus". Mr. Eugene Doyle and Mr. Leonard Cassidy, cousin of the bride, served during the ceremony.

Attending the bride were her sisters, Anastasia, as maid of honor and Kathleen, as bridesmaid, and little Beverley Rose of Perth, as flower girl. Mr. Adrian Callahan assisted the groom, while Mr. Leo Quinn of Belleville and Mr. John Doran, brother of the bride, acted as ushers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her wedding gown of shell white, the moulded bodice fashioned of traditional satin and the bouffant skirt of net. The bodice torso length was made with long sheath like sleeves and a deep sweetheart neckline accented with soft shirring. The only note of trimming was an applique of satin motifs on the skirt. Her fingertip veil fell from a shirred headdress of tulle in bonnet style, held in place with satin streamers which tied under the chin. She carried a shower bouquet of Sweetheart roses, bouvardia and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was gowned in romance blue faille, fashioned after the bride's with shirred bodice torso length, Sweetheart neckline, bracelet length sleeves, and full bouffant skirt. She wore a Dutch cap of the same material and carried a nosegay of yellow roses and blue delphiniums.

The bridesmaid was attired in a gown of petal pink taffeta styled on Antoinette lines with sweetheart neckline bracelet sleeves finished with two-inch shirring, completely shirred bodice and bouffant skirt. Her head dress was a Dutch cap in the same material and she carried a nose-gay of pink roses and blue delphinium.

The flower girl was dainty in her dress of yellow net over taffeta with full skirt and puff sleeves, the fitted bodice buttoned down the back. Her shirred bonnet was tied with streamers and she carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

At the reception following the wedding, held at the home of the bride, Mrs. Doran wore a gown of printed silk in cylamen tones with redingote. Her hat was in the same shade and she wore black accessories and corsage of ivory roses. Mrs. Callahan, mother of the groom, was gowned in navy sheer with accessories to match and corsage of red roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a honeymoon to Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa. For travelling the bride chose an ensemble of Chinese earth sheer wool, the classically simple frock accented with fine tucking and the full length matching coat collared with platinum fox. The chic hat in a rust shade was topped with ostrich tips in chartreuse green, with shoes and accessories to match and corsage of yellow roses.

On their return they will reside in Tweed where the groom is a representative of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

REDDICK—CLARKE

A charming Autumn wedding took place at three-thirty o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 288 Ann Street, when Wilma Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Cliff Clarke, became the bride of Douglas Floyd Reddick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reddick, Picton Road. Ferns and bittersweet made an attractive background for the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Dr. Semple.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, made a lovely picture in her floor length gown of Delmonte rose shade. The torso-length bodice of slipper satin was softly draped and the full net skirt was appliqued with bows of satin. The gown was finished with sweetheart neckline and bracelet length sleeves. Her hat was a small draped pill box model with matching veil, waist length. The bride's bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses and bouvardia.

Miss Betty Clarke was maid of honor for her sister, and wore a floor length gown of triple sheer in turquoise blue, fashioned in bouffant style with sweetheart neckline and short sleeves. She wore a Mary Stuart headdress with short veil and carried Talisman roses. LAC. Maxwell Scott, No. 1 Wireless School, Montreal, cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

A reception followed, Mrs. Clarke receiving in a forest green frock with green and gold embroidery and corsage of bronze baby 'mums, assisted by Mrs. Reddick, mother of the groom, wearing a black crepe gown with sequin trimming, black felt picture hat and corsage of American Beauty roses. Mrs. J. Ashley Vanderwater presided at the tea table which was centred with the wedding cake and tall white tapers. Mrs. Charles Barnett and Mrs. Ben Clarke were in charge of the tea table and Miss Helen Reddick, Mrs. Jo Yome, Miss Phyllis Clapp and Miss Margaret Anderson were tea assistants.

Mr. and Mrs. Reddick left on a wedding trip to London, Ont., the bride wearing for travelling a brown suit with brown accessories and short jacket of logwood lapin. Upon their return they will reside at 270 George Street.

Among the out of town guests at the wedding were Mrs. J. H. Hall, Grand Rapids, Mich., Mrs. W. H. Noyes, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morrow and daughter, Joan, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Card, Napanee, and Mrs. Harry Heagle, Kingston.

TABUTEAU — McLACHLAN

Tabernacle United Church, beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns, was the setting for an interesting wedding at three thirty this afternoon when Guinivere Muriel McLachlan, daughter of Mrs. S. B. Climo, 14 Evans Street, became the bride of Flying Officer Norman J. Tabuteau, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Tabuteau of Banff, Alberta. Rev. R. E. Spencer performed the ceremony. Mrs. M. P. Duff presided at the organ for wedding music and at the signing of the register Miss Lena Gordon sang "Because".

Given in marriage by her step-father, Mr. S. B. Climo, the bride looked charming in her white gown fashioned with lace bodice and organdy skirt, finger tip length veil of net arranged on bonnet effect. Her bouquet was of red and white roses and bouvardia.

Miss Jean Redfern was maid of honor wearing deep blue taffeta, while Norma, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was in deep pink taffeta and net. The attendants wore matching rosebud hats.

Flying Officer J. Webber, Trenton, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Victor Climo, the bride's uncle, and Flight Lieutenant Allington, Trenton.

A buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride, following the ceremony. The bride's mother received her guests wearing a light weight brown wool suit with lime green accessories.

Flying Officer and Mrs. Tabuteau left on a wedding trip to Toronto and points west, the bride choosing for travelling a turquoise wool suit with brown accessories. They will take up residence in Saskatoon.

Among the out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Auvrey, Waterloo, Mrs. C. Climo, Niagara Falls, Miss Bond, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. S. Brown, Mrs. P. Mathews, Mrs. P. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. V. Climo and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gosdon, all of Cobourg.

BEDFORD—MORRISON

Rawdon (Special)—Bettel United Church was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding on Saturday, October 3rd, when Mary Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, Rawdon, became the bride of Thomas Earl, only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Bedford, Stirling. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. F. Townsend, B.A., B.D., pastor of Rawdon circuit, in the presence of a large group of relatives and friends. The altar was artistically decorated with potted plants, ferns and baskets of asters.

Mrs. T. F. Townsend played the wedding music and Rev. Leslie Harding was solist, singing "O Promise Me."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in a floor-length gown of white sheer muslin embossed with white lilies of the valley flowers and fashioned with a tight bodice and sweetheart neckline. She wore a long tulle veil caught with orange blossoms, a pearl necklace and carried a bouquet of Better Times roses.

Mrs. Robert Hoard, sister of the bride, was matron of honor in a floor-length frock of dawn blue net with a short bolero.

Miss Phyllis Vance of Queen's University, Kingston, was bridesmaid, gowned in pink sheer with the new torso length waistline. Both wore matching shoulder length veils caught with orange blossoms and carried nose gays of Irish rosebuds.

Mr. Morden Brough of Zion Hill assisted the groom. The ushers were Mr. Laurison Ketcheson of Zion Hill and Mr. Robert Hoard of Hoards.

Following the ceremony the wedding party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents where a wedding reception was held, with about sixty guests in attendance.

The bride's mother received in a frock of turquoise blue sheer with black accessories and the groom's mother in hyacinth blue sheer with matching accessories. Both wore corsages of Talisman roses.

The dining table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and lighted tapers.

The waitresses were Misses Verna Sutherland, Helen Fitchett, Helen Bailey and Eileen Morrison.

The bride's gift to her sister was a gold locket, to her bridesmaid a Baby Ben clock and to the pianist an English china cake plate.

The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver, to the groomsman, ushers and soloist, leather bill folds.

The bride chose for travelling a rose wool dress with brown accessories and brown tweed coat.

The happy couple spent their honeymoon at Kingston, Ivy Lea and points east and will reside at Harold where the groom is engaged in the teaching profession.

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief Consumer Section,
Department of Agriculture

"Herring and Point" originated in the old days in Ireland when potatoes were almost the only food available to the poor. According to the story a smoked herring would be placed in the centre of the table, and the family was allowed to point their potatoes at it in order that they might acquire some of its pungent flavor, the same herring doing duty for weeks.

It is improbable that Canadian families will ever reach the "herring and point" stage, but we are being asked not to buy pork for the next few weeks while Britain's needs are being met, and beef is scarce, so ways of extending meat flavor, and meatless main dishes are very much to the fore.

The following recipes have been tested in the kitchens of the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Spanish Stew

2 lbs. veal (shoulder or other cut suitable for stewing)
2 onions
1 cup diced celery
1 cup uncooked spaghetti, broken into pieces
2 cups water
2 cups tomato juice
Seasonings

Wipe veal. Remove fat. Cut veal into 1½ inch cubes. Roll meat in flour, brown meat and onion in fat, taken from meat. Add water. Bring to boiling point and simmer ½ hour. Add remaining ingredients. Season. Simmer 1 hour longer. Thicken with a paste made of flour and water.

Cheese Ring with Vegetables

1 cup milk
1 cup soft break crumbs
1 egg
1½ cup cooked macaroni
1 cup cheese diced
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 teapsoon minced onion.
2 tablespoons melted butter
Salt and pepper

Scald milk, add to bread. Add well beaten egg and other ingredients. Pour into greased ring mould and oven-poach in a moderate oven (350°F) for about 50 minutes. Turn out on hot platter. Pour filling in centre and garnish with parsley.

Filling:
1 cup medium cream sauce
2 cups cooked vegetables such as 1 cup, cooked peas and 1 cup cooked carrots
Salt and pepper

Egg and Potato Casserole

4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
4 cups cooked potatoes, cubed
6 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
Salt, pepper and paprika

Melt butter. Blend in flour. Add milk gradually and stir until sauce thickens Season to taste. Put alternate layers of potatoes, eggs and sauce in buttered baking dish. Sprinkle top with buttered cracker crumbs or grated cheese. Bake in hot oven about 15 minutes. Serves six to eight.

Fish Roll

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
2/3 cup milk (about)

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in shortening, add milk to make a soft dough. Roll dough 1-4" thick and spread with the following mixture:—

1½ cups cooked flaked fish
1 small onion, chopped
2 tablespoons green pepper, chopped
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Enough milk to moisten slightly

Roll like a jelly roll. Cut in 1½ inch slices and bake at 400°F for about 30 minutes. Serve with a tomato sauce.

Hymn Composer Gives Illustrated Lecture At the S. A. Citadel

The story of the hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross," of events leading up to its composition, together with the life history of its author and other well-known religious hymn writers was told before a packed audience by Rev. George Bennard at the Salvation Army Citadel on Pinnacle Street, Friday evening.

That great interest is held locally in the grand old hymn which has stirred the hearts of thousands, was evinced by the packed house which greeted its composer, Rev. Bennard, on his first visit to this city. "The Old Rugged Corss," it was revealed, placed 6,000 votes ahead of other popular hymns in a recent popular radio contest.

During Rev. Bennard's lecture the events which led to the writing of the hymn were outlined by the composer, he afterwards sang it before an appreciative audience. Handicolored slides including pictures of John Wesley and other hymn writers, were shown by the speaker during his illustrated lecture.

Col. G. Best, superintendent of the Eastern Ontario and Quebec division of the Salvation Army, was present at the meeting and participated briefly in the evening's program as did Adjutant J. Smith.

At a special Sunday morning service to be held at the Salvation Army Citadel two flights of airmen from No. 5 Initial Training School, together with the station bugle band, and the local unit of Air Cadets, will parade to the Citadel.

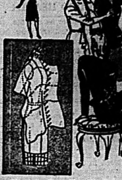
Dress Designing Studied at Home



Diagrams Show Steps in Design

Today, any girl who loves clothes and has ideas about them may aim at a dress design career—there are wonderful new opportunities!

If you don't know the steps from bright idea to dress, you may teach yourself.

You might start by sketching your idea, using a cardboard figure as guide; then you make a foundation pattern—a piece of muslin you drape on a form.

For the blouse, pin the centre of the muslin to centre front of the dress form, allowing 4 inches above the neckline, and pin also along shoulder and under arm. Snip off excess muslin—cutting along the centre, too, for you work on only half the figure.

Now on this foundation pattern work out your special design with colored thread and pins. As you learn the lines that flatter the figure, you create wearable, saleable styles!

Our new 24-page instruction book describes, step by step, with clear diagrams, how to sketch, drape and draught your pattern. Explains principles of design, how to combine colors, fabrics.

Send 15 cents in coins for your copy of "Dress Designing Self-Taught" to The Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and name of instruction book.

"Make Us truly Thankful"

"We thank thee, Lord," the children pray.
For all the lovely things
For harvest fields so rich and full
For warmth of home, the love of friends
For fun and play
And laughter gay.

"and keep us safe from harm"
O Lord, take heed and keep for them
Untroubled skies and fearless nights
With kind young dreams of bright tomorrows.
Such blessings bring
Our greatest thanks.

"and make us truly thankful, Lord"
(The thanks of all finds echo here)
For staunch, brave men who guard our peace
For courage, pain and greatest love
For strength and purpose
Hope and faith.

The Days Ahead Will be Nagging Days

Taking tremendous toll of Man's Energies and Woman's Vitality

But men and women will accomplish their jobs, despite the strain and ravages to the nervous system, so long as general health is maintained and the necessary amount of Vitamins and Mineral Substances are supplied in the food they eat.

It is now well known that if the morale of the soldier and the ambition and energy of the worker fade, it may quite possibly result from lack of Vitamin B_1 and the essential minerals in the food supply.

Because it takes some time to restore a run down nervous system, it is important that you should look ahead and build up your nervous energy, not only to be able to carry out your duties and responsibilities, but also to prevent the many ills and discomforts which come when vitality is running low.

While experts claim that Vitamin B_1 or Thiamin is necessary in sufficient quantities in the chemical process of digestion, they point out that Vitamins alone are not enough. You must also get the mineral substances which are often lacking in the diet, particularly during the cold weather months.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is designed to supply, in condensed and easily assimulated form, the ingredients from which nature restores vigor to the nervous system. The nervous system in turn supplies motive power to the body and nervous energy to the brain.

When you think of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, do not overlook the stability, the dependability and the confidence which has always been associated with Dr. Chase's Medicines.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, in particular, has built up a following of intelligent, thinking people, who have learned by experience to depend on this food treatment to help them, when they need help, to regain appetite and good digestion, restful sleep and the vitality which make life and work a pleasure.

The process of restoration of the nervous system is slow and steady. For this reason, it is important that when you decide to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, you plan to keep up the treatment for several weeks.

Some have written us that they buy the large size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and keep it on the table with the salt and pepper shakers so that the members of the family who need it, will not miss a single dose after meals. You may like to try out this suggestion. Just ask your druggist for the new, economical size Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and fortify your system against the ills which thrive when vitality is running low, and, remember, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food contains Vitamin B_1 and the essential minerals in sufficient quantities to help restore health and vigor.

Rookie Hero of World Series Johnny Beazley Gets New Job

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 10—(AP)—Another chapter is beginning in the story-book career of Johnny Beazley, the 23-year-old Nashville boy who climbed almost overnight from obscurity as a mediocre bush-leaguer to world series stardom.

It's all like a dream—"but a darned nice one"—to Johnny who suddenly found himself famous this week after pitching St. Louis Cardinals to two dramatic victories over the Yankees.

Feted, back-slapped, mobbed by autograph-seekers, the Nashville youngster, just another guy named Johnny a few months ago, will become a State employee Nov. 1, teaching health and physical education to Tennessee's school children.

His appointment as field representative in the State Department of Education was announced today by Governor Prentice Cooper.

Simultaneously, Beazley denied reports that he had intended enlisting in the United States Marine Corps after the series. He is the sole support of his mother.

"I was misunderstood," he told newspapermen. "I think the marines are a fine outfit, but I haven't decided yet on any branch of the service."

In his new job, Beazley will visit elementary and high schools throughout the State, encouraging health programs.

"Young Beazley seems ideally fitted for the job I have in mind," said Governor Cooper. "I have told him of his duties and he has accepted the position."

"I can't realize all these nice things are happening to me," declared Johnny. "I guess I'll wake up after a while."

After the series Johnny came home to Nashville. In the space of a few hours, he served as temporary governor, became a colonel on the Governor's staff and was lionised at a city-wide reception that packed the big war memorial building.

The shy young athlete gulped as he faced the cheering crowds.

"I'd a lot rather pitch than face a mob like that," he whispered nervously.

Toronto, Oct. 10 (CP).—There's continent-wide speculation on how Winnipeg football will manage without Joe Ryan who shortly takes up permanent residence in Ottawa. . . . Ryan stuck his finger into the Winnipeg football pie just ten years ago, stirred up a bunch of other guys named Joe and came out with national championships in 1935, '39 and '41. . . . True, Yussel the Voice had help, imported a few players, but it was Ryan who knew where to look for the good men and what to do with them when he found them. Ryan fanned a spark of football interest into a flame, imparted his own enthusiasm to other good executives. Undoubtedly they will carry on ably to the limits set by war and they'll have material; Joe saw to that when he supplied the kids with footballs and started them playing on vacant lots. (Note to Ottawa sporting gentry: Ryan says vehemently he is strictly a spectator from here in.)

Jerry Monnahan Once Blinded By "Strangler" Lewis

By COLIN A. GRAVENOR

Buffalo, Oct. 10.—Few wrestling fans know it, but "Irish Jerry" Monnahan, years ago referred to in wrestling circles as "The Chicago Speedball", was totally blind for over 18 months.

It happened in 1930 when Monnahan wrestled Ed. "Strangler" Lewis for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship in Chicago and for 43 minutes the then-youthful "Irish Jerry" had matters pretty well his own way. However, suddenly the old master gained one of his crushing headlocks and applied terrific pressure and after the fall Monnahan staggered to his corner of the ring—blind.

For eighteen months the beautiful golden-haired Mrs. Monnahan spent all her time at her blind husband's side and at no time did either show fears that Jerry might remain permanently blind and it was in 1931 on his Santa Rosa, Cal., ranch that Jerry regained full sight. "It was certainly wonderful to be able to see again and it is only when deprived of one's sight that makes me appreciate what a grand world this is now that I can see again," Monnahan told the writer.

As a ring attraction Monnahan is always in demand and as the saying goes his ring services are in demand from Madras to Madagascar to Belleville, the map of the civilized and uncivilized world. His very next ring appearance will be a challenge bout in the Hume Arena at Belleville when he meets "Big Earl" McCready, recognized as the most powerful wrestler in Canada, next week. A suitable list of preliminaries heads Monnahan's stampede into the Bay of Quinte sports palace.

Even in Wartime Boxing Champion Needs His Bouts

English Lightweight Says He Can't Afford to be Out of the Ring Long—Sport News From Britain

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON — (CP) — Sport shorts from Britain: The fastest thing in Eire at the moment is Nannie Goosegow. The name doesn't exactly give the impression of speed but Nannie is the outstanding greyhound of the season and favorite at all the tracks. She is owned by Arthur Callinan, who calls all members of his kennel after Cork characters he remembers.

Nannie Goosegow is named after a little old woman who used to sell gooseberries back in Callinan's home town. She's such a fast footer she starts from scratch and sometimes gives away 14 yards.

Holder of the British lightweight championship, Sgt. Eric Boon of the R. A. F. doesn't agree with the boxing promoters' view that professional bouts will of necessity be curtailed through doubling of the entertainment tax. Promoters generally hold the view that due to increased taxes they cannot afford big "cuts" to fighters and that therefore big-time boxing is dead.

Boon can't make the lightweight limit of 135 pounds but wants to undertake a series of fights against welterweight contenders for a percentage of the gate.

"Even if promoters are not eager to take a chance, I am," he says. "No champion can afford to be out of the ring for months on end. The little money I might make by an active program would satisfy me, and it would give the public entertainment as well."

You wouldn't expect a race horse to walk 12 miles to the starting post — but this is England and war.

Most ponies at the recent Salisbury meet walked from five to 12 miles from their stables to the course, instead of travelling in peacetime's well-appointed vans. The horses showed no ill effects but many a groom complained of bunions.

Due to gas restrictions, no motor transport was available and only a few animals could be housed overnight on the course.

It's a sad blow but lawn tennis in Eire must do without that refreshing break for tea this summer because of the shortage of supplies ... W. C. Hoy, Chinese lawn tennis player who was well known at English tournaments, is said to have escaped from Hong Kong and is playing exhibition matches in Chungking for China Relief Funds.

One of Britain's leading racing motorists, Lieut. John Peter Wakefield of the Fleet Air Arm., was killed on active service. In 1938 he beat Prince Birabongse of Thailand to win the 200-mile Campbell Circuit Race at Brooklands.

Nellie Hogg, former holder of nearly all Scottish swimming championships and records, died at Kinghorn while holidaying.

Fossil termites about 25,000,000 years old have been unearthed in Germany.

TURF SOUVENIRS JOIN SCRAP HEAP

Shoes worn by Kentucky Derby winners are tossed onto the donor spot atop fifty-ton pile of scrap iron and steel which Churchill Downs track, Louisville, Ky., donated to the war effort. Tom Young, track superintendent, puts the shoes on the stack. The track was ordered "all out" in the scrap drive by Colonel Matt Winn, track president. The last shoe on the left was worn by "Shut-Out," 1942 winner. And three shoes up from the bottom on that side is the dainty bit of metal worn by "Regret," 1941 winner, and only filly ever to cop the classic.

Canada's Athletes at War

Toronto, Oct. 10 (CP) — Pete Morin, a member of the Canadiens front-line forces, is one of the latest National Hockey League stars to join the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Rumor here had it that Dick Irvin coach of the Montrealers, had an offer of a loftman's post with the R.C.A.F. signals division, pigeon section. A report had it that the Regina pigeon-fancier received the offer after he proposed to the Department of National Defence that 100 of his best birds be selected for use as R.C.A.F. messengers.

Conn Stafford Smythe, son of the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey impresario, is a probationary sub-lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve.

Staff, as he was known to University of Toronto hockey teammates, poined the navy as an ordinary seaman shortly after his father lined up as a major with the artillery battery.

Wally Halder, another University of Toronto hockey star, is in the navy also. Wally at present is posted to the R.C.N.V.R. at H.M.C.S. York in Toronto, for preliminary training

He first broke into organised hockey with Ed Wiley's Young Rangers in the Ontario Hockey Association in 1938. The next year Halder played for Varsity Juniors and followed that up with two successful seasons in the Toronto Hockey League playing for Tip Tops when Intercollegiate hockey was discontinued due to wartime university regulations.

Frank Frederickson, former Victoria, Boston, Detroit and Pittsburg professional hockey player, is a flight lieutenant in the R.C.A.F.

Another Montreal boxer has joined the R.C.A.F., following the steps of Dave Castilloux and Harry Hurst.

This time it's Harry Gerson, one-time contender for the Canadian bantamweight title. Gerson turned professional in 1933 and now may become a physical instructor in the air force.

Katsuma Marioka, formerly well-known as a bantamweight boxer in Canadian —fight circles, is in the Canadian army now.

Marioka is of Japanese descent, but was born in Vancouver. Recently he wrote to a Montreal newspaper from Cornwall where he is stationed and said that if it was planned to put on any patriotic boxing events there, he would be willing to box for nothing.

COMBINES EASILY BEATWESTERNERS IN SECOND GAME

Ontario Team Simply Poison Once They Reach Target Area

SCORE IS 15-9

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 10 — (CP) — Of all the happy attributes displayed on the lacrosse floor by Mimico-Brampton Combines — speed, experience and opportunism — none stood out so prominently today as their ability to translate superfluous offensive energy into excess scoring profits.

If there was any speed differential between Combines and New Westminster Salmonbellies last night, it was measured so minutely you'd need a stop watch to detect it. Around the nets however, it was a different story. Combines simply were poison once in scoring range. Salmonbellies weren't, and the result was a 15-9 conquest for Combines in the second game of their best-of-five series for the Mann Cup.

Last night's triumph, vastly more decisive than the 10-7 verdict coach Chuck Davidson's Ontario titlists achieved in the opening instalment Wednesday night, left 3,532 fans in Maple Leaf Gardens convinced Salmonbellies will have to do more than drink "the purest water that can be obtained anywhere" to fare better in the third game next Monday night.

It can be said for Salmonbellies that their scoring ineptitude was largely superficial. It wasn't so much that their shots lacked direction as that goalie Bert Large formed too formidable a barrier in the Mimico-Brampton nets. Large, a veteran of 13 seasons in lacrosse, consistently broke his rival's hearts with a nimble display of backstopping. The shots that beat him would have beaten any goaltender.

Lineup Shuffled

Davidson shuffled his lineup for the game and the change was beneficial. He replaced Bill Isaacs and Onions Smith with Arch Dixon and Jack Williams, on leave from Maj. Conn Smythe's 30th Battery. Williams responded by scoring three goals to share individual honors with Flash McLean. Ken Dixon and Whipper Arthurs scored twice and Mush Thompson, Bill Mullis, Don McPhail, Carl (Alababa Gus) Madsen and George Masters fattened their averages with one apiece.

John Douglas and Marcus Smith led New Westminster scorers with two goals. The other five were tallied by Jim Douglas Bert Bryant, Alan Askew, Art Pruden and Johnny Raitt. So far in the series, the family combination of Uncle Jim and Nephew John Douglas has accounted for seven of New Westminster's 16 goals.

Westerners Still Confident

Despite last night's trouncing, Salmonbellies still are confident.

"It wasn't that Combines improved over the first game," said Askew in the dressing room, "it's just that we played worse. We can still win."

Whether Salmonbellies' proposed change of drinking water inspired Askew's statement is not known. At any rate, the West Coast challengers are still awaiting a 40-gallon keg and a milk can labelled "Pure B. C. water for Salmonbelly Lacrosse team" said to have been shipped to Toronto yesterday by Mayor Fred J. Hume of New Westminster. In explaining the shipment, Mayor Hume said:—

"The water around Toronto has been playing havoc with our team with the result the players are getting sick. This is the purest water that can be obtained anywhere so we're going to ship it to them."

RIZZUTO IN THE NAVY

New York, Oct. 10 —(AP)—Phil Rizzuto, diminutive shortstop whose play was a highlight of the New York Yankees in the recent world series, leaves tonight for the Norfolk, V., naval base where tomorrow he starts training as a seaman first class.

Admitting he was 'a little scared' about the change over from civilian life to that in the armed service, Rizzuto took comfort in the thought he felt the same way when he first came up to the Yankees.

"I wouldn't take a million for those two years with the Yankees," he said.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

WHEN BUCK NEWSON, of the Detroit Tigers, lost a heartbreaker to Paul Derringer of the Cincinnati Reds in the seventh and deciding game of the 1940 World's Series, he missed the opportunity to become the first three-game winner in a fall classic since Stanley Coveleskie accomplished the feat for Cleveland against Brooklyn in 1920.

Seven pitchers besides Coveleskie have succeeded in winning three games in one series—Bill Dinneen, 1903, and Smoky Joe Wood, 1912, Boston Red Sox; Deacon Phillippe, 1903 and Babe Adams, 1909, Pittsburgh Pirates; Red Faber, 1917, Chicago White Sox; Jack Coombs, 1910, Philadelphia Athletics, and Christy Mathewson, 1905, New York Giants.

Oddly enough, no lefthander ever has been able to notch three wins in one series, though Bob Grove, Herb Pennock and Vernon Gomez have twice rung up two victories in a single classic.

REMEMBER WHEN the New York Yankees pounded out a 2 to 1 decision over the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the 1939 World's Series three years ago today? Hero of the game was Charles "Red" Ruffing, who pitched his fifth series victory. Ruffing pitched his sixth and seventh victories in 1941 and 1942, while he lost his second World Series game to the St. Louis Cardinals this year.

DID YOU KNOW BOTH THE world champion Cardinals and the dethroned Yankees recorded their 102nd league victories in their respective Major Leagues on the same day of the 1942 season, September 22nd? The Redbirds scored their win at the expense of Pittsburgh, while the Bronx Bombers defeated Washington. It was quite a feat for St. Louis, establishing a victory record for a Mound City team, the previous high being 101 victories achieved by Gabby Street's 1931 Cardinals. For the Yankees, 102 victories topped their 1941 crop, by one, but was well behind their high of 110 in 1927.

THERE'LL BE MANY NEW faces when the Interscholastic gridders pry off their 1942 season schedule next Wednesday. Last year St. Mikes and the Collegiate battled matters out for the league title, with the "Irish" winning the coveted honors. Coach Jack Doran who has headed the St. Mikes sports program for several years, says his squad will see mostly new faces and will be slightly lighter than in 1941. "We'll depend on our speed to repeat in 1942, as I have several first-year teen-aged boys who have shown speed personified during our first two weeks of practice," revealed Coach Doran today. A new sports director has been engaged at the Belleville Collegiate in Harold Partridge, fresh from University. Mr. Partridge may have to solicit the assistance of other teachers at the Church St. seat of knowledge in lining up his squad for the initial game of the 1942 season when those old grid rivals—St. Mikes and the Collegiate—clash.

HERE'S A STATEMENT THAT will be hard for local wrestling fans to believe but nevertheless it's true, "Irish Jerry" Monnahan has as kindly philosophy as can be found in any human; this is proven in his great love for children. Jerry can't resist small children and is as gentle with them as any loving mother, but this doesn't say he can't be tough in a wrestling ring, something every district wrestling fan can vouch for. In his ring history Jerry Monnahan has 1,673 victories, 191 defeats, 113 draw fights, 157 disqualifications and he bent muscles in eleven bouts that ended as "no contest." His favourite hold is the half Nelson, crutch followed by a heavy body slam and his favoured diversion, aside from bending opponents' limbs, is pinochle, while his favourite screen actors are Charles Laughton and Claudette Colbert, with both of whom he has appeared in pictures in the past. However, his next picture brings him battling Earl McCready here next week in a challenge bout, that the Canadian readily agreed to.

THIS AND THAT — Johnny Hamilton, former Belleville and Kingston defenceman, left town some weeks ago to return home to Toronto .J. At the time John (he gets around) Hamilton predicted there would definitely be a senior O. H. A. team in Toronto with players selected from the war industries of the greater Queens City ... "And I'm getting in on the ground floor", stated Hamilton as he headed westward ... Turf's No. 1 rivalry — Alsab versus Whirlaway ..., continues at Belmont track today ... Even at two wins each these two great horses will try each other over a two and one-quarter mile stretch ... A month ago he was just another guy named Johnnie ... Along comes the world series and now Johnnie Beazley is the toast of Nashville, Tenn., and recipient of more backslapping than he appreciates ... Yes, the rookie hero of the 1942 series is to be the No. 1 State employee to teach health programs to the school children of Tennessee ... Up around the Intercounty sector only two interscholastic football squads signified willingness to continue operations—Guelph and Kitchener—carrying the torch ... Phil Rizzuto, diminutive shortstop whose play highlighted the Yankees last week, is in the United States navy today ... "Scooter" is only a starter of the exodus of players from the major leagues before spring....

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents cracked down on a $1,000,000 World's Series lottery ring, September 25, arresting 47 members in 32 cities. The four ringleaders were Chicagoans, who were said to be having one of the most successful years in the distribution of lottery tickets through a network of more than 300 distributors in 37 states. In addition to the World's Series, the ring operated in football and horse racing and large quantities of the sheets and press forms prepared for the printing of the Series lottery tickets were seized.

Odlum May Be Canada's Minister To Soviet Russia

Ottawa, Oct. 10—(CP)—The Ottawa Journal said in a newspage story today that it was reliably reported that Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, Canadian High Commissioner to Australia, "is about to be appointed as Canada's first minister to Soviet Russia."

The story added: "It is also reported that Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, Deputy Minister of National War Services, will be named Canadian High Commissioner to Australia."

Gen. Odlum, who formerly commanded the 2nd Canadian Division in Britain, now is in Ottawa for conferences with officials of the External Affairs Department.

1,000 Berliners Arrested Sept. 18

London, Oct. 10 (CP Cable)—A Stockholm dispatch to the Daily Mail said today that more than 1,000 persons, including doctors, lawyers, actors, artists and many women, were arrested in Berlin Sept. 18.

The dispatch said charges upon which the people were arrested included passive resistance and an unsympathetic attitude toward National Socialism and casting doubts on an ultimate German victory. It said Roloff Helmut, German musician, was seized a few hours before he was scheduled to give a concert.

Rescue attempts from shore could not be made as boats had been hauled hard aground in preparation for Winter storage.

AT THE BELLE

"ORCHESTRA WIVES"

It would seem, offhand, that you don't have to be a Lindy hopper to get all hopped up about "Orchestra Wives", the hilarious 20th Century-Fox musical at the Belle Theatre today, Sunday midnight and Monday.

First of all, the picture stars the band that for three successive years has been voted America's most popular band in a poll conducted by authoritative "Billboard" magazine. That's Glen Miller, of course, and his talented crew of instrumentalists and vocalists.

Then there is George Montgomery, lately one of the "Ten Gentlemen From West Point." He's a handsome lad, a trumpet player, with one foot in the groove and the other in matrimony. And co-starred with Miller and Montgomery is darling Ann Rutherford, an orchestra wife who—alas!—almost becomes a brass widow.

They say the story is as tempting as its tunes—and that's saying something; for the same bright lads who wrote "Chatanooga Choo Choo" for Glen Miller's picture debut in "Sun Valley Serenade" have come through for Glenn again. They are Mack Gordon and Harry Warren and this time they have some real humdingers that already have made their way to the head of the hit parade—songs like "I Got a Gal in Kalamazoo", for instance, and "People Like You and Me", "At Last" and "Serenade In Blue".

There it is! Glenn Miller and a batch of brand new tunes.

But that's only skimming the surface. There's sultry Lynn Bari who sings with the band but, they say, she croons the other girls' love songs. On hand, too, is Cesar Romero, who likes the little women, while they, in turn, worship the ground he crawled out of. And there's curvaceous Carole Landis who has more sugar-daddies than she can shake a hip at. Also featured are comely Virginia Gilmore and vivacious Mary Beth Hughes. A highlight of the film is a dance specialty by the Nicholas brothers.

"Orchestra Wives" should be a particular treat for all who listen to bands—or who have ever danced to a band, inasmuch as it tells the story of a lady hepcat who married the "trumpet" in Glenn Miller's band, and becomes a "brass widow". It tells the story of the trials and sorrows of the wives of the orchestra men when the band is on the road and it presents an intimate picture of the life of such a band on tour.

"Orchestra Wives" was produced by William LeBaron and directed by Archie Mayo from a script by Karl Tunberg and Darrell Ware based on the original story by James Prindle.

The Belle Latest News of the World and a Terrytoon cartoon "Tricky Business" and a Canada Carries On feature "Quebec Path of Conquest" precede the feature attraction.

Continuous shows will be presented today and Monday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"My Sister Eileen"

Starring Rosalind Russel, Brian Aherne and Janet Blair "My Sister Eileen" acclaimed the movie of the week in Life Magazine will be the offering to Belleville theatre goers this Sunday Midnight only, at the McCarthy Theatre. "My Sister Eileen" is guaranteed to be one of the funniest pictures of 1942. Make up a party and attend the McCarthy Theatre Sunday midnight.

For Monday (Thanksgiving Day' the program at the McCarthy Theatre has been well selected to give you a real holiday treat, with the feature 'Between Us Girls," co-starring Diana Barrymore and Robert Cummings. The featured cast includes Kay Francis, John Boles and Andy Devine. "Skyline Serenade" a screen vaudeville short subject, also a Walt Disney Technicolor cartoon and latest Universal News events are all to be on the same program.

"The First Commando"

Belleville theatre goers are praising the outstanding motion picture "The First Commando," now at the McCarthy Theatre. It is a picture you'll never forget, performances are continuous today, come anytime. The laugh hit "Dudes Are Pretty People," featuring Jimmy Rogers, (son of Will Rogers), Noah Berry, Jr., and Marjorie Woodworth, the second feature makes the entire program swell entertainment from the first scene until the final fadeout.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Moonlight Masquerade"

(First Belleville Showing)

Laden with sparkling comedy and a wealth of brand new tunes, and boasting an excellent cast, the hilarious new film, "Moonlight Masquerade," will open at the Capitol Theatre on Sunday Midnite for a run of 3 days.

The principal roles in the film are played by Dennis O'Keefe, Jane Frazee, Betty Kean, and Eddie Foy, Jr. Erno Verebes, Paul Harvey, Jed Prouty and Franklin Pangborn are featured.

The Capitol's added Feature Hit

Louis Hayward and Joan Bennett playing the top roles in Edward Small's new romantic drama, "The Man in the Iron Mask," unfolds a thrilling and exciting tale of 17th Century romance and adventure in an era when extravagances and excesses ruled the court of France. The central theme of the story revolves around King Louis XIV and his twin brother, Philippe, who at his birth was whisked away to the province of Gascony and brought up secretly as a commoner under the guidance of the famous Musketeers.

Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale, Miles Mander, Bert Roach, Walter Kingsford, Marian Martin and Montagu Love, featured in support of the stars, portray the parade of characters in this fast moving, tensely pitched drama. Warren William plays the swashbuckling, beloved role of De'Artagnan with Alan Hale and Miles Mander impersonating the other two musketeers in the trio devoted to Philippe.

Completing the program the Capitol presents Universal News Events and the new Canada Carries On feature "Quebec — Path of Conquest". Special Thanksgiving matinee at 2:15.

HERE IS FIRST AIR VIEW OF THE ALCAN

This is the first air view to be passed by the army, showing a section of the great Alaskan highway, popularly known as the Alcan. It is skirting one of the many lakes. A shore road leads to an old Indian settlement. The 1,600-mile highway runs from the railhead at Edmonton, Alberta, to Fairbanks, Alaska.

BULLDOZING THE ALASKA HIGHWAY

The Alaska highway will be finished by December first and thus, 10 months after the first bulldozers left the southern terminal at Edmonton, Alberta, U.S. army engineers have completed the last link in the lifeline to Alaska. They are months ahead of time. This is the bulldozer. A first bulldozer has already knocked a trail through the virgin forest. This one is shoving the trees back to widen the path into an actual road.

ANCHORS AWEIGH

In one single month the Munitions and Supply Department bought for use on Canadian naval vessels, 25 miles of anchor chain of various types and lengths.

CUTTING A WIDE SWATH

Canada now produces large quantities of Browning aircraft machine guns, one of the deadliest weapons of its size. A stream of bullets from a Brownnig can literally saw an aircraft in two.

GOT HIS SUB

Sergt. C. W. Landale, air gunner from Mimico, Ont., who participated in one of the R.C.A.F. attacks on enemy submarines off the Atlantic coast. A submarine was sighted during a routine patrol and the pilot turned sharply to the attack. As the aircraft made its final approach the raider crash dived. Bubbles rising to the surface of the ocean indicated the sub was turning to port, and depth charges were dropped to cover the manoeuvre. "Definite damage, possible kill," was the assessment of the attack."

Chapter 16

Fay

Judith dressed for Phyllis' party, thinking that her plans for joining Max had been fully made. The next week-end she would go home and the week-end following that she would sail. When she went home, she would tell them she was in love with a man named Max Worthington, that his work had taken him out of the country and that they must be neither shocked nor unhappy if she wrote that she was married. Though they might not approve, she felt certain that she could count upon their understanding.

Tonight she wore a frock that Max liked, a black one, its severity relieved only by a jeweled pin at the neckline. She was going to Phyllis' apartment alone because Sid Biddison regetfully had declined her invitation; he was going home that weekend. She had neither seen nor heard from the other young men she knew since that day last October when Max came into her life.

Phyllis' party was unimportant, she thought as she closed the apartment door. Her guests probably would try to recapture the convivial spirit of ship life and fail miserably in the attempt.

It was a bitterly cold February night. Arriving at Phyllis' apartment she thought that the writing of her last letter to Max before she joined him had so delayed her that she was probably the last guest to arrive. For outside the door she heard the mingling of voices within.

When Phyllis, colorful in her favorite green opened the door, strange faces appeared as Judith entered. There were perhaps a dozen people in the long living-room, all talking, while Phyllis' uniformed maid - of-the-evening moved about with drinks and food. The ages of Phyllis' guests ranged from the very youthful to the middle-aged. It was impossible to tell the married from the unmarried.

"Oh, darling, I'm so glad you could come," Phyllis said when they were in Phyllis' bedroom. "Someone else here is going to South America. She's sailing tomorrow. Fay Hathaway. You'll have to get together. She's a lovely person. Her deck chair was next to mine on the cruise."

In the living-room Judith spoke to Ames before meeting the guests. Their names she would not remember, but their faces were to become so associated with tonight and all the events which led up to it that she would remember them always as part of the climax.

Oddly enough, the only other woman in the room wearing black was Fay Hathaway.

Announcing them, Phyllis said, "Judith is sailing to South America in two weeks," and moved away, leaving them together when Ames' nod meant that he wished to see her.

Fay Hathaway was a tall young woman with a warm, throaty voice, a gracious, serene manner and a charming smile. Dark - haired, brown-eyed, she was dressed simply but expensively, and Judith borrowed an expression that Max had used in describing her to describe Fay. . . . "She has probably never made a scene in her life." She was a person whom you felt instinctively and suddenly wanted for a friend, knowing that once she was your friend, you could not bear to lose her. Her dark eyes were as gentle and as knowing as her smile.

"But South America is a fairly good-sized place, isn't it?" she asked.

Judith said with a smile, "It looks enormous on the map. That's all I've seen of it."

"It is enormous and it seems incredible that life can be so utterly different just a few days out of New York. You'll have a lovely time."

Somehow Fay Hathaway seemed not to belong in the group of Phyllis' other cruise acquaintances who were eagerly reaching for the next drink scarcely before they had finished one. For Fay seemed to have sprung from an atmosphere where people did not raise their voices or laugh uproariously or drink too much. But then people who sit side by side in deck chairs for two weeks did become quite well acquainted and no doubt Fay had liked the vague, attractive Phyllis and had liked even more the courteous, fine-looking Ames. But Fay was obviously not married and she had also come alone.

Ames joined them. "I thought you two would like each other."

"Are you a fashion artist, too, Miss Hathaway?" Judith asked.

"She's a musician," Ames said.

"But only in my spare time, Ames. I'm not teaching this winter." She smiled at Judith. "I found that teaching piano interfered with living and living is so much more important. But you draw fashions. I look at them and admire the clever lines, but I've always felt that so much talent went into telling women what and where to buy clothes that should go into more serious art."

Judith said, laughing low, "But you said living was important. I draw fashions to live. I'd like so much to hear you play. I don't hear nearly enough music."

"Then you shall. When you return and I return, you must come to see me and I'll make music for you. But on second thought there is a slight possibility I won't be coming back for quite a while."

Judith thought, "I, too. Because I'm going to marry Max."

A rather attractive young man joined them. "I forbid you to corner the market on beauty, Ames, old boy. These two girls have nothing to drink. You're neglecting your duties as host, but I never neglect the women."

Several times during the evening Judith saw Fay glance at her diamond-studded watch, though that gesture was the only one indicative of her wish to leave. The wish was mutual since Phyllis' guests after hours of incessant drinking had become quite hilarious and thick as well as careless of speech and she felt that Fay's sober presence and hers had a dampening effect.

Ames, looking not only very tired, but disgusted and the starched uniform of the stout colored maid had wilted. But Phyllis was in excellent spirits as she listened to the reading of her palm by the rather attractive young man.

It was Fay who decided the issue and came to Judith.

"Ames tells me that you and I are going in the same direction. Tomorrow will be a strenuous day for me and I really must be going. I thought we could share the same taxi."

It was with infinite relief that they stepped into the dark, cold night.

"You haven't always lived in New York," Fay said when they were in the taxi.

"Is it so obvious?"

"Pleasantly so. It's in your voice. I've lived here always except for rather long periods of traveling. When teaching music interfered with my several annual trips, I gave up teaching music. It was never a serious career with me as your work is with you. It simply filled a gap after my family moved to California and I decided not to go out there to live."

"I should think it would be difficult to put a continent between one and one's family."

"I'm devoted to mine, too, but my father's health necessitated their moving out there. But, you see, there were other people who kept me in New York." Turning her dark head, she looked at Judith directly and kindly. "I'd like to be as young as you and beginning to live as you are. I'd have arranged my life quite differently."

"I've never believed it was ever too late to start over."

Fay smiled. "That's because you are so young. I'm 32, my dear. I'm afraid it is too late for me to expect people to do for me what they should have done years ago." As the taxi stopped before the tall brick apartment house, she reached in her flat black purse. "I thought I had brought letters to mail. I particularly wanted to get them out of the way because I'll have no time tomorrow."

"If you'll get them, I'll mail them for you."

"Then won't you come up? Suppose we let the taxi go. It isn't very late and you won't be disturbing anyone. I live quite alone."

Judith saw only the living-room, large and tastefully furnished. It was the sort of room she would have guessed that Fay Hathaway lived in, a gracious room for a gracious person.

When Fay brought the letters, she asked, "Won't you stay? It isn't late."

"Not tonight. You're sailing tomorrow."

"And you in two weeks. That's quite a coincidence, isn't it, our going to the same place?" She was smiling happily, her dark eyes admiring Judith when she said. "But suppose I play for you, just one thing. Do you like Gershwin?"

The piano was at the far end of the long room. As Judith went toward it, a studio photograph on the piano became more and more familiar. Suddenly it was as if something had exploded in her brain. It was a photograph of Max.

She looked at Fay sitting at the piano bringing forth the memorable music of the Rhapsody in Blue. . . . Fay, and the Rhapsody in Blue and that photograph of Max and she, Judith, all in this strange, subdued attractive room. She stood very still. All the color that the cold air had whipped into her face left it. She felt queer, light-headed.

Fay Hathaway was the "friend" Max had seen off on the West Indies cruise. . . . Fay . . Fay and Max . . . And it was to Max that she was going. To Venezuela two weeks before she, Judith would go to him. . . . Fay was in love with Max, too.

She was staring at that photograph of Max when Fay looked up. She frowned, then smiled a little as she said, "Usually people do notice him. He isn't the handsomest man I've ever seen, but he has a strong arresting face, a face exceedingly attractive to women. He's Max Worthington and I'm going to South America to see him."

Lost Dream

Judith could not look at Fay. She glanced back at the photograph of Max when Fay's warm, throaty voice continued:

"I was thinking of him when I said that it was too late for me to expect people to do for me what they should have done years ago. I've been waiting ten years for Max to make up his mind to marry me. Ten years of seeing him in an odd assortment of places where his work has taken him and waiting here for him to come back. That's why I didn't go to California with my family because he always comes back, stays a few months and is gone again.

"I don't know why it goes on and on with us. I've tried to make an end to it several times, but he won't let me. I know that there have been girls between, nice girls and cheap girls, but Max said once that I was the senior partner in his heart . . . . He's spoiled every other man for me. I suppose, in a way, he's spoiled my life. But it's too late for me to change that, too.

"I love him much too dearly and understand him, between the cheap girls that satisfy something in his nature I can't satisfy he always back . . . Perhaps when that something is his nature no longer has to be satisfied, he'll marry me. I've been hoping he'd marry me this time when I go."

She laughed softly. "I don't know why I'm explaining him to you. Possibly because he's foremost in my thoughts tonight. To the other women in his life—and I know there are other women—he's probably a strange man. But the strangeness about Max is, I believe, his spiritual fidelity to me. I am the only woman who has met his family with the exception of the girl to whom he was engaged when he was very young. She died. I met him shortly after that when I played at my first concert. It's been going on ever since.

"Truly, I've never felt any of the trite nonsense of 'walking the back streets of his life.' On the contrary, the other women do." After a brief silence she said, "I'm sure there was someone when he was here a few months ago. I always know. But whoever the girl is, she doesn't know how much time Max spent with me and that usually on Sunday afternoon, we had tea with his aunts and uncles. I stopped resenting those other girls years ago and now I'm sorry for them because I know the terrible hold he has over one. Because I love him, I can't blame them for loving him, too.

"But Max doesn't make any promises he can't live up to. That is his outlet. He told me that once. But for him I might have been a great pianist. But loving him is a full-time job. Now you know why I'm going to South America."

Judith felt rooted and suffocated. Each thought that wove Fay's story with her own was a sharp pain in her mind. She did not cry but she knew that her heart was crying.

Slowly, very slowly and with great effort she turned her head and looked at Fay with eyes that had the cold bright look of someone dead.

Fay said, "My dear, did I say something to upset you? I'm sorry. Stupid of me to talk so much."

Somewhere Judith found her voice. "No, it's nothing. Nothing. I must be going. . . .I'll mail your letters. . . .The music was lovely."

"Thank you. I want to see you again, Judith."

"Yes, we must. Of course. . . . Good-bye."

"Godd-bye, my dear."

The door was closed and Judith stood outside. She was cold and shaking now, shaking with a fury she had never known before and was not likely ever to know again. The cold fury drove her to the elevator and to the streets where she walked heedless of any destination, heedless of wind and traffic lights and people.

Max! She, Judith, had been either one of the "nice" girls or one of the cheap girls—it didn't matter—but one of the other women of whom Fay had spoken and of whom she was wisely aware! It was all so clear now—the times when he had said he couldn't see her. . . .He had been with Fay then. Lies, all lies, the things he had said to her and which she had thought were meant for her alone!

How clever he had been; but not as clever as Fay. How blind and stupid she, Judith, had been! Max had never had the slightest intention of marrying her. She had been merely time spent romantically while he waited for orders to go away again. And he had asked her to come to him after Fay—after Fay! All the others came after Fay, Fay to whom Max had been spiritually faithful for ten years.

A sense of shame mixed with her fury, shame because Max had made her feel for the first time that she was a small cheap thing used and discarded. The only person in the world she had ever loved completely had done this to her. How could he? How could he? Because Max, sensitive, intelligent and worldly, had known that she had never loved anyone before with a love in which there was also worship.

Lies, all lies, so smoothly spoken, neither his mind nor his heart wholly hers, only his presence and that briefly. She wondered whether he had said to himself that day at the pier!" There's a girl I'd like to know. We'll have a delightful romance, I'll promise nothing and it will be farewell without regret when the office sends me off again. Fay understands this side of me." As cold, as calculating as that, as if emotions were things you could put on and take off at will, leaving no hurts to heal.

A good sense of direction guided her home. It was worse there because of the blue ensemble she saw in the closet. How many wedding dresses had Fay bought in ten years?

Later, she wrote:

"Max,

"I am not coming two weeks from tomorrow. I will not travel so far to a man in whose heart I shall never be more than a junior partner. I met Fay Hathaway tonight. She does not know. Why should she ever know? . .

"This is good-bye, Max, as finally as it has even been said.

"Judith"

James MacDonald, Keith Menzies and George Brinklow charged with failing or neglecting to attend parade for drill and training at the Trenton Armouries, case enlarged till Nov. 6th.

Leonard Matthews for obtaining food and lodgings by fraud failed to appear in court, on a summons and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Adolphus Williams, charged with being drunk in charge of a car, Williams was out on bail and appeared in court drunk and was remanded till next Tuesday.

Douglas Atkinson on a charge of careless driving when he injured Mr. Con VanAlstine on August 15th was found guilty and assessed $10 and costs.

C. Burnman for careless driving paid $5 and costs. The same gentleman charged with driving without a licence paid $10 and costs.

George R. Gallagher for having liquor in a place other than his residence paid $10 and on a charge of being drunk paid another $10 and costs.

Archie Hutchinson and William Carr for being drunk, $10 and costs each.

Albert Northrop for having liquor $10 and costs and George Brown for driving through a traffic signal, $2 and costs. Col. B. C. Donnan prosecuted.

Little Benny's Note Book

Some men went passed us while I was out with pop Saturday afternoon, and pop said, Did you notice that gentleman who just nodded to me? He's the founder and owner of the Karkle Chain Stores, the famous Rooben D. Karkle in person, and I feel proud and flattered to have such an eminently successful person aim a nod at me with his own famous neck, he said.

Do you mean that fat man? I said, and pop said, Well, his waist line does exceed the average, but then I suppose everything connected with a man like Karkle must have have unusual ambitions. Like many great men who finally land at the top, Rooben D. Karkle started at the bottom, sweeping out basements, which is as far as the bottom goes in most businesses. It is doubtful whether anybody ever swept out a basement with greater neatness and dispatch than Rooben D. Karkle. So whenever you are bored by some lowly but useful job, just think of Mr. Karkle and you'll realize you're on one of the steps that lead to a dizzy height, pop said.

Well will I have to have a stummick like that? I said, and pop said, Certainly not, I mean not necessarily. A certain amount of exercise all through life is the oil that keeps the body lines flowing up and down instead of around and around. But the important point about Mr. Karkle is the fact that by constant diligence he has learned so much about chain stores that he is constantly being interviewed on such subjects as our relations with Europe and the reering of children. In other words if you stick to constant diligence you may get as far as Rooben D. Karkle, pop said.

Well what makes him walk like that? I said.

Meaning flat footed, and pop said, There may be a slight discrepancy between the ability of his arches and the volume they are called upon to support, a slight matter of physics —over which Mr. Karkle no longer has any control. But enough of Mr. Karkle, he said.

Which it was.

FAMOUS MULE DIES

Fort Huachuca, Ariz., Oct. 10 (AP)—Myrtle, 35 year old army mule who served the United States so well and faithfully for nearly 25 years that she gained the recognition of Gen. John J. Pershing, died September 12. It was announced yesterday. She was cremated and given full military honors. In 1917 Myrtle was part of a pack train which accompanied Gen. Pershing into Northern Mexico in search of Pancho Villa.

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Oct. 10 — (CP Cable) — After several days of intensified attacks on Stalingrad in which concentrated weight was thrown against particular areas, a military spokesman in Berlin now has suggested that infantry attacks against the city are being discontinued and that the assault will be confined to dive-bombing and heavy artillery bombardments.

This is a strange admission as a sequel to Hitler's speech in which capture of the city was promised as a certainty, and it is yet to be seen to what extent a change in policy is being brought about. Certainly the unyielding and world-stirring defence put up by the Russians has remained as stout and successful as ever.

It is possible that in spite of Hitler's pronouncements the Germans have had to recognise their losses have been so great as to force them to consider the results of their failure; it is still more likely that the German military spokesman was attempting to soften anxiety which must be felt at home over the continued holdup of German forces before the gallant city.

A particularly heavy attack on a northwest suburb which started a week ago has not only been held but the Russians succeeded in recovering ground in various parts of the city, and a counteroffensive from the north has also continued to make progress, though slowly.

Fighting in the Novorossisk areas also has been heavy and the Russian defence has been active with Marines showing great enterprise. The Black Sea fleet is still playing an important part and a successful attack on barges attempting to ferry German troops across the Kerch Straits would indicate the Germans are unable to use the port of Novorossisk. It remains to be seen whether the Nazis will be able to develop further their attacks on the Caucasus while at the same time maintaining the attack on Stalingrad and holding Marshal Timoshenko's counter-offensive.

East of Leningrad the Germans made several attacks which may have had as their object the closing of a leak in the line of encirclement through which Russian supplies reach the city. That a leak must exist is suggested by the obvious determination of the city to stand siege for another Winter if necessary.

In Egypt except for one local attack to improve the British position the hull continues; air attacks on Malta have not been heavy and Allied submarines have had considerable successes in attacks on Marshal Rommel's communications.

IMPROVEMENT IN PACIFIC

In New Guinea the Australians have advanced and the Japanese withdrawn somewhat surprisingly without offering serious resistance. This shows clearly they found an attack on Port Moresby with precarious communications to be impracticable. What their intentions now are remains a matter for speculation.

Possibly they hope to draw the Australians forward to a point where a counter-attack might be delivered with all the advantages of communications and terrain in their favor.

Alternatively it is possible that having failed both from Milne Bay and by the mountains to reach Port Moresby they intend to withdraw altogether from New Guinea where they are suffering losses without compensation. Troops and aircraft liberated might then be used to reinforce attempts to retake the Solomons.

So far the Americans have made no reply to Japanese claims of a naval success in the Solomons, which probably have little foundation. Washington, however, does claim to have damaged another Japanese cruiser escorting reinforcements to Guadalcanal and to have had considerable success in air combat.

Establishment of a strong American force and airbase in the Aleutians within 150 miles of the Japanese at Kiska is an important development. Probably it is not a prelude to an attempt to recapture Kiska, but it should make the Japanese position there uncomfortable and add considerably to the toll taken of enemy shipping.

GLANCING BACK 25 YEARS

Allied troops advanced in heavy fighting in the Ypres salient in the week of October 4, 1917. British troops attacked on an eight-mile front east of Ypres and captured important positions along the Passchendale-Goeluvet ridge together with 3,000 prisoners.

Five days after that attack British and French forces made another thrust in which the occupation of Poelcapelle was completed and a number of other villages captured.

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

London, Oct. 10 (AP).—Hitler's announcement that he has achieved his main objective at Stalingrad and therefore will depend on bombardment rather than infantry to complete the operation of reducing the city would seem to me to cover a much more important issue than appears on the surface.

There is a sound reason in my view to believe he is preparing to weaken his position there by a heavy withdrawal of airpower for other and even more pressing purposes.

His peculiar statement broadcast by a spokesman, obviously was calculated to prepare the German public for a slowing-down of the attack on Stalingrad and perhaps disappointment at the failure to capture the city. Probably it also was intended to soften the disclosure of the extent of the huge German losses.

However, it is doubtful that Hitler would thus tacitly admit the hiding he has been taking were it not for the necessity of making a quick shift in his plans. The only logical move of real magnitude would appear to involve his air force, the major part of which he has been employing in the bloodiest and biggest siege of history.

My reasons for believing this represents his purpose are:

1. The devastating, Anglo-American bombing raids against Nazi war industries and transport systems in western Europe are hitting the Reich in a vital spot and hurting like the devil.

We have a fine illustration of this in yesterday's raid against the French industrial city of Lille by 100 great U.S. bombers, supported by a fleet of 500 British, Canadian and Allied fighter planes.

The time has arrived when Hitler must try to halt these assaults and that would necessitate the withdrawal of aircraft from the Russian front.

2. The Nazi all-highest has been displaying jangling nerves over the fear of an Allied attack somewhere in Western Europe.

He has been hastily strengthening his ground force here, there and everywhere and he undoubtedly feels the necessity of repairing his now comparatively weak air defences.

3. Because Hitler has been so engaged on the Russian front that he has had to quit large-scale bombing of Britain, John Bull naturally has been free to get ahead with the business of piling up resources.

4. In order to throw every ounce of weight he could into the assault on Stalingrad, the Fuehrer even stripped Rommel of air power. This not only deprived the Nazis of strength to continue the offensive against Egypt but also placed them in a most uncomfortable defensive position.

There is an ever-growing danger of Allied attack against the Axis army in Libya and Nazi aircraft must be sent there.

5. Indications are that the Nazi chief hopes to be able to drive eastward along the foothills of the Caucasus mountain range to the Caspian Sea in an effort to cut the Russian transport line from the Persian Gulf. This would call for more air power since the Reds have been holding well in that area.

6. Apart from all these considerations, there is one which basically is of even more pressing importance. Hitler must at once begin to prepare for the great war of the air which most certainly will be waged next spring over Western Europe. That battle is likely to determine the course of the war.

Hitler's air losses in Russia have been terrific. In addition, he has had his first line planes in such constant action that his entire fleet is badly in need of rest and overhauling.

It will take him from now until spring to repair the damage and replace the losses. Indeed it's quite likely the intervening six months won't give him the time he needs especially since he may be called upon to conduct large-scale operations, both defensive and offensive, during the next few months.

A plant is being constructed in France to obtain 25,000 metric tons of gasoline and 25,000 metric tons of methanel annually from lignite.

Personal Terror Gripping Hearts Of Nazi Leaders Says Daily Star

London, Oct. 9 — (CP Cable) — The Star said Thursday in an editorial that the German action in chaining prisoners taken in the Canadian-led assault on Dieppe was proof that personal terror has gripped the hearts of the nazi leaders.

"The Allies' determination to punish war criminals personally confirms their fears," the newspaper said. "The effort to make Britain in the wrong over the treatment of prisoners was merely a blind to cloak the real purpose . .

"Hitler's last speech guardedly gave a clue to his own fears. He denounced grumblers, reactionaries and street violence. German morale is sagging."

The Evening News under an editorial page heading "Rogues Gallery" said British soldiers who landed at Sark last Saturday tore down the veil which screened a flagrant breach of common law and common humanity when they revealed that the German slave-masters were herding hundreds of British civilians into gangs for forced labor in Germany.

Early editions of morning papers agreed that the threatened retaliation by British authorities set for Saturday when a number of Germans equal to the number of British prisoners will be shackled was the only procedure to follow.

Under a heading "One prisoner won't be put in chains," the Daily Express reproduced its front page of May 13, 1941, recording the arrival of Rudolf Hess, then No. 2 Nazi, in Britain. It explained that Hess was treated as a civilian "prisoner of state," the highest prisoner rank during wartime.

In an editorial the Express said Britain was taking retaliatory measures "for the sake of the men of Dieppe, not to sate a sadistic lust which is natural to these Germans."

"The men of Dieppe will not be degraded by their chains," it continued.

"Their honor cannot be sullied by such degradations. They are fighting stock from British and Canadian homes whose deeds will always rank in our history."

R.C.A.F. Fighter Pilots Knock Down F. W.-190

(By LOUIS V. HUNTER)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 10. (CP Cable) — Two R.C.A.F. fighter pilots forming part of the Allied fighter screen around a force of more than 100 United States bombers today assisted in destruction of one German Focke-Wulf 190 fighter.

The fliers are Flt. Lt. George Murray, D.F.C., of Halifax, and Sgt.-Pilot E. L. Gimbel, Chicago, members of the Spitfire squadron commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. Keith Hodson, D.F.C., of London, Ont.

The Canadians also reported the probable destruction of a second German fighter by guns of a Flying Fortress.

The American bombers made a shattering attack on the Lille area of occupied France in one of the greatest daylight operations of the war.

'Our section got into a hell of a scrap', Scotty Murray related as an eager ground staff, airmen and officers crowded around him after his trim Spitfire taxied in with its cannon covers blown off.

"There were three FW-190's below us and I took the rear one, opening up at about 200 yards," the young pilot said, describing the action. "I saw —hits along the fuselage and port wing as he fell away. I closed in to about 50 yards on a second one and saw hits along his fuselage also."

Gimbel said Murray yelled through the inter-com, "okay, let's get these guys" as the section dived down on the 190's which were "pecking at the Fortresses."

"After Murray had shot," Gimbel said, "I went after a Jerry who was in a dive. I saw hits and after following him down to 18,000 feet I saw him turn over and go into a spiral dive. About five minutes later I saw an object burning on the ground."

Murray saw another FW-190 hit by guns of a Fortress roll over on its back with black smoke pouring from it.

Strikes Have No Place In War Industries Says Legion Pres.

Toronto, Oct. 9 —(CP)— Roane Waring, National Commander of the American Legion, told the American Federation of Labor's Convention here today that while strikes may be justified in time of peace they "have no place in war industries . . . They are treasonably unpatriotic."

Asserting that the A.F.L. has not yet gone "far enough" in its stand against wartime strikes, Waring declared that "it makes no difference what a man's grievances may be, it matters not how unfairly his rights may have been infringed upon—if he is engaged in war production and upon him depend the material, the guns or the shells to wage this war—he has no right to quit, no more than the soldier on the Bataan Peninsula nor the marine in the Solomons should leave their jobs because they might have felt that some other soldier had failed in his duty.

"There was no division of profits on Bataan. There the only thing they divided was ammunition and food. There were no questions of hours or shifts or pay for the marines on the Solomons."

15 Tons of Bombs Dropped on Kiska

Washington, Oct. 9—(AP)—The United States Navy Department announced today that army bombers, continuing their steady pounding of Japanese in the Aleutian Islands, had dropped 15 tons of bombs on the enemy base at Kiska last Tuesday, starting fires in the camp area, damaging a cargo ship in harbor and strafing the radio station.

Canadian planes have been operating against the Japanese in the Aleqian area but the navy communique did not mention whether they were active in the Tuesday raid.

The navy at the same time announced the loss, in the Atlantic, of the United States Coast Guard cutter Muskeget, the former S.S. Cornish, of the Eastern Steamship Lines.

The 1,827-ton steam vessel had been overdue "for some time and must be presumed to be lost," the navy said. Loss of the entire personnel—the Muskeget had a normal complement of about 100 officers and men—also was presumed.

INTERROGATE JAP PRISONER

A Japanese prisoner, one of five captured after a naval engagement in Aleutian waters, was taken to Dutch Harbor, Alaska, for questioning. There he found his home inspired fear of American treatment of prisoners quickly dispelled by Lieut.-Com. Peter C. Holm of the U.S. Navy, during the interrogation.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 9—(CP)—His work is done behind the scenes and he isn't well known to the general public but there is no more important military figure in the high councils of the United Nations than Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Staff to President Roosevelt and chairman of the combined chiefs of staff committee.

A military man for 40 years, Admiral Leahy was recalled as ambassador to Vichy a few weeks ago and almost immediately was appointed to the top military position in the United States with an office in the White House. Since then he has avoided photographers and the general glamor of being a White House figure. He has issued no statements, made no appearances before public gatherings and has made only one short radio talk.

There is probably no man who knows as many secrets about United Nations strategy, industrial production and plans as this tight-mouthed, 67-year-old Admiral whose naval experience goes back to the Spanish-American war. There is nothing dramatic about him. He is neither tall nor martial in stature. But he is decisive, a great administrator and planner. His blue eyes can be freezingly cold under those dark, bushy eyebrows.

Admiral Leahy and President Roosevelt have been close friends and associates for years, dating back to the first great war when the President was assistant-secretary of the navy and the admiral was the young captain of a troopship.

The Japanese Mockingbird

Many stories are coming back from the southwest Pacific showing the Japanese soldiers are full of tricks, deceit and cunning and that the unorthodox is their rule. They are hard, ruthless, brave and well-equipped soldiers, unquestionably the finest jungle fighters in the world.

Their latest strategem is to whistle the "marines corps hymn" in the jungles of Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands and to shout a few English words in the hope they can creep up on an unsuspecting American guard or outpost. Another is to use bird calls and animal cries to cover their rustling progress through the thick, tangled underbrush.

Canadian Girl Makes History

A Canadian girl, Mary Craig McGeachy, native of Sarnia, Ont., has been appointed a first secretary of the British Embassy in Washington, a tradition-shattering event that can be likened only to a woman joining the masonic order or being elected a cardinal of the church.

The British diplomatic service has been strictly a man's preserve up to now and the McGeachy appointment is the first time its sacred portals have been crossed by a woman— and a blond at that.

Only someone who has seen the British diplomatic corps at first hand can grasp the significance of the McGeachy appointment. The contrast between this young and talented Canadian girl and the typical black-coat-and-striped-trousers graduate of Eton or Harrow who has dominated the service up to now, is indeed sharp.

It often has been stated by countless friends of Britain that one of the surest ways she could "win friends and influence people" would be to open her diplomatic service to the common, ordinary sort of man and woman and abandon the "old school tie" cult. This reporter has heard it discussed many times in the British house of Commons and now maybe traditions of the centuries will be tossed out the window—where they belong.

Washington Unmoved

Washington officials are inclined to scoff at the obvious publicity stunt of Henry J. Kaiser in turning out a 10,000-ton cargo ship in 10 days. They say it means exactly nothing because no account was taken of the time spent in fabricating the parts that were piled along the ways before the start of the race against time. One official here said sarcastically he could not understand why the west coast shipbuilder had not figured out a way to have steam in the boilers when they are bolted down—it might save an hour or two the next time he pulls the stunt.

Notes That Makes News

Quentin Reynolds, the American War Correspondent, is writing a book on the Dieppe raid. . .Moscow's diplomatic recognition of Gen. Charles De Gaulle's fighting French Committee has posed a delicate question for Ottawa, Washington and London which so far has been dodged successfully since the fall of France. Moscow's recognition was limited in scope but at least it was better than De Gaulle has achieved anywhere else among the United Nations.

Great people, the Russians—Premier Joseph Stalin insists the world premiere of "Boris Godounoff" by Shostokovitch, an arrangement completed within the past year, be held in Moscow, not New York. The New York opera company has enlisted the support of Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff to have the Kremlin's decision reversed in aid of the Russian war relief fund. Meanwhile, Stalingrad holds.

Another reason why Washington is like no other hamlet in the world: 11.2 per cent of the population can hang college diplomas on their walls. Still another reason: The war department is completing a building that has cost $50,000,000; estimatd cost was $35,000,000.

The office of price administration has made two momentous discoveries: First, dead horses distintegrate quickly; secondly, they disintegrate faster in the summer than in the winter and faster in the sunny south than in the temperate north. So—and this is all in a press release—the O. P. A. has decided that dead horses should be exempted from price regulations. It was too tough to arrange a nation-wide, all-weather price ceiling.

Wellington Bomber Crew Praises Royal Navy For Quick Rescue Work

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Oct. 10 (CP)— The Royal Navy is tops, take it from four members of a Canadian Wellington bomber squadron who were picked up 90 minutes after they had bailed out in the inky blackness of a North Sea morning.

Wearing bell-bottom trousers, the fliers, Flt. Sgts. Alne Cameron of Raymore, Sask., Russel (Old Soldier) Harling of Winnipeg, Bruce Hutchinson of Amherstburg, Ont., and Don McTavish of Calgary, trooped into their airdrome singing the praises of the men of the naval arm of the air-sea rescue service .

Cameron, a 31-year-old pilot who was a school teacher in civil life, "ditched" his aircraft after bringing it back on a thin mixture of fuel following a raid on a German target. Flak struck the port wing as Cameron started his run-up over the target and the gas gauge dropped to zero. The crew bombed their target, then Cameron thinned out his mixture to save fuel and started for home at a greatly reduced speed.

"That was no fun, either," front gunner Harling said. With the port tank empty, the machine "stooged" home gradually losing altitude. They lost 10,000 feet, but navigator Bruce Hutchinson, 21, who had come out of sick bay only the day before, steered them on a direct economical course and they were only five miles from the English coast when the first engine sputtered and died, followed a few minutes later by the second.

Perfect Crash-Landing

Cameron's mates said the crash-landing was perfect.

Rear gunner Fred Hubbard, 26-year-old papermaker from Three Rivers, Que., who is in hospital recovering from back injuries, was assisted from the aircraft by McTavish, a 22-year-old wireless operator and Hutchinson. They hoisted him through the astro-dome and helped him into the dinghy.

The second pilot was lost. He was in trouble on the wing and the survivors heard him mcalling but when they tried to paddle the dinghy around the aircraft to search for him the wind was too strong and they couldn't make any headway.

"We're all for the navy," Cameron asserted. "Their launch was on its way to our position three minutes after we had been plotted. We sure were glad to see them."

The girls of the navy also came in for their share of praise. "Those Wrens couldn't do enough for us," one flier said. "They brought us food, hot drinks, clothes. They're nice looking, too, and we're going back to see them sometime."

"But that launch," McTavish summed up, "was the best darn thing I ever saw."

BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS

Contracts and commitments made by the Munitions and Supply Department now exceed the $5,000,000,000 mark. Nearly 335,000 contracts have been placed since the beginning of the war at an average value of more than $7,300.

A LONG SHAVE

More than 20 million razor blades have been purchased to date for the Canadian armed forces by the Munitions and Supply Department. This is evactly 962 miles of shaving edge.

IN CUSTODY

Here is James Kennon, 14-year-old hitchhiker of Midland, Mich., who, it is alleged, confessed to the slaying of Clyde Valentine, a Detroit bartender. It is alleged Kennon shot Valentine three times and then ran over the bartender with a car to make sure he was dead.

REUNITED

Lovely Anna Lee, British film star, has been reunited with her sister, Mrs. Mary Denny of Nelson, B.C., whom she has not seen or heard from in 20 years. The reconciliation took place when Mrs. Denny read a story about Anna in which it was revealed that she had a "lost" sister in Canada. Due to changes in their names, neither had been able to contact one another for many years.

RAF FIGHTERS DOWN 25 AXIS PLANES OVER MALTA

50 Also Damaged In Two-Day Score Over Tiny Citadel

Only Five British Planes Lost And Two of the Pilots Are Safe

NAZIS MOVING CONVOY

Cairo, Oct. 13—(AP) — British planes, fighting off a terrific Axis aerial assault on the stronghold of Malta yesterday, shot down at least twenty-five Axis planes and damaged about fifty, a joint headquarters-R.A.F. communique said today.

The hard-fighting Malta airmen set a record for the destruction of Axis planes in one period of dayscore of 39 planes destroyed in the score of thirty-nine planes destroyed in the aerial fighting which started over the tiny citadel, known as "the most-bombed place in the world."

Many of the planes damaged were hit so badly they probably did not reach their base, the communique said. Five British fighters were lost in the fighting, but two of the pilots are safe.

(In the past, violent and continuous air attacks on Malta have meant that the Axis was attempting to move convoys across the Mediterranean to bolster Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's desert corps. The intense activity in the Mediterranean yesterday indicated this again was the case.)

Hit Scored on Destroyer

Small parties of enemy transport were reported dispersed yesterday and on Sunday night R.A.F. bombers scored a direct hit on an Axis destroyer, 50 miles north of Derna, the communique said.

Shortly before this action an Italian merchant ship, which was sinking, had been sighted near the same position.

The destruction of twenty-four planes over Malta yesterday equalled an earlier record of twenty-four planes shot down in twenty-four hours. But at least twenty-two of the planes destroyed were shot down in daylight, a Malta communique said, and this was a better score than any made during three years of Axis assaults on Malta.

The Malta communique said that in yesterday's fighting "the enemy took an even bigger beating from Malta's defences than in any single day previously." The Axis attacks started shortly after dawn.

Air-raid sirens on Malta have since the war started and more sounded more than 3,000 times than 1,000 Axis planes have plunged into the sea or crashed on its rocky surface.

Yesterday's daylight bag of enemy planes consisted of twelve bombers and ten fighters. Sunday the Axis raiders visited the island five times and lost fifteen planes.

Only one civilian was injured yesterday, but a communique said Sunday's casualty list had increased but gave no figures. The Sunday raid, the communique said, was "in greater strength than Malta has known for months." Military damage, however, was reported small.

The communique said that in the third raid yesterday "our fighters fell upon the enemy coming out of the sun a good distance out to sea and massacred them. Half a bomber force was shot down into the sea, with five of their escort, and others limped home." Not a single enemy aircraft reached Malta's coast.

1,000 Harvesters Arrive in West

Regina, Oct. 13 (CP)—Two hundred students from Toronto today are en route to Saskatchewan to join 1,000 youths from other Ontario sections and from Quebec who moved into farm homes in the province during the weekend for a three-week stay as harvest workers.

Farmers in Regina district were excited Sunday when the first harvest excursion in 14 years arrived, bringing 600 students, mostly from McGill University, Montreal, and Macdonald College, Ste. Anne De Bellevue, Que.

The station platform was transformed into a campus as the enthusiastic young men jumped and fell off their 15-coach train.

College yells echoed between boxcars and passenger coaches. But while the boys capered and cheered, their garb showed they were ready for hard work.

High boots, plaid shirts and straw hats were worn by many.

THIRD VICTORY LOAN INCLUDES TWO MATURITIES

14-Year Issue Bears Interest at 3 P. C. and 3½ Year 1.75 P. C.

OFFERED OCT. 19

Ottawa, Oct. 13 — (CP) — Two maturities will be offered to the public in the Third Victory Loan, in which a minimum of $750,000,000 is sought — a 14-year issue bearing interest at three per cent and a 3 1-2-year issue bearing interest at 1.75 per cent, Finance Minister Ilsley announced last night.

Books for the loan open Oct. 19, and will close "on or about Nov. 7, with or without notice, in the discretion of the minister", a departmental statement said.

The bonds will bear interest from Nov. 1, 1942. The 14-year bonds mature Nov. 1, 1956, and are payable at maturity at 101. They will be called at 101 during or after 1956. They will be sold at par. Yield will be 3.06 per cent if held to maturity.

The 3 1-2-year bonds will mature May 1, 1946. They will be issued at par and payable at par at maturity. They will be non-callable to maturity.

Interest on both issues will be payable half-yearly.

Mr. Ilsley said "$750,000,000 represents our minimum requirement ... Canada needs money for war and I am confident that our people will respond to this appeal to such an extent as to achieve a new record. There is no safer investment for accumulated savings or current earnings.

Previous Loans Oversubscribed

"It must be evident that we are approaching a very grim stage in this battle for freedom and the slogan for the loan truly expresses the situation we face: 'Nothing matters now but victory.' "

Canada's four previous loans of this war all were over-subscribed. In January, 1940, a $200,000,000 loan was subscribed to the extent of $321,276,850 cash. In September, 1940, a $300,000,000 loan was subscribed to the extent of $324,248,300 cash.

The first Victory Loan, in June, 1941, for $600,000,000 was subscribed to the extent of $710,958,950 cash, and the second Victory Loan, in February, 1942, for $600,000,000 was subscribed to the extent of $834,000,000 cash.

Principal and interest on both third Victory Loans issues will be payable in Canadian funds, the principal at any agency of the Bank of Canada, and the interest, without charge, at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank.

The bonds may be paid for either in cash in full at the time of application at the issue price, without accrued interest, or by instalments plus accrued interest, Mr. Ilsley said.

Instalment payments will be as follows: 10 per cent on application and 18 per cent on the first day of each of five months starting with Dec. 1, 1942. The final payment

Canadian and U. S. Troops Alert For Action in the Alaska Sector

Edwin Johnson, Canadian Press War Correspondent, has just completed a visit to the Canadian soldiers and airmen stationed in Alaska. This is the first four stories in which Johnson tells how the men are faring and of their varied duties.

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

With the Canadian Forces in Alaska, Oct. 13 (CP)—At fog-bound outposts of storied Alaska and reaching into the Aleutian Islands, Canada's armed forces stand shoulder to shoulder with their comrades from the United States, alert and ready for action should an enemy thrust be directed against America's Pacific northwest.

By air, water and over land I have just completed an extended tour of the growing chain of western defences, talked to the men at their posts of lonely vigil, shared their billets and board, joined them on patrols and followed them on operational exercises.

With a scenic wonderland as background and in the very shadows of towering, snow-capped mountains, the Canadians are tackling a prodigious job manning these isolated outposts and erecting defences through treacherous muskey, rock and dense forest. So far variable weather and problems of transportation have been handicaps to speedy consolidation. But like the men of the 1st Canadian Division on their arrival in England nearly three years ago, the Alaska contingent has fought boldly against adversity with a combination of real hard work, resourcefulness and improvisation.

RED ARMY TROOPS REGAIN GROUND IN MOZDOK AREA

In Costly Renewal Of Drive for Stalingrad Nazis Advance In One Sector of City

TERRIFIC FIGHTING

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 13 —(AP)— A German infantry regiment supported by 50 tanks was reported today to have advanced slightly along one of Stalingrad's streets in a costly renewal of the drive toward the Volga while Red army shock troops regained ground on several sectors in the Mozdok area 350 miles to the south.

Nazi ground forces sprang into action again after a three-day lull. The garrison breasted a series of attacks.

The noon communique said more than 250 Germans were killed in a vain attempt by a rifle unit to crash through defence line to a factory in the northwest area.

Still Held Plant

Perhaps this was the Stalin tractor plant, Stalingrad's largest industrial works. Pravda said the Russians still held it.

Although Stalingrad remained the centre of Soviet interest, greater Nazi casualties were reported piled up in local fighting far to the north—1,000 dead in two actions on the northwestern front and 400 on the Leningrad front.

Operations within the Don-Volga corridor northwest of Stalingrad were described as a combination of trench fighting and warfare of manoeuvre.

"Our tank crews knocked out three German tanks, smashed five anti-tank guns and wiped out a company of enemy infantry," the communique said.

Deadly Soviet shelling of tanks was officially declared to have forced the German Command to

Infantry Goes First

"Before," the Moscow radio said, "the tanks went ahead covering the infantry but now, trying to protect the tanks against the murderous fire of Soviet artillery, the infantry goes first."

Whether the Germans were aiming at a full-scale revival of their offensive against Stalingrad was not apparent in meagre advices from that smoke-shrouded front.

Before the recent lull, however, the invaders were reported attacking by divisions. A Nazi regiment supported by 50 tanks constituted the largest enemy force especially reported by the midnight communique to have been in action there yesterday.

Three attacks failed to crack the Stalingrad lines, but defence detachments were pressed back somewhat in one block, the communique said.

"Twenty tanks were disabled or set on fire and about two battalions of German infantry were wiped out," it said. "On another sector our detachments beat off attacks by small enemy groups."

Although the Germans moved fresh divisions and tank columns to the Mozdok front "straining to advance" anew toward Caucasus oil fields and communications centres, the Russians made some gains in offensive operations in a number of areas dispatches said.

British Opinion Rises Against Reprisals

London, Oct., 13 — (CP) —George Bernard Shaw today joined an increasing number of Britons who disagree with their government's action in shackling German prisoners as a reprisal for the same Nazi move against British captives.

"How are we obliged to copy him (Hitler)?" ths 86-year-old author and playwright asked in a letter to the London Times. "How will our doing so 'protect' his British prisoners? who is to make the chains and what is to be their weight? and as the retaliatory process is self-perpetuating, how is it to be stopped before the human race is exterminated?"

Shaw's letter was one of several opposed to reprisals published in British newspapers.

The Times in an editorial declared "There has been no enthusiasm here or in Canada" for the decision to take reprisals and added: "No one should be ashamed to confess that in any competition to inflict hardships or worse upon helpless victims the Germans will invariably prove the victors."

The Daily Sketch said:—

"By imitating him (Hitler's) brutality we are showing weakness. By refusing to imitate it we should manifest our strength.

"If we had confined our action to protesting violently against his atrocious infringment of international law and had declared to the world our refusal 'to penalize defenceless prisoners in the way ours have been penalized Hitler would have suffered both a heavy moral and political defeat."

On the other hand the widely read Daily Express declared in an editorial: "Never again must that nation encourage Nazi barbarities by truckling to Nazi threats ... to the British mind, putting fetters on a prisoner long since captured is senseless and revolting. Yet until we can find other means of protecting our captured men we must answer Hitler with his own weapons.

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR YOUNG MEN TO FIGHT AXIS

Wants Speedy Action of Congress to Lower Draft Age to 18

PRODUCTION UP

Washington, Oct. 13 — (AP) — Congressional leaders took President Roosevelt's call for an army of strong young men to carry the war to the Axis as their que today for speedy action on legislation to lower the draft age in the United States from 20 to 18.

The president, in a broadcast speech last night told the country he believed it would be necessary to lower the minimum age limit for Selective Service to 18.

"We have learned how inevitable that is — and how important to the speeding up of victory," he said.

Chairman Andrew May of the House of Representatives Military Committee said his committee will expedite hearings on the necessary legislation. I will co-operate in every way and I am sure the Congress will go along," he said.

Mr. Roosevelt, who suggested that legislation might also be needed to solve the manpower problem on the home front, alluded indirectly to a second fighting front again by declaring that one of the major decisions of strategy already made "relates to the necessity of diverting enemy forces from Russia and China to other theatres of war by new offensives against Germany and Japan."

Must Be Young Men

"All of our combat units that go overseas," he said, "must consist of young, strong men who have had thorough training. A division that has an average age of 23 or 24 is a better fighting unit than one which has an average age of 33 or 34. . ."

After reviewing his recent inspection tour and reporting that Allied strength is "on the up-grade" while that of the Axis is waning, the President declared the objective of today is clear and realistic.

"It is to destroy completely the military power of Germany, Italy and Japan to such good purpose that their threat against us and all the other United Nations cannot be revived a generation hence.

"We are united in seeking the kind of victory that will guarantee that our grandchildren can grow and, under God, may live their lives, free from the constant threat of invasion, destruction, slavery and violent death."

BUMPERS USED FOR SCRAP

Yonkers, N.Y., Oct. 13—(AP)—Automobiles of Yonkers are being stripped for war. Scores of cars were driven in a special "production line" yesterday and came away looking something like cattle without horns—their bumpers had been left on a fast-growing scrap pile. Wooden bumpers are attached in their places.

3 U. S. CRUISERS LOST IN SOLOMONS DURING AUGUST

Used in Protecting Night Landings of American Reinforcements

MOST OF CREWS SAVED

Washington, Oct. 13 — (AP) — Three heavy cruisers were added today to the announced American naval losses in the hard-fought but successful battle two months ago to break Japanese control of the vital southeastern Solomons.

While protecting the night landing of American reinforcements in the Tulagi-Guadalcanal area, Aug. 8-9, the navy announced yesterday, the cruisers Quincy, Vincennes and Astoria were sunk by enemy gunfire and torpedoes.

The toll raised the [illegible]se score in the Solomon Isl[illegible]flict to nine United States [illegible] — three cruisers, four transports and two destroyers. Two more destroyers were damaged. The enemy's known losses total 38 ships sunk or damaged.

The battle also brought destruction of the Australian cruiser Canberra. The navy, while announcing many Allied casualties, said most of the crew men were saved.

Commander of One Lost

The commander of the Quincy, was among those lost but the skippers of the Vincennes and the Astoria were saved. The Astoria had a normal complement of 49 officers and 850 men, and the Quincy and Vincennes, 45 officers and 907 men each.

The navy said it was impossible to determine what losses were suffered by the Japanese force of cruisers and destroyers. But the communique added, "The enemy withdrew to the northwest without attempting an attack on our transports and supply ships."

The conflict opened as the Allied cruisers stood guard over the landing of supplies and additional troops on the bases seized by United States Marines Aug. 8 and 9. Enemy planes dropped flares over the landing operations and the Japanese ships, skirting the south coast of Savo Island between Tulagi and Guadalcanal, opened fire.

NAZI GENERAL RECALLED

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), Oct. 13—(AP)—The commander of German troops in Denmark, Infantry General Luedke, has been recalled from his post "for employment elsewhere," and has been succeeded by General Von Hanneken, the German radio said last night in a Copenhagen dispatch.

Von Hanneken has been serving as an undersecretary of state in the Reich minist.. for economic affairs.

NO AGE BARRED

New York, Oct. 13—(AP)—Jitterbugging knows no age limits. Twenty-two men and women hep cats were fined $1 each for disorderly conduct following their arrest when their jam session in a Brooklyn cellar club became too lively. One woman fined was the mother of six children.

NAZIS REQUESTED BY BRITAIN TO RESCIND ACTION

Britain is Ready To Cancel Reprisal Of Shackling Prisoners Says Churchill

SPEAKS IN HOUSE

London, Oct. 13 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill announced today that Germany had been requested to rescind her action in shackling British and Canadian prisoners and that if the Nazis agreed Britain immediately would cancel her reprisal measures.

Mr. Churchill said the Germans violated the Geneva convention when they chained 1,376 prisoners taken at the Canadian-led raid on Dieppe, Aug. 19 and that representations had been made to Berlin through Switzerland, urging the Nazis to desist.

If the Germans will desist, he continued, "the counter-measures of similar nature which the (British) government felt themselves forced to take will immediately be withdrawn."

It was the Prime Minister's first report on the negotiations since Germany announced last Friday that the Britons and Canadians had been tied up for alleged binding of the hands of Nazis seized in raids on Dieppe and Sark Island. Britain and Canada retaliated by fettering a similar number of Nazi prisoners Saturday.

"The British government has never countenaced any general order for the tying of prisoners on

Allied Troops Meet Japanese

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 13 — (CP) — Allied mountain troops in New Guinea were reported skirmishing today with the Japanese in the region of "the gap" through the Owen Stanley Mountains not far from the mile-high Templeton's Crossing.

A communique said only that "Skirmishing is taking place north of Myola", but a spokesman added that Allied forward elements had made some progress forward. From Templeton's Crossing, which the Allied troops are approaching, the mountain trail drops 5,000 feet in 12 miles.

No details were given as to the strength of the Japanese, who have been withdrawing steadily from positions in the Owen Stanley Mountains. It was believed, however, that only forward elements of both sides were involved in the fighting.

It was pointed out that problems of supply and not the strength of the Japanese resistance was slowing up the Allied progress.

Air activity was on a reduced scale, but medium bombers and attack planes again raked the trail to Buna along which the Japanese must bring up their supplies and reinforcements. Japanese installations at Buna also were bombed.

Front-Line Newsmen Depict Spectacle Of Hideous Destruction at Stalingrad

Moscow, Oct. 13 —(AP)— The sky breathes fire and Stalingrad appears to melt in smoke and flame even while begrimmed troops maintain the savage struggle for mastery, eye-witnesses report from the Volga River city.

Front-line correspondents depict a spectacle of hideous destruction. They tell of heroism in the Russian defence maintained since the Germans established the siege August 25.

One of the most detailed accounts was given by Eugene Kriger, a correspondent of Izvestia, in a story on his arrival at Stalingrad.

He wrote.

"The redness of the sky quivers and shakes. The sky seems to breathe fire.

"With the fall of night the road comes to life.

"Columns of troops come out of their shelters, guns begin to move. Trucks are loaded with ammunition, food, medicine, newspapers—the city is in flames and steeped in blood, but it is alive and its demands are great. They are considered sacred.

"And here the city lies before us. The city is invisible. Only the fire is visible. The houses and streets look as if they were melting in a glow of flames.

"Against the deep red sky stand the skeletons of buildings, formless masses of devastated walls, with yellow, fiery holes instead of windows and doors.

"It seems as if there cannot be anything alive in it. But out of the crackling flames fly green, red and white rockets. Tracer bullets viciously grind their way into the sky. The blue rays of searchlights hover back and forth and suddenly go out.

"People are there Troops are there. There the battle rages."

Many Casualties Suffered by Japs In Two-Day Battle

Two Eneny Cruisers Damaged and 15 Jap Planes Destroyed in Operations

STIFF RESISTANCE

Washington, Oct. 13 (AP) — The Navy Department announced today that United States Marines had succeeded in enlarging their positions on Guadalcanal Island in the Solomon Islands during two days of offensive fighting in which the Japanese had "many casualties."

Announcement also was made of destruction of 15 Japanese planes, damage to two enemy light cruisers and loss of two United States planes in operations on October 9 and 11.

The Marines' offensive was the first such action reported in the Solomons since the early days of their invasion which began August 7th.

Announcement of the damaging of two enemy cruisers raised to 40 the number of Japanese ships which have been reported sunk or damaged during the Solomons campaign and the destruction of 15 Japanese planes raised to 260 the number of enemy aircraft wrecked in the Solomons.

U.S. Loses Nine Ships

Unofficial records based on Navy announcements show the United States has lost nine ships in the Solomons to date, the heaviest loss having occurred on the night of August 8-9, but announced by the navy yesterday. This was the loss of the heavy cruisers Vincinnes, Astoria and Quincy.

The offensive operations of the Marines were carried out in the face of considerable enemy resistance it was clear, since the communique noted that the Japanese had suffered heavy casualties and also because it has been reported on several recent occasions that the enemy was reinforcing his units in the Solomons jungles.

These reinforcements apparently have moved into the area against which the Marine offensive was directed.

North Germany Raided by R.A.F.

London, Oct. 13 (CP) — The R.A.F. attacked industrial northern Germany last night, losing two bombers, the Air Ministry said today. The raid apparently was of moderate scope compared with other mass raids.

A German radio broadcast said northern coastal regions were under alarm and explosions in several towns caused slight damage.

The BBC warned the French today that it was important now as never before for every Frenchman to be prepared for operations by the Allied air forces, navies and armies.

The French were advised to keep away from German headquarters and barracks, rail centres and repair yards and the fortified coastal zones.

Further Check Made on Methods Of Beef Purchase

Ottawa, Oct. 13 —(CP)— The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has passed an order which imposes restrictions on the methods used by retailers in purchasing beef, a commodity which has been in short supply on many urban markets for some months.

The order, dated Oct. 10, rules that "no person selling beef at retail shall acquire any beef by acquiring and slaughtering any cattle or having such cattle slaughtered for him unless he regularly acquired beef in that manner during the basic period from Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941."

The order provides that any person who acquires and slaughters any cattle or has such cattle slaughtered for him will be deemed to have acquired beef. This will permit a check on beef purchases by retailers who arrange their own cattle slaughtering instead of buying from packing plants.

Stop Independent Buying

Butchers who have started making purchases of beef from producers since beef shortages began, instead of buying through packing plants, will be unable to continue doing so.

The Oct. 10 order provides further that no person selling beef at retail may buy or acquire, or have anyone acquire for him, any quality or any portion of beef at a delivered cost in excess of the maximum price for sales at wholesale for the zone in which he lives. Cost of transportation from the buyer's nearest railway station to his place of business may be added.

However, this section of the order allows Foods Administrator Gordon Taggart to authorize purchases at more than wholesale price.

In the past the Prices Board has been able to maintain an adequate check on beef prices through the records of wholesale houses. Numbers of city butchers have made purchases direct from producers and these purchases were harder to check.

MOTOR CAR STRUCK BY PASSING TRUCK

Stopping to pick up a passenger on Front St., at noon on Sunday, a motor car driven by Lindsay Irwin, 289 William St., was struck by a passing truck, driven by Roy Woodcock, of Stirling. Both vehicles were proceeding in the same direction and as Mr. Irwin stopped to give a friend a ride, Mr. Woodcock attempted to pass him. The right rear fender of the truck collided with the left front fender of Mr. Irwin's car, resulting in minor damage. P. C. Ellis reported later investigating.

TWEED MILLING OFFICE ENTERED

Robbers broke and entered the offices of the Tweed Milling Company, Albion Street, and after ransacking the office furniture made off with some loose change, two pairs of men's trousers a top coat and a flashlight over the holiday week-end. The break-in was found by P.C. Taylor at seven o'clock Sunday morning while he was patrolling the outskirts of the city. Two company employees arrived at the same time as the officer and a search of the premises was immediately made. Entrance was gained with the use of a two-by-four plank with which a side door was pried loose permitting entrance. The value of the articles stolen was negligible, employees stated.

NO CHANGE IN DEER HUNTING REGULATIONS

Rumors that an increased deer hunting season might be afforded Ontario hunters were definitely spiked by the Department of Game and Fisheries over the weekend, according to orders received by Game Warden Herb McCabe. Only one deer may be taken by any one hunter.

"There seems to be much misunderstanding regarding the hunting of deer in Ontario this year. There is absolutely no change from last year, the season will open on the first Monday in November, which happens to be November second this year, and the bag limit is one deer per hunter in any one season", warned Game Warden McCabe, who added the same bag applies to moose.

The maskinonge and bass fishing season closes on October 15 Thursday next at sundown.

CHILDREN DIP STICKS INTO GASOLINE TANKS

It might have been perfectly in order in the good old days of torchlight processions, but police and residents on Station Street thought gasoline torchlights in the hands of minors were wholly impractical in this day and age.

On Sunday city police were informed that a number of teen-aged boys were dipping sticks into the gasoline tanks of motor cars, left on the parking lot at Trudeau's Station St. garage, and lighting the gasoline-soaken sticks. Then the youths would commence a parade and jamboree with the flaming torches, much to the displeasure and concern of nearby residents. Police arrived, took the names of the lads, confiscated their torches and instructed the boys to report at the police station before Chief Probert.

CATTLE BEING STOLEN DURING NIGHT

With beef cattle at a premium, farmers are viewing with concern their cattle herds these days. Reports that single cows and heifers are being stolen by night throughout the entire district have reached District Headquarters of the O. P. P. with concern being registered. Last week two such cases were reported in the central part of Hastings County, while more recently Ross McAuley, York Road, west of Trenton, reported the theft of a heifer valued at $40.00 from his farm. In most cases only one animal is taken at night, indicating a small truck is apparently used in the transporting of the stolen cattle.

YOUNG PORKER RUNS AMOK ON FRONT ST.

Although this little pig went to market—it caused considerable excitement along Front St. here on Saturday afternoon.

Escaping from its pen on the Market Square, a small pig led police, the owner and citizens in general a merry chase, among the parked motor cars on Front St. Saturday afternoon. The shoat had escaped and reached the corner of Front and McAnnany Streets before the little porker was missed. Then the merry chase in and around parked cars followed with the porker finally being captured and returned to its pen on the market by a teen-aged boy, who later informed police he wasn't so much as given thanks for his efforts.

DIFFERENT MARKERS ON SAME TRUCK

While marking motor vehicles along Front St., the other day, P. C. Rathwell proved his alertness when he discovered two different licence plates affixed to the same motor truck. Subsequent investigations proved the rear licence plates had been issued for the vehicle, but the front licence plate had been issued for a different truck altogether. Police revealed today the truck was registered from Deseronto and the case will doubtless result in police court charges.

BUSHES LOADED WITH RASPBERRIES

With rather unusual weather conditions prevailing, the Bay of Quinte district is fast making a name for itself as a runner-up to southern states in their multi-crop records each season.

First it was two crops of potatoes on the same piece of ground and then there were reports of picking strawberries during the first week in October. All of this has been topped, however, by the report of Mrs. Elijah Horton, Corbyville, who in the past few weeks has picked 21 boxes of raspberries from her garden. For the past two weeks she has offered raspberries on the local market. The bushes are still loaded with berries and remain untouched by frost.

CUTHBERT RASPBERRIES GROWN IN OCTOBER

Raspberries in October, especially October, 1942, are quite plentiful it seems. This morning Mr. G. A. Britton, well-known College St., gardener and horticulturist, called at the office of the Ontario Intelligencer with a bush of Cuthbert raspberries which was loaded with berries in a manner that would defy equal in July. Quite a number of the berries were ripe while the bush was heavily loaded with green berries. The bush was a fair sample of the entire patch. according to Mr. Britton.

Flowers in Mr. Britton's garden are also still untouched by frost. he reported picking a bouquet of pansies this morning.

Teen-Aged Lad Gives District Police Chase

A ten-year-old boy, who was on parole from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School, gave district police a hectic chase before he was finally captured and returned to Bowmanville. During his escapade the lad stole a .22 calibre rifle and an automobile at Madoc and led Provincial Police a thrilling 60-mile-an-hour chase over back country roads before he was captured and lodged in the Belleville police station, where he continued his antics of attempting escape.

Last Friday the lad was placed on parole at the farm of Clarence Kilpatrick, Madoc Township. On Saturday he was apprehended by Chief Smith of Madoc, walking along a side street in possession of a .22 calibre rifle. Chief Smith confiscated the gun and ordered the lad to return to Mr. Kilpatrick's farm.

Later Russell Dafoe, Actinolite, reported his motor car stolen at Madoc. About the same time Provincial Constable Patterson of tender-aged lad was driving a motor car at an excessive rate of speed north of the village. The officer and Mr. Dafoe gave chase and had to drive over 60 miles an hour in order to apprehend the youth, who was driving Mr. Dafoe's car in a dangerous and reckless manner. Constable Patterson then lodged the mischievous youth in the Belleville Police Station, where he immediately endeavored to escape by tearing the moulding off the wainscoating of the cell block and attempted to pry open a window. City and Provincial Police heaved a deep sigh of relief when officials of the Boys' Training School removed him from local surroundings. As the lad had broken parole and returned to Bowmanville charges were not necessary, except for record.

Cecil Lent Honored By Lodge Members

Mr. Cecil Lent, former financial secretary of Local Lodge 126 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, was honored by the organization over the week-end when he was presented with a handsome pen and pencil set prior to his departure for Toronto.

The presentation was made in the clubrooms of the lodge and was made by Past President A. G. Meagher. Brief addresses of eulogy and good wishes were made by Alderman Harold Armstrong and President Gordon Shaw. Mr. Lent expressed his appreciation of the fine gift and the thoughtful gesture of his lodge brothers.

The recipient is a member of the Accounting staff of the Belleville Division of the C.N.R. and with six other members of that staff, is being transferred to Toronto this week, where centralization of the accounting staffs of the company is taking place.

Other accounting staff members who will leave for Toronto this week are:— Messrs. Philip Huddleston, Robert Hamilton, Sidney Woodward, Percy Ranson and Newton Wright.

POLICE BLOTTER

Boys pilfering pears from the orchard of Wm. Springer, Dundas St., were brought before Chief R. W. Probert today and given a stern warning regarding the destroying of private property and the theft of fruit.

"The police have received several complaints regarding mischievous lads destroying gardens and orchards while stealing fruit. Apparently what irritates the property owners is the fact the gardens and orchard trees are being damaged by these youthful miscreants. Future cases will have to be more seriously dealt with," warned Chief Probert today.

Hub Cap Stolen

Arthur Sharpe, Trenton, reported the theft of a hub cap from his motor car parked in the downtown area.

CHASER QUESTIONED

Peterboro, Ont., Oct. 13 (CP) — A factory worker here will not chase any more fire engines. He followed the reels to a false alarm and police questioned him for some time in the belief he had put in the fake call.

Sergt. Jack Haig Returns To Civilian Life

A veteran of the present war with two years and ten months service to his credit, Sergeant Jack Haig, of the 1st Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, has been discharged from the army as medically unfit. Sergt. Haig received his discharge papers at Military Doistrit No. 5 headquarters in Quebec City.

The former non-commissioned officer enlisted in Picton with the counties unit in fall of 1939 and proceeded overseas when that battalion sailed with the First Canadian Division in December. He served in England for two years and four months.

He went to France with the Canadian contingent in June, 1940 and saw some brief action prior to the Dunkirk show. Six months ago he returned to Canada in an instructional capacity, having previously earned his sergeant's stripes through military efficiency and a marked aptitude for army work.

Previous to his discharge Sergt. Haig underwent hospitalization in Canada. He is a brother of Squadron leader A. MacLean Haig, adjutant of the Trenton Air Station, Royal Canadian Air Force.

Aged Northbrook Man Seriously Injured When Hit by Car

John Woods, 74-year-old resident of Northbrook, suffered severe injuries snortly after nine o'clock Monday night when he was struck by a car said to be driven by E. W. Jones, Denbigh lumberman, while walking along the highway near his home.

The elderly man suffered fractured ribs, concussion and lacerations of the head. He was given first aid by a highway patrolman W. O. Both until medical treatment was given by Dr. M. G. Dales of Tweed. Woods was taken to his home where he is said to be resting in a fair condition.

The accident occurred, it is alleged, after darkness had fallen and according to information from the scene, the injured man is said to be hard of hearing. Investigation is pending.

Sunday Concert Much Enjoyed

Proving again that Belleville residents enjoy a Sunday evening concert, the McCarthy Theatre was literally a "packed house" Sunday night when the Trenton R.C.A.F. Band under Bandmaster WO. 2 E. Hancock, presented the first of this type of concert to be heard locally this season.

The concert was held under the auspices of the Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 133, with Squadron Leader A. MacLean Haig. Adjt. Trenton Air Station, as master of ceremonies. A silver collection taken at the door amounted to $101.30 cents.

The program, staged by the Trenton Air Station Band, was varied to claim the appreciation of the audience and lived up to previous presentations by this top flight Air Force Band. Appropriately the program commenced with a march, "Pilots of the R.C.A.F.," composed by Bandmaster Hancock, this being followed by a series of overtures, solos, comedy numbers and other selections.

Soloists taking part in the program were W. Rose of Frankford; Miss Ethel Smith, Belleville; AW2 Edie Motley and Cpl. Bud Saunders. LAC. W. Mather favored with a cornet solo, while AW2 Nora Stockton did an acrobatic dance number and Corporal F. Dowie a comedy skit. The closing hymn by the band was a special arrangement of "Abide with Me," by Bandmaster Hancock.

Convener of Rebekah Lodge, Mrs. L. W. Pollit expressed thanks to the citizens of Belleville for attending the concert and also thanked Mr. Vincent Freeman for the use of the theatre and Mr. J. Imlah for the use of chairs. Following the program those taking part were served lunch at the Oddfellows Hall with Mrs. Alf. Cooper responding to a vote of thanks by the airmen. Members of Belleville Lodge No. 81 acted as ushers at the theatre.

FIGHTERS OF TWO WARS COMPARE NOTES

In the course of a tour of inspection of Royal Canadian Air Force units overseas, Air Marshal W. A. "Billy" Bishop, V.C., victor over 72 Huns in the last war, dropped into the pilots' room of a Canadian fighter squadron to meet a man whose victories are still very fresh in his mind. The smiling lad in front of the Air Marshal is Pilot Officer G. B. "Scotty" Murray of Halifax, N.S., who, about a week before, had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his work during the Dieppe raid.

BRITONS ROBUST WITH 36 MONTHS "IN FRONT LINE"

No Evidence of Excessive Mental or Physical Fatigue Among John Bull's Civilians as a Whole, Say Experts

(By FOSTER BARCLAY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 10. (CP)— There's nothing wrong with the health or physique of Britain's toiling inhabitants battling all-out to stock this empire arsenal and shouldering magnificently the strains of war.

That's the consensus of Ministry of Health officials and a host of observers who travelled throughout the country keeping a watchful eye on men, women and children at work and at home. Long working hours, curtailed rations and mental and physical hazards engendered by war haven't seriously affected the nation's robust makeup.

After three years of hard labor and heavy bombing a shadow of fatigue darkens the normally rubicund features of the people. This has been noticed by visitors from Canada and the United States., but has not worried health officials whose job is to nip any signs of a breakdown in health.

"No evidence of excessive fatigue, either mental or physical, has been notced among people generally beyond the fatigue which must be prevalent in all countries as a result of emotional strain of war", said a Ministry of Health spokesman.

"It is a fact that most people are working harder than they did in peace-time and a certain number are benefiting from this as they have less time to consider themselves for real or imaginary ailments. Less unemployment, security of occupation and a carefully balanced diet through rationing has helped maintain the nation's health".

Cause For Gratitude

Ernest Brown, Minister of Health, sketching the people's welfare, told the House of Commons that the general position gave cause for "sober gratitude" but added there were certain points, however, which needed careful attention.

He didn't specify diseases needing attention, but it was believed he was referring to an increase in tuberculosis and cerebro-spinal meningitis diseases which present special problems during the war.

Available statistics show that a total of 1,500 cases of tuberculosis in 1939 rose to nearly 13,000 in 1940 and dropped to 11,000 in 1941. In the first six months of the current year there were 4,000 cases compared with 8,000 and 7,000 in the corresponding periods of 1940 and 1941, respectively.

A similar situation exists with regard to the battle against venereal diseases, said the Ministry of Health, but except for cerebro-spinal meningitis figures for other infectious diseases covering the first seven months of 1942 show a considerable decrease over the corresponding period of 1939. There were no cases of typhoid or paratyphoid during 1941 and so far this year cases have been lower than in 1939.

There were 4,766 cases of cerebro-spinal meningitis during the first seven months this year, compared with 1,034 for the same period in 1939. This total, however, is lower than the comparative periods in 1940 and 1941 when there were 10,034 and 8,645 cases respectively.

Death Rate

Sir Jameson Wilson, Chief Medical Officer to the Ministry of Health, giving re-assuring figures about the incidence of disease, said that provisional figures showed that the death rate for the June quarter this year would be the lowest for any June quarter except June 1927, 1930 and 1933 and that the mortality rate would be the lowest for any year except 1940.

Regarding a threatened outbreak of smallpox earlier this year he said Britain has been "very fortunate" in that there were only 41 cases and eight deaths. He added that the smallpox was a virulent eastern type and complimented officials on the way in which the outbreak was handled.

Meanwhile, Prof. V. P. Sydenstricker of Georgia University, conducting an investigation into the nutrition situation at the request of the Ministry, has concluded that the people are not suffering seriously from malnutrition and said he was impressed by the "general appearance of well-being and good spirits".

"I see no reason for trouble developing if the foods available are fully utilized", he continued. "The combination of oatmeal and milk is almost perfect and even though the importation of foods should fall off considerably, I think there is enough to get by on without any threat to health".

Cuff Notes:

In addition to the play "Our Town" which you can expect somewhere around November 13, the school is preparing a play for the new Victory-Loan program. So you see, from 50 to 100 students will have trod the boards this term-one-eighth of the school! And that isn't counting the Glee Club.

Only the girls gym will be used for dances this year. Nobody minds that, but (stage whisper) would they mind waxing the floor?....The last Assembly period seemed to stress the need for prompters for those stage-audience announcements..And last year's Cuff-note-editor is happily engaged with preparations for her wedding sometime next month. What do you mean, I sound hopeful?

Tea Dance, Thursday, October 8.

The advertisement wasn't wrong. There were soft lights, soft drinks and soft music per usual. There doesn't seem to be much use in having a dim-out at every dance, unless it's to hide the shy or frustrated crowd that borders the floor. Actually, this year seems to be a little better than usual, with the floor nicely jammed from wall to wall, to the delight of the Library Club.

Besides the usual waltzing and jitterbugging, a square-dance was attempted (no, not perpetrated) but everything got so mixed up. Perhaps the continual whirling "first to the left, and then to the right" got them dizzy.

Oh, well! A good time was had by all.

Assembly; Wednesday, October 7.

With the sun peeping in at the windows and the stirring strains of "Our Director" in our ears, we settled down for a period of relaxation and enjoyment. Mr. Maybee and the band having been suitably thanked, Mr. Bews led us in our devotional exercises, followed by the hymn, "O God of Love."

Mr. Turner requested that all music sheets be handed to the respective form masters at the close of Assembly periods. You know why!

We were especially interested in Mr. Hill's report on the sale of war stamps certificates. An essay contest appears to be in the offing, and—there is a prize for each and every grade. The prize? Six war stamps (value $1.50) no less; so dust off your adjectives and start producing masterpieces. Let's really make it hard for the judges? Our weekly sales of stamps and certificates amounted to $462.50. Let's boost that total 'way up!

The band favoured us with the rhythmic and charming "Missouri Waltz" which soothed our shattered nerves.

Mr. Turner then proceeded to make the week's announcements. Here is a brief summary of them: If you are in doubt as to how your commutation fee is spent, we refer you to the office, where the matter can be fully explained. Carving (artistic or otherwise) on school desks, etc., is not allowed. Students are allowed to go to their lockers after P. T. classes, but not before. A spare room list is being posted. Wanted: 26 recruits ages 15-17 for the Air Cadets. The meetings are held here Monday and Thursay. Red Cross work will begin soon. Join the group, now!

It seems there were four naughty boys who—oh, you know about it? Tsk, tsk.

Jack Carefoot (with hearty, if ill timed, assistance from the back rows) announced a Tea Dance to be sponsored by the Library Club on Thursday.

Our guest of the morning, Mr. Roger Donlon, was introduced by Mr. Turner. Mr. Donlon spoke to us about the campaign being carried on by the Committee Concert Association. Students are admitted to membership for $1.50. Adults (I mean, of course, adults who don't attend school!) must pay $5.00. The concerts (There will be at least three) promise to be excellent. The campaign ends Saturday. Join now.

We rose finally to sing our National Anthem and then back to work.

Short Sport Shots:

Following a meeting Wednesday evening of the Executive of the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. Mr. Mott informed your reporter that there will definitely be both a Senior and Junior six-man rugby league operated in the city this year. B.C.I. and Albert College have entered teams in both sections, while St. Mikes will put a third Junior team into the competition. Paul Goyette, sports director at Albert this year, has been appointed to the post of Rugby Convener.

Mr. Mott, who is coaching the B.C.I. entries, has had the hopefuls out for practice the past few nights now and is fast rounding them into winning form. From last years teams we noticed a few holdovers in the persons of Johnny Locke, "Cue" Bishop, Don Clarke, Bill McIntyre, Ralph Bateman, Norman Milk and also Tommy Donnan who played for Albert College last year but who is now attending our school.

The league will operate on a home and home basis with the first game being St. Mikes vs. B.C.I. on the Collegiate campus next Wednesday, October 14. It is hoped that the students will keep this date open and be on hand after school to give our Juniors a little moral support.

Due —to late start of the school year, there is insufficient time to complete the customary Interform Rugby leagues this year. So much for rugby.

Other announcements following the meeting were to the effect that Mr. Partridge will be the local basketball convener and Mr. Mott, the hockey convener.

In case you've been wondering what's been going on in the gym the past few nights after four, I shall be glad to inform you. It's just been some of our would-be basketballers getting accustomed to the ball again in a friendly (?) scrimmage game. As I recall last year's lamentable season our unbeatable (again ????) juniors lost the deciding championship game on our own floor to Albert College. This is, of course, mere water under the bridge, but the point I am getting at is that those same juniors swore that next year would be different; next year they'd start practice as soon as school opened. But in a few months good resolutions wear away and during these get-togethers the "stars" of last year's team have been very conspicuous by their absence. Ho-hum!

Sixty-Four Dollar Question:

What has become of the Boys' Athletic Society?

Portable clamps to be attached to walls or doors to hold footwear of all kinds firmly for polishing have been invented by a Chicago man.

In order of value, copper, gold and tin lead in exports from the Belgian Congo, all of the refined tin going to the United States.

You've got a job, but..

YOU'VE GOT A JOB; SO HAS EVERYBODY ELSE. But what about after the war? You and everybody else will want a good job then.

Well, there is one way that you and everybody else can help to insure a good job after the war. That is for you and everybody else to save as much as you can out of your present earnings and buy Victory Bonds. Then you will have money to spend after the war for things that you can't buy now, or that you shouldn't be buying because they are not absolutely necessary. We refer to all luxury goods, and a host of other things that cannot honestly be called necessities in time of war.

Many firms that manufactured these goods in peacetime are now making munitions or other war supplies. After the war, the quicker they can switch back to making their peacetime goods, the sooner they will be able to carry on with peacetime employment.

So, you see that, quite apart from the patriotic appeal to save and Buy Victory Bonds, there are sound business reasons for doing so.

• • • •

Authorize your employer to set aside a definite sum from each pay envelope to buy Victory Bonds. DO IT TODAY. The repayment of every dollar you invest in Victory Bonds, plus a fair rate of interest, is guaranteed by Canada.

Noisy Wedding Parades

There is one thing that we could do without very nicely in the city, and that is the practice of wedding parties driving up and down our main thoroughfare to the accompaniment of blowing horns and too fast a speed. Goodness knows we do not wish to interfere with the merry-making of any wedding party, but when they inflict a lot of unnecessary noise on the public, along with their sometimes reckless driving, then we believe they should be classed as nuisances. We have heard numerous complaints about this matter and know that a lot of people would like to see some action taken. We think that most bridal couples would approve the banning of these performances for when they are held at the mercy of some of their more boisterous friends there is nothing much they can do about it except to submit with the best grace they can. If there was a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Brides and Bridegrooms we feel that one of their most important functions would be to prohibit these parades which cause embarrassment and annoyance.

Conserving Manpower

Dispatches from Ottawa on Saturday carried the story that nearly two hundred orders covering the conservation of supplies and simplification of business activities have been approved by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The elimination of "frills" is being done with an eye to saving manpower and to conserve supplies in civilian industry. According to the latest estimate from reliable quarters 915,000 people are engaged at work in Canadian war industries, while 2,145,000 are at work in civilian industry.

A recent statement by Donald Gordon, chairman of the W.P.T.B., intimated that consumer choice can no longer be permitted to dictate the production of most supplies. Of course, a certain portion of civilian industry will always be needed to produce essential goods but beyond that it is not going to be permitted to continue at the expense of war industry.

At the present time there is a shortage of manpower in certain war industries that has curtailed production to some extent. To meet this shortage, and to provide skilled labor for war plants recently completed and under construction, there must be a change-over from industries working on consumer goods. Production of the same line of goods in several factories can be concentrated in a few and the rest turned over to war work.

This war is a war of production as well as war on land, in the air, and on the sea, and we must not fail for if production lags or fails then the active services cannot do their part, and the lives of our boys are sacrificed because the flow of supplies is too small and too late. The Axis countries are striving to the utmost and forcing the conquered nations, as well, to contribute some portion of war needs. They do not pamper their civilian populations and they have their own brutal ways of forcing production against which there is no appeal.

We can expect more rationing of goods and foods with consequent hardship on merchants of all classes. In a change-over from civilian goods manufacture to war it is not improbable that there will be some transfer of labor from one part of the country to another. Employment of more women in industry and elimination of waste labor in war plants are factors that should not be neglected to produce the extra manpower so urgently needed.

Undoubtedly there will be hardship suffered by many should some of these efforts to get manpower be put into effect. However, it is to the national interest that the government make the best use of its resources for now that we are in the war nothing must interfere with following it out to its logical conclusion. We think that a statement by the chairman of the W.P.T.B. sums it up very well when he said, "Only superior organization, superior stamina, superior morale will produce the irresistible striking force necessary to crush the hideous power for evil which still threatens to destroy every value dear to freedom loving people. We can win this struggle, but when we do so it will be because our efforts have been such as to deserve it."

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

OFF IN THE STILLY NIGHT

To preserve our power for the war
What if we bump 'gainst a halfshut door,
Or stub our toes on a dev'lish crack
As we grope about in the stygian black;
For we're only doing our little bit
As down in a gloomy house we sit.
One light in one room, I believe is in order
With a candle, perhaps, in the hall for the boarder,
The rest of the house as black as sin;
Beware all sundry who venture within;
For I'm telling you, and this is no lark,
That furniture moves when left in the dark,
So we'll save our watts and lose our skins
By scraping our elbows and barking our shins.
Nevertheless we'll keep our lights
Off in the stilly nights.

"LOST FOR KEEPS—THIRTY BAGS OF MAIL"

Matches enclosed in gifts to soldiers could destroy an entire ship, the Quartermaster-General of Canada has warned.

Thirty bags of mail for Canadian soldiers overseas were destroyed by a fire which broke out in a railway van in England.

The fire was caused by "safety" matches which had been included in a parce to a sodier.

In spite of the fact that it is against postal regulations to send matches in the mail, the cause of the fire has geen definitely traced. All ranks of the Canadian Army have been requested to instruct their friends not to include matches, lighter fluids or other highly inflammable material in mail to them. The fire which destroyed the thirty mail bags deprived hundreds of men overseas of letters, newspapers and articles of comfort from home.

Several fires have broken out in the past and destroyed mail for the Canadian Army. Almost all of these have been definitely traced to matches.

So far fortune has been on the side of the convoys; the fires have occurred on land. Authorities point out, however, that the fires might have easily broken out aboard ship, causing loss of life and much needed equipment.

Don't forget, officials declare, carelessness of this type is tantamount to sabotage. Don't help the enemy.

NO WONDER THEY LOVE HER

Two W.A.A.F.'s leaving their station "somewhere in the West Country" a few days ago, says the Daily Mail, thumbed a passing car in the hope of getting a lift on the first stage of their "hitch-hike" journey to London.

It was a big, dark red saloon, and as it pulled in towards the side of the road one of the girls realized that it looked like a Royal car.

Thinking perhaps they had held up the King on an important journey, the W.A.A.F.'s approached the car apprehensively.

A tall major got out, asked them where they were bound, and invited them into the car. There a stately, grey-haired lady offered them seats on either side of her, and apologised that she could give them a lift only as far as Reading.

Yes, it was Queen Mary, whom it is said, has made a practice of giving lifts to all Service men and women for the past two years, and when the two W.A.A.F.'s reached home they were full of delight at the charming way Queen Mary had talked about Service life and conditions.

Before they got out of the car Queen Mary shook hands with both girls and gave each a little medallion, with her cipher, "M.R.," as a souvenir of the drive.

What neither of the girls realized was that the Queen was driving on one of the saddest missions of her life—to the funeral of her youngest son, the Duke of Kent.

HE KNEW

Homeseeker (to native) — "Is this a healthful town?"

Native — "Yes, certainly. When I came here I hadn't the strength to utter a word; I had scarcely a hair on my head; I couldn't walk across the room, and I had to be lifted from my bed."

Homeseeker —"You give me hope! How long have you lived here?"

Native — "I was born here."

WE'RE AT WAR

Bear the hardships with a grin!
We're at war!
Trouser seat a trifle thin?
We're at war!
Less of sugar in the tea?
Longer stay-at-homes are we?
Then contented let us be,
We're at war!

Keep the twinkle in the eye!
We're at war!
What if taxes seem too high?
We're at war!
Must the mother darn the hose?
That's one flaw which never shows.
Also everybody knows
We're at war!

Let us keep the grumbling down.
We're at war!
It takes little pluck to frown.
We're at war!
Against those who do and dare
And the bitter fighting bear,
Very little seems our share,
We're at war!

Now's the time for being brave!
We're at war!
If we're forced to scrimp and save,
We're at war!
No use grumbling; fretting's vain.
Back once more to living plain
Let's be patient, yes, and sane,
We're at war!

ON THE RECORD
By DOROTHY THOMPSON

"Patriotism is not Enough!"

No: Patriotism is nothing. Or the "last refuge of a scoundrel."

In Brussels she thought of England. Of the beeches in Berkshire, with their violet stems; of the grace and austerity of Salisbury — the green Cathedral close, and the toppling rocks of pagan Stone Henge near; the rosy bricks and thatched eyebrows of Kentish villages; the sheep on the rolling downs. King Alfred in tatters playing a ballad to his barbarous Viking conquerors, singing:

"When God put man in a garden,
He girt him with a sword,
And sent him forth a free knight,
Who might betray his Lord."

The stony visages of Durham towns, and the lean faces of the men of the north — men of the mines and the sea.

The bustle and the quiet of London. The high slow taxicabs, the garish signs, the cheap tea shops and the secret places — the Temple the green squares the unknown gardens.

The King James Version of the Bible. The village pubs. And "sweetest Shakespeare, Fancy's child."

"England, my England."

Not: Patriotism is nothing!

Patriotism is scones and tea, seed cake, the coal smoke, great cumulous clouds, and an aquamarine sky; honey and little strawberries, roast beef and one's mother. One's mother and father and all that is sweetest and nearest.

When had she come here to Brussels, to the Berkendael Medical Institute? Eight years ago. That was in time of peace. Brussels was a nice town, too. Foreign ways, but still the people were nice. Most of those she saw were sick. People who were afraid. "You are all right. Don't worry."

Some of them liked her a lot. Wanted her to stay with them. One mustn't get ideas, though, when one is a middle-aged English spinster. Put one's salary in the bank, and at sixty go home — home to England, to a pension in Bournemouth, to scones and tea and the speech one loved.

But the war came.

And now Berkendael was a Red Cross hospital. And the patients were mostly young. They looked up at her with scared eyes. "A man can live without a leg, you know."

"I love my country because I love the idea of country.

Not an Englishman said that, but an Italian—Mazzini. There were some Italian boys in the hospital, too. They did not think of tea and scones, but of wine and grapes and cheese and pasta, of great piazzas paved with stone; of dark trees against a cobalt sky; of wheat planted under vines stretched over willows; of fishing boats with colored sails.

German boys were there, too. Delirious they jabbered of white steamboats on a green-gray stream; of little houses with stones on the roofs and zig-zag fences leaning to the wind; of Adam and Eve and the Apple tree painted over and around the tavern door; of carousings in vineyards and loud mouthed songs.

And the French pollus. Smiling crooked smiles; Nurse: Have you ever seen Nancy? Where the grilled iron gates are scrolled in gold and open on the formal row of chestnuts with the yellow chateau at the end? At the end of the gray street, in Rouen, there is the cathedral, airy as lace, transcending stone. It always rains in Brussels—but do you know the sky in the midi?

All, all were patriots. All, all wanted to go home.

The air smelled of gangrene. They cried, too. The French pollu from between tight lids, the English boy, turned haughtily on his side, the German, as shameless in his grief as in his pride.

She helped some home. Her own. Her compatriots and their allies.

Patriotism is very much. Patriatism is that for which one fights, and dies — ones sister, and mother, and father, and wife, the way the trees grow and the streets run, and the skies darken or shine.

"Lives there a man with soul so dead...?"

The Germans were thorough, methodical and logical. And so they took her out at dawn:

Twenty-seven years ago today: October 13, 1915.

It was not what one would have expected twenty years back when one had entered the London Hospital as a probationer. It was really an odd fate to overtake an English spinster. Not a glamour girl. Not a Mati Hari. Brown hair graying around the face, and gray eyes like the channel waters. Fifty years old. A middle-aged nurse, and here she was, with a wall behind her, and quite a battery of soldiers in front of her.

She would never eat the scones and the strawberries and the seed cake in some rosy garden for two and six, when she could spend the little bank roll accumulated by twenty years of bandaging and bedpans.

It was not at all nice. It was not what one would have hoped for.

She was a patriot. Patriotism — oh, yes. She understood patriotism.

But she had something to say. Suddenly she had something very urgent to say. Just one moment, before the rifles went to the shoulders. It wouldn't hurt. Click ... flash ... and that's all. Quick and clean —and no gangrene.

Not in a loud voice. The war was making a terrible noise anyhow.

What she had to say was about patriotism. After all, it was very simple — all this about patriotism.

"Patriotism is not enough!"

I am dying for patriotism. They are going to shoot me for patriotism. Patriotism is my country and for my country I die. But:

"Patriotism is not enough!"

Not—enough!

Much. Oh, so much. So much that one dies in this ridiculous way, this not at all lady-like way; this exaggerated and unspinsterly and unrespectable way — rather like a criminal, if it comes down to it. Patriotism is so much.

"But Patriotism is not enough!

"We must have love for all mankind."

Twenty-seven years ago today, Edith Cavell, and now we fight another war.

This time, for you.

PORTRAIT OF PRESIDENT

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is six feet, two inches tall.

Mrs. Roosevelt lacks only an inch of being six feet tall, and all four of their sons, now in the armed services, are more than six feet in height.

The President normally weighs 187 pounds and wears a 16½ shirt and a 7⅛ hat.

He was born at 8:45 o'clock in the morning, January 30, 1882.

He speaks over the radio at the rate of about 165 words a minute.

The President is fond of swimming and generally swims in the White House pool three times a week.

He has not been in an airplane since he made his spectacular flight from Albany to appear before the Democratic convention at Chicago in 1932.

His hobbies are collecting stamps and items and information pertaining to naval affairs and the sea.

In his younger days he was fond of horseback riding and shooting.

He speaks French fluently and reads Spanish and German.

His life is insured for $560,000 with the Warm Springs Foundation the beneficiary.

It is estimated that, since his mother's death, his private estate is worth about a million dollars.

The first time he voted for a President he cast his ballot for a Republican—his kinsman Theodore Roosevelt; since then he has consistently voted the Democratic ticket.

When he has time, which he seldom has any more, he likes to work crossword puzzles.

He is also fond of deep-sea fishing.

When at Warm Springs he drives his own car with a special attachment.

He was stricken with infantile paralysis in the late summer of 1921 while on a vacation trip near Campobello, New Brunswick, Canada, when he was 39 years old. Yet he had sufficiently recovered by 1924 to attend the Democratic national convention in New York and place the name of Governor Smith in nomination.

The President, like Lincoln, likes to go to the theatre, but seldom gets an opportunity these days.

To Fill Out Hollow Cheeks

Paulette Goddard advocated getting plenty of sleep for health and beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

THE GIRL with hollow cheeks feels out of the picture now when Uncle Sam says we must be strong. Need to be, with added activities, working day and night, some of us. Well! our thin-faced duckies will have to get busy. The first requirement is to sit down to the groaning board and eat, not just nibble.

If they stick up their supercilious noses at food that forms adipose tissue what can they expect? Let them increase the intake of butter, cream and cereals. The cheeks will not only plumpen but they'll grow rosy blooms upon them.

Thinnies need plenty of sleep. Eight hours are required for hard working souls, and for those who don't work at all. Nature must make repairs.

Local treatment consists of a rousing face washing at bed time, one brisk enough to make the flesh glow, a rinsing with warm water, a gentle drying, and a five-minute massage treatment.

Spread on a heavy emollient. Place fingers and thumbs outspread over the cheeks, lift up the trumpeter's muscles with a clawing movement. Pull out the flesh as far as ever you can, let it snap back. While the cream remains on skip an ice cube over the skin.

Say "meow" in imitation of the cat. There's a pucker of the lips, a spreading of the lips, an opening of the mouth, a pucker at the finish. This performance pulls hard on the muscles of the cheeks.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mutual Understanding Between Americans and the English Wards Off Propaganda Lies

Courtesy, construction, good behaviour, good manners, and a sensible understanding of our friends have been drafted into the service of America and Britain as a powerful weapon to defeat Hitler's propaganda.

And "horse sense advice" on the tremendous importance of this powerful weapon is part of the equipment of all our service men going to Britain and of all R.A.F. cadets coming to the United States.

The U. S. War Department's pamphlet, given to every one of American service men going to Britain is called "A Short Guide to Great Britain." The British Air Ministry's pamphlet given to every R.A.F. cadet coming to the United States, is called "Notes for Your Guidance."

Rather innocent-looking titles, these, but the real theme of the booklets is a strong and sensible appeal for a courteous consideration and understanding between these two great allies.

Hitler's propaganda chiefs are doing everything in their power to separate Britain and America by spreading distrust between them. This poisonous propaganda will not succeed if the men in the services of both countries (and civilians) succeed in understanding one another. The understanding that will meet and defeat this propaganda must be based on a mutual courteous approach and a proper and decent mutual consideration.

Service men and civilians in both countries will play right into Hitler's hand by falling for his insistent attempt to make us misunderstand each other by playing up minor differences between us as if they were vastly important.

Says the War Department's pamphlet:

"You defeat enemy propaganda not by denying that these minor differences exist, but by admitting them openly and then trying to understand them."

And: "Use common sense on all occasions. By your conduct you have great power to bring about a better understanding between the two countries now and after the war is over."

Says the British pamphlet:

"You are going to the United States to learn...to learn to understand and to like Americans. This is almost as important as your technical training, because during this war, and probably after, our fate is closely bound up with that of the United States." Again the sensible and courteous approach.

In our everyday lives, we can't get on with people...our family our friends, our coworkers, anyone who is in "ally" in our lives...unless we are courteous to them, decent, friendly.

Distrust thrives on misunderstanding discourtesy, unfriendliness. So the War Department's pamphlet takes true aim against this distrust-propaganda:

"The British will welcome you as friends and allies. The best way to get on in Britain is very much the same as the best way to get on in America. The same sort of courtesy and decency and friendliness that go big in America will go big in Britain."

The British pamphlet: "You have only to respond to the generous and kindly interest of your American hosts."

The greatest enemy of friendship and understanding is destructive criticism, and both pamphlets plead earnestly against this saboteur. Our men must try to understand, not criticise, the British reserve:

"On a small crowded island where forty-five million people live each man learns to guard his privacy carefully...and is equally careful not to invade another man's privacy." And to understand, not criticise, the appearance of Britain:

"Britain may look a little shopworn and grimy to you. The British people are anxious to have you know that you are not seeing their country at its best. There's been a war on since 1939."

And not to criticise British speech or accents:

"You sound as funny to them but they will be too polite to show it."

And not to criticise the King:

"The British feel about that the way you would feel if anyone spoke against our country or our flag."

On British politeness:

"Don't be mislead by the British tendency to be softspoken and polite. If they need to be, they can be plenty tough."

The British pamphlet urges:

"The first essential of learing is an open mind. Sensitize your minds, open them..expose them to impressions. Listen more than you talk. Don't criticise, explicitly or implicitly, in your conservations."

And every one of us, service men and civilians, should memorize the last two lines of our War Departments pamphlet. They are the weapon to use to defeat Hitler's propaganda for creating distrust between Britain and the United States:

"It is always impolite to criticise your hosts; it is militarily stupid to criticise your allies."

Woman General at War Plant

FIERY FURNACES, streams of white-hot metal and the roaring activity of one of Canada's largest steel foundries intrigued Major-General Jean Knox, director and controller-general of the Auxiliary Territorial Services when she visited the great Ford of Canada war plant at Windsor. Keen to know the secret of Ford production methods, General Knox listens intently, above, as Peter Blackwood, foundry superintendent, explains how fighting machines are built.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Formal Ceremenies New Replace Last Year's Hurried Marriages

The hurried marriages of a year ago have slowed down in tempo. Girls and their soldier fiances realize that unless a miracle happens we're likely to be in this war for a long time.

Therefore, they reason, why get married as if one were snatching a sandwich at a quick-lunch counter? Why not respond to the beautiful words of the marriage ceremony with the dignity they imply?

The way today's correspondent feels about her wedding is, I think, typical. She wants to have a ceremony she and her soldier fiance can always remember with pride. She writes:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My mother is disgusted with me because I'm going to pack my wedding outfit in a suitcase—lovely white crepe dress, finger-length veil, white satin slippers—and travel halfway across the continent to marry the finest boy in the Army.

"Mother thinks George should get a furlough and come to our home to be married. She doesn't realize that when a man's in the Army, a furlough for wedding bells cannot be depended on. She argues: 'If you are going to do this mad thing — travel halfway across the country to be married — wait a couple of months until I can afford to go with you, and cut out all that foolishness about being married in white bridal finery.'

But that 'foolishness' is just what I wouldn't cut out for anything. George may be ordered overseas, and thinking of all the things likely to happen to a soldier. I believe it will help a lot if he remembers what a nice wedding we had.

"We're more than fortunate in knowing one of the officers stationed at the same post as George, and Captain B— is going to get his cousin's wife, who lives in a nearby town, to be on hand. After the ceremony in church, she is going to give us a reception at her home, with a real wedding cake.

"Mother does not approve of any of the arrangements, says Captain B's cousin by marriage is a stranger to us. So, in spite of marrying George, with whom I've been in love for two years, and a chance of a couple of days honeymoon, I've shed some tears over mother's grouches. Don't you think, considering the circumstances, I'm doing the right thing??

"Bride-to-be"

I do think you're doing the right thing. Suppose you did wait until the family finances warranted your mother's going along as chaperon. By that time your fiance might be on his way overseas, and there wouldn't be any wedding at all. Would you ever forgive yourself?

Praise Prime Minister's Promise to Curtail Consumption of Liquor

Tweed — Rev. W. T. Brown, Chancellor of Victoria University, w.. be the guest speaker at the Fiftieth Anniversary of Tweed United Church which will be held on November 8th. A special committee has been named to arrange an appropriate program to mark the occasion. This will of necessity be less elaborate than would have been the case in happier and less ominous times. The choir is preparing special music and plans are being made for a social evening —on Monday night.

The official Board of Tweed United Church has forwarded the following resolution to the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada:

"That the Official Board of Tweed United Church has learned with deep satisfaction of the promise of the Prime Minister that action would be taken looking to the curtailment of the enormous and wasteful consumption of liquor in Canada. We are confident that such action will have the support not only of this board, but also the membership of our church, and, we believe, of the majority of our citizens.

Tweed Public Library Board met in the library room on Tuesday night with T. E. Moffat in the chair. Members present were: A. W. McGuire, K. A. McNeil, Miss Jennie Wright, Miss Cogey Meiklejohn, S. H. Connor.

The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $204.38 with rent amounting to $96.00, and due in December outstanding. The government grant for 1941 was $71.95, and subscriptions and fines since the last meeting totalled $15.45. It was decided to select forty or fifty books from the library shelves to be rebound.

A committee composed of A. W. McGuire, KK. A. McNeil and S. H COonnor was named to interview Tweed council at its next meeting to ask for the usual grant

A motion was passed expressing the appreciation of the library board to Mr. and Mrs. M. Ardenne for their generous gift of a large number of splendid books to the library. Mrs. Ardenne has been a valued member of the library board for a number of years and has shown a deep interest in its activities. Recently Mr. Ardenne has been appointed to an important post in the Department of Forestry at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto and their departure from Tweed is a matter of deep regret.

The winners of the hog competition at Tweed Fair were J. Lajoie, W. J. Woods Kenneth Jeffrey R. C. Graham.

Mr. John Sager express messenger on the C.P.R. for many years who was recently retired on pension has been called back into service owing to the scarcity of help. His run will be from Havelock to Toronto, with headquarters in Peterboro.

New Councillor

Mr. Tracey Quinn has been chosen a member of Tweed council replacing Mr. Joseph Fobert who has moved to Hamilton. Mr. Quinn's father, the late Michael Quinn, and his grand uncle the late Mr. James Quinn were also members of Tweed council for many years.

The Tweed Business and Professional Women's Club sold eighty-three dollars worth of War Saving Stamps at Tweed Fair. Those who assisted in the sale of stamps were. Miss Marguerite Jeffrey, Miss H. Grindell, Miss C. McQuarrie, Miss M. Hammett, Miss Helen Orr, Miss Mary Donahue and Miss Audrey Dales.

A local Rationing Board will be set up in Tweed with Reeve C. H. Kerr as chairman and clerk G. D. C. Morton as secretary. Other members will be appointed at a later date.

Mr. W. S. Gordon spent several days in Ottawa and Montreal on business for Tweed Steel Works.

Tweed Defeated

Tweed High School rugby team was defeated on Thursday afternoon by Stirling squad 9-1. The visitors scored a touchdown early in the first quarter and an end run. They converted it and went into a 6-0 lead. The remainder of the game was very close, with neither side showing any marked superiority. G. Connor, Tweed half-back, kicked his team's only point at the end of the game.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Atton were guests at the Beatty-Toole wedding at Fergus on Saturday, and attended a class reunion at Victoria College on Monday.

Miss Gladys McGuire of Queen's University is spending Thanksgiving at her home.

Mr. Leo Flemming, Maribank, was the lucky winner of an upholstered chair presented by Mr. J. G. Frost to the person who guessed nearest to the actual paid attendance at Tweed Fair. Mr. Flemming's guess was 1780, which was the exact paid attendance. School children, members and complimentary tickets brought the total attendance to 2500.

Caroline Genereaux, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Genereaux, who won the sweepstakes prize for the best baby at Tweed Fair, has fourteen older brothers and sisters, being the fifteenth child born to Mr. and Mrs. Genereaux.

In Army Course

Doug Connor, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Connor has enrolled in the Canadian Army Course No. 1 at the University of Toronto. The course begins on October 10th and is open to Upper School students, ages 17-19, who have shown special aptitude in science and mathematics. The course is limited to 160 students who must enlist in His Majesty's forces. These students are subject to Canadian army regulations, receiving free tuition, board, books, etc., and privates' pay. Those who are successful in this course are granted their first year in engineering which will be credited to them when the war ends should they wish to complete the course in engineering at the University of Toronto.

Stirling

Stirling — The October meeting of St. Paul's W.A. took place on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 6th at the home of Mrs. J. L. Good with about forty members present. Mrs. R. B. Duffin presided over the entire meeting which opened with the theme song, prayer by the leader and the Lord's Prayer in unison. Mrs. Nora Wescott gave the secretary's report and read the communications and reported eight cards and one letter sent during the month. Mrs. O. F. Linn, on behalf of the visiting committee reported twelve calls made. Mrs. J. J. Wilson and an assistant of her own choosing were appointed Visiting Committee for October. A complete financial report was presented by Mrs. M. Hick, Treasurer. It was also decided that the association contribute $100 to the church as a thank-offering, this with the $75 already advanced, making a total of $175.

Splendid Program

The president also directed the fine program prepared by the Program Committee under the direction of Mrs. Oliver Stapley. Following the use of a hymn and prayer by the leader, Mrs. Morley Phillips read the Scripture lesson. A paper dealing well with these passages prepared by Mrs. Stapley was read by Mrs. Wescott. Mrs. H. West offered an instrumental solo, "Barcarole from the Tales of Haufman." "Appreciation of Poetry" was the title of a splendid paper by Mrs. T. Reynolds followed by the reading of "Life's Canvas" and "Autumn" (Edgar Guest) by Mrs. H. West. "The Story of the Origin of Thanksgiving" was presented by Mrs. J. L. Good in an interesting fashion. An original type of contest embracing all members was directed by Mrs. C. Tucker and was interesting and humorous.

The gratitude of the ladies for a most interesting afternoon was ably expressed by Mrs. Volney Richardson to Mrs. J. L. Good and Mrs. A. E. Good, hostesses; and to the following ladies and program committee, Mesdames Oliver Stapley, (convener), W. H. Patterson, Geo. Richardson, C. Tucker, T. Reynolds, H. West, H. Detlor, M. Phillips. Dainty luncheon and a pleasing social period was enjoyed at the close of the meeting which officially ended with the Benediction and National Anthem.

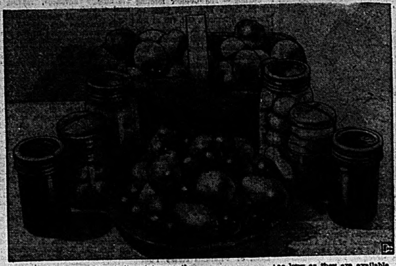
Late Fruits Bring Summer Touch To Meals



The last of the summer fruits will soon have disappeared from our markets and shops, and housewives who have well filled shelves of preserved peaches, pears, plums and other fruits will count themselves fortunate during the coming winter months.

If you want to be able to bring a taste of summer to your winter meals resist the temptation to open a jar of preserves as an easy solution to the dessert problem, and make the fullest use of fresh fruits as long as they are available. Not only will you be guarding your store of preserved fruits for winter days when fresh fruits are scarce, but the flavor of most preserved fruits develops, and is at its best several months after canning.

WEDDINGS

RODGERS—JOHNSON

Miss Phyllis E. E. Johnson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Johnson of Paynton, Sask., and LAC. Stewart Fred Rodgers of the R.C.A.F. youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Rodgers, of Belleville, Ontario, were united in marriage in Regina, on October 3, at four o'clock by Rev. H. Joyce of Christ Church.

The bride wore a rose two-piece redingote and matching hat with chapel veil, a corsage of pink Talisman roses and black suede accessories.

The bridesmaid, Miss Denise Perry, wore a two-piece beige and brown ensemble, a corsage of yellow Talisman roses with contrasting accessories. Cpl. Kenneth Winegarden, R.C.A.F., was groomsman.

A lovely dinner was held in the Gold Room of the Novia Cafe.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers will reside in Yorkton, where the groom is stationed.

The wedding took place on the bride's birthday, October 3.

BRAND—CHAPMAN

An interesting Autumn wedding was solemnized on Saturday at one o'clock, October 10, in Deer Park United Church, Toronto, when Aletha Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapman of Roslin, was united in marriage to Mr. William Brand son of Mr. and Mrs. James Brand of Windsor.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Stanley Russell. To the strains of the Wedding March, rendered by Mr. Bob Crosby, the pretty bride walked up the aisle with her father, and looked exceptionally charming attired in a floor length model of white taffeta, the bodice in long torso lines, sweetheart neck and bishop sleeves. The flowing skirt was of white novelty organza over white satin featuring a slight train. Her graduated silk embroidered finger-tip veil fell from a halo of orange blossoms. The bride carried a shower bouquet of Sweetheart roses, baby 'mums and larkspur and wore a large cameo brooch, an heirloom of the family.

Miss Velma Chapman, sister of the bride was maid of honor and wore a floor length dress of powder blue sheer, with matching gloves and feather headdress and carried a nosegay of baby 'mums and Butterfly roses.

Mrs. Perry Arnold, also sister of bride, as matron of honor, wore a floor length gown of cerise taffeta, gloves to match with feather headdress and carried a nosegay of baby 'mums and Butterfly roses.

Mr. Robert Brand assisted his brother as best man, while Mr. Perry Arnold acted as usher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Royal York where a buffet luncheon was served from a table which was centred with a pillared wedding cake and with bouquets of yellow and white mums.

Mrs. Chapman, mother of the bride received in rust crepe with navy accessories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother received in moss green with matching accessories and wore a corsage of Butterfly roses. The bride chose for travelling a stunning suit of cherry red velvet with Kelly green accessories and wore Stone Marten furs, the gift of the groom.

Twenty-five relatives and friends were present from Belleville, Barrie, Windsor and Detroit.

The bride and groom entrained early in the afternoon for a short honeymoon in Montreal and Quebec and upon their return the happy couple will reside in the Ambassador Apartments, Windsor.

THOMPSON—MORROW

Frankford, (Special.) — White chrysanthemums on the altar formed the setting for the pretty Autumn wedding in Trinity Anglican Church, Frankford, on Saturday, October the 10, at three o'clock, of Helen Maynard Morrow, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Morrow, Frankford, and Harold Sheldon Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, West Huntingdon. Rev. C. L. Harding, rector of Trinity Church, officiated at the ceremony. During the signing of the register Misses Muriel Thompson and Margaret Haggerty sang "I Love You Truly".

The bride given in marriage by her father looked charming in a floor length gown of white chiffon over taffeta with long full sleeves and fitted bodice. Her waist length veil was embroidered net and fitted her hair in halo style. Miss Marion Richardson, as bridesmaid, was gowned in a pink dress similar to the bride's with short pink veil. She carried a nosegay of pink flowers. Miss Mary Morrow was her sister's junior bridesmaid and wore blue chiffon with lace yoke and sweetheart neckline. Her blue veil was shoulder length and she carried a yellow nosegay. Mr. Harold Morrow, brother of the bride, supported the groom. The ushers were Mr. Don Walker and Mr. Kenneth Morrow.

After the ceremony a reception was held in Trinity Parish Hall, the bride's mother receiving the guests wearing a gown of black crepe with a corsage of red roses, assisted by the groom's mother, who was wearing a navy suit with black accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Following the reception, the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Western Ontario, the bride travelling in a navy tailored suit with navy and white accessories. On their return they will reside at West Huntingdon.

Guests were present for the ceremony from Barrie, Hamilton, Peterboro, and Campbellford..

STEENBURG—LAIN

Allan Mills, (Special.) A pretty Autumn wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lain on Saturday afternoon at two-thirty, when their eldest daughter, Doris Genevee, was united in marriage to Christy Harold Steenburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Steenburg of Belmont. Rev. J. R. Holden officiated.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length dress of Romance blue crepe romain, with corsage of Peerless red roses, delphinium and fern.

Miss Jean Lain was her sister's bridesmaid and she chose a dusty rose sheer with corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom was assisted by his brother-in-law, Mr. Roy Johnston of Peterboro.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served to the immediate relatives of bride and groom. Assisting with the serving were Miss Dorothy Redden, Mrs. Cyril McKeown, and Mrs. John Rowe.

Later the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Montreal and other eastern points and on their return they will reside in Belmont Township.

For travelling, the bride donned a beige polo coat, over a brown dress with matching accessories.

Uncontrolled Sinus Infection Can Bring Complications

Infections of the sinuses may cause many serious complications unless the infection is controlled. Sinus trouble usually develops from a nose cold. Also, the throat and the chest may be involved by spreading of the infection.

Dr. Karl Kornblum of Philadelphia, contends that a cold is not just a localized infection but an inflammation which involves the nose, the throat, the windpipe, and the small tubes in the lungs. When a cold persists, X-rays of the sinuses will often show that infection is present in them. This infection in the sinuses is the cause of the persistence of the cold.

Another condition is called chronic tracheobronchitis. According to Dr. Kornblum, this results from recurrent flare-ups of sinus infection in persons who are left with a chronic sinusitis from a common cold. This condition of inflammation of the windpipe and the bronchi, together with sinus infection, has been called bronchosinusitis. In this condition there is a chronic cough. This coughing sooner or later causes the tiny air sacs in the lungs to become stretched, producing the disorder known as emphysema. Thus the sinus infection may be the cause for emphysema.

Not only may the air sacs in the lungs become dilated but also the bronchi. Scar tissue may form around the bronchi and cause them to become less elastic. The bronchiectasis develops slowly and is usually worse in the back part of the lungs. In many cases of bronchiectasis it will be found that the sinuses are inflamed.

Bronchial asthma and hay fever are also closely connected with chronic infection of the nose and sinuses. In asthmatic persons suffering from allergy with chronic discharge from the nose, infection with germs takes place easily. Thus, the chronic sinus infection may not only help to cause asthma or hay fever but a sinus infection developing as a complication in hay fever and asthma may tend to make the allergy worse.

Persons who have lung disturbances should have a complete examination made, including X-ray of the sinuses. If the sinuses are found to be infected, treatment by a nose and throat specialist should be carried out to get rid of the infection as quickly as possible.

Fashion Flashes

THE FAVORITE RECIPE for frocks for the junior miss is still the very snug bodice and quite full skirt. This formula is faithfully followed in a frock of dark green and white checked woolen and rabbit hair with dark green velvet yoke and deeper border of velvet for the dirndl skirt.

A GOOD WAY to keep snug when the cold really gets going is by means of a wool blouse. Fifty per cent. wool jersey is used for a pretty blouse made with neckline that ties in a big bow. Nice in purple, electric blue and shocking pink.

JUST THE THING under either a tweed or a fur coat is the well-done casual wool frock in pastel colors. Light blue wool jersey is used for a nice little frock with collarless, high rounded neckline and bodice buttoned to the waist. Drawstring apron pockets on the skirt.

ONE PLACE where one can be snug and comfy even if the heating isn't quite up to par is at home with woolie pyjamas and a warm robe. Warm yet light and pretty is a robe of pale blue washable corduroy, with bindings of pink corduroy.

SEEMS TO BE TOPS, the high browned, wide brimmed swagger hat that is a balance between the casual and the more dressy hat. A smart model of this type, with adjustable brim, is fashioned in mustard gold felt with upshooting pheasant quills in natural colorings.

"Fits my wartime budget, too!"

A Critical POWER SHORTAGE THREATENS OUR WAR EFFORT

Save ELECTRICITY IN THE HOME

Our mounting production of weapons of war places an ever-increasing demand on Hydro for more and more electricity. Today there is not enough for every need. The drain on vital power is serious. Remember this . . . when you're using a toaster, grill, waffle-iron, coffee-maker or electric range . . . turn the switch 'OFF' promptly as soon as the job is done. Divert more and more power to our industries. Electricity is urgently needed to produce the vital weapons of war. SAVE IT.

HERE ARE SUGGESTIONS HOW YOU CAN DO YOUR PART

- Remember that stored heat in your electric range oven will continue the cooking process after power is turned 'OFF'. Plan to use this stored heat and save electricity.
- Turn 'ON' such appliances as coffee-makers, sandwich toasters, waffle-irons and grills only when you are ready to use them.
- Operate your toaster only as toast is required; do not leave 'ON' when not toasting.
- Save on lights, don't use two if one will do. Never leave lights 'ON' in empty rooms.
- Remember the turning 'ON' or leaving 'ON' of one unnecessary switch is a waste of power urgently needed in the present emergency.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

You have to perspire—you don't have to offend!

A LEVER PRODUCT

When girls break dates—seem to avoid your company — don't ignore the hint... "B.O." may be your trouble.

It's as simple as that! For everyone perspires — constantly. And so everyone risks offending. When perspiration stays on your skin it becomes stale, offensive. Without knowing it, you may have "B.O." Ordinary bathing can't keep you safe—you need Lifebuoy — the ONE soap especially made to PREVENT* "B.O."

No other popular soap contains the same special deodorizing ingredient—or gives you the same DAY-LONG protection.

You'll love the lasting, ALL-OVER FRESHNESS Lifebuoy gives. Use Lifebuoy always for your bath—and for your face and hands, too. It's 20% MILDER than many so-called beauty and baby soaps.

ALL-ARMY HOCKEY TEAM TO PLAY IN QUEBEC LOOP

Team Will be Known as Ottawa Commandos and Replace Senators

ALEX SMITH COACH

Ottawa, Oct. 13. (CP)—An all-army hockey team, to be known as the Ottawa Commandos, is to take over the Franchise in the Quebec Senior Hockey League held by the Ottawa Senators, it was learned last night.

Senators, the capital's representatives in major amateur hockey competition for the past eight years, are leaving the field in favor of a uniformed team.

Alex Smith, Ottawa defenceman who has played for several National Hockey League teams, will be coach of the Commandos. The team will be made up entirely of army hockey players stationed here.

The Commandos should not be short on player material. Several well-known professional stars are located here with army units. Seven of these now are in Montreal practising with an army team that was scheduled to oppose an R.C.A.F. sextet in a proposed series in California.

The series with the Flyers was called off but now there is talk of two army clubs making the trip. The seven players are Jim Henry, goal; Alex Shibicky, centre; Mac and Neil Colville, forwards, all members of New York Rangers last winter; Joe Cooper, defence, last with Chicago Black Hawks; Ken Reardon, defence, Canadiens, and Jack McGill, centre, of Boston Bruins.

Will Come to Ottawa

The seven former Pros are expected to return to Ottawa as soon as the trip is over. If the proposed series in California between select army clubs does not develop, the players mentioned should be back here within a week.

Other Pro hockeyists known to be in the capital at present are Paul (Polly) Drouin and Kenny Kilrea.

In addition, Don Grant and Ted Saunders, both in the army, will be ready to play with the Commandos. They were with the Senators last year.

The army team will be represented at the next meeting of the Quebec League, expected to be held shortly. It means a seven-team league, with the Ottawa Commandos, Military District No. 4 team from Montreal, Quebec Morton Aces, Cornwall Flyers, Montreal Canadiens, Montreal Royals and Lachine R.C.A.F. Flyers.

Started in 1925

Alex Smith started in the N.H.L. with the old Ottawa Senators professional team in 1925. He was with Detroit in 1930-31, then back to Senators for 1931-32. Sold to Boston during that season, he subsequently played for them and for New York American. After a season with Springfield Indians, he coached the Streatham entry in the British hockey loop of several seasons back and then coached New York Rovers in the Eastern United States Amateur League for two seasons.

One reason advanced for surrender of the Franchise was that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is anxious that as many service clubs as possible be operated.

Col. E. A. Deacon director of Auxiliary Services, National Defence Department, is calling a meeting this week at which a manager and officers for the new team will be appointed.

T. Carruthers Wins Double Golf Title

Golf history was made in Belleville last week when Tommy Carruthers, popular Belleville manipulator of the driver and irons, won the club championship at the Belleville Golf Club. Only a week or so before Tommy Carruthers annexed the club championship at the Bay of Quinte Country and Golf Club, making him a double crown winner.

Never in the history of local golf circles has a Belleville golfer won both the Belleville Golf and Bay of Quinte Country and Golf Club championships in the same season.

In winning the Belleville Golf title Mr. Carruthers defeated R. L. "Bob" Brown in the finals, while J. E. "Joe" Legault was eliminated in the same manner in the Country Club finals.

CASUAL COMMENT

WORLD SERIES aftermath — It is not true, as rumored, that Johnny Beazley, the Cardinal Cucumber has already made up his mind to enlist in the Marines. . . . Johnny is 3A in the draft, the sole support of his mother, though unmarried and hasn't decided yet what branch of the service to enter. . . . The word is that Whitey Kurowski, whose ninth-inning homer settled the World Series, was paid only $3,750 in salary by the Cards for the past season while the contract of Johnny Beazley, the real hero of the fall classic, didn't call for more than $4,000. . . . Is it any wonder that such kids fought so hard for the $6,192.50 melon that was their reward for beating the Yanks? . . . George Selkirk, Canada's contribution to the ranks of the Yankees, and an expert with firearms, plans to enlist in the U. S. Army as a rifle instructor. . . . If he doesn't like that job he might become a physical instructor in rough and tumble. . . Before taking baseball seriously he was a professional strong man and it is doubtful if there is a player in the major leagues who can match him in feats of strength.

ALONG THE LOCAL GRID path—Word from Toronto indicates that Jack Parry, former centre fielder with the No. 5 I.T.S. softball squad, is the talk of O.R.F.U. senior football circles. "He's one of the best prospects I've seen in years," admitted FO. Lew Hayman, coach of the Flyers, after Parry ran back a kick some 50 yards at Hamilton on Saturday. Parry wears No. 77, the grid number that Red Grange made famous. Yes, and Parry can cover ground equally as fast as the Illinois "galloping ghost." It's too bad Parry wasn't with the No. 5 I.T.S. football twelve on Saturday when FO. Alex Munro's airmen dropped a 6 to 5 decision to the Trinity College seniors at Port Hope on Saturday. The Flyers failed to convert their only touchdown, which proved the difference in the final score. It was Coach Munro's team's first game and let's hope Quinte district fans will be treated to the odd game of the autumn classic, aside from interscholastic six-man rugby.

REMEMBER WHEN Bobby Porter, star forward, passer of the Balmy Beach football club, was ruled eligible to play in the Eastern Rugby Football Union a year ago yesterday? A three-week dispute over Porter's amateur standing was ended by the ruling. He had previously played professional baseball and had not received an amateur card from the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada. Also, three years ago today officers of the St. Louis Browns resigned in a body after the club lost 111 games during the 1939 American League campaign.

LAST WEEK Wild Bill Longson, alleged world's heavyweight wrestling champion, was defeated in Montreal by Yvon Robert, the hometown lad. Two nights later Longson successfully defended his world's heavyweight crown against Nanjo Singh, the mad Hindu, in Toronto. What's the answer—well Longson says the Montreal bout wasn't advertised as a title bout. Well, as a matter of fact, Wednesday night's battle at the Hume Arena between Earl McCready and Jerry Monnahan isn't a championship scrap either, but the fact locally felt is there'll be more excitement and pugnaciousness than could be produced in any title bout. Monnahan, a graduate of the university of hard knocks, knows all the wrestling angles, while McCready has been developing some questionable ring tactics himself of late so with over a quarter of a ton of human strength at work, the Hume Arena ring is in for some more testing.

OSSIE "OL' OS" BLUEGE WAS named manager of the Washington Senators in the American League as a Columbus Day present. He replaces Bucky Harris, who resigned two weeks ago as skipper of the Senators after nineteen years as manager, 13 of which were spent at the helm of the Washington club. Back in 1924 he was heralded as the "boy wonder manager" when he brought Washington its first major league pennant. Ossie Bluege performed at third base for the Senators for 17 years and was with the 1924-25 and '33 pennant-winning teams. In all, Bluege participated in 1,867 games for Owner Clark Griffith, the only major league employer he ever worked for. He retired from active play to the Senators' coaching lines three years ago with a lifetime batting average of .272. Bluege takes over a seventh-placed club.

THIS AND THAT—Yankee football's biggest weekend upset saw Minnesota's Golden Gophers, tops in the Big Ten for two years, beaten 21 to 13 by the underrated Illinois outfit. . . . The Picton R.A.F. soccer eleven continued to dominate provincial football circles downing John Inglis of Toronto 5 to 2. . . . However, the R.A.F. rugger team from Picton didn't fare quite so well, losing 22 to 3 to the Port Albert R.A.F. rugger squad at Riverdale Park in Toronto. . . Ten thousand rugby fans saw Jack Parry and Bill Stukus pace the R.C.A.F. Hurricanes to a 20 to 0 win over Hamilton to take over the senior O.R.F.U. lead Saturday. . . Minus the colorful Brooklyn Americans, the National Hockey League moves off on Hallowe'en; one of the earliest opens in history. . . . Monday's lead sport had Sergeant Joe Louis (Barrow) retiring from the fight game as undefeated champion. . . . Today Jack Roxborough, part owner of Louis' fighting profits, says the champ was misquoted. . . . Later Louis modified his statement made in Omaha, saying he meant for the duration. . . . It's a nice lead for some more ballyhoo, now that Secretary of War Stimson put the clamps down on a Louis-Conn. . . Congratulations are in order to Tommy Carruthers, golf champion at both the Belleville Golf and Bay of Quinte Country Clubs. It's the first time a golfer ever won both local golf titles in the same year. . . . John Katan is risking (?) his newly-acquired British Empire wrestling crown when he meets Whipper Watson this week, but that doesn't fizz on Earl McCready in his drive for a shot at the crown, however. . . . Ol' Diz Dean received $10,000 as radio announcer of baseball in St. Louis this season, which is about equivalent to three of the Cardinals' collective pay cheques. . . . Buck that line.

CROWLAND WINS INT. 'A' TITLE

Collingwood Defeated in Final Game by Score of 9-8

Collingwood, Ont., Oct 13 — (CP) — Crowland Union Jacks captured the Ontario Baseball Association Intermediate "A" title here Monday when they held off the Collingwood Northern Transports' late rally to win out 9-8.

The new champions won the first game at home on Saturday 5-4. Both teams garnered 16 hits, the winners from a pair of Collingwood hurlers "Smoky" Smith and Aylmer Goldsmith, and the Transports faced a trio of Crowland pitchers. Boles, Hanson and Hawath, with Hanson being the winning pitcher. Boles was batted out in the opening inning when the Transports landed on him for seven hits and four runs but did not fare so well with Hanson.

With Crowland leading 7-4 Goldsmith relieved Smith, the latter going to left field. Down 9-4 Collingwood threatened in each of the last three innings, just failing to tie the score in the ninth when Kerr was called out on a close play at first, Swans following with a double and scoring on pinchhitter "Di" Garvey's single. Milenkoff was the leading hitter with a triple and a double, while Swan had three hits for the losers.

Calgary, Oct. 13 — (CP) — Tommy Anderson, defence players of the disbanded Brooklyn Americans and voted National League's most valuable player of the 1941-42 season, has changed his hockey uniform for that of army khaki.

Vincent Shannon Honored by Friends

The evening of Saturday, October 3rd, was the occasion of a gathering of friends and neighbors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shannon of Plainfield, to pay honor to their son Vincent, who has answered the call of his country.

After the crowd had assembled, Mr. Henry Larkin called all to order and an address was read by Madeline Larkin. Vincent was presented with a handsome wrist watch on behalf of the neighborhood by Orley Parks and Russel Glass.

Vincent replied by giving a sketch of army life and thanked all present, not only for the beautiful watch but for the neighborly spirit and good wishes expressed to him.

After a dainty lunch was served, the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and cards.

Ottawa, Oct. 13. (CP)—Percy Bond, 50, of Peterborough, Ont., veteran hockey player, and a director of the Canadian Olympic team which visited Germany in 1936 is seriously ill in the Civic hospital it was learned here Monday.

Mr. Bond, an ex-President of the Ontario Hockey Association and a member of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Association, was admitted to the hospital last Thursday.

Belleville

This Tuesday, along with the regular picture show, we also hope to audition applicants for the concert party which is being formed to entertain troops in training in this district. In addition to dancers who are being trained by Miss Mary Forster, we are looking for additional talent in the way of singers, instrumentalists and actors, etc.

On Wednesday evening at the Red Triangle Club, along with modern dances we now have Bert Blissette, assisted by Chas. Thorn on the violin, directing square dances.

Thursday evening is reserved for musical appreciation program, and on Friday night there is a Small Games tournament.

We are still anxious to get used books, magazines, etc., to send out to stations in this district and are grateful to those who keep us supplied.

Miss Jessie Martin, who has done such a splendid job as Y.W.C.A. representative leaves this week to take on a bigger appointment at Guelph, and the best wishes of all those with whom she worked here go with her.

No. 6 Repair Depot

On Wednesday evening, September 30th 6 R.D. held its big Monte Carlo Night. It certainly was a big night and judging by the remarks that have been passed everyone had a very good time. Many are asking —when another such night will be held. Certainly there will be another in the near future. Games of chance occupied half of the drill hall. The other half was roped off for dancing. As each man entered he received $10,000 in script money. This he might either spend on playing the various games of chance or he might dance which cost three tickets for $1,000. Lunch cost $1,000. Depression days were forgotten as everyone went about the hall with hands full of money. Girls were present from the Hospitality Clubs of Belleville and Trenton and from St. Michael's. They seemed to have as much fun as the service personnel, indeed, the girls seemed to enjoy the games more than the men did, and they won prizes too.

Outdoor activities are fast coming to a standstill and the swing is made to indoor games. The drill hall, which has been lately fixed for all kinds of sports has been getting plenty of use lately. Badminton is becoming a very popular game and more and more fellows are taking part in it. Volleyball, basketball, bordenball and boxing are now being actively participated in.

Trenton R.C.A.F. News

Last week we had the privilege of having with us at Trenton the fast stepping stage show known as Cracker Jacks, sponsored by the Lowney Chocolate Co. Led by their master of ceremonies Joe Murphy this popular show won the praise of the men and women in blue from start to finish. The lovely girls along with the magic and slight of hand artist Rex Slocombe and versatile musician Claire House produced one of the finest shows we have had the privilege of witnessing for many months.

The Music Appreciation Hours on Sunday and Wednesday evenings continue to keep up their good attendance. Featured on the bi-weekly program was a new symphony, Moldau—from Bohemia's Meadows and Forests, that was very well received, and appreciated.

The mixed chorus recently formed, has been practising every Monday and Wednesday evenings. While the soprano division could stand more voices, interest is keen and the future of the chorus seems bright.

Last week the Young People's Association of St. George's Church in Trenton entertained some thirty-five airmen at a social evening in the Parish Hall where Rev. Greene who has just recently returned from Fort George, a mission outpost in the Arctic, presented a few films depicting life amongst the Eskimo. He also showed a travel film in technicolor which portrayed the beauty of the country. Following this, a dance was held and refreshments served, the latter is always much appreciated by the airmen.

The first swimming meet of the season was held last week and it was a great success with representatives from every unit taking part and also a number of entrants from the women's division making a very fine showing. The pool was crowded with spectators who were generous in their applause due to the closeness of every race. Cpl. Harding the swimming instructor of the Station was in charge of the meet and it is to him the credit goes for the best meet ever. The soccer team journeyed to Mountain View on Thursday night where after a very close match they came out on the long end of a 3-1 score. Again last week the boxing team added to their laurels by continuing to take the opposition, this week it was Kingston and what a splendid showing our lads did make in winning every bout they took part in. Congratulations to Sgt. Fulton and his boxing team.

17 SPIES ARRESTED

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 13 — (AP) — A Marseille dispatch to the Berlin Boersenzeitung said today 17 spies had been arrested at Marseille, among them 15 Frenchmen and two foreigners. One of the foreigners was reported to have a detailed map of the industrial zone of the Mediterranean port.

(A Berlin radio broadcast recorded in London alleged the 17 were British secret service agents.)

Answering Your Questions about R.C.A.F. Air Crew

What is meant by "Air Crew"?

There are usually five members of an air crew: air navigator, air bomber, wireless operator-air gunner, air gunner, pilot. They are team-mates, each with an important job to perform in the operation of an aircraft.

What educational standards are necessary?

No standard is laid down. Those suitable for enlistment but lacking sufficient education to absorb service training right away are given the necessary academic training after enlistment. Lack of formal schooling (such as High School) is no longer a bar to enlistment.

If I apply for enlistment what personal documents will be needed?

Your Birth Certificate, Marriage Certificate (if married), and the Birth Certificates of your children (if applicable). If you have had previous military or naval service bring your Discharge Certificate. Documentary proof of education is useful if available. However don't let the absence of documents prevent you from applying. The Recruiting Officer will help you.

Can I enlist for a specific job in air crew?

No. All enlistments are in the one category—"Air Crew." Selection for specific training and duties is made at Manning Depots and is based on the particular qualifications of the recruit and the requirements of the Service.

Am I obligated to the R.C.A.F. in any way if I call at a Recruiting Centre for information?

No. Information to assist you in making such an important decision as enlistment in the R.C.A.F. is given freely and without any obligation whatsoever.

What should I do about my job if I decide to apply to the R.C.A.F.? Give it up first?

If you so desire, you may tell your employer of your plans, but do not give up your job. If you are accepted you will be granted sufficient time to settle your personal affairs.

Are married men accepted for air crew?

Yes. Married as well as single men are eligible.

What are the age limits for air crew?

If you are 17½ years of age and have not yet reached your 33rd birthday you are eligible. If you are over 33 but have exceptional qualifications you may still be considered.

If I cannot visit a Recruiting Centre during normal business hours what should I do?

All Recruiting Centres are open every Monday and Thursday evening.

Can I look forward to a reasonable chance of promotion?

Yes. Airmen who show initiative have even more opportunities for advancement than they would have in civil employment.

What are my chances of getting a commission?

Every member of air crew has the opportunity of earning a commission and will be commissioned when he has proven his right to it. Your chances are as good as you want to make them.

SALMONBELLIES PROLONG SERIES BY WINNING 14-8

Western Lacrosse Team Shows Sharp Reversal of Form

PLAY WEDNESDAY

(By ALAN HARVEY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 13. (CP)—There's an old sport maxim that only a game fish swims upstream. If that saying is correct, New Westminster Salmonbellies must be one of the hardie piscatorial breeds, and don't have to stress the play on words.

Salmonbellies proved their gameness last night before 3,263 fans in Maple Leaf Gardens, fans who came prepared to hail Mimico-Brampton combines as Canada's new lacrosse champions. Combines had won the first two games 10-7 and 15-9 in such fecile fashion, that returning the Mann Cup to Ontario seemed just a case of going through the motions.

But Salmonbellies upset the dope. Playing back to the old tradition of famed New Westminster teams of the past—teams which have brought the cup donated by Sir Donald Mann of Toronto to New Westminster seven times in 12 attempts— they punched home the first goal after little more than a minute of play and went on to win 14-8.

Play Sharply Improved

Their all-round performance was, in fact, so sharply improved that choosing a winner in the fourth game of the series Wednesday looks as difficult as it did before the finals started. A fifth game if necessary, will be played Friday night.

Bill (Tank) Tyler, a New Westminster replacement, created the spark for the victory by scoring the goal that put Salmonbellies ahead for the first time in the series.

From a scoring standpoint, the game's most intriguing angle was the duel waged by two great family combinations—Arch and Ken Dixon of Mimico-Brampton and Jim and John Douglas of New Westminster. Arch scored four goals, Brother Ken had three and Flash McLean had one. John Douglas tallied three times, one more than Jim, his uncle, obtained.

Art Pruden, on the sick list during the first game, matched John Douglas with three goals, Clayton (Blackie) Black had two and the other New Westminster goals were split evenly by Tyler, Clifford (Kip) Routley, Marcus Smith and Ed Downey, with one apiece.

Flying Officer Lew Hayman's Royal Canadian Air Force Hurricanes bestride the Ontario Rugby Union like a Colossus today.

In a holiday weekend program which produced four shutouts, four lopsided scores and provided Eastern Canada fans with more football concentrated in a short time than they had ever seen before, Hurricanes proved that they are, currently, the hottest team in the league. They sizzled in their 20-0 conquest of Hamilton Wildcats Saturday and the temperature dropped only a few degrees Monday when they walloped Toronto Oakwood Indians 15-1 for their fourth straight victory.

One by one, Flyers have knocked off their stiffest opposition. Only H. M. C. S. York, on opening day, succeeded in keeping the score below box-car figures. Off the weekend results, the clubs with the best chance to stop Flyers, if it can be done, appear to be Toronto Balmy Beach or Hamilton Wildcats.

Wildcats Not Out

Wildcats, despite that 20-0 trouncing by Flyers in Hamilton Saturday, still are in striking distance with three victories against one defeat and they looked good enough yesterday in smothering Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers 38-1 to rate a second chance. Beaches, slowly gaining traction after a wobbly start, may have started the long, hard haul to the playoffs with their two week-end victories — 34-0 over Panthers Saturday and 8-0 over H. M. C. S. York Thanksgiving Day. The Navy entry, which took Indians into camp 7-0 Saturday, appears short on reserve strength, although they are level with Beaches in the standings.

Outplayed in Spots

The best of Monday's three games was the Flyer-Indians tilt. Before 9,000 fans at Toronto's Varsity Stadium, Indians battled doggedly all the way and actually outplayed Flyers in spots, but the airmen probably were only as good as they needed to be. They derived their 15 points on touchdowns by AC2 John (Pop) Poplowski and AC2. Art (Whipper) West, a placement and convert by Flt. Lt. Eddie Thompson and a deadline hoist by Cpl. Fred Kijek. Indians, led by Annis Stukus, Jim Cumming and Doug Pyzer, obtained their solitary point in the second quarter when Stukus' attempted placement was run into touch behind the Flyer line.

Beaches and Navy waged a stubborn ground duel almost all the way. The main difference between the teams was measured in Sammy Sward's long kicking, good for two first-quarter singles. Bob Reid pounced on a fumble for a touchdown late in the fourth quarter and converted it himself to put the final crusher on a desperate Navy offensive mustered by OS. Hugh Cuddie and Coder Elwin Morris.

Panthers simply were outclassed in the third game on Monday's bill. Wildcats started conservatively with six points in the first quarter and eight in the second, but showed no mercy when rolling up the score in the last half. Doug. Smith obtained Kitchener's long point on a kick to the deadline.

Toronto, Oct. 13 (CP)—Amateur hockey moguls have been stymied by uncertainty this fall, wondering what player talent the call-to-arms has left them, what inroads the National League, with ranks depleted by enlistments, will make upon the amateurs, and what service teams will be available for the established amateur leagues.

Conditions will be surveyed and plans laid shortly, however, at meetings of leagues and Canadian Amateur Hockey Association branches. Indications are most of the well-known leagues will operate although some places such as Vancouver and Edmonton are likely to be without organized hockey because the National Defence Department has taken over rinks.

Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher, R.C.A.F. sports director, clarified the situation somewhat in the west with announcement the army and air force will provide four teams in Alberta and another four in saskatchewan. Decision of the Manitoba War Services Board to refuse 19-year-old players passports to enter United States apparently made certain the best juniors from there will not depart en masse for other pastures and Manitoba's junior leagues will thrive again.

A junior league is reported probable also in Alberta, comprising Calgary, Drumheller, Canmore and Red Deer. Moose Jaw Canucks are working up a good entry for the Saskatchewan junior circuit.

In Northern Ontario, the porcupine Mines senior league is expected to operate again with four teams, Buffalo Ankerite, Dome, Hollinger and McIntyre, and to enter an all-star team in the playoffs at the season's end.

The Toronto group in the Ontario Association Senior "A" series is likely to comprise research colonels and army, navy and air force teams. Although the Montreal City and district league has folded for lack of entries, the Quebec senior league will continue but without their 1942 champions, Quebec Aces, who have lost their former backers.

In the Maritimes, the Cape Breton senior league may add three service teams to its long-established clubs, Sydney, Glace Bay and North Sydney.

Trinity College School Wins From No.5 I.T.S.

Port Hope, Oct. 13—Trinity College School won a close 6-5 exhibition football game from the Belleville R.C.A.F. team here Saturday, coming from behind to do so.

Jerry Dixon's Airmen recovered their own opening kick-off and marched to the Trinity line on a series of bucks, with Mills finally carrying the ball over for an unconverted touchdown. Trinity had to wait until the third quarter before they could go ahead. Then Bedore hit pay dirt after a 35-yard run with Goring converting. Willis was another good man for R.C.A.F. while Lambert and Goring were plunging stars for Trinity.

EVERYONE DENIES JOE'S STATEMENT BUT THE BOMBER

Mike Jacobs Says Louis Misinterpreted by Writer of Article

LOUIS SILENT

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 — (AP) — About the only member of Joe Louis' official fistic family who wasn't denying Joe's statement of his retirement today was — Joe, himself.

That, of course, didn't include Mrs. Joe, whose only statement when informed Joe had said his "fightin' days are over" was that "It's just as well."

But in New York Promoter Mike Jacobs, who has put on every one of the Brown Bomber's fights since he hit the big time in 1935, and in Detroit John Roxborough, one of the two managers who piloted him into the world's heavyweight championship and through a career that ranks him among the greatest fighters of all time, both insisted that Joe, in telephone conversations with them, had said he was "misinterpreted."

Yet, not a word came from Sergeant Joe at Fort Riley, Kansas, to refute the statement he gave to Associated Press staff reported David Kaufman in Omaha Sunday. He was all set to leave for a 15-day furlough in Los Angeles today to take care of some private business but there was no claim from him that he was "misinterpreted."

Hard to Misinterpret

As a matter of fact, it would be quite a job to misinterpret two of the simple questions and direct answers the bomber and Kaufman exchanged.

These were:

Q—Why are you retiring when you're 28?

A—'Cause I'll be too old when this war is over: I'm too old now.

Q—You're only 28, Joe; that's not old.

A—That's right; but by the time this war's over, I'll be in my 30's and that's too old for a fighter. My fightin' days are over.

Meantime, the fight world was in quite a dither over Joe's retirement and what would come of it.

Billy Conn, who was to have met Joe last night in a return bout until the war department turned thumbs down on the fight and Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, both declared that as far as they were concerned "Joe is still the champ."

"I want to fight him for the title," said the Pittsburgh pretty boy who, in June 1941, came closer than any other challenger in Joe's record run of 21 successful defences to taking the crown away.

War Now Business of Louis

Kansas City, Oct. 13 —(AP)— The Joe Louis controversy — will he or won't he fight again?" — has ended. Both sides are right.

Sergeant Joe, on his way from Fort Riley, Kas., to Los Angeles for a two weeks' furlough, diplomatically voted both yes and no while waiting for his early-morning plane.

He hasn't exactly retired. Still he doubts if he ever does any more heavyweight title - defending.

In Omaha Sunday he told David B. Kaufman of the Associated Press his fighting days were over. Later from New York came Promoter Mike Jacobs' cry that Joe had been misinterpreted.

"When I said in Omaha I wasn't going to fight again," Joe explained, "I meant I'd probably never have another chance."

"This war is my business now. Say it lasts two years. I'm in for the duration and six months after. That's a long time to be out of training."

Then he figured he was through with the ring for keeps?

"It depends," Joe replied, "Maybe the competition won't amount to much. And it depends on how I feel. You can't tell what kind of shape I'll be in when this this war is over."

WOUNDED DIEPPE HEROES BACK IN DOMINION

Tell Stories of Heroic Struggle Against Overwhelming Odds

OTHERS RETURN

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Oct. 13 —(CP)— Scarred and battered from nine bloody, crowded hours on the shell-torn beaches of Dieppe, a near-dozen Canadian soldiers are back in Canada, bitterly resentful of the wounds that will keep them out of action for the rest of the war. With the Dieppe veterans were several hundred Canuck comrades, wounded in manoeuvres or invalided home because of poor health.

The boys returning from this war's greatest commando raid had stories to tell of an heroic struggle against overwhelming odds before the cliffs and in the esplanades of the French port.

"The beaches were lousy with snipers," chunky Johnny MacGillicuddy of Watford, Ont., said. He told how the Germans were waiting for the commandos as they landed, and poured a withering, murderous stream of bullets into their ranks as they stormed the sandy No-Man's Land. MacGillicuddy was sprayed with lead and bore seven bullet wounds to testify to the part he played.

Also bearing multiple wounds, from searing fragments of shrapnel that sprayed him, youthful Jack Fowler of Toronto told how the crossfire prevented his boat from even reaching the shore.

This was Jack's second near-landing on French soil, for he had been one of the Canadians who had embarked for Europe just before Dunkirk, but turned back when France fell.

Only officer with the group was Lieut. John Counsell of Hamilton, who spoke words of praise for his men, but said nothing about his part in the battle, or how he received his wounds.

With the wounded was one of the men who waited to tend them as they returned, Capt. G. H. Holmes of Edmonton, a member of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. Veteran of the first war and a member of the 1st Division this time, Halifax-born Capt. Holmes was returning home after weathering a siege of pneumonia.

The other wounded and the invalids were in high spirits as they gazed on Canada's familiar scenes, and thought gleefully of homecomings. They had not much to say about themselves, answering questions with "Go talk to the Dieppe boys—they have a real story."

ROOSEVELT CALLS

". . . and we Americans and our Allies are going to win, and do not let anyone tell you anything different . . .

"Germany and Japan are already realizing what the inevitable result will be when the total strength of the United Nations hits them — at additional places on the earth's surface."

Getting Ahead of Enemies

The President, who said "we are getting ahead of our enemies" in the battles of transportation and production, declared that in order to keep stepping up production it will be necessary to solve "a formidable problem in the mobilization of manpower."

"It is not that we do not have enough people in this country to do the job," he said. "The problem is to have the right numbers of the right people in the right places at the right time.

"We are learning to ration materials; and we must now learn to ration manpower. . .

"In order to do this, we shall be compelled to stop workers from moving from one war job to another as a matter of personal preference; to stop employers from stealing labor from each other; to use older men, and handicapped people, and more women, and even grown boys and girls, wherever possible and reasonable to replace men of military age and fitness; to train new personnel for essential war work; and to stop the wastage of labor in all non-essential activities."

Community efforts, examples of which he said he had noted on his trip, should be made where necessary to help farmers harvest their crops. He continued:-

The President, who said he planned to make other secret trips of inspection about the country, reported the enemy's once-touted use of "the war of nerves" is turning into a boomerang.

Nazi Machine on Defensive

"For the first time the Nazi propaganda machine is on the defensive. They begin to apologize to their own people for the repulse of their vast forces at Stalingrad, and for the enormous casualties they are suffering. They are compelled to beg their overworked people to rally their weakened production. They even publicly admit, for the first time, that Germany can be fed only at the cost of stealing food from the rest of Europe.

"They are proclaiming that a second front is impossible; but, at the same time, they are desperately rushing troops in all directions, and stringing barbed wire all the way from the coasts of Finland and Norway to the islands of the eastern Mediterranean."

"Meanwhile, they are driven to increase the fury of their atrocities."

Soviet Troops Suspicious of Hitler's Move

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Russian suspicion that the halt called by Berlin on storming operations against Stalingrad may be a trick, designed to lull the city garrison, is justifiable.

It will be a full month yet before a strong freeze is to be expected that far south in Russia. The Soviet High Command probably is diverting some of its available plane strength from combat to scouting work, looking for more convincing evidence than has yet been afforded that Hitler has abandoned hope of seizing Stalingrad to anchor his winter line.

The care with which Berlin broadcasters sought to prepare German public opinion for a change in tactics at Stalingrad to reduce losses warrants suspicion. It was shouted over every Berlin wavelength. That it would be picked up not only in Moscow and elsewhere in Russia but in Stalingrad itself and lead to a let-down in the vigilance and defensive determination of the garrison might have been the Nazi hope.

Keyed Up Seven Weeks.

Stalingrad defenders have been keyed to battle pitch for seven weeks. That must make reaction to a lull in frontal attack dangerous unless Nazi troop dispositions in that area quickly reflect a more definite halt than is yet discernible. It seems impossible that the Germans would attempt to sit down for winter siege operations where they are before Stalingrad and in the Don-Volga corridor.

Russian estimates have placed at least 500,000 Axis troops in the immediate vicinity of Stalingrad or holding the perimeter of the great eastward bulge across the Don. As many more must be deployed within the Don bend and along the long and difficult supply routes back to the Donets over which every ton of ammunition, food, fuel and the like for so huge a force must be brought forward.

The Russians know, as do Hitler and his generals, that short of a foothold on the Volga at Stalingrad or somewhere below it strongly linked with the Nazi front on the Don, the companion enemy thrust toward the Grozny oil field might find itself in grave difficulties.

Bulge Main Protection.

It is projected down the Rostov-Baku Railroad on the north flank of the Caucasus range as a slender finger for which the main protection is the Stalingrad bulge. That is what Hitler meant when he said the capture of Stalingrad would "strengthen and deepen" the Nazi hold on overrun portions of the Caucasus. And by the same token a retreat from Stalingrad must expose his central Caucasus positions unless some other position on the Volga can be substituted.

It follows, therefore, that Russian commanders cannot interpret the slowed-up attack on Stalingrad as releasing it from present danger until the Germans disclose their real purpose. They dare not withdraw reserves backing up Stalingrad across the Volga for use in widening the counter-offensive operations in the Don-Volga corridor until there is definite evidence that the Germans are digging in for the winter or withdrawing into the Don bend or to some other line.

3 U.S. CRUISERS

Headed for Supply Ships

The enemy headed for the supply ships. The Canberra, covering the landing operations at this point, was damaged, set on fire and later abandoned. She sank the next morning. After this brief engagement, the enemy steamed for the passage northeast of Savo. There, Japanese searchlights and starshells disclosed a second screening force of destroyers and cruisers.

"The enemy fire was heavy and accurate," the Navy said, "and the U.S. cruisers Quincy and Vincennes were hit repeatedly and sank during the night."

Badly damaged in the same engagement, the Astoria burned throughout the night and finally sank. A third United States force, stationed within the landing area, apparently escaped the attack, and while the cost was heavy, the necessary reinforcements and supplies reached their goal.

Bases on Fiji Islands

The importance of the Solomons operations was emphasized by the Navy in a communique disclosing that the United Nations have established bases in the New Hebrides, and Fiji Islands, as well as in New Caledonia.

The Japanese expansion in the Solomons, the Navy said, would have threatened these bases along with the United States supply lines to Australia and New Zealand. The enemy's apparent intention to control air and sea, it added, also would have put them in a position to strike at the Port Darwin naval base and other strategic Australian sites.

"It was necessary, therefore," the Navy said, "that these designs of the enemy be blocked by our capturing and utilizing the key positions in the southeastern Solomons. This was acknowledged Aug. 7 when U.S. forces surprised and captured Japanese positions . . ."

AT THE CAPITOL

Warren William learns the identity of the man in the iron mask and stages a sensational rescue in a thrilling scene from "The Man in The Iron Mask," the Edward Small film drama now at the Capitol Theatre through United Artists release. On the same program the musical comedy, "Moonlight Masquerade."

AT THE BELLE

The Mexican spitfire, Lupe Velez, again encourages her Uncle Matt, Leon Errol, to disguise himself at Lord Epping which gets him into all kinds of trouble in "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost," now at the Belle. Lionel Barrymore, Donna Reed and Philip Dorn are co-starred in "Calling Dr. Gillespie," the major feature.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Moonlight Masquerade"
(First Belleville Showing)

Newest in the succession of screen hits to come to the Capitol Theatre is "Moonlight Masquerade," the Republic comedy with music.

Heading the cast are Dennis O'Keefe, Jane Frazee, Betty Kean, and Eddie Foy, Jr. Erno Verebes, Paul Harvey, Jed Proutly and Franklin Pangborn have important featured roles.

Three new hit tunes—"But Are We Worried — Yes," "Liverlip Louie," and "What Am I Doing" —were written for the film by Harry Revel. John H. Auer the famous team of Mort Greene was the associate producer-director.

"The Man in the Iron Mask"

With Louis Hayward and Joan Bennett topping a cast of outstanding players and with a story filled with swift action and thrilling drama, Edward Small's latest picture, "The Man in the Iron Mask", is now showing at the Capital theatre where it was released by United Artists. The film moves swiftly from its first foot to its final fadeout, and was brilliantly directed by James Whale.

Hayward plays the dual roles of King Louis XIV of France and his twin brother Philippe with sureness, fire and deep sincerity, portraying the cruel monarch on the one hand and his light-hearted brother on the other. Neither of the roles handled by this young actor is easy to play, and both are capitally interpreted by Hayward, who was launched on his starring career by Edward Small in "The Duke of West Point." Joan Bennett, still appearing as a svelte and stunning brunette, is cast as the Beautiful Maria Theresa of Spain and turns in one of the most stirring performances of her successful screen career. The three Musketeers, those heroes of sword-play and action, are impersonated by Warren William, Alan Hale and Miles Mander, and the fencing scenes which they contribute to the film are by all odds both breathtaking in their realism and thrilling in their almost incredible speed. Other roles are distinguished —by such well knowns as Joseph Schildraut as the wily Fouquet, Marian Martin as Mlle. de la Valliere, Montagu Love as the Spanish Ambassador and Doris Kenyon as Queen Anne.

The Universal news reel and the new Canada Carries On feature "Quebec-Path of Conquest" complete the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Between Us Girls"

Recommended as one of this season's most entertaining comedy innovations, "Between Us Girls" probably merits a few more compliments than any similar movie release of recent months. There are however, very few films in the current crop which might be described as comparable to this very modern, completely diverting production.

The Universal picture, cleverly conceived and elaborately mounted, opened yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre.

Diana Barrymore, who co-stars with Robert Cummings, gives a sharp performance, or several performances as she appears as Joan Of Arc, Queen Victoria, Sadie Thompson, and as the most precocious 12-year-old brat who ever amazed an audience.

Kay Francis, John Boles, Andy Devine, Walter Catlett, Ethel Griffies and Guinn Williams all have strong supporting roles in the novel story and the story, it must be said rates star billing. Rarely has Hollywood concocted a more ingenious vehicle, combining as it dies, a double romance, triple comedy and quadruple. "Between Us Girls" is keen entertainment every reader of this column should find the time to enjoy. A splendid program of short subjects is also presented including a musical screen vaudeville treat, a Walt Disney technicolor cartoon and latest Universal Newsreel events.

AT THE BELLE

"Calling Dr. Gillespie"

A romance, a strange case of dual personality, and thrills and mystery in a great hospital go into M-G-M's "Calling Dr. Gillespie," a gripping dual personality mystery now showing at the Belle Theatre. It's thrills and mystery are blended with many moments of hilarity as well as a tender love story.

The story deals with the discovery of Dr. Gillespie, played by Lionel Barrymore and Dr. Gerneide, portrayed by Philip Dorn of symptoms of a strange dementia in Roy Todwell, young socialite depicted by Philip Brown. His wealthy parents and "Society Doctor" scorn their warnings, until the youth develops "spells" during which he becomes a homicidal maniac. He finally invades the hospital intent on killing the older doctor, who is saved in a surprise climax.

A Deeply Appealing Performance

Donna Reed, who plays the maniac's socialite fiancee, turns in an emotional and deeply appealing performance. Philip Dorn, remembered for his doctor's role in "Escape," plays a young doctor from Holland, come to this country to study with the veteran diagnostician Gillespie, whimsically portrayed by Barrymore. Brown, as the demented youth, turns in a compelling performance. Other principals in the cast include Alma Kruger, Walter Kingsford, Nell Craig, Marie Blake, George Reed, Frank Orth and Nat Pendleton.

Dramatic highlights are the heroine's discovery of her lover's mad phases; his attack on two automobile salesmen and the masquerade by which he entered the hospital intent on slaying the doctor who was trying to save his life.

"Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost"

Loaded with riotous situations, RKO Radio's "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost" the added comedy feature brings "Whoopee" Lupe Veles and Leon Errol to the screen once more in their favorite roles of Camelita, the Latin bombshell, and Uncle Matt, who masquerades as Lord Epping.

Hailed as the funniest in this laugh-provoking series, the picture revolves around the adventures of the Lindsey family in a supposedly haunted house which is the secret headquarters of enemy saboteurs. Hilarious complications ensue when Errol also impersonates a cockney valet and Lupe poses as a lady's maid in her own home.

Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Elisabeth Risdon, Donald MacBride and Minna Gombell head the supporting cast.

The Belle Movietone News, described by Lowell Thomas will be exhibited on the same program.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Stephen

She did not wait for the fury to abate. She put on her coat again, picked up Fay's letters (they were addressed to several people in California) and went out and dropped them into the nearest box. The wind, sweeping around the corner, tore at her hair. She stood there, a lone figure on the street, and looked at the box containing the letter which would forever sever all that might have been for Max and her, a letter which made the pretty new clothes unwearable, the ticket to Venezuela useless, the explanation to her family futile.

It was done. She could not get the letter back again. She could not take back that final good-bye. It was a good-bye as final as death.

Presently she started to cry and put her hands to her face. Because all at once the fury abated, leaving love for Max still real and vital. A hurt love, but love . . . .still insatiable, still demanding. . . .love surviving even this.

That love survived she could not understand during the days that followed, days lived somehow by habit. You live because you must and because you cannot die. Odd, that other people with whom she came in contact with did not see that you lived because you could not die. They failed to notice her preoccupation, her eyes starring lifelessly out the window, seeing nothing, and the lost, hurt, bewildered look that frequently came to them.

There was still another expression that came to them—one of expectancy. Max would write; he would explain. . .But what was there to explain that Fay had not explained so well? Nothing. Yet there must be. . . .There must be. It could not be over. Hope takes so long a-dying. Better the fury than this hurt, this waiting for a letter that never came.

Max had accepted her good-bye. But at the end of the first week she would not believe it, and at the end of the second week she still would not believe it though she knew that Fay was in Venezuela now.

When Judith found herself with a three-week holiday, she was beginning to believe that he would never write again. Three weeks of vacation, she thought, leaving the store that Saturday night, and no place to go except home would be unbearable because the people there who knew her and loved her would see that she was not herself. She could not go home and the prospect of remaining in the apartment for three weeks haunted by Emily and Tim and Max was unbearable, too.

For her it was one of those fortunately rare times in life when you feel that every cord has been cut and that you are drifting like a runaway balloon. There is no solid earth beneath you anymore. You have lost your dream.

Saturday and Sunday Judith stayed in the apartment. On Monday morning when she awoke she wished she could sleep again, sleep endlessly. The havoc of the past weeks was in her pale face, her mouth drawn, her eyes that would never be quite as young again dull and shadowed beneath. And love survived the sharp visualization of Max, sunburned, meeting Fay's ship and holding her close as he must have many times—survived even the visualization of their being married.

But for her pride she would have written him again that dismal Monday. But pride reared its stubborn head and she managed to stay away from the desk. And what was there to say? It was so clear that she had been a short romantic flight for Max, one among many he had taken, and her final good-bye had released him with more convenience and less annoyance than heretofore he had been released. The good-bye coming from her was what Max wanted:

But he had said, "Doubt everyone and everything, Judith, but never doubt my love." Nice words for a parting or the truth? Would she ever know? The dropping of a hastily-written note in a box had brought the final closing of the curtains and she would go on wondering, debating, thinking of him sometimes as married and at other times as not being married, bitter and angry, hurt and shamed, but still in love with him.

She saw no one for a week. The weekly letter from her mother, usually promptly answered, remain unanswered. Only the anonymous faces on the street saw her walking these windy March afternoons. They saw a slender, exceedingly attractive, dark-haired girl who looked as though she did not know or care where she was going.

One evening she picked up the ringing telephone after debating a few minutes whether to answer it. Phyllis and Ames and Sid Biddison no doubt thought she had gone quietly to South America.

"Judith?" asked an ecxited, masculine voice. "Is this Miss Judith Barth?"

"Yes." The voice was vaguely familiar.

"This is Stephen Larrabee."

"Hello, Stephen."

"Hello. I've been trying to get you. This time I decided not to get lost and let a cop tell me my back to my hotel. I've been at a convention up here and I thought, if—if you were not doing anything, you might have dinner with me."

Her first impulse was to refuse. Then she thought, "But this is escape, like sleeping."

"I'll be very glad to have dinner with you, Stephen. Thank you."

He laughed. "I'm willing to be shown some of this town you think is so wonderful. What time?"

"Seven-thirty." That was Max's time.

"Seven-thirty." That was Max's time.

"Fine. See you then."

At 7.20 he was standing outside her apartment door—tall, smiling, young, his cheeks aflame. Somehow he seemed very young indeed, and he was wearing the great brown coat the roughness of which she had felt during their ridiculous embrace on Christmas night in the station at Clinton.

"I'm probably a little early," he said. He looked into her face. It was not Max's swift, penetrating glance that took in all of her. It was just honestly complimentary.

"That's all right. Come in."

Coming in, he said, "You have a nice place here."

"Thank you. I'll get my things."

He smiled. "You'll have to tell me where to go. I'm just a small-town lad, you know."

Not to a place where she and Max had been together. "If only," she thought, "I could turn my head and look back and by some miracle find it was Max beside me."

In the taxi he said, "I called the store first."

"I'm on my vacation now."

"And you didn't go anywhere?"

"I—I decided not to."

"Decided to take a rest?"

Rest! She nodded because suddenly she was afraid she was going to cry. After she composed herself, she asked, "How is everybody at home?"

"Fine. I thought you'd have been home before this."

"I thought so, too. I've been terribly busy. How is your golf game?"

He chuckled. "No better and no worse. The season will be opening soon. In golf you seem to reach a point where you can't improve your game. I've reached that point."

The night-club where they went was one to which she and Max had never been, but to which out-of-town people who read advertisements flocked. When the waiter led them to an undesirable table, Stephen did not protest, but accepted it quite cheerfully.

"I've heard of this place," he said.

"Of the beautiful show-girls?"

He frowned. "I don't go for that. A girl, any girl, doesn't mean a thing to me."

"Ideals?"

He nodded. He was very serious. "I suppose so. I like to look at a pretty girl as I like to look at a good-looking car. But . . . Shall we dance before we order?"

"I don't think there's time. The floor show will be on soon."

Sitting here with Stephen Larrabee and looking at pretty girls kicking up their pretty legs—while Stephen sat with his arms folded, her heart was crying for Max! frowning, looking as though he were interested, but not particularly enjoying the spectacle. Yet, later he seemed particularly to enjoy his dinner, for he had an excellent appetite and did not seem to notice how little Judith ate. Nor did he notice how stricken she looked when one of the songs played was associated with Max and her, one that had so enclosed them that in a series of crowded places it seemed they were quite alone.

"A nickel for your thoughts," he said.

Judith smiled. "A whole nickel?"

"Are they worth more than that?"

Stephen, the essence of me is bound up in them. . . . "If I seem somewhat preoccupied tonight, it hasn't anything to do with you. I'm not accustomed to idle days."

"Why don't you go home and see your family? I'm going back day after tomorrow. We could go back together. . . . There's nothing to keep us from dancing now, is there?

She was dancing with Stephen Larrabee while her heart was crying for Max. . . . Dancing with him several times during the long evening in the smoky, crowded room and knowing that an evening which had been escape for her was important to him—because she was with him. She thought, "You mustn't care for me. It hurts too much. I could tell you how much it hurts."

It was she who reminded Stephen of the late hour.

"Don't you have to be in form for your meeting tomorrow?" Like a wife talking, she thought.

"I don't require much sleep. Six hours and I'm ready for the toughest meeting."

She had not been bored. It was pleasant to look at Stephen, at his healthy bigness and into the clear young eyes that had not yet learned to mask their feeling. It was pleasant to dance with him and to feel for a short while that awful sense of drifting leaving her in his strong, protective embrace. Several times she thought, I shouldn't be with him. Big as he is, strong as he is, ambitious as he is, he's as ripe for hurting as I was.

The next evening she had dinner with him again partly to escape from herself and partly because there was no gracious, tactful way of refusing the friend and superior of Larry, Harriet's husband.

In quieter surroundings than the evening before he told her about his job.

"I may not have a job soon," he said to Judith's listening gray eyes. "You've probably heard of Mr. Forbes. He's my boss and Larry's and he's one of those middle-aged men who resents the younger, better-educated man on his way up."

"Does he resent Larry?"

"No."

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

Safe Crackers Foiled in Attempt To Open Safe

Although safe robbers were foiled in their attempt to blow open the safe at the Coe Hill post office over the holiday weekend, the robbers did steal $22.25 of personal money belonging to Richard Gunter, the Coe Hill postmaster.

Entrance to the building was effected by means of prying open the front window. The robbers then crawled through the post office wicket to the inside office where all desks were ransacked and $22.25 of Mr. Gunter's personal money stolen. When leaving the robbers closed the outside window and the robbery was not discovered until Mr. Gunter opened the post office on Sunday.

Provincial Constable Stanley Palmateer, of Bancroft, was immediately notified and later it was discovered that an attempt to blow open the post office safe had failed, attempts to blow the safe revealed that the safe door had withheld the explosion, but the steel safe door had been split and cracked along the top and one side. Subsequent efforts to jimmie the safe door also failed as the sturdy safe remained intact except for the outward damage. Gloves were used by the robbers, as no finger prints were found at the scene.

GOOD PARTRIDGE HUNTING REPORTED

Dinners of plump partridge will be the main feature of many menus here today as hunters of the city reported good bags over the holiday.

The Marmora and Salmon Lake district produced numbers of the birds while the partridge haunts of Prince Edward County also proved good hunting grounds for the nimrods. One hunter reported a brace of birds shot on No. 7 highway between Marmora and Peterboro.

Alex Moore's Son Now Major In U. S. Air Force

The announcement of the resignation of Dr. Maurice E. Moore, as superintendent of the William W. Backus Hospital at Norwich, Conn., to enlist with the United States army air force, has been received by his father, Mr. Alex Moore, George Street.

Dr. Moore will leave the hospital on October 15, and will go to the air force technical training centre at Bocaraton, Florida. He will receive his commission as a major.

Dr. Moore is well-known in the Belleville district having been born in Thurlow Township where he took his elementary schooling. He attended Albert College and won his matriculation there. He later attended Queen's University where he won his B.A. degree and his M.D.C.M. in 1929.

During his term at Queen's he specialized in physiology and acted as tutor to junior classes in this line of study for two years. For seven summers he acted as missionary in Western Canada. He went to Backus Hospital in 1930 and became superintendent in 1939.

Dr. Moore has always spent his holidays in the Belleville district maintaining his acquaintances in the city. His many friends extend to him the best of wishes upon his enlistment with the United States army.

WALL ST.

New York, Oct. 13 — (AP) — Stocks generally resumed the recovery trek in today's market although many acted a trifle weary after the long upward climb.

Gains ran to around 2 points in early dealings with activity pronounced. There was a later slowdown and some favorites that had touched new tops since last November backed away from best levels near the fourth hour. Scattered losers also were in evidence.

Stocks ahead at one time or another included Du Pont, American Telephone, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, General Electric, Westinghouse, Standard Oil (N.J.), Texas Co., Sperry and Allied Chemical. Sante Fe slipped, along with Bethlehem Steel, Sears Roebuck, Boeing and American Smelting.

Among Canadian stocks Canadian Pacific, Dome and McIntyre eased fractions while Hiram Walker gained 1-4. In the bond market Canada 4S gained 1-8.

Force Not Disclosed

For obvious reasons neither the strength of Canada's Alaska force nor its disposition can be disclosed. But this much can be revealed — practically every section of the far-flung Dominion is represented, including a small percentage drafted into service within the past three months.

Although far removed from settlement, the men have come to accept their isolation with sardonic cheerfulness. They like the informalities of the front line where spit and polish and parades go by the boards but already they are becoming impatient for action. They are hoping for an early opportunity of meeting the foe face to face—for a chance to finish the job. Their chief dread is to be left in a sector of inaction, amid fogs that penetrate the very marrow, while "the balloon goes up" in Europe.

I found the troops comfortably housed, some in wooden huts, others in specially-fitted U. S. army tents. They enjoy all the facilities of a modern camp, electric lights, hot and cold water, showers, and either individual cots or double-decker bunks. Some had sheets and pillow slips.

To meet the rigors of an Alaska winter, the men have been issued with extra-warm clothing. Their food, based on U. S. scale of rations, is of the highest standard. Delicacies can be purchased in canteens at reasonable prices, for the Canadians are paid in U. S. currency. And for entertainment they get first-run movies or an occasional revue.

Canadians Like U.S. Troops

Throughout the Canadian camps, their American comrades in arms are regarded as "swell fellows." The urgency of the job in hand has afforded little time for relaxation, but whenever the boys get a chance they flock together in canteens, swapping stories or singing around an off-tune piano. I have heard them harmonizing "The Star Spangled Banner" with just as much fervor as "Rule Britannia," or "There'll Always Be An England."

The co-operation of the Americans during the early days last spring when the Canadians in their new environment were confronted by many difficulties, won praise from every quarter. This is how LAC. Norman L. Oreck, of Vancouver, expressed it:

"Time after time we found ourselves in the position of the poor neighbor who rushes across the way to borrow a cup of sugar. Time after time we were offered the whole bin. We used their canteens, sat in their movie, rode in their trucks, filled their barracks, used their lumber and materials, drank their beer. No door was closed and each had a genuine 'Welcome' mat before it. Soldiers and civilians vied with each other to accommodate us."

At the moment these fighting men from both countries are living with their jobs—the gunners with their guns, air crews with their planes and the infantry at positions of readiness. They wish for nothing but a chance to march side by side against the enemy and the sooner the order comes the better they will like it.

NINE FATALITIES DURING WEEKEND

Four Persons Died in Traffic Accidents and 2 Seamen Burned

(By The Canadian Press)

Nine persons met violent deaths in Eastern Canada during the Thanksgiving weekend. Four persons died in traffic accidents, two seamen were burned to death at Halifax, a zoo keeper was killed by Polar bears at Quebec, a youngster drowned and an airman lost his life in a plane crash.

A man and his wife were fatally injured in Ottawa early Saturday morning in a collision between an automobile and street car. Mrs. Doris Carrier died in hospital a few hours after her husband, Gerald Carrier, had been killed in the crash.

George Williams, 19, of Mimico, Ont., died in a Toronto hospital Monday night of injuries suffered earlier in the day when the bicycle he was riding collided with a motorcycle.

CSM. Rene Lavoie of Riviere du Loup, Quebec, died at Shelburne, N.S., Sunday night a few hours after suffering a skull fracture in a fall from a bicycle.

Seven Injured in Fire

Two sailors lost their lives at Halifax Saturday and seven others were injured when fire swept their quarters aboard a ship. Finn Opstad, 22, and an unidentified man, believed to be Mons Olson, 27, who was visiting aboard the ship, were burned to death.

Thirty-two-year-old Jean Paul Bedard, a keeper at the Provincial Zoological Gardens at Charlesbourg near Quebec City was killed Saturday by three Polar bears when attacked as he entered their cage to feed them.

Robert Wadden, eight, was drowned in Big Glace Bay Lake near Glace Bay, N.S., Monday when he fell out of a rowboat.

A New Zealand airman was killed Sunday when his plane went into a spin and crashed five miles east of Enterprise, Ont. The name of the flier, in training at No. 31 Service Flying Training School near Kingston, was not released.

Shaped like a dumb bell, a metal and glass beverage mixer that can be operated with one hand has been invented by a Chicagoan.

NEW GUINEA BUSHMEN BUILD CHAPEL FOR ARMY

Allied troops and officers are making many friends among the bushmen in New Guinea. Major John Kinney, of Syracuse, N.Y., chief chaplain of the Allied air force in the southwest Pacific battle area is pictured with a group of natives somewhere in the interior. The bushmen are constructing the crude army chapel in the background.

Thomasburg Youths Charged With Theft Of Motor Car Tires

Two Thomasburg youths were arrested in Tweed on Saturday night and lodged in the Hastings County jail being denied bail, charged with the theft of automobile tires. The lads' names were given as Clarence Rivers and Carman Geen, both of Thomasburg.

The pair were arrested by Chief J. C. Hayes, of Tweed as they were leaving a Tweed theatre late Saturday night. Rivers and Geen are alleged to have jacked up the motor car of Ray Phillips, Tweed farmer, and removed two complete wheels, tires, tubes and rims from the vehicle on Mr. Phillips' farm. The youths were remanded in custody until Thursday when they will appear in County Police Court.

Chief Hayes made the arrest after an extensive investigation and today revealed he had been given a statement in the matter by the accused men. The theft of tires throughout the province has become so acute that police have been faced with a difficult problem in the policing of such crimes. Fortunately Mr. Phillips was able to provide Chief Hayes with the serial numbers of the alleged stolen tires at the time of the theft.

HOLDING SOLDIER FOR CRIME

Vancouver, Oct. 13 — (CP) — Vancouver city police said last night they are holding a 27-year-old soldier in connection with the death of Phil Davis, young Vancouver taxi driver. Davis' body, with a bullet wound in the head, was found at nearby Burnaby Sunday, eight days after he disappeared, leaving his taxi on a suburban street.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was late for supper again but not much(and I tried to sit down at my place like normal without anybody noticing, which maybe they wouldn't of if it hadn't of been for the way I looked, ma saying, What's that scratch on your face? You've been fighting again. Now really, I mean really, don't you think there's enough friction in the length and breath of the world without you adding the last straw? she said.

What was the fight and who started it? pop said, and I said, Nobody, pop, I mean I haven't been fighting, I mean not really.

Now watch your words, young man, pop said. Broken treaties and worthless pledges are even worse than war. A country that cant be believed is hardly worth fighting. Now what was that last statement? he said, and I said, Well I haven't been, pop, I been having an argument with Sid Hunt, that's all, I said.

An argument, for land sakes, what a statement with such a scratch, ma said, and I said, Well that's all it was, just an argument. Sid Hunt tried to turn it into a fight by kicking me in the shin and daring me to kick him back, only I wouldn't give him that much satisfaction so I just pulled his hair all my might with both hands and dared him to do it to me, only he didn't have the nerve and he got out of it by pushing me all his might in the face with his hand, and I guess that's where the scratch happened to come from, and that's as far as the argument had time to go when his father came up and grabbed him, I said.

By gollies it was an undeclared war, and it's true that any Ligg of Nations in the world will tell you an undeclared war is no fight, pop said. Now run upstairs and wash your face, he said.

Which I did feeling partly lucky.

3 BRITISH AIRMEN KILLED

Calgary, Oct. 13 — (CP) — Royal Air Force officials announced last night that three British airmen were killed yesterday in a mid-air collision of two Harvard training planes from the No. 37 Service Flying Training School, R. A. F., here. Names of the men were not disclosed.

the field of battle," Mr. Churchill said in response to the German accusation which set off the whole controversy.

Addressing the House of Commons he added that "such a process, however may be necessary from time to time, under the stress of circumstances, and may indeed be in the best interests of the safety of the prisoners themselves."

Violate Agreement is Claim

The Prime Minister charged the German government with violating the Geneva convention in its treatment of British and Canadian captives.

He said the convention "does not attempt to regulate what happens in actual fighting," but deals with the treatment of prisoners who are "securely captured."

By binding prisoners in camps, he said, the Germans are attempting to use them as hostages upon whom reprisals can be taken for battlefield incidents over which they have no control.

He announced that the government had asked Switzerland, which represents the interests of both Germany and Britain in enemy countries, to protest against the breach of the Geneva convention and "urge them to desist from it."

"In these circumstances," he added, "the counter-measures of similar nature which the (British) government felt themselves forced to take will immediately be withdrawn."

Mr. Church said that public discussion meanwhile "would be determinal to the interests of the prisoners of war of both countries."

JAP CRUISER, FOUR SHIPS SUNK BY U.S. SUBS

Total of Eight Ships Sunk or Hit In West Pacific

Submarine Toll Of Enemy Naval And Merchant Shipping Now Numbers 123

79 ARE SUNK

Washington, Oct. 14—(AP) — The Navy announced today that United States submarines in the Western Pacific had sunk a Japanese heavy cruiser and four other vessels, probably sunk another, and damaged two more.

This report of successful undersea attacks on eight enemy vessels in recent operations raised the announced United States submarine toll of Japanese naval and merchant shipping to 79 vessels sunk, 20 possibly sunk and 24 damaged—a total of 123.

170th Casualty List Issued by Dep't.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14 —(CP) — Death of five members of Canada's overseas army was reported today by National Defence Headquarters in the 170th army casualty list of the war.

One of the five men was previously reported missing but now is reported to have died of wounds while a prisoner of war. One other soldier died of wounds and three others died.

Today's list also included the names of two men previously reported missing and now reported safe, and two seriously ill.

The list raised to 4,730 an unofficial count of Canadian soldiers reported dead and missing since the war began. The figure, subject to a margin of error, includes the Hong Kong force of 1,985 except for 529 known to be prisoners, and includes those who are missing at Dieppe.

International at a Glance

RUSSIA — Russians drive two wedges into German lines northwest of Stalingrad and recapture a street within the city.

GERMANY—British and Canadian bombers smash at enemy shipbuilding facilities at Kiel.

MEDITERRANEAN—Malta destroys 17 more Axis planes, bringing three-day total to 56; Montreal ace bags three.

TOKYO TRANSMITS LIST OF HONG KONG PRISONERS

Names Will be Made Public as Soon as Next-of-Kin Have Been Notified

THROUGH RED CROSS

Ottawa, Oct. 14 (CP)—The Department of National Defence announced today that a list of Canadian soldiers taken prisoner at Hong Kong now is being transmitted from Tokyo through the International Red Cross.

As soon as the next-of-kin of the men listed have been notified, the list will be made public, said the departmental statement.

"So far," the department said, "only 316 names of officers and other ranks of the Winnipeg Grenadiers have been received, but the Canadian government have requested the International Red Cross to do all in their power to hasten the forwarding by cable of the complete list of all Canadian prisoners of war held by the Japanese."

The government, through the International Red Cross, has been pressing for the delivery of an official list of prisoners by the Japanese for nearly 10 months, after the fighting at Hong Kong ceased and the men were taken prisoner.

ADMIRAL NIMITZ CONFIDENT OF SOLOMONS BATTLE

Claims Positions Can be Held and Eventually Move Ahead

TROOPS PRAISED

By WALTER CLAUSEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Oct. 14 — (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, discussing his recent trip to the Solomon Islands battle zone, said today he is confident "we can hold what we have got and consolidate our positions and eventually start moving ahead."

The Commander-in-Chief of the United States Pacific fleet said he conferred with Vice-Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, Naval Commander in the South Pacific and visited Guadalcanal and other island bases.

"But I didn't see a Jap — not even a prisoner," he remarked.

"I went down to the Solomon Islands area to see with my own eyes what I had been reading and hearing about. The men on Guadalcanal were i nfine spirit. . . . I have seen the character of the jungle on Guadalcanal and realize the difficulties of moving troops to certain parts of the country. Everywhere I found a fine spirit of co-operation.

Can't Underestimate Japs

"The Japs must not be underestimated. They are brave, resourceful and for the most part experienced fighters. But they are meeting a people with those same characteristics now and suffering losses accordingly. Futhermore, the Japanese have a supply problem in the Solomons as difficult as our own."

Admiral Nimitz said the distance between Guadalcanal and Pearl Harbor is about the same as between Guadalcanal and Tokyo, and that Malaya is even more distant.

He said it is hard to determine whether the Japanese are getting much from the Netherlands East Indies to Rabaul, a Japanese base on New Britain Island, but added it is "safe to say the supply problem is giving them many a headache."

U.S. Fleet Headquarters at Pearl Harbor yesterday announced that Admiral Nimitz visited Guadalcanal two weeks ago and that while there he presented 27 decorations to Navy, Marine and Army heroes.

Ship is Beached in St. Lawrence After Daylight Torpedo Attack

(In the following story, Harold Freeman, Canadian Press staff writer, gives an eye-witness account of a daylight torpedo attack which damaged a freighter in convoy. Some time ago Freeman travelled down the St. Lawrence River on a Canadian warship escorting the convoy. Publication of the story was delayed until now for security reasons.)

By HAROLD FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An Eastern Canadian Port, Oct. 14 — (CP) — The Frederika Lensen, victim of enemy action in the St. Lawrence, was beached at a river port following a daring midday attack on a convoy off Cap De La Madeleine, 85 miles up the river from Gaspe.

Four men were killed when the explosion ripped through the Frederika Lensen, a medium-sized British merchantman, and the remainder of the crew of 47 was picked up by naval ships after they had taken to the life-boats. The torpedoing was some time ago.

All pre-conceived notions of what a torpedo attack was like went overboard for me as I stood on the bridge of a Canadian warship and saw the attack materialize. No explosion could be heard half a mile away and there was no sheet of flame, but suddenly the freighter was enveloped in steam escaping close to her waterline on the port side.

Three rapid-fire orders came stumbling from the lips of our captain as the first steam shot up from the freighter.

Orders Come Quickly

"Full ahead," was the order to the engine-room.

" Action stations."

"Starboard five," to the quartermaster at the wheel.

The counter-attack was on.

As our ship gathered speed and the crew came tumbling on deck to man the guns and depth charges, we could see a little Fairmile, almost lost in spray, come racing in from the starboard quarter, while a corvette at the head of the convoy heeled far over in a lightning turn.

As we came up on the freighter, first of the escorts to reach her, we saw her life-boats hit the water and go drifting astern. Ignoring them, we swept around the wreck in a full-head turn.

ALLIES STAGGER JAPS IN PACIFIC IN NEW DRIVE

Heavy Toll Taken Of Japanese Naval Strength in The Solomon Islands

KISKA HARD HIT

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 14 — (AP) — Growing prowess of Allied sea and air power had the Japanese reeling today under a six-day pummeling that wrecked enemy ships, planes and equipment throughout the whole Pacific battle zone from the Aleutians to the Solomons.

Communiques from the three active war fronts presented this picture of United States and Allied fighting successes:

Solomon Islands—A heavy cruiser, four destroyers and a transport sunk; another destroyer probably sunk; three cruisers torpedoed and bombed, one severely; eight bombers, four fighter planes and three seaplanes destroyed.

Aleutian Islands—Japanese ships, camps and hangars at Kiska, the invader's lone remaining foothold, blasted by aerial bombs and burned by incendiaries. Resistance was relatively weak.

New Guinea — Enemy ground forces pushed back in the Owen Stanley Mountains toward their Kokoda base by Allied troops while heavy bombers dropped 1,000-pound explosives on the Japanese airbase at Rabaul, New Britain. Aircraft on the ground were smashed by direct hits.

The American forces, the Navy reported, lost a destroyer and two fighter planes in the Solomons. All American and Allied bombers returned from the Aleutian and New Britain raids although some suffered minor damage.

R.C.A.F. Aid American Forces

Royal Canadian Air Force planes have aided American forces in recent weeks in the Aleutians but the Navy communique covering this phase of the Pacific battles did not mention whether Canadian fliers took part in the latest announced action.

Japan's losses as disclosed by Navy communiques yesterday and last night, pushed her total Solomon Islands toll to 260 destroyed planes, eight vessels sunk, three probably sunk and 37 damaged. The announced American total was ten lost ships.

The latest series of beatings administered to the Japanese in the Southeastern Pacific started Oct. 9 when Marine Corps aircraft damaged two cruisers and shot down three seaplanes.

Japanese Surprised

On the night of Oct. 11-12, United States cruisers and destroyers surprised Japanese vessels attempting to land reinforcements on Guadalcanal Island and with torpedoes and gunfire sank a 10,000-ton heavy cruiser, four de-

Two-Thirds of Merchant Marine Italy Brought Into War Knocked Out

By JERRY YALE
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 14 — (AP)—Two-thirds of the merchant marine Italy brought into the war has been knocked out of the conflict — destroyed, damaged or seized — a review of official reports showed today.

Before June, 1940, Mussolini's merchantmen aggregated 3,500,000 tons. The United Nations have chopped 2,366,000 from this total, with 1,500,000 on the destroyed list.

Italian shipping construction has been tripped up regularly by Allied aerial and naval attacks on her flow of materials in the Mediterranean A scarcity of fuel also has hampered Italian ship movements.

United Nations planes, submarines and surface warships this year alone accounted for 500,000 tons of merchant shipping lost by Italy between Italian ports and Axis North African bases.

During 1941 in the Mediterranean, 56 of Italy's fastest and biggest cargo vessels, totalling 244,816 tons were destroyed by British action.

Ships Detailed

Included were these ships, ranging from 15,000 to 20,000 tons:—

The liner Liguria, torpedoed, bombed and beached at Tobruk; the troopship Lombardia, dynamited in Tobruk harbor; the Conte Rosso, torpedoed by the British submarine Upholder off Sicily; the liner Neptunia, picked out of a Mediterranean convoy by the Upholder; and the former cruise ship Oceania, another Mediterranean convoy member that became an Upholder victim.

Also in 1941, 55 Italian ships — 307,438 tons — were seized. Twenty-seven of these were seized by the United States, renamed and placed into service for the Allies.

A prize seizure was the Conte Biancamano, taken at Cristobal, Panama, and assigned to the United States lines for North Atlantic duty. Twenty others were taken from Italy in 1940 and this year.

Italy's known losses, excluding captured, were 17 scuttled, 10 mined, 15 bombed by plane, 15 blasted by surface warships, 58 sunk by submarines and four lost in accidents.

ALLIED AIRMEN UNCHALLENGED OVER KISKA

22 to 1 Ratio of Plane Losses to Allies Established in September

JAP RUSES FAIL

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Headquarters Alaskan Army Air Force, Oct. 14 — (AP) — There is comforting quiet these days in the air over Kiska — a signal, United States and Canadian pilots believe, that the enemy has forsaken aerial defence of the outer Aleutian territory he seized four months ago.

Flights of heavy bombers dispatched almost daily to devastate the Japanese island position still are bounced through the skies of anti-aircraft shells when they arrive over their targets.

The enemy's ground fire is improving in quality of aim if not in weight of guns, and many a raiding plane returns bearing the scars of battle. But not since Oct. 3 has a single Japanese fighter risen to challenge the growing might of the Canadian-American air attack.

Six Zeros met the incoming bombers that last day. As they drew within firing range, fighters swooped down out of the sun, knocked out five of the Japanese and drove the other to flight.

Fighters Accompany Bombers

It was the same story all during September starting from the time the United States Army established its base on the Andreanof Islands only 250 miles from Kiska and thus made it possible for the shorter-ranged fighter planes to accompany and protect the bombers on their missions to the west.

American Flier In R.A.F. Given Bar to D.S.C.

New York, Oct. 14 —(AP)— A young Texan, Lance Wade, who yearned to fly in an old crate with a motorcycle motor and went off to the wars for "the fun of it" came back to the United States today ranking as top American fighter pilot in the Royal Air Force.

Flight Lieutenant Wade, 26, of Reklaw, Cherokee County, Tex., told interviewers he had "gotten used to the British and their planes" in Britain and the Middle East, and thought he'd go back to the R.A.F. after a "little hunting and fishing down home."

Already holder of the Distinguished Service Cross, Wade learned today that the British Government had conferred a bar to his decoration for bagging 14 enemy planes.

ASK THAT BAN ON COMMUNIST PARTY BE LIFTED

Premier Hepburn, Leopold Macaulay and Tim Buck Speak at Rally

APPROVE RESOLUTION

Toronto, Oct. 14 —(CP)—Liberal Premier Hepburn of Ontario, Tim Buck, former Communist Party general secretary and Leopold Macaulay, Conservative member of the Provincial Legislature for York South, stood on the same platform at Maple Leaf Gardens last night and urged the lifting of the legal ban on the Communist Party of Canada.

A crowd estimated at 8,000 to 10,000 persons attended the meeting, a "rally for national unity." People roared their approval as speakers called for a lifting on the ban when Premier Hepburn took the lead in calling for cheers for Buck.

The meeting approved the sending of a message to Justice Minister Louis St. Laurent urging the lifting of the Communist ban. It said in part "such action would have repercussions throughout the Allied world and cause consternation among our enemies."

Only One Dissenter

Another message to Prime Minister Mackenzie King said "We regard your action in refusing to lift the ban on the Communist Party as coming dangerously close to our enemy's policy of exploiting fear."

A solitary voice shouted "No!" when assent to the message was asked.

Premier Hepburn said the purpose of the meeting was "to create a spirit of national unity by . . . lifting the ban on the Communist Party."

He said he was making "no apologies for being here tonight," with former political opponents.

Other Speakers Heard

Other speakers were Leslie Roberts, Canadian author; Jack Tanner, British fraternal delegate to the A.F.L. convention here and Drummond Wren General Secretary of the Workers' Educational Association, who acted as chairman.

British Submarine Sinks Italian Ship

Rome, (From Italian Broadcasts), Oct 14 — (AP) — The Italian High Command said today an Italian ship which it claimed was loaded with 400 British prisoners had been torpedoed by a British submarine.

An Italian submarine was reported missing in the Atlantic.

The Italian communique said that 261 of the British prisoners of the torpedoed Italian vessel had been saved.

Of the Italian submarine lost in the Atlantic, the Italian communique said that "The crew for the most part has been captured by the enemy."

CANADIANS PART OF STRONG FORCE WHICH RAIDS KIEL

Coast Command Patrol Destroys Two Junkers And Flying Boat Over Bay of Biscay

NINE BOMBERS LOST

London, Oct 14 — (CP) — A bomber fleet of well over 100 planes struck Kiel last night with a concentrated blast of explosives in a raid possibly as destructive as any of the 70 which have been made against the Nazis' battered Baltic naval and U-boat base.

R. C. A. F. squadrons took a prominent part in the raid, which was carried out by a bomber command force of four-engined Lancasters, Stirlings, and Halifaxes, and twin-engined Wellingtons.

Two-ton, block-destroying bombs and incendiaries were showered on the city's shipbuilding installations and dockyards and returning fliers reported that many large fires were started.

Four R. C. A. F. squadrons, including the new French-Canadian unit making its third operational sortie over enemy territory, took part in the raid.

Compensated for Loss

British sources said the results well compensated the R. A. F. for the loss of nine planes. The exact number in the raiding force was not disclosed, but on the basis of normal five-per-cent losses, probably 180 bombers were over the target, one of the most vital in Germany.

The attack was on the new "saturation" technique of the R. A. F. — which means throwing so many bombers over the objective in such a short space of time that anti-aircraft defences are swamped and their fire made relatively ineffective.

A German broadcast put British losses at 10 planes, but said that the North Sea port of Hamburg — linked by water with Kiel through the Kiel Canal — also was bombed during the night.

Centre of Coal Industry

Kiel, 65 miles northeast of Hamburg, is important not only for its big docks and strategic position as a hub of water transport but as a centre for coal, iron and oil, lumber, railroad supplies, cement and food.

The leader of the new French-Canadian squadron, Wing Cmdr. Joe St. Pierre of St. Eustache Sur-Le-Lac, Que., staved off an attack by a Focke-Wulf 109 before he reached the target.

In addition to the four Canadian squadrons at Kiel, the daily R. C. A. F. communique revealed, Canadian Army Co-operation aircraft were on offensive patrol over northern France yesterday. Among the targets attacked was a large freight train which was damaged and put out of action near Etretat.

The Air Ministry said the weather was good. Kiel was left in flames after the last raid April 28 and reconnaissance photographs showed heavy damage there.

"Beaufighters of the coastal command, on patrol over the Bay of Biscay yesterday, destroyed two Junkers 88S and one flying boat without loss to themselves," the Air Ministry said.

Wounded in Neck, Pilot Raids Target And Nurses Plane Back to Its Base

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 14 — (CP Cable) — Sgt. George T. Chretiem of Penetanguishene, Ont., young pilot of a heavy four-engine Halifax bomber, was acclaimed today as one of the heroes of last night's raid on Kiel.

He disregarded a shrapnel wound in the neck to press home the attack after which he nursed his flak-riddled aircraft back to its base in England, where he made a perfect landing.

Chretiem's navigator, Sgt. T. E. Carlon of Montreal, said "We owe a lot to George."

The story of Chretiem's accomplishment was recounted in an R. C. A. F. press release, which listed his crew, in addition to Carlon, as Sgt. Jack Probert of Montreal, Sgt. Harold Reynolds of Pembroke, Ont., Sgt. A. C. Collins of Calgary, Sgt. Wally Walsh of Long Island, N.Y., and Sgt. Paddy Moore, a Northern Irelander serving in the Canadian squadron.

"We were hit by flak just as we were running into the target area," Carlon said. "It was a fluke bit of shrapnel which hit George. I was sitting beside him when I heard the pitter-patter of the hit and George said, 'I've been hit.'

"Probert, the bomb-aimer, helped bandage the neck wound. George was very calm and didn't worry a bit. We don't know how he managed to stick it out and bring us back right across the North Sea. It took real guts."

Chretiem had been out on three flights with his crew mates Kiel was their fourth raid together.

Word from the squadron was that he is making a "quick recovery" from the night's ordeal.

Reds Hem in German Salient Toward Volga

Counter-Attacks Roll Germans Back In Stalingrad

Fight for Positions For "WinterShelter" Now Reverting To Artillery Duelling

ADVANCES REPORTED

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 14 (AP).—The blunted German salient reaching toward the Volga was hemmed in tighter today by new Russian gains northwest and south of Stalingrad, and battlefront dispatches reported that even in the debris-strewn streets of the city Red army counter-attacks had rolled the Nazis back.

Thus in the 51st day of Stalingrad's siege Hitler's mightiest 1942 onslaught appeared to have lost momentum, with barely another month until the present biting chill of autumn on the steppes gives way to the second winter of the war in Russia.

Aside from the sharp street battles in which Stalingrad's defenders reclaimed positions, the fight for "winter shelter" in the ruins of the city was reverting to artillery duelling.

Regain Positions.

Exchange of shells and mortar grenades developed after Red army counter-attacks had regained positions lost before a short-lived German infantry drive Monday, the Russians said.

"Our artillery destroyed two guns, seven mortars and eleven trucks and wiped out about a battalion of German infantry, "the noon communique announced in one of two paragraphs it devoted to the Stalingrad struggle.

The army newspaper Red Star said Russian troops advanced in two sectors on the steppes northwest of the city. It reported there were frequent local encounters in separate areas.

Red army tank forces, following up an attack which folded back advanced enemy lines upon the German flank northwest of the city, were reported to have "killed about 300 Hitlerites, destroyed four guns, eight mortars, 20 machine-guns and several trucks with supplies."

Frost Whitens Breaths.

Mass attacks generally gave way again to artillery and mortar duelling in the struggle to decide whether axis or Soviet troops will winter in the ruins. Frost whitened the breaths of the soldiers on this 51st day of a siege started in August's heat.

The midnight communique said tanks and planes supported two German infantry battalions in an attack on a Red army position in the Mozdok region of the central Caucasus, but the defenders killed about 300, captured supplies and hurled the survivors back to their original lines.

Improvement of the Soviet position southeast of Novorossisk, in the battle for a mountain highway down the Black Sea coast, was said to have followed the rout by Red marines of an attack in which two enemy infantry companies were wiped out and three tanks were wrecked.

Again a relatively heavy local action was reported from the northwestern front, north of Moscow, where Red army forces were credited with repulsing Nazi attacks.

"About 400 Germans were killed," the communique said, "and the Soviet troops captured a large amount of booty."

Marines In Action.

Russian marines were cited for two actions in the battle of the Western Caucasus, one a raid by a landing party against a German-occupied town on the Black Sea coast.

The noon communique said the marine detachment, moved to the shore in motor launches, wiped out a squadron of German cavalry, blew up an ammunition dump, destroyed a radio station and returned to its base without losses.

Other marines improved their positions southeast of Novorossisk following the repulse of an axis attack, the midnight communique said.

Red army men fighting in the same area were threatened by numerically-superior enemy forces which penetrated to their rear, but counter attacked, cut off the force from the main axis body and, "using their advantageous positions, killed about 400 Hitlerites," it was reported.

Quebec Pilot Downs 3 Planes In Single Battle

Cairo, Oct. 14—(CP Cable)—PO. George Beurling of Verdun, Que., one of the Empire's ace fighter pilots, shot down three enemy planes in a single battle over Malta yesterday, including the 1,000th enemy plane destroyed over the George Cross Island.

Canada's top-scoring pilot, Beurling raised his personal total to 26 enemy planes destroyed, all but two of them since he arrived in Malta in June.

Shooting down planes in batches is nothing new to the Quebec boy who since June has risen from sergeant to pilot officer and won the Distinguished Flying Medal and Bar and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

He is recognised as the leading fighter pilot of Malta, where in the last three days fifty-six Axis aircraft have been destroyed and at least fifty damaged.

His D.F.C. citation said "He is an exceptional pilot who continues to be the inspiration of his fellow pilots and all coming in contact with him."

A LUCKY SHOT

Killing two birds with one stone may be an old adage but getting a brace of partridge with one shot is a literal fact with W. J. Oliphant, Toronto, who spent the weekend here doing some bird hunting.

Seeing a plump partridge strut past an old stump and halt at what appeared to be a stick, Mr. Oliphant let fly with his shotgun. Walking around the stump he was surprised to note that two partridge lay dead. The "stick" he saw, apparently was the mate of the first bird.

Accompanying Mr. Oliphant was his valuable British bulldog, "Marwell Cavalier" a handsome pedigreed specimen whose sire is valued at $10,000.

THROWN FROM HORSE, GIRL SEVERELY INJURED

Thrown heavily to the ground when the horse which she was riding near relatives' home at Brighton on Monday suddenly bolted, Doris Young, aged eight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Young, Westwood Ave., Toronto, suffered a severely lacerated forehead and multiple fracture of the right arm.

The girl was attended by Dr. Clarke of Brighton who later ordered her to the Belleville General Hospital where she was attended last evening by Dr. G. S. Cronk. The little girl was visiting her grandmother near Brighton, when the unfortunate accident happened.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS BUSY WEEKEND

A comparatively busy weekend was spent by the Belleville Fire Department although all of the alarms were for minor causes, with no damage of any nature being reported. They were called on a smoke alarm to a Dunbar Street residence on Sunday afternoon and to a grass fire on E. Moira Street a few moments later, while on Saturday they were called to Ann Street to get a pet "tabby" from a tree. Early this morning the smoke stack at the Houston Lumber mill became afire but employees had the blaze under control when firemen arrived on the scene.

CITY TREASURER HOOKS 23 POUNDER

Fish were really biting over the weekend if the reports of local fishermen who experienced some of their best luck of the season are any criterion. And it wasn't only the 'lunge, that were chasing the bait.

City Engineer Charles Mott reports that he and his city hall contemporary Harry Stock, while on a fishing trip in the Bay of Quinte near Deseronto hooked several nice pickerel and bass and topped their afternoon's performance by landing a 23 pound 'lunge. The honor of catching the big one goes to Mr. Stock, according to the city engineer who claims no part of it.

DOMESTIC ANIMALS RUN OVER BY CARS

When two dogs ran into the path of an automobile driven on Dundas Street by Edgar Richley, Gananoque, on Tuesday, one of the dogs was killed when run over by the motor car. The dog belonged to Mrs. G. Taylor, Pinnacle Street, and was later removed by the city scavenger.

Last evening a cat was run over and injured near the lower bridge. City police soon put the animal out of its misery by shooting it along the nearby river bank.

LIGHT STANDARD BROKEN AT BASE

There must be some kind of a jinx on the light standard in front of the city hall door. Several weeks ago a truck backed into the standard and broke it off at its base. Hydro and city employees repaired the damage only to have the post broken again last night. Norman Clarke was parking his truck at the curb with the rear of the truck platform striking the lamp post, again breaking it off at the base. Civic employees were repairing the damage this morning.

NEON LUMINARIES HAVE FACES LIFTED

Blacked out for the duration of the war because of wartime regulations restricting the use of electricity for advertising signs, neon luminaries on Front Street are having their faces lifted and are reverting back to the old-time painted sign devoid of neon tubes. Neon sign employees yesterday were seen removing the lighting equipment from Lattimer's Drug Store sign and others are reported to follow.

GREGORY BUTLER HELPS IN HARVEST

Gregory Butler, son of Magistrate and Mrs. E. J. Butler, is among the University of Toronto students who have left for the West to help with the harvesting.

PUBLIC CO-OPERATION IN USE OF POWER ALMOST 100 PERCENT

Public co-operation with the appeal of the Power Controller to cut down on electrical power usage thus far has been practically one hundred per cent. Public Utilities Commission officials stated yesterday.

Front Street merchants have acceded to the government request in a highly appreciative manner, officials added and with an occasional exception all have shown the fullest co-operation.

The general public is becoming educated to dimming of lights, especially in restaurants where a slight inconvenience was caused at first, both to owners and the public. Many restaurants have installed small lights over cash registers situated near entrances, thus overcoming any inconvenience caused by the elimination of front and window lights.

NEPHEW OF G. A. REID WAS IN DIEPPE RAID

Word has been received by Mr. George A. Reid, of this city, that a nephew, Robert Kenneth Stinson, who took part in the Dieppe raid is now reported safe in England.

Stinson, who comes from Tamworth, went overseas with the Queen's University branch of the Army Medical Corps.

C. A. S. Board Meets

The Board of Management met in Bridge Street Church with a very good number present. Splendid reports were given by the chairmen of the different phases of the work, fully demonstrating the lively interest taken in the society's work. The superintendent in the absence of the treasurer presented the financial reports showing the society to be in a good healthy condition, in every respect, reflecting great credit to the finance committee in administering the funds of the society, carrying on its important duties quietly and without ostentation.

The superintendent gave a full and detailed report of the work carried on since the board met last. 331 children under the society's care and supervision, 412 visits had been made to children in care, 374 interviews in the office, 12 children had been legally adopted.

Miss Robins, social worker, gave a very interesting report upon the preventive work carried on by the society, telling of some of the family cases she had under supervision, how they responded, and the good results attained. The society with a fine record, a long tradition with its relationship to the municipalities and citizen interest fairly clear cut and established a volunteer body of citizens co-operating in the building of a better world for these little ones to live in.

During the long session light refreshments were served through the kindness of the president and Mrs. Fetterly which was greatly appreciated by all present.

POLICE BLOTTER

Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond, Bowmanville, found a large safe abandoned on a side road north of that village early today. The discovery was immediately reported by District Inspector Frank Gardner here. Painted on the front of the safe was the name of "James Lachapelle," but no address was found on the safe. All O.P.P. district headquarters were immediately notified of the finding of the safe in an effort to discover where it was stolen.

Arrested For Theft

City police apprehended LAC. H. V. Jacques, of the Mountain View Bombing School, on a charge of stealing a bicycle late Tuesday night. The airman was apprehended following a report, that a bicycle belonging to James Price, McDonald Ave., had been stolen. The bike was recovered by police and Jacques was later given into the custody of the R.C.A.F. service police with instructions he would have to appear in a subsequent police court on theft charges.

Oshawa Car Stolen

Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1942 seven passenger Dodge sedan bearing Ontario licence plates number 60-A-12.

Nearly 30 Miles Of Cigarettes Sent by Kinsmen

Being in somewhat of a statistical frame of mind over the holiday period, with the idea in mind of giving thanks to the citizens of Belleville for continued co-operation in the provision of smokes for Belleville boys overseas, Chairman Matt Currie revealed today that if all of the cigarettes sent overseas by the Kinsmen Fag Fund in the past year were placed end-to-end in a straight line they would measure slightly over 30 miles, or a distance of 158,400 feet. "That makes a lot of tobacco tucked inside thin sheets of tissue paper, but they are being looked for more than ever and it is as little as we can do to provide smokes for our gallant men overseas," added Mr. Currie, who heads the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

Acknowledgments from over 28 Belleville boys were received this week, all of whom extend the Kinsmen and good citizens of Belleville their sincere thanks for the much-needed smokes and urging the continuance of the shipments of cigarettes. Letters of this nature were received from G. A. Angell, J. M. Clarke, Dick Potter, J. Lazier, E. G. Blakley, C. D. Ashley, W. C. Sharpe, C. Sager and others.

The Belleville boys overseas sent shipments of 300 cigarettes each this week and the names of contributors to the fund recently read as follows:

Norman J. Adams, C. A. Anderson, H. H. Anderson, W. J. Anderson, Roy D. Ashmore, Kenny Baker, J. J. Barrett, Jack Boyd, William R. A. Carter, A. A. Cooper, Andrew E. Curtis, F. E. Small Fire Arms To be Confiscated Warns Prov. Police

Youths found in possession of small calibre rifles in the vicinity of Cannifton will have their guns confiscated by Provincial Police without further warning, it was announced at O.P.P. District Headquarters here today. It became necessary to issue such drastic measures following the continued practice of discharging small arms with reckless abandon in that district.

Recently a man was shot in the leg with a .22 calibre bullet near the site of the old Lazier paper mills. On Monday a Cannifton resident apprehended several teen-aged lads discharging a .25 calibre rifle in the vicinity of his barn. As the pellets were penetrating the building the farmer confiscated the gun and turned it over to Provincial Police authorities. The boys refused to divulge their names, thus prompting the farmer to confiscate the gun and if the boys wish to reclaim the fire arm they will have to apply at the O.P.P. office, where their names will be obtained.

Obituary

LATE ARTHUR HENRY HINTON

The funeral of Arthur Henry Hinton, late residence 68 Great St. James Street, took place Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 13th., from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. G. G. Wright rector of Christ Church.

The deceased was a veteran of the First Great War and the following veterans of the same war were bearers: Messrs. W. Bartley, S. Ellis, J. Clarke, L. Harris, W. Lindsay and T. Yorke.

City Council Approves Motion To Limit Number of Aldermen In Council to 14 Members

Question Will be Submitted to Ratepayers at Next Municipal Election

AMENDMENT OFFERED

City Council at the regular meeting Tuesday night, approved a motion presented by Alderman E. J. Clarke, which was calculated to limit the number of aldermen in council to 14 instead of 21 should the population of the city increase to over 15,000.

Under present regulations councillors are elected by general vote with the number set at 12 aldermen but should the population of the city increase to over 15,000 a former regulation calling for three aldermen for each ward in the city would automatically go into effect. With seven wards in the city this would set the number of councillors at 21.

"There is no intention of reverting to the old ward system of electing aldermen", stated Mr. Clarke as he presented his motion. "The motion is intended only as a safeguard against an unwieldy council and against the time, when the population of the city is over 15,000".

According to the tabulation of Harold Bateman, city assessor, the population of the city is now 14,969. Figures of the local Wartime Prices and Trade Board show that the population of the city is over 15,000 but census taken by city assessor is accepted for municipal election purposes.

Set at Two For Each Ward

Mr. Clarke's motion sets the number of aldermen for each ward at two instead of three, thus automatically setting 14 as the maximum number. When put to vote the motion carried by a 9-2 majority, only Aldermen Wotten and Marshall dissenting. The question will be submitted to the ratepayers at the next municipal election.

After having a proposed amendment to Mr. Clarke's motion ruled out of order by council, Alderman Wotten presented a notice of motion submitting that two questions be put to the electors at the next election. Mr. Wotten was in favor of asking voters first— "Are you in favor of legislation limiting the number of aldermen to nine?" and secondly, "Are you in favor of legislation limiting the number of aldermen to 14?"

Ald. Clarke Presides

Alderman Clarke occupied the Mayor's chair in the absence of Mayor Glencoe Thompson.

Among the recommendations passed at the evening's session which was one of the longest in some time, council ratified a grant of $300 to British Empire Cheese Exhibition, although a request had been made by exhibition officials for a larger amount. The added amount was needed, it was claimed, owing to the fact other quarters than the city hall would have to be secured for this year's show. All councillors expressed approval of the $300 grant.

The matter of Weston Bread and Cakes Ltd. seeking permission to establish stables to accommodate horses for delivery purposes again came up for discussion at council, the question being re-opened by Mr. Cameron, resident manager of the firm. No action was taken.

Mr. Ted Follwell, local barrister, addressed council briefly in behalf of his clients Misses Ella and May Rowland regarding petitions signed by residents in Everett and Cedar Street district requesting the closing of a mink farm operated by the Rowland sisters. Mr. Follwell was prepared to submit a petition signed by neighbors stating the operation of the ranch in no way caused inconvenience but Acting Mayor Clarke advised the question was not scheduled for decision at the meeting. A committee composed of the Mayor, and Aldermen Wotten, Rollins and Potter was appointed to deal with the matter.

Will Repossess Lots

It was recommended that the city solicitor immediately take the necessary steps to repossess those lots sold by the city with building clause where said conditions have not been compiled with by the owner. The city solicitor was also instructed to prepare the necessary deeds covering the sale of Lot F East side, Cannifton Road to Mr. Quirt for $25.

Close Camp on 24th

It was decided to close the city tourist camp on October 24 with persons now residing there to be notified in writing to this effect. In a communication from City Engineer Charles Mott it was revealed to council, that arrangement could be made to hire the Thurlow township "bulldozer" to level the city garbage dump. It was suggested the services of the "bulldozer" be secured for approximately five hours each week, the cost to be $2 per hour.

The city clerk was authorized to write a letter of appreciation to W. H. Maxwell of the Industrial Commission of the Canadian National Railways and his colleagues for the industrial survey of the city of Belleville recently completed. The survey is complete in every detail and a copy is in the hands of councillors.

It was also recommended, that the council make a request to the Public Utilities Commission to furnish fire protection to new residences on Dufferin Avenue by installing one new hydrant approximately 180 feet south of number 319, which is the Tillbrook residence. The additional fire protection is needed because of new residences erected in the district, it was claimed by council.

Cost of Relief Down

The cost of relief for the month of August was $369.11, it was revealed in a report from the welfare department. This is a decrease of $407.77 from August, 1941, and is $30.32 down from July of this year. In August there were ten families, totalling 40 individuals, on relief in the city.

A letter of appreciation from Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, secretary to the office of the General Council, United Church of Canada, was read before the council members. It was claimed the General Council met in the happiest civic surroundings and that the welcome of the Mayor was fulfilled to the last moment and degree by the kindly people of Belleville.

Take Cognizance of Award

The council took cognizance of the heroism shown by Lieut.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt at Dieppe and the resultant award of the Victoria Cross and will inscribe the following testimonial in their minutes.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Cecil Ingersoll Merritt V.C.

For three years the world has witnessed the fury of Nazism in its attempt to uproot Christianity and civilization and to substitute therefor the rule of might and slavery.

In common with the armed forces of all other parts of the Commonwealth of British Nations, Canadians have played their part in upholding the principles of justice and virtue, and in the struggle to recover liberty for those innocent nations ruthlessly crushed under the heel of the German war lords.

At the epic struggle at Dieppe Canadians gallantly went forward against overwhelming numbers sacrificing their lives in the cause of freedom and in so doing won immortal glory.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Cecil Ingersoll Merritt, whose family is closely associated with this city, His Gracious Majesty awarded the Victoria Cross for conspicuous bravery.

In recognition of the pride in which all Canadians may participate the council has unanimously authorised the inscribing in our Minutes of this testimonial, copies of which shall be forwarded to the wife of the gallant young soldier, Mrs. C. C. I. Merritt, a daughter of our former Mayor, Mr. Jamieson one, and to Mrs. C. C. I. Merritt, Senior, mother of the first Canadian hero to win the Victoria Cross, in this present war.

TO LAUNCH HUGE ORE CARRIER

Ashtabula, O., Oct. 14 — (AP) — A new 621-foot ore carrier is expected to slide into the water here this week. Four of 16 freighters being built for the United States Maritime Commission on the Great Lakes were allotted to the local yards of the Great Lakes Engineering Corps., and two of them are about ready for launching. The new ships are capable of carrying 16,000 tons or more of Lake Superior iron ore per trip.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

London, Oct. 14 — Stalingrad the magnificent continues not only to hold its ground but to muster the strength to counter-attack, hereby increasing the margin of the defeat which the Allied nations are in the process of administering to the harried Hitler.

The stand of Stalingrad is one of the wonders of the world. Still, I believe we shall make a mistake if we allow our satisfaction to blind us to the cost of this defence and to how that cost might affect the speed with which the Allied war machine is travelling toward victory.

Of course, it is difficult to think of Stalingrad in terms other than those of mountainous strength. Certainly great power has been there but when the epic finally is written we likely shall find stark courage and willingness to die have been a greater defence than have bullets.

In any event, while the Red armies have been hammering Hitler's boasted legions to bloody pulp, the Muscovites themselves suffered grievously. Like the Germans, the defenders lost hugely in both men and material.

If these were the only drain, the Reds could stand it.

They have a wellnigh inexhaustible reservoir of manpower and equipment is replaceable. That is, equipment would be replaceable if the Soviet still had the great industrial facilities with which it began the war and this brings me to the real issue:—

The Muscovites have lost a heavy percentage of their vital industries in western Russia to the invader. They have lost mineral resources. They have lost the Ukraine, the breadbasket of the Union, and so much other agricultural territory it may well be that the Allies will have to ship food to them this winter.

True, Premier Stalin rushed fresh industries into being behind the mighty barrier of the Ural mountains. He has created new fields of grain. He is building a Russia within a Russia.

However, that doesn't replace the huge diversified industrial output or the oceans of golden grain which the Axis have overrun. Nor does it alter the fact the Red transportation system in western Russia has been disrupted and that the route into the Hinterland behind the Urals is a long, winding trail. It is a monumental task to support a civilian population and great armies in the fighting zone under such conditions.

In short, the Russian Bear is faced with the prospect of living on his own fat this coming crucial winter unless fortune thaws the earth out a bit for him. There you have, I believe, the basic reason for Moscow's insistence on the opening of a second front.

It is obvious there is no military operation that would drain off such a great number of Nazi troops as an attack through Western Europe. Those who support the immediate opening of such a second front maintain the alternative to be protraction of the war for several years. They agree the Allies will win in any event but will take far longer without that front.

I am putting this forward by way of information, not as argument. This column always has maintained that only the Allied High Command is capable of judging when and where fronts should be opened. Civilians must abide by that.

We have been promised "second front" and assume they will be forthcoming at the earliest feasible moment in view of the urgency of the situation.

Kiwanians Pay Tribute to Late Dr. R. A. Flynn

Standing with bowed heads while the strains of the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee", were softly played on the piano by Leo Riggs, members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club paid mute tribute to the late Dr. R. A. Flynn, at their regular weekly luncheon Tuesday.

In a brief but touching eulogy, Mr. J. Owen Herity, paid splendid tribute to the many fine qualities of the late Dr. Flynn, who for many years had been a member of the Kiwanis Club. Tuesday, for the first time in many weeks, his chair at Kiwanis luncheon was vacant, and President Jack Trudeau asked members to observe a moment's silence in respect to the departed member.

All routine business of the club was postponed with Mr. Herity's brief message of eulogy, only, included on the program. Mr. Herity's message follows:

Our emotions are deeply stirred today by the entirely unexpected passing of a fellow member who sat with us at this same table only one short week ago. He was then apparently in the full vigor of abundant life and seemingly destined to continue long in his chosen career of serving humanity as an enthusiastic exemplar of the healing art. Once more we are reminded of the words of Edmund Burke:— "What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue!"

It is rarely indeed in the history of our city that the demise of any citizen has called forth so many spontaneous tributes of admiration and respect and personal affection as has the passing of our dearly loved fellow Kiwanian, Richard A. Flynn.

To him it was given in surpassing measure that most valuable of endowments — the ability to form friendships. This seemed to arise from no mere effort to attain personal popularity but from that deeper and more enduring genuineness of character that is expressed in deeds rather than in words.

In his professional life he was not merely an active and uncommonly skillful physician but to those to whom he ministered he became a counsellor and guide and a healing influence which calls to mind such characters as the beloved Doctor MacLure of the "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" or Doctor Wilfred Grenfell of the Labrador.

Among the children, especially, his cheery presence was in itself a more powerful aid to recovery than prescribed remedies.

And so he carried on his labor of love and service and of sacrifice. He gave as few have given. He measured time, not by the figures on a dial, but by the opportunity it presented to relieve suffering and restore health. The hours for rest and recreation were gradually eliminated until his vigorous constitution and glowing health were literally sacrificed on the altar of service.

His one recreation was found in the time he spent in Kiwanis activities. But here also he was one of the sturdiest and most enthusiastic of workers. As president for a biennial term and in all the manifold welfare work of this beneficent organization he was a power for achievement.

And now he is gone from us. Gone when life was at the very noontide of its usefulness. He is gone but the memory of his numberless deeds of kindness — of his true nobility of character and his native sincerity of spirit will abide.

"They are not dead, who live
In lives they leave behind;
In those whom they have blessed
They live a life again, and shall live
Through the years, eternal life,
And grow each day more beautiful."

POLICE COURT

Belleville's post-holiday police court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd Tuesday, saw L. C. A. cases dominate the hearings presented by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C.

A sailor lad, who was recently discharged from the Canadian Navy owing to ill health after serving on active service for some time, was convicted on three counts of violations of the L. C. A. The ex-gob paid fines for intoxication, the illegal possession of liquor and was sentenced to seven days when convicted of drunk driving. Mr. E. O. Butler, local barrister, appeared for the accused and obtained the minimum penalty in each case. Two of the more serious counts arose following a motor accident on Dundas St., on Sept. 27th last, which led to the accused man's apprehension.

JUDGMENT REVERSED

Toronto, Oct. 14—(CP)—Appellate Court at Osgoode Hall yesterday reversed a judgment of Judge Tudhope in a Cornwall County Court action which awarded the Attorney--General for Canada, Plaintiff, $199.99 damages in a motor accident case.

Defendants, E. Ervine Construction Co. and their driver, Boris Markson, appealed on the ground the jury erred in finding the defendant truck driver negligent when his truck on Aug. 30, 1940, was in collision with an army truck loaded with rifles at the corner of Highway 34 and a county road.

This Central Press Canadian map shows the set-up of Hitler's latest idea—a confederation of Germanized European states involving Germany, Holland, Norway and Denmark and possibly, Slovenia. Meanwhile, it is reported the Danish government has already refused to agree to such an "anschluss" and there have been many indications of growing unrest among Norwegians.

75 lbs. of 'Lunge Proof of Real Fishing Trip

After a summer of only mediocre luck with the rod and line, the two-man fishing duo of Ray Lockyer and Roy Anderson finally clicked over the week-end.

All summer they had been on the receiving end of good-natured jibes from Jack Bean and other renowned Bay of Quinte Izaak Waltons, but over the holiday they came into their own — and they have 73 pounds of 'lunge to prove it.

"It was an ideal manner in which to end the fishing season", exuberated Ray Lockyer this morning as he proudly displayed four 'lunge ranging in weight from 26 pounds down to a comparatively mere 12 pounds. The four beauties were caught in Muscote Bay within a three-hour period in which 'lunge were really biting.

But that isn't the whole story. Besides landing their own four 'lunge, which by the way was their quota for one day, the two fishermen actually assisted in landing three others of a comparable size for persons in other boats.

After their one really successful day, the local fishermen professed a willingness to rest on their laurels and give other Izaak Waltons an opportunity to equal their mark.

Trophy is Presented To Centenary School For Improved Grounds

Centenary—Tuesday evening was the scene of a very instructive and interesting assembly, when a number of the students of Centenary School together with parents and friends gathered to hear an illustrated lecture on "Improvement of Home and School Grounds" given by Mr. John F. Clark, Dept. of Horticulture.

Mr. Pickering, School Inspector, acted as chairman and with Mrs. (Rev.) Scott presiding at the piano the meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada". Miss Murphy, teacher of Avondale School, then introduced Mr. Clark, whose lecture was most instructive and helpful, the slides showing how many improvements had been made to schools, which before were far from being attractive to the children.

Rev. Mr. Spencer on behalf of those present expressed thanks to Mr. Clark for the splendid talk.

In the absence of Mr. Fair and Allyn Finkle of the Junior Farmers, Mr. Pickering presented the Silver Trophy to the Centenary Scohol. This award being won by them for best improvement to school grounds during 1942.

Mr. Bird, teacher of Centenary, proudly accepted the award on behalf of the school.

HOW TO HELP WIN THE WAR

WORK

We must roll up our sleeves and tighten our belt, Canada! We've had it too easy in these past three years of war. Now is the time to show that we have the determination and courage to fight. No matter what our job, we'll help to win this war if we give it everything we have. Fighting today includes working hard for our Country, our home and our right to survive as a free people.

DOMINION OF CANADA

SAVE

It's necessary that we save all we can. Spending on things we can do without, betrays Canada to the Axis. We can do without the frills. When we've won victory, we'll have the luxuries again. Right now, there's no better investment for any of us than to put what we save into Victory Bonds, enabling our Country to buy shells, tanks and bombers. That's the way to save Canada—to save all that matters.

LEND

What's your share of the savings job? Well, the average Canadian would have to lend to Canada to meet Canada's need $1 in every $5 of income left after taxes and compulsory savings have been collected. The average may not fit you. Your own circumstances are distinctly your own. You may be able to do better both out of your current income and out of your accumulated savings in the bank—or you may not be able to reach the average. Your share of voluntary savings is every dollar you can possibly spare.

Third Victory Loan

Beginning on October 19th., Canadians are to be asked to buy more war bonds in the largest amount of any objective set by the Minister of Finance since the war began. The loan in the spring was for $600,000,000 and it was oversubscribed by nearly $400,000,000. The objective of the forthcoming loan is $750,000,000. The Hastings County quota last spring was $2,100,000 and it was oversubscribed by $250,000. The objective this time is the same as the previous one. Hastings County has exceeded the quota set in every loan and we must dig deep to make this one as successful as the preceding ones.

The country needs this money urgently for prosecution of the war is assuming proportions exceeding any previous record, and is now amounting to around ten million dollars daily. However, the national income is mounting by millions because more people are engaged in gainful occupation, and because many, who have been constantly employed even before the war, are earning more than formerly.

It is true, also, that taxes are higher but due to action taken by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board the cost of living has not mounted to heights it did during the last war. Consumer purchasing is being more and more restricted so that more money should be available for helping to finance the war.

Money is important to carry on war and if the government can not get what it needs by voluntary methods then there is the alternative of still higher taxes with no return in a monetary way to the individual. Investment in the loan when the wage earner is gainfully employed or the merchant whose business is booming should be made against the time when times are abnormal and the necessity of having spare funds might become very pressing. The lesson of the depression years should have taught everyone the value of having security in extra funds, more particularly when no one can chart the future and say what may or may not happen.

The successful business man does not live from day to day using up his spare funds as he goes but constantly adds to his wealth by investing in his own business or a good security, such as bonds, so that he is always ready to take advantage of his opportunities. So it is with investing in a Victory Loan. It provides for the future and no one can tell when a few hundred or a few thousand dollars might not come in mighty handy after this war is over. Right now it is the sensible procedure and the patriotic move to invest to the utmost in the Third Victory Loan.

Those Old Guns

Many German guns, captured in the First Great War, have gone back to Europe in the form of bombs, shells and bullets against the forces of the senior Axis partner reports Gustave Lanctot, Dominion Archivist and chairman of the War Museum Board in a recent statement.

Through the Privy Council, the board had obtained authority to sell to war industries all German guns, trench mortars and machine guns turned in by municipalities throughout Canada.

Mr. Lanctot has made an appeal to towns and cities in the Dominion which have not yet turned in such trophies to offer them to the War Museum Board or Board's Salvage Officer, Mr. J. C. Kelley.

To date, the Board has disposed of 343 heavy howitzers and field guns and 262 machine guns.

Despite some agitation in the city to dispose of the two guns that are resting on the armouries lawns, nothing has been done about it. If the city owns them now is the opportunity to get rid of them in the way that will do the most good. The same thing applies if they are owned by the Argyll Regiment. But no matter who claims to be the owner it is to be hoped they will act now when scrap metal is needed no much. If the old guns that have been on Victoria Park and the court house have not already been disposed of then the city should get rid of them now. They will serve a much better purpose being used in armaments than just acting as decorative pieces. The means of getting rid of them is now given and we hope that those in authority will be able to take advantage of it.

THE STOKER

If you have stoked a heaving ship with ton after ton of coal,
You know how it feels to gasp for air and brace against the roll,
You know what it means to face white heat and slave to feed the maw
Of a flaming hell that roars for more and bakes your hard set jaw.
Your eyes have winced as the furnace door disclosed that hellish glare,
And that tongue of flame that slithered out to burn the very air.
Great beads of sweat coursed swiftly down to scourge your aching feet
As they felt for a bit of solid deck, all warped by clinkers' heat.
Your calloused hands have worked the tools that grow so searing hot,
As you slice and rake the mocking fires that chain you to the spot.
Your sweat cloth chafes your neck until the salt cuts through your hide,
Your gloves have shrivelled on your hands, your lungs have all but dried.
If you have done this thankless job, I give you now my hand,
For you are the one who really knows how convoys reach the land.
You have fought your way across the seas, have gained your bit of fame,
When your ship arrived all safe in port upon your white hot flame.

MOTOR MAIDS

You will find them in the motor mechanic rooms of the Collegiate Institute every Tuesday and Thursday evening. They have exchanged the traditional cold cream for the grease of stubborn motor engines. Their faces are smudged black in spots, and their hands are the conventional "Commando" shade.

They are girl members of the Belleville company of the Canadian Women's Service Force here, who have taken to the new course of motor mechanics recently included in the syllabus of training like the traditional duck to the water.

These girls are setting a fine example of what women can do in wartime. The greater majority of them are already engaged in regular war work, and are spending two of their evenings per week preparing for an emergency.

Two nights a week they exchange pretty frocks or party dresses for the overall of the mechanic. Two nights a week they delve deeply into the "innards" of an automobile or truck motor. They exchange the cook-book for the mechanic's manual. They are wielding wrenches instead of flour sifters. Heads formerly absorbed with knowledge of cups of sugar, how to beat an egg, to decorate a living room, to arrange their own bedrooms, and to entertain company, are now busy with oil-cups carburetors, inner tubes, spark-plugs and manifolds.

And according to Instructor Davis, and commanding officer Major Maloney and Captain Marion Harden and officers, the girls are showing a fine aptitude for the strange work.

The greater part of the squad have received extensive military training. They can march and execute military manoeuvres like their brothers in the reserve army, and have taken several lectures on matters pertaining to their own syllabus of training.

Now they are widening out into a more extensive field. Women in other parts of the Dominion have shown remarkable versatility since the war began, and the local girls feel that they are just as capable and versatile as those of other communities.

When the course is completed the motor mechanic lassies will be able to diagnose the trouble of an ailing motor; instal spare parts; change a tire, or drive certain vehicles through the figurative eye of a mechanized transport needle.

If and when an emergency does arise, the girls of the C.W.S.F. here will be ready.

A tourist was asking a lot of questions about an English village and the oldest inhabitant was giving the answers:

Tourist: "And how about the water supply—what precautions do you take against infection?"

Old Timer: "Well, first of all, we boils it sir."

Tourist: "Good."

Old Timer: "And then we filters it."

Tourist: "Fine!"

Old Timer: "And then, sir, we drinks beer."

SACRIFICE

'Tis youth must do the dying
And youth must ride the skies,
And we must keep from buying
Some trinket we could prize,
And many brave the ocean
Where dreadful dangers lurk
But we, in our devotion,
An extra hour must work.

They struggle 'gainst the Axis
To hold our banner high,
We pay a few more taxes
And give up cake and pie.

On them the shells are raining.
In freedom's cause they fall,
We use, without complaining,
for golf, a poorer ball.

'Tis youth must face the cannon
And battle tyrant powers,
And we must put a ban on
Some little whims of ours.
They hear machine guns rattle,
They watch the bombers pass
And we, the while they battle
Save rubber tires and gas.

Democratic Ideals and Reality

New York, Oct. 14—I think it is time again to look at the reality of this war.

This war is a struggle by two nations for the mastery of the globe. The plan is blueprinted and clear.

The German plan is the military domination of the great land area of Eurasia, regarding Africa as its annex, with control of all the internal seaways—the Mediterranean, the Black Sea, the Caspian and the Persian Gulf.

This involves, first, the conquest of France, and then the conquest of Russia, to be followed by the conquest of Egypt and the Middle East.

This plan did not originally, or immediately, involve the conquest of the British Empire. All the evidence shows that Hitler hoped to obtain the collaboration of Britain in it, and, in exchange, was prepared to "guarantee" the existence of the British Empire.

This idea was rejected by Great Britain, for idealistic and materialistic reasons. A nation controlling Eurasia would be in a position to strike at any moment at the British Isles themselves and at the whole British world, whenever it chose to do so, and once it had consolidated its strength would be unconquerable by any other Western power or consolidated remnants of power on earth.

Plans of Conquest

The Japanese plan is, from the island base, which occupies off Asia the position of Britain in Europe, first, to create a huge land base in China, and by a combination of naval and land power to dominate and organize the whole Pacific area. This means the total conquest of China, the conquest of all other European empires or spheres of influence, and the establishment of Japan in the role of Germany in the Far East.

With apologies to Sir Halford Mackinder for plagiarizing the title of his book.

This Pacific area—like the Eurasian area—has no natural limitations. It can include India, Australia, and the Pacific shores of South America, North America, and, certainly, Alaska.

The conjunction of these predicated German and Japanese empires could lead at the end to a struggle between them, but not before all other powers had been eliminated, and they had reached their largest extensions.

If we can imagine what they have planned, there would be one part of the world encircled by them, and that would be the so-called Western Hemisphere, two large islands, which would be in the pincers of them both, unprotected in two oceans. For every Atlantic and Pacific outpost, including the British Isles, would be conquered, disarmed or drawn by politics into their sphere of influence.

The Americas in such a setup would be helpless and finished. No guarantee whatsoever could save us, for a guarantee, in itself, when the overwhelming bulk of power is on the opposite side, is only a means of bloodless subjection. The guaranteed power has to accept the conditions of the guarantor. Even an alliance does not change that condition, as Italy now knows.

A Fight for Survival

That, therefore, is the reason we are fighting this war. Apart from all ideologies, we are fighting it to foil this monstrous military conspiracy for the primary purpose of sheer survival.

We would have not the slightest chance of survival if we stood alone as an isolated power. We might survive for a generation while the Eurasian power and the Far Eastern power were being consolidated, but in thirty years the American children of today would fight a war and lose it.

We have a chance against this outcome, because we are not alone. We have alliances. So long as they stand, and we fight arm in arm, for our mutual survival, we can be convinced of victory.

We did not choose our alliances. They were given us by the nature of the war. We are not asked by Destiny whether we like the inner structure, the political history, or even the ambitions of all of our allies. And the same is true for our allies. They have not been asked by Destiny whether they like us. Maybe there are persons amongst us who would prefer to fight only with prototypes of American democracy, only with the powers that have no imperial past or present, only with powers that believe in the capital system just as there may be persons among our allies who would prefer to fight with an American monarchy, or an American Soviet State. But we and they have no choice.

All Together—or Not at All

Only if we realise the supreme importance of this fact of alliance are we able to build the base for a true war of coalition. The future is important, and has to be discussed. But it can be discussed only in the fullest realisation that there will be no future for any of us unless we stick together.

Our enemies know this so well that they hope to win this war by politics—namely, by playing on the divergencies of our political and economic structures, international interests and ideologies.

One of the monkey wrenches they are throwing into our war of coalition is called "British Imperialism." Another is "American Plutocracy." Another is "The Bolshevization of Europe."

But we must keep our eyes single-mindedly fixed on our goal—which is their defeat, and our survival. Our survival is our victory. Out of that victory we can make a newly organized world—or throw it into international cutthroat competition for another generation.

But first we have to survive—all together, or not at all.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

The membership of The American Legion has reached about 1,126,000, the highest on record.

There are now 11,844 local American Legion posts throughout the country.

More than 100,000 members of the American Legion are back in active military or naval service in World War II.

Over 300,000 sons and grandsons of Legionnaires are serving in the armed forces of the United States.

It is estimated that 60 percent of the members of local draft boards are members of The American Legion.

The American Legion was tentatively organised in Paris, France, on March 17, 1919, by members of the American Expeditionary Force.

The organisation shortly afterwards was incorporated by act of Congress and a permanent organisation perfected at St. Louis before the end of that year.

Membership in the American Legion is restricted to persons (including the Nurses' Corps) honorably discharged from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard who served for a part or all of the period between April 6, 1916, and November 11, 1918.

Whether or not the constitution should be amended to make veterans of the present war eligible to membership became an important question among Legionnaires immediately after Pearl Harbor.

There are no honorary memberships in The American Legion.

The Flanders poppy is the symbol of the organisation.

The American Legion Auxiliary is composed of wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of veterans of the first World War.

This organisation has more than half a million members.

There is also an organisation known as The Sons of the American Legion, with a comparatively small membership.

The headquarters of The American Legion are at Indianapolis.

In 1939, less than six months before the outbreak of the present war in Europe, Ambassador William C. Bullitt unveiled a plaque on the building in Paris where The American Legion was tentatively formed 20 years before.

The Forty and Eight, a club composed of American Legion members, was organised in 1920 and takes its name from the sign on French railway cars—"Forty Men or Eight Horses."

During the early days of the republic the United States Army was called "the American Legion."

Belleville Delegates Describe Reception Held in Ottawa for Viscount Bennett

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Conservative Club was held in the Clubrooms over Lattimer's Drug Store, on Friday evening last. The evening opened with a singsong led by Mrs. Harry Rollins, president. After the usual business was attended to, the Club was entertained by Miss Bessie Soutar, V.O.N., with moving pictures of beautiful flower beds in Belleville and vicinity, and also a picture of the wonderful work the V.O.N. are doing in Belleville, fully describing the care which they give in homes, and also the work they are doing in the V.O.N. Clinic.

Mrs. Harry Rollins and Mrs. R. James McLuskie, having just returned from Ottawa, described their trip to the Club. Mrs. Rollins, president, told of the trip down to Ottawa, and the visit to Lady Perley's home to attend a reception held in honor of The Right Honorable The Viscount Bennett, P.C. by the Committee in charge of the Conservative Mobile Unit Fund, to which the Belleville Club were one of the highest contributors in Ontario. The highlight of the evening was a speech by Viscount Bennett:

"In time of war you women have made a notable contribution to welfare work in England, and I do congratulate you, as Her Majesty the Queen did, when she accepted your mobile kitchens".

These words of praise were from Viscount Bennett to more than 200 Conservative men and women who attended a reception that night at the home of Lady Perley, given by the Conservative Business Women's Club.

Throughout Canada Conservative men and women joined together in a campaign to raise money for mobile kitchen for England, under the leadership of Miss Jeanne Travers, of Ottawa, who originated the Dominion-wide scheme. Funds sufficient for seven of the valuable kitchens were sent to Viscount Bennett, who selected the type of kitchen desired, and ordered their manufacture.

The kitchens, presented to Her Majesty at a ceremony on Berkeley Square, were designated by the Queen as follows: Two to Midlothian; two to Wales; two for use of the London firefighters, and one to the Home Guard in Surrey.

Praises Plan

"You will never realize what a splendid idea yours was to present mobile kitchens to those people so directly concerned in the defence of the island", Viscount Bennett said. "I know a lot of you women are working very hard, but if one of you worked as hard as Her Majesty you would be a great deal more tired than you are now. Your mobile kitchens were said by the Queen to be the finest she had ever seen. They were designed by a Canadian, manufactured by a concern of which the president is a Canadian, and the money was raised by Conservative women of Canada.

Mrs. McLuskie, secretary, described their visit to the home of the President of the Ottawa Club, Miss Jeanne Travers on the following morning to view a display of knitted goods which were to be sent to the Civilian Defence Committee in London for use in bombed areas. They had the honour of being guests at a luncheon held at the Chateau Laurier on Thursday, of Viscount Bennett, which was attended by over four hundred Conservative ladies, who had been contributors to the Mobile Unit Fund. Our Belleville ladies were invited to sit at the Head Table, together with representatives from Clubs in Montreal, Kingston, Huntingdon, and other cities, also Miss Jeanne Travers and Viscount Bennett.

Mrs. Rollins was asked to speak and told of the war work that the Belleville Club was doing in contributions to the Mobile Kitchen Unit the Can A Month Club in connection with same, the British War Victims Fund the Kinsmen Fag Fund, and the Kinsmen Milk Fund.

Other speakers were Mrs. Henry Joseph, president of the English Speaking Women's Conservative Clubs of Montreal, Mrs. Stover from Kingston, Mrs. G. R. Graham of Huntingdon, Quebec, Mrs. Marlow from Montreal, and Miss Jamieson of Ottawa, Miss Jeanne Travers, President of the Ottawa Club.

Former Prime Minister said:—

"What is one among so many. It is a great pleasure to see you here in this old room. I have seen many gatherings of the fair sex, and those not so fair. It recalls old days. It is always, remember what has been cannot be changed. What has been has been.

"We are now in the midst of a Great War. A war which will determine the fate of the world. The Christian faith is not embraced by so many people as non-Christian. In heathen countries the Christian conception has found a firm lodging place. Today the issue is the survival or the destruction of our western Christian civilization which has existed several thousand years, and in spite of it we are engaged in the most ruthless war we can have any conception of. This very hour the struggle is to determine whether the Christian conception of civilization can continue or not. The enemies have made their declaration without any reservations at all. They must destroy Britain. There can be no victory to the Axis powers without destroying Britain.

"You do not realize how vital this struggle is to Canadians. Our whole life and way of living may be changed by a battle fought in Egypt. We know in the fraction of a second what is going on in every part of the world. This makes it much more difficult to do the things which must always be done in connection with certain operations.

"We in Canada enjoy life. Only three pieces of sugar, and a few things of that sort. In the actions of the people you can see certain indications that all is not well. We have not quite made up our mind what we should do. We ask for instructions. We forget one thing. As long as we forget it we do not struggle toward success and victory in this war.

"What is democracy? Abraham Lincoln says: "Government of the people, for the people by the people", and the struggle was that it must not perish from the world. You do not like to be told what to do, when to eat, how much light you can have. What would happen to you if you had the dictation of Hitler? How would you like the real thing?

"If the people are to rule they should know what they are doing. Mr. Balfour established a principle that the majority should rule and when they cease to rule you have a hypocrisy that is more damnable than dictatorship. Minorities cannot rule countries. —"of the people"—one section cannot say to the rest of the country that it must do something whether they like it or not. The sentiment of the majority of the people demanded that we should be in the war although the leading powers ruled that we should not go into the war.

"I say to you here today—I am concerned in the future of this country in spite of the fact that I am no longer living in it. We did not foresee type of struggle that we have because we were so wholly unprepared for anything and the enemy were prepared for everything.

"Do you remember your struggle for disarmament? Do you remember your peace ballots? Do you remember Sir George Perley and Miss Kidd and others at the Geneva Conference for disarmament? We all believed in it then. Disarmament must be universal. One people were turning out tanks and guns, while we were talking peace.—What happens —Well this is what has happened to us.

"Do not be too critical—for remember that we all were anxious for disarmament. Democracy cannot flourish except in times of peace. We pay the price for war in dictatorship. Parliament gives the power to a few chosen groups of people who know the conditions to give us three lumps of sugar. It is not Parliament whom we are to blame. Don't be too concerned about regimentation. We are playing a game of make believe in this war".

Fighters Aboard Freighter to Fight Raiders

This Hurricane fighter being swung aboard an Allied merchantman belongs to the "M.S.F.U."—the initials which mean Merchant Service Fighter Unit and which spell out hearty opposition for any of Germany's long-range bombers which seek to attack the convoy of which the ship will be a part. The Hurricane is loaded on its catapult, as shown, and the ship carries a fighter pilot and a small staff of maintenance men. When the Hurricane has accomplished its mission of fighting off air attackers, the pilot bails out and abandons his craft since no gear for recovering the machine is carried. The pilot takes his chance of being picked out of the water.

WEDDINGS

ANDREWS—DOLDER

On Saturday afternoon, at 2.30, a very pretty and impressive wedding service took place at Christ Church when Doris Irene, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dolder, of 22 Harriet Street, became the bride of John Frederick, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Andrews of 14A West Bridge Street.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. G. Wright. The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a brown and sand wool crepe suit trimmed with beige accessories and corsage of red roses. She was attended by Mrs. Herbert Seames, sister of the bride, who wore a navy tailored suit trimmed with powder blue accessories and corsage of red roses.

The groom was attended by Mr. W. Edwards, Gordon Street.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, where a buffet luncheon was served to friends and relatives. The bride's table was centred with a beautiful wedding cake caught with pink and white streamers. Later the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to Cobourg.

Out of town guests were Mrs. A. Ling of Cobourg and Mrs. Stan Fenton and baby Barry of Oshawa.

RITZ—CALVERT

A marriage of considerable interest in the wide circle of friends and acquaintances of the popular bride and groom, was solemnized on Saturday, October 10, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Calvert, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, when their eldest daughter, Cora Alberta, became the bride of Russell Phillipe Ritz, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ritz, Corbyville. Rev. James Spence was the officiating clergyman. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Cale Calvert.

The bride looked charming in a street length dress of pale blue silk embroidered tulle and carried a bouquet of pink carnations and bouvardia. She was attended by her sister, Miss Anita Calvert, dressed in rose triple sheer and wearing a corsage of pink snapdragons and white carnations. Mr. Clayton Ritz was his brother's groomsman. The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of Community plate silver, to the bridesmaid, a blue and gold compact, to the groomsman, a gold tie slide and collar pin and to the pianist, perfume.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mrs. Calvert received wearing a dress of dusty rose crepe and a corsage of pink carnations and fern. She was assisted by Mrs. Ritz dressed in wine crepe and wearing a corsage of pink carnations.

The bride and groom left for a trip through Western Ontario. For travelling, the bride chose a rose dress of sheer wool with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Corbyville.

"I'M THE GAL THAT 'KEEPS 'EM FRYING'"

Bob's away—'keeping 'em flying' and I'm the gal he left behind to take care of things at home! In with all the other extra jobs, I like to see that his buddies here get a good home-cooked meal . . . so it's open house . . . and it keeps me on the jump cooking and baking! I love it . . . but it doesn't leave me much time . . . certainly no time for fussing over my complexion like I used to!

But I take that in my stride, too—just before dinner I scoot upstairs, and in two minutes I'm fresh as a new pin—thanks to Palmolive. Why, it's simply marvellous how that creamy Palmolive lather cleanses and tones up my skin . . . leaves it velvety-soft and smooth . . . without the slightest irritation. That's because Palmolive's made with the costliest blend of soothing Olive and Palm Oils . . . and everybody knows they are two of Nature's finest beauty aids. And Palmolive gives my skin such an inviting fragrance—I feel as though I'd spent two hours over my complexion instead of just two Palmolive minutes.

NOW MORE THAN EVER YOU NEED PALMOLIVE TO KEEP THAT SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION

Silver Wedding Anniversary Marked By Dinner Party

Madoc—On Saturday evening, October 10, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Tanner, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Tanner entertained at a dinner party, sixteen of their intimate friends. The dining room was decorated with Autumn flowers and leaves and the tables with flowers and silver candles. The guests were served by their two daughters, Misses Aileen and Phylis Tanner. Following the dinner an impromptu program of songs and instrumental music, piano and violin was given by Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Haggerty, Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater, Mrs. Ford Tumelty, Misses Jean and Coleen Haggerty, Mrs. Glen Haggerty, Master Billie Tumelty and the Misses Tanner. A very pleasant evening was brought to a close with the singing of "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" and "Auld Lang Syne". Mr. and Mrs. Tanner were the recipients of many lovely gifts of silver.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McPherson of Toronto, spent the weekend with Mrs. W. Gray.

The monthly business meeting of the Madoc Red Cross was held in the Red Cross rooms on Thursday evening, with the president Mrs. Jennie Morrison in charge. Mrs. Morrison gave a report on the banquet held recently in the Armouries for the Masonic Lodge. The proceeds amounted to $73.12 and the Society wishes to thank everyone who in anyway assisted in making the banquet a success. It was decided to fill 36 ditty bags. The Red Cross is co-operating with the Navy League and the Ontario Red Cross has promised to equip 12,000 bags. Madoc branch will share in this work and will hold a quilting and ditty-bag shower. Donations will be gratefully accepted. The local Red Cross has decided, if possible to send a box to Capt. Jack Foote, who is reported a prisoner of war after Dieppe. Mr. Walter Whytock has donated a yearling Jersey heifer to the local branch and tickets are now on sale. The society wishes to acknowledge with thanks the following donations:

Harts' Unit, 2 quilts, 1 child's comforter, 2 pairs mitts; J. B. Bridge Club $5.

The following articles were shipped to Red Cross Headquarters:—20 quilts, 1 pillow and case, 1 layette, 1 skirt, 1 rubber cap; Women's Institute, 3 quilts; O'Hara's Unit, 7 quilts, pillow and slip, 1 ladies' skirt, 1 baby's sweater, nightie, slip and cap.

Fashion Flashes

Biggest coat success of the season is the wrappy coat with tuxedo revers in fur. Such coats are practical as they can be worn over suits. An electric bluish purple woolish is used for such a coat with wide revers of leopard.

Young things just dote on colored velveteen, so a dress likely to please them is of shocking pink velveteen made with a tiny Peter Pan collar and a shirred waistline pulled in with a voilet moire drawstring.

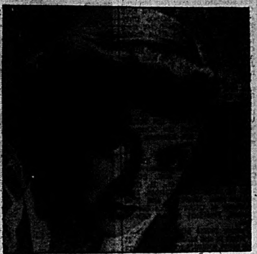
Best best for glamor is the beautifully cut untrimmed frock of fine fabric. Black ribbed silk is used for a smart after-five frock made with bodice that has deep V collarless neckline, fringed self fabric at the sleeves, with waistline that is draped and twisted. Hem is self-fringed as well.

There's ease in frocks made with drawstring waists. A charming yet comfortable to wear dinner dress, fashioned of silver and blue lame, has a deep, collarless neckline and elbow sleeves. The drawstring waist permits the wearer to dispose of the soft skirt fullness according to her own dictates.

Color rises to the head as hats become bright and gay. Bright purple yarn is sewn together to look like cloth for a hgih turban on fez lines trimmed at back with loops of the wool in a fringe threaded with turquoise and cyclamen beads.

Set off dull fabrics with shiny surfaced accessories and vice versa. With a dull crepe date dress, a hat, bag and shoes of black satin, or dull faille accessories with a satin or velvet frock.

Eat Right for Hair's Beauty



Bette Davis has lovely blonde hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TO TAKE care of your glorious crown, you must take care of your health, keep to a balance diet, have circulation hustling.

Hair, like the organs of the body, is dependent upon general vitality. It has a sympathetic nature. It goes into a state of depression when the body suffers from fatigue, nervous disturbances, digestive upsets, loss of sleep. So, if you want to keep your wool until old age, mind your health habits.

There should be a shampoo every fortnight, plenty of melted soap used, gallons of rinsing water applied. The only way to remove the suds is to use a strong current of water and a bath spray. Let it pound on your head.

Before the shampoo give the hair 100 strokes of the brush. Every night massage the scalp. Spread out fingers and thumbs, lift the flesh and roll it. The looser the flesh, the better the circulation will be.

Dentists tell us that calcium is necessary for the well-being of teeth and, by the same process of reasoning, hair specialists believe that certain food elements are necessary for the health of the hair. Surveys show that men who are prematurely bald are finicky eaters. They limit the diet to a few article of food, don't get the required amount of vitamins and minerals salts.

If your old man sticks up his nose at vegetables, says he won't eat them, don't offer him any sympathy when he bawls about his hair getting thin. Serves him right.

Feminine Charm Prescription: Let Him Talk About Himself

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

There seems to be something about a charming girl that attracts al men. What is charm? Can it be taught? I have been told there are a number of charm schools. I'm 24 years of age, and have never had a proposal of marriage or anyone seriously in love with me.

"Elsie".

I haven't seen statistics stating the amount of money rounded up by the charm business this year. But consulting my files I see that that two years ago it netted $7,000,000. One charm school boasts of more than half a million pupils and graduates.

To my way of thinking, it's a question whether all these 500,000 women might not appear a good deal like buttons on a card. They are all taught—espcially the older ones who have acquired double-mezzanine figures—to swing out and became graceful along the same lines. Personally, I'd hate to get in a crowd where the dowagers were all doing a leg fling when they walked.

Of course, every woman knows, or ought to know, that if she is immaculately neat, thoroughly well-groomed, and doesn't paint herself like a red Indian, that she'll be much more charming than if she presents herself to a critical world in a slovenly or indifferent manner.

In the old days, ladies like du Barry and Ninon d'Enclos were supposed to rule men with no harsher arsenal than a pair of violet eyes, pouting lips or the way they used their lovely hands. These natural charmers went through life conquering all and sundry.

Today, any girl possessed of a liberal dose of horse sense can be her own charm instructress. She gives the gentleman she's charming a chance to talk about himself and the things in which he is interested. She looks her best—she'll even leave off things which grate on his nerves.

If she has access to a kitchen, she can learn to cook him the things he remembers fondly. If she has no kitchen privileges, she can do almost as well with a chafing dish or grill.

One of the great charm experts says the way to hold a man is to appeal to his chivalry. In other words, you must make him think you're a poor, unprotected, little creature who hopes to take his advice on every subject. She doesn't say that if you have a good mind you're not conceal it but that's understood.

It would take a volume of gigantic proportions to cover the subject of charm. Your charm is your own, something you must work over and discover for yourself.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bridegroom Will Be in Uniform What is Proper Bridal Costume?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am to be married at a camp where my fiance, a sergeant, is stationed. Besides my brother and my fiance's brother, the only other guests will be some friends of my fiance at his camp.

My fiance will, of course, wear his uniform. What do you think it would be more appropriate, and wonder if you agree with me.

M. C.

I do agree that, for the informal kind of wedding you are planning, a suit (or dress, if you prefer) would be more appropriate than formal bridal attire. Your suit might be either a dressy suit or a sports-type suit. I'd like to suggest the fashionable and useful ensemble, a two-piece suit with a matching topcoat. Or you might wear a street-length afternoon dress at the wedding; for travelling, wear a harmonizing topcoat.

Correct Procedure

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband gave the bride in marriage at a church wedding, as the bride's father is not living. After the recessional, an usher came back down the aisle and escorted the bride's mother up the aisle, leaving my husband to follow them. Was this the proper procedure?

T. O. S.

Yes, if, as I judge, your husband, after he had given the bride in marriage, took his seat with the bride's mother in the first pew, the procedure you describe was proper.

Who Pays for Flowers?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—The other evening I was talking with a group of my close friends, and we were discussing the question as to who buys the flowers for the maid of honor and the bridemaids in a wedding party. Some said the uhers are supposed to supply these flowers; others said the bride's family should. Who is right?

2.—Does the mother of the groom-to-be give a shower for the bride?

Groom-to-be

1.—The ushers are not expected to supply the flowers for the bride's attendants. Neither is this the responsibility of the best man. Customarily, the bride's family supplies the flowers for the bride's attendants, since they are planned to harmonize with the attendants' costume and with the nuptial color-scheme. However, sometimes the groom asks for the privilege of sending the flowers to his bride's attendants, and he may properly do this, if he goes with his fiance to the florist's to choose with her the flowers she has planned for her attendants.

Alcoholic's Desire for Drink Often Result of Psychological Problem

The habit of drunkenness is one of the tragedies that result from the abuse of alcoholic beverages. Chronic alcoholism is really a disease and is often difficult to cure.

Its causes are many—some physical, other psychological. There is some evidence that alcoholism runs in families, but this may be because of surroundings common to the family and not because of heredity.

The effect of alcohol varies in different persons. Some become talkative, other aggressive, and some morose. Many young persons begin to drink because they have been repressed, or have had too little opportunity for self-expression. Some persons may drink to 'blow off steam'. Alcohol is known to relieve nervous tension. Often, therefore, a person may drink because of anxiety or because others disapprove of his actions and behavior. A person who has lost his self-confidence often may drink to excess. Economic difficulties, social troubles and the entire loss of will-power to face difficulties and problems are among other factors that lead to excessive drinking.

Dr. Merrill Moore of Boston says that the roots of desire for alcohol may be planted in childhood because of over-dominance or over-pampering by the parents, by failure to train the child to feel equal to those around him, and by wrong handling of the craving for sweets.

In treating chronic alcoholism, the suggestions which Dr. Moore gives are, first, to take the liquor away from the patient. Then the alcohol must be eliminated from the stomach and tissues. The patient should be given plenty of fluids and food to build up a reserve of water, vitamins and minerals. To relieve nervous tension, such drugs as bromides or aspirin ma, be prescribed by the physician.

It is not unusual for the patient to be willing to co-operate in getting rid of his trouble. Therefore, an effort must be made to find out what the patient's problems are so that perhaps by helping to solve them the doctor may also help to eliminate the patient's desire for drink. Through sports, hobbies, work and all forms of play and recreation that alcoholic may be trained not to drink. It is important to keep the patient busy and his mind occupied. Many persons drink only when bored or unoccupied. Nagging and blaming the patient do no good. The alcoholic is a sick man. He is emotionally sick and requires careful treatment.

Trenton and District

Military Parade on Sunday Will Inaugurate Victory Loan Drive

Trenton (Special) — Canada's Third Victory Loan will be ushered in at Trenton on Sunday, Oct. 18th by a large parade including the Royal Canadian Air Force, Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment, Veterans, T.H.S. cadets, guides, scouts and cubs. A commando will carry the symbolic dagger to the foot of Mount Pelion where a mass meeting will be addressed by the Honorable G. Howard Ferguson ex-Premier of Ontario and Canada's ex-High Commissioner to Britain. Air Commodore McGill, Officer Commanding the Trenton Air Station and Group Captain Heddle Officer Commanding 6 A.R.D. will also address the meeting. In the event of unfavorable weather conditions the public will be taken care of in both theatres where loud speakers will be set up.

The drive proper gets under way on Monday, Oct. 18th and the committee in charge is comprised of Honorary Chairmen H. Desjardins and K. Couch, Chairman W. H. Ireland, Vice-Chairman W. B. McClung, Sales —Committee W. Bain, Clarence Saylor, Sidney Martin, Public Relations and Publicity V. S. Orchard.

On Tuesday the 19th the National Convoy Parade of armoured column including tanks, jeeps, etc., will pass through Trenton on its way to Picton and Belleville. Canada's Third Victory Loan will be another opportunity for Canadians to demonstrate their desire to drive Hitlerism from the face of the earth. Representatives will call at each and every home in Trenton and it is expected every citizen will buy bonds to his utmost.

Trenton's Bridge is a Bottleneck

Once again it was demonstrated last Saturday night that the Trenton bridge is grossly inadequate for present day traffic. From about 11.30 p.m. till 2 a.m. Sunday three of Trenton's policemen were busy devising ways and means of trying to get the traffic through Dundas Street bridge The bridge became blocked by an R.C.A.F. aeroplane transport which wedged so tightly between the floor and the upper beams that it could neither go forward nor backward. As it was directly in the centre of the bridge and wider than most vehicles, due to the nature of the load which it was carrying, the east and west bound traffic on Highway No. 2 was brought to an abrupt standstill. However, as this is a regular occurrence the Trenton police are becoming past masters at devising ways and means of taking transports out of their wedged positions. It was feared at first by the driver of the transport and those in charge that if the air was let out of the tires the weight of the load would cut them to pieces, however, as this was the only means of lowering the load this method was adopted. After a considerable time the vehicle was eventually eased sufficiently to get it through the bridge.

During all this delay bus drivers, transport drivers and private owners of cars were honking furiously for permission to get on their way.

Hits Motor Transport

At 4 p.m. on Monday an accident occurred on Dundas Street West near Dufferin Avenue when a car driven by Hubert McCoy, Leopold Street crashed into the rear of a motor transport owned by Cecil M. Roberts, and driven by Arthur MacAuley. The brakes of the car, an old model "A" Ford owned by Elwood Phillips, failed to work as the driver attempted to stop behind the truck which had already stopped for the traffic signal. The gas tank was ripped open and gas spilled all over the car but fortunately it did not catch fire or serious damage might have resulted. Passengers in the car at the time were Mr. Amos Weeks, Miss Audrey Weeks and Bruce Cooney. Mr. Harold Smith and Thornton Ferguson were passengers in the truck. None of the passengers was injured.

Work of W. V. S. Described

Miss Frieda Held of Ottawa, was guest speaker at a mass meeting of Trenton ladies in the Town Hall on Friday evening for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements for the establishment of a Women's Voluntary Service centre in Trenton. Representatives of the different churches and fraternal organizations were present. Miss Held, who represents the Dominion Government is assisting in organising such centres all across Canada with a view to having Canadian women definitely trained and willing to undertake any task necessary in event of any emergency arising from the present conflict. This movement was started last March and already many towns and cities are well under way and doing a marvelous work in this connection.

The idea of the organization is to have one local centre where women of all ages may register, giving such information as their occupation, whether employed altogether in the home, or whether elsewhere, what work they are capable of doing, what they worked at before their marriage, and how many hours or days per week they would be able to give to other local work (voluntarily) should the need arise. Miss Held suggested that in case a local centre could be organized, it would be a wise idea for each society (church and fraternal, etc.) to give to the centre names of their members and the outstanding abilities which each member possessed. She pointed out the tremendous value in the recording of all this information, in the event of the many needs which will and are arising every day in every locality.

As an example Miss Held mentioned the housing problem in the town, the registration of rooms which is to be undertaken very shortly, and said that if this Voluntary Service centre were established the proper people could be contacted at once to undertake this registration. As another example she mentioned the campaign which is to take place at once regarding the sale of Victory Bonds. Through this Voluntary Service centre many might be contacted who would be excellent sales people and otherwise might never be heard of. Each woman is asked to register her talents along whatever line they may fall. Through this registration such services as creches for children could be set up, women trained as fire-fighters, courses given in nutrition, A.R.P. and many other lines.

Miss Held stressed the fact this war has definitely three fronts. The Fighting Front, the Industrial Front and the Home Front of Volunteers and the latter is not the least important. Women and men in all walks of life should be ready and willing to give every assistance in their power to help along at home in the many hours of leisure time which we enjoy and which will by no means be ours if we do not fight hard to retain it.

A committee made up of ten ladies, Mrs. Joyce, Mrs. Boyce, Mrs. Ireland, Miss L. Cumming, Miss Hayes, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. McQuade, Mrs. Bain, Miss L. M. McClung and Miss H. Farley was named to meet again on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. McQuade when further consideration will be given to the scheme and a slate of further names assembled to be presented at another mass meeting in the town hall again on Friday next, October 16th at 8 p.m. It is hoped that next Friday will see the hall packed with Trenton women willing and eager to see this scheme fully organised in Trenton.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. McClung and family spent the holiday with Mrs. McClung's father in Cobden.

LAC. Bill Rupert is spending two weeks' leave in town before being posted to Oshawa.

Congratulations to Sergeant Pilot Murray Dixon who graduated at Moncton, N.B., on Friday last. Murray is spending embarkation leave with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Murray Dixon, Frances Street.

Miss Clara Heaslip, West Street, is visiting relatives in Kingston.

Miss Audrey Barker who is attending Normal SSchool at Peterboro spent the holiday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. Barker, Leopold Street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. MacKenzie and family MacLellan Ave., spent the holiday with their parents at Branchton.

Miss Helen Kleinwart spent the holiday with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Don McColl, of Kingston spent Thanksgiving at his home on Shuter Street.

Miss Barbara Shurie Reg. N., of Toronto is visiting her brother Mr. Jack Shurie, Mrs. Shurie and family, Marmora Street.

Eggs Higher

Eggs took another jump on Trenton market on Saturday with 55c being asked for Grade "A" extras, mediums quoted mostly at 50c. Butter quite scarce brought 38 and 40c with chickens plentiful at all prices from $1.00 each up to $1.75. Quite a number of ducks were offered bringing $1.50 and $1.75.

Potatoes brought $2.00 per bag, onions 50c per peck, carrots 20c per basket, celery 15c for hearts or two for 15 for heads, cabbage 5c, cauliflower from 20c up.

Shoots Wild Goose

Mr. Jesse Baker one of Trenton's foremost duck hunters has dreamed for many years of bagging a goose but not until Friday morning last was his dream realised to the fullest. Mr. Baker who had taken up his hide at Sugar Point on Weller's Bay was waiting patiently for ducks when suddenly directly over his hide was the almost unbelievable "honk, honk" of a Canadian wild goose. Jesse was, as one can quite imagine, visibly excited but quickly took aim, fired, and down came the bird directly into the water near his hunting ground. The bird which was flying alone at the time weighed between six and seven pounds and according to Mr. Baker provided an excellent Thanksgiving dinner fit for a king.

Police made a thorough check-up on Sunday night of juveniles who were out after the curfew hour of 9 p.m. and the names of a large number were taken who were endeavoring to get into the midnight shows. The parents of these children were notified that any recurrence of this kind would result in prosecution.

Mr. Cecil Frost, Frankford, had his gas ration book (commercial) bearing truck licence number 54360 C taken from his truck while it was parked down town in Trenton some time on Friday. Four pages of coupons still remained in the book.

A duffle bag containing a considerable amount of clothing was found by Mr. Harry Filion on Bay Street on Saturday and was found to belong to a sailor to whom the bag was turned over.

A small cloth purse containing $5.00 in cash was found by Mrs. L. Rose on Trenton market on Saturday. The purse was found to belong to Miss Norma Clarke and was returned to her.

The strict honesty of Trenton's children is forcibly borne out by the fact that two large sums of money were found by them on Saturday and all turned in to the police where it awaits identity and the return to the owners.

Miss Anne McAuley, age about 9 years, who lives in the down town section, found a large sum of money on King Street, while 12-year-old Hugh Blight, of Baptiste Street, found another large sum on down town Dundas Street. Both these children immediately turned the money over to the police.

Trenton police were asked on Saturday afternoon by the Toronto General Hospital to locate a Mr. McGowan of R. R. No. 6, Trenton, in connection with a Miss McNair who was seriously ill in the hospital. Although the rural postmaster was contacted in an endeavor to locate Mr. McGowan it was found no person by that name resides near Trenton. The hospital was advised to get in touch with Orland or Hilton.

Child Escapes Injury

On Saturday afternoon a small child, Shirley Woodacre, of MacLellan Ave., was struck by a car driven by Charles St. Hilaire of Trenton as she dashed out from the Trent Theatre to cross the street directly in the path of the oncoming car which was proceeding east at the time. The child was knocked down but after being examined by Dr. Farley, was found to have nothing more than slight bruises on both legs.

S-O-S
(SAUSAGE) (ON) (SALMON)
DINNER PLATE

WOMEN have come to the conclusion after trying many sauces, that thick, fruity H. P. is tops in flavour and economy.

"S.O.S." Dinner Plate or "Sausage on Salmon" is a new, appetizing dish. Break into small pieces and fry ¼ lb. of sausage. Remove from pan and set to cool. To the sausage fat in pan add 2 tablespoons of flour and blend with 1½ cups of milk. Cook until thick, then add ½ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of pepper, 1 tablespoon H. P. Sauce and 1 teaspoon of chopped parsley. Pour over 2 well-beaten eggs. Drain and flake 1 can (1 lb.) of salmon and arrange in buttered casserole; dot with sausage. Pour sauce over fish and sausage and top with bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven for 45 min.

H. P. Sauce adds appetizing flavour to your favourite dishes.

Feel Poised in Public Speaking

Such a moment can shatter you if you aren't used to public speaking! You must address the chair or you're presented with an award . . . and you turn to jelly!

Yet it's easy to say charmingly: "Mr. Chairman, fellow members, thank you—"

Just learn correct forms, parliamentary rules! It smooths your way in any organization. In meetings, you win respect and attention with "Mr. Chairman (or Mr. President) I should like to disagree with the last speaker." Merely "I object" is blundering and incorrect.

Even a few short words will impress your audience if you know how to use your voice. Practise reading aloud at home—standing up. A way to overcome nasal tones is to keep your voice to the front of your mouth.

On the job, too, you get ahead faster when you know how to state your case.

Our 32-page booklet shows how to speak effectively, overcome voice defects. Gives rules of parliamentary order, what to say on many occasions. Helpful pointers on preparing speeches, radio speaking.

Are You Eating the Right Foods?

In these days of stress and strain when everybody must be at their best mentally and physically, health departments everywhere are trying to guide their communities as to proper food and eating habits.

While it may be true that too much has been said about the value of vitamins and minerals in the diet, nevertheless these two foods elements have led many to give more attention to their food needs. Because there is no lack of the necessary foods, most individuals pick or choose the foods they like; it does not occur to them that they could possibly be suffering from a lack of the right kind of food to give them strength and energy. For this reason the governments of various countries and many health writers are issuing books and booklets on nutrition for the many individuals who cannot understand why they have not more energy or why they get tired so soon.

In his book "The National Nutrition", Dr. Morris Fishbein, Editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, points out that teachers and parents should be watchful of children as many of the signs of poor nutrition can be easily overlooked.

Signs that suggest poor nutrition are (a) lack of appetite, (b) failure to eat a good breakfast, (c) failure to gain steadily in weight, (d) dislike of play, (e) chronic diarrhoea, (f) inability to sit still, (g) poor sleeping habits, (h) backwardness at school, (i) head colds, (j) bad posture, (k) sores at corners of mouth.

These same signs and symptoms are often seen in teen age boys and girls also and require the same careful attention.

The "food guide" issued by the United States Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service, published in poster form "can be applied simply and practically in every home".

"Milk and milk products — at least a pint for everyone—more for children—or cheese, or dried or evaporated milk".

"Oranges tomatoes, grapefruit—or raw cabbage or salad greens—at least one of these".

"Green or yellow vegetables—one big helping, other vegetables and fruits in season".

"Bread and Cereal"— whole grain or enriched white bread and flour".

"Meat, poultry or fish — dried beans, peas or nuts occasionally.

"Eggs—at least 3 or 4 a week, cooked any way you choose or in "made" dishes".

"Butter and other spreads—vitamin-rich fats, peanut butter, and similar spreads".

Duchess of Athol Claimed Sunk By German U-Boats

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Oct. 14 (AP)—The German High Command claimed today that its U-boats had sunk the 20,119-ton Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Atholl and the 23,456-ton British liner Orcades, and asserted they were "engaged in transporting troops to Egypt and the Middle East."

(There was no confirmation from any Allied source that either ship had been sunk, or even attacked, and the claim was added to a lengthening list of German-reported submarine successes advanced recently without substantiation. The sinkings were first claimed three days ago by the German radio.)

The German High Command said the Orcades was sunk off Cape Town and the Duchess of Atholl between Cape Town and Freetown. It described the ships as "equipped with arms and prepared for the transport of 9,000 to 10,000 men."

In addition the High Command claimed, two other ships totalling 17,425 tons were sent to the bottom of the South Atlantic off the African coast by German submarines and "in spite of the fact that continuous heavy autumn storms considerably handicapped operations," other U-boats sank 14 ships totalling 82,000 tons out of fully-laden convoys bound across the North Atlantic for Britain.

DIDN'T KNOW WAR WAS ON

Los Angeles, Oct. 14 — (AP) — Candido Yozano, 40-year-old farm worker, isn't one to fret over current events. Arrested for vagrancy, he couldn't produce a draft registration card and explained: "I didn't know about this draft; I didn't know there was a war going on."

ASK THAT BAN

Buck recently released from jail following his voluntary surrender to the R.C.M.P. after three years in hiding as a member of the outlawed Communist Party, made his first public address since 1939.

The former Communist Secretary said he believed conscription for overseas service would have to come in Canada because "we can't fight Hitler with one hand tied behind our backs."

Second Front Central Issue

Buck said the opening of a second front was the central issue in the war and declared "assurance of glowing superiority in arms is a poor substitute for action."

Premier Hepburn told the rally "I am proud to be on the platform with Tim Buck, and I say that with all sincerity."

Mr. Macaulay declared "we are facing an emergency not yet realised in full by the people of Canada."

"That's why I'm here tonight," he said. "That's why I am sitting beside Hepburn and Tim Buck. We are facing an emergency which revolves around our survival."

The former Conservative House Leader said "the ban should be removed," adding the report on the parliamentary committee recommending the lifting of the ban "was held in contempt by the government."

Canadian Airmen In Kiel Attack Say "Good Show"

London, Oct. 14 (CP).—Canadian airmen in the attack on Germany's naval and submarine base at Kiel last night reported today "it was a good show".

It was the 22nd trip together for Flt. Sgt. Sylvester Danahy of Riverside, N.S., a skipper, and Sgt. Gnr. Howard Bond of Darlington, Man., who have been chums since they started operational training overseas.

Both veterans of 1,000-bomber raids, they have been over Essen, Cologne, Emden, Dusseldorf, Frankfurt and Kassel.

"And now," Danahy said, "you can add Kiel to that list."

"We were in about the middle of the show," Danahy related. "We could see our stuff breaking, the fires were so bright."

For four other Canadians it was their 17th trip together and one of their most successful. They were PO. J. R. McDonald of Toronto, the captain; Sgt. J. D. Routledge, Mission B.C., rear gunner; Sgt.-Bomber Aimer R. W. Wright, Saskatoon, and Sgt. J. C. Gibbs, Bowmanville, Ont., mid-upper gunner.

4,000 Pounders Dropped.

"We dropped 4,000-pounders and incendiaries," McDonald said. "We have had lots of time, too, because we went three times over the target to make sure of it. We didn't see one German fighter although it would be a good night for them."

Sgt. G. H. Lancaster of Michel, B.C., took his crew, which included Sgt. J. S. Clifford of Oakville, Ont., and Ottawa, and Sgt. F. A. Roberts of North Bay, Ont., out for their second successful night. It was Clifford's second operational flight and he saw his aircraft's bombs explode smack on the taarget where "we certainly started some real fires."

Flt. Sgt. Red Boyd of Stouffville, Ont., captain of another aircraft, was on his fourth operational trip. On the return trip Boyd had to throw his aircraft around and drop to 800-feet to avoipd searchlights and heavy flak.

Germans Intensify Sub Warfare In Area Around Cape of Good Hope

London, Oct. 14—(CP)—An authoritative source said today that German submarine warfare has been intensified in the area around the Cape of Good Hope indicating that U-boats are being "forced further afield by the defensive-offensive tactics of the United Nations."

Previous enemy efforts in this area, around the southern point of Africa on the main seaway connecting Britain and the United States with the Middle East, China and Russia, had been chiefly minesowing and occasional surface or U-boat raids.

"We now see a new phase beginning with U-boat concentrations," said this British source.

This informant said the Nazis presumably were operating with a complete supply set-up since "it would be uneconomical to send a submarine from France to the Cape without some source of supply in the area."

One of the best means of combatting the sub-surface menace, therefore, would be to destroy refuelling points, he added, declaring that United Nations warships probably now are trying to seek out supply ships and possible shore bases.

JAPS SLAY MISSIONARIES

London, Oct. 14 — (CP) — Four Marist missionaries, two priests and two Sisters, were slain by Japanese soldiers on Guadalcanal Island in the Solomons, the British Colonial Office said today. The announcement, which said all four were bayoneted in the throat, identified the victims as Father Arthur Duhamel, 34, of Boston, Mass.; Father Henry Engberink, 33, of Utrecht, Netherlands; and Sisters Sylvia and Odatya, believed to be from France.

Do What Your Doctor Does If Child Is Listless

Because the tongue is the upper end of the stomach and bowels, it is usually the first thing a doctor looks at when he examines a sick child. He knows that a coated tongue and bad breath is a danger signal —a warning of an upset condition below, which may lead to real illness.

Don't you take chances—look at your child's tongue and check the breath every day! And at the first sign of bad odor on the breath or a coated tongue, give Children's Own Tablets. Small, pleasant-tasting tablets made especially for youngsters from runabout age to 15 years, they are wonderfully effective in helping to clean out harmful wastes and sweeten sour, upset stomachs. No drastic weakening flush-out action like many old-fashioned laxatives have.

ONE DAY MY HUSBAND SAID—
"I'M TIRED OF WEARING SHIRTS THAT LOOK HALF-WASHED"
THEN I FOUND OUT—NO MATTER HOW YOU DO YOUR WASH YOU NEED SUNLIGHT'S "EXTRA-SOAPINESS" FOR THOSE EXTRA DIRTY SPOTS
SUNLIGHT SOAP
A LEVER PRODUCT

Now my husband raves about his brighter shirts

HUSBAND: Gosh, Lucy, my shirts have a brand-new look this week. How did you do it?

WIFE: Easy as pie! I just put a touch of Sunlight Soap at the extra-dirty spots. Then, when I washed the clothes my usual way, Sunlight's "extra-soapiness" just eased out the dirt and grease.

HUSBAND: Great stuff! No "half-washed" look about the clothes this week!

WIFE: Everything is so much brighter now that I use the easy Sunlight method of washing. Grimy work clothes come spotlessly clean in no time; without hard rubbing, either! And Sunlight is all pure soap—that's why it's so kind to my hands, too.

Grand For Dishes Ladies! You'll say Sunlight is just as wonderful for speedier, easier dishwashing and all cleaning. Fairly melts away grease. And Sunlight goes a long, long way even in hardest water.

COMBINES TO USE LARGE IN GOAL FOR FOURTH GAME

Team Claims Jittery Display of Anthony Made Them Lose Third Game

PLAY IN TORONTO

Toronto, Oct. 14—(CP)—Whether it was over-confidence, loose netminding or simply the comeback of New Westminster Salmonbellies which caused Mimico-Brampton Combines' downfall in the third game of the Mann Cup finals may be determined tonight when the series resumes in Maple Leaf Gardens before an anticipated crowd of 5,000.

The theory favored by most railbirds is that all three factors contributed to New Westminster's 14-8 victory Monday night. Special stress on the goaltending angle, however, is laid by some observers who claim that Pete Anthony's jittery display in the Mimico-Brampton nets unnerved his teammates and set up the Salmonbelly triumph.

For the fourth game tonight, Coach Chuck Davidson has decided to replace Anthony with Bert Large. Large displayed the wizardry acquired in 13 seasons of lacrosse during the first two games. All agree his performance had a lot to do with Mimico-Brampton's 10-7 and 15-9 victories last week.

MARINES TO GET LYONS

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Ted Lyons made application for the Marine Corps Officers' Training School Tuesday, and expects to be called as soon as the papers are certified in Washington.

The 41-year-old Chicago White Sox pitcher, a bachelor, enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps Reserve several weeks ago. He said he planned to leave Thursday for his home in Vinton, La., to hunt and fish until called up.

Oshawa Captures Softball Laurels

Oshawa, Oct. 14 (CP)—Climaxing a fine all-Ontario O.S.A. intermediate "A" softball final series, Soup Campbell's Oshawa Colts took down the honors here Tuesday afternoon when they defeated North Bay Craig Bit team, 3 to 1.

Dominic Cangiano's North Bay team went into the game with their backs to the elimination wall, having lost on Saturday afternoon, 2-1.

The Craigs jumped into a lead in the first inning, after leaving two Oshawa runners stranded in the first half. With two out, Wib Hall juggled Squizzato's easy grounder, and then Demarco singled to right field, where Trewin fumbled the pickup and in his nervous haste threw the ball into the ground in front of him while trying to throw to second.

Oshawa got their last run in the seventh inning when Magee's drive into right field got away from Meehan for three bases. Colts argued that Mantha had tripped Magee as he rounded first base, but after a heated argument he remained at third base, scoring from there when V. McLaughlin drove a fly to deep centre.

London, Oct. 14 (CP)—You've got to hand it to a laddie such as tough Phil Milligan of Oldham, a bantamweight punch-tosser who trains in the hours he manages to get away from his job as a gunner in the Royal Artillery. He has to walk 10 miles every day—five miles each way—to test his weight because he's stationed Somewhere in England and the nearest scales are five miles from the camp....After an absence of nearly 20 years Augie Ratner is appearing again in London rings... He's stationed in England with the American Army....A famous middleweight in the years immediately after the last war he won the Allied Services Championship then at the Albert Hall....Referee for Ratner's initial appearance—or re-appearance to be more correct—was Lieut. H. G. Stribling, brother of the late Young Stribling....The bout was a three-round exhibition with Freddie Mills, light heavyweight champ.

Everybody knows how big a public favorite Gordon Richards, the champion jockey, has become.... But few realize he is even more popular with his brother riders.... They pay unstinted tribute to his sterling qualities and like him for the quiet modesty with which he has worn the jockey's crown for so many years....Richards is not a stylish but he has an exquisite sense of balance, grit and tremendous strength in his hands..Racing folk who remember Fred Archer, the great saddle idol of the '80s say it is unfair to contrast him with Richards....For one thing they belong to different generations and the conditions of riding are different....For a jockey Archer was tall, five feet 8 1-2 inches, with a figure emaciated by Turkish baths and starvation to keep down his weight ....Richards, short and sturdy, has no weight worries.

Lemons are a think of the past in Britain so football players just don't get a chance to suck them during half-time....The result is the local food committees in some spots have granted licences to serve tea to players during the half-time interval....The licence is necessary because of rationing restrictions....It took the war to bring about a mingling of amateurs and professionals in rugby football and rowing...Now "mixed" sculling has come about. ....Footballs are getting hard to come by....Swansea Town couldn't find a ball for a match between the Welsh National side and the R.A.F. and the Football Association had to help Swansea out of its difficulty.

Williams and Pesky To Be Naval Aviators

Boston, Oct. 14 (AP)—Ted Williams, winner of the American League's triple batting crown, and Johnny Pesky, his Boston Red Sox teammate, have just one more month before they launch their careers as naval aviators.

They have been called up in a group which will open its ground school training at Amherst College, Nov. 15. After two months there they will transfer to Chapel Hill, N.C., for secondary ground training in the North Carolina pre-flight school.

Joining Williams and Pesky in the group of naval air cadets, will be a pair of Boston Braves players, Louis (Buddy) Gremp, part-time first baseman, and relief pitcher John Sain. Another member of the group will be Paul Kluck, catcher for the Louisville farm team of the Sox.

LOBERT TO REMAIN

Philadelphia, Oct. 14 (AP).—Gerald Nugent, president of the National League Phils, expects to retain Hans Lobert as manager during 1943.

"I do not expect a change," Nugent said Monday of the 61-year-old former catcher, whose popularity with the fans was as strong all season as the team's hold on last place.

This was Lobert's first year as a big league manager. His current contract expires Jan. 1.

Toronto, Oct. 14 — (CP) — Vancouver reports say that Pat Egan, the former Brooklyn American defenceman, may not be permitted to leave his Vancouver shipyards job to play hockey...imagine the pained expression on Manager Jack Adams' face if he finds that half of Detroit Red Wings $26,000 purchase from Brooklyn has vanished in thin air. (Forward Harry Watson of Saskatoon formed the other half of the deal) ... Significantly, Porky Levine, the former pro goalie who is expected to play for St. Regis Spitfires amateur team in New Westminster, says the chances Egan will also be with Spitfires are "very good." ... Egan himself hedges enthusiastically: "Detroit is a great city and Jack Adams is a fine fellow. I hope to be able to go East but that's up to the Selective Service Board."

Incidentally:

Ken (Edmonton Journal) McConnell reports that Earl Robertson, one-time Regina junior hockey star and later goalkeeper with Detroit Red Wings and New York Americans, does not plan to return to professional hockey this year because he is well satisfied with his railway job in Edmonton ... Robertson recalls the colorful antics of manager Red Dutton of the now-defunct Americans — the times Red tore up his best hats, his ravings on some occasions, his kindliness on others ... there was Nels Stewart taking his time in practice, finally unbending enough to play the puck, and then Dutton's rink-filling bellow: "Nelson's got the puck, Nelson's got the puck!" ... McConnell comments: "Maybe the N. H. L. will miss Red more than the present teams and their leaders realize. He added plenty of color to a rather drab circuit."

Puck Patter:

Flt. Lt. Frank Frederickson, who played with Winnipeg Falcons to win the first Olympic hockey title and became one of the greatest of centres with Victoria, Boston and Pittsburgh, is stationed at the St. Catharines Elementary Flying Training School and may coach a hockey team at St. Kitts ... Bob (Calgary Herald) Mamini reports Tiny Thompson, the former Boston and Detroit goalkeeper, has enlisted with the R. C. A. F. and probably will coach the Calgary Air Force hockey team ... Tiny has applied for a commission ... a pair of Toronto Maple Leafs graduates, Ace Bailey and Joe Primeau, will coach Toronto senior amateur teams, research and Air Force respectively.

New York, Oct. 14—(AP)—Ever stop to think how hard a sports promoter has to work to get you to buy a ticket for his games? . . . We never had thought much about it, either, until Al Sutphin, the big ink and ice man from Cleveland, started telling the other night how he got such crowds to watch his hockey club. . . . Things like providing a winning team, bringing in new men every season and spending plenty of cash for advertising are just the starters. . . . "I see to it that there's a hockey game every Saturday night, with no exceptions," Sutphin explains. "The fans always know what to expect. Our club spends $9,000 a year more on travel than the others just to get those Saturdays. . . . I'll even move a circus out overnight for a game." . . Then there's the little matter of arranging special nights for clubs and industrial organizations and after-dinner speaking. . . . Al is the orator, but he has a special promotion staff to follow up his talks. . . . "There are about 150 clubs in Cleveland and I've probably spoken before all of them," he says.

Wilbur Wood, the New York Sun's sports editor, has figured out that, if taxes remain at their present levels, Joe Louis would have to take down $2,170,000 in purses to save enough to pay his debts. . . . No wonder Joe is a bit confused about whether he has retired.

BASEBALL FUTURE TO BE DETERMINED AT DEC. MEETING

Major and Minor League Magnates Will Meet in the Same Week

LIKELY TO PLAY

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 14—The wartime future of baseball, insofar as the magnates are masters of their own fate, is to be determined at meetings of both the major and minor leagues in Chicago the first week in December.

The majors now are in the process of approving the change of the site of their sessions from New York and the date to coincide with the minors, but it was learned today that enough clubs already have agreed to the switch to make the doubleheader meetings certain.

The major league confabs are planned for Dec. 1, 2 and 3, a week earlier than usual, and the minors meeting Dec. 4 and 5, three days later than in the past.

This gathering, one of the few times that majors and minors have assembled together, will replace the big convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, originally scheduled for Minneapolis and now cancelled, as well as the major league pow wows in New York.

However, the revised arrangement will make possible the presence of minor league club officials and major league representatives who sponsor many of the teams in the small circuits.

The shifting of the major league meetings ahead of the minors is the key of the entire arrangement, because most of the small leagues and clubs are withholding a decision on operations next year until they learn what support they can count upon from the major leagues.

Once the majors decide to what extent they can continue their connections in the minors, the members of the National Association figure they can determine how many leagues will be able to function again next season.

Rose Bowl Game Not Dead Issue

Pasadena, Calif., Oct. 14—There will be a Rose Bowl football game New Year's Day, but it may not be in the Rose Bowl and possibly won't be a college intersectional contest as in the past.

The Tournament of Roses Association made this announcement recently after a conference with representatives of the Pacific Coast Conference. James K. Ingham, association president, said plans would proceed subject to approval of military authorities.

If developments prevent holding the game on Pasadena, its historic setting, then it will be moved elsewhere, Ingham declared.

There was some indication that the game might be between two service elevens for Army and Navy relief.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

ALL EVEN AT ONE GAME each and after being rained out twice before a third and final game between the Belleville Grand Trunks and the Toronto Hillcrests could play at Peterborough exactly 20 years ago yesterday, the Belleville management was anthing but pleased when the O.B.A. announced the game had to be played on Friday, Oct. 13. The reason at the time was to give the mighty Hillcrests the services of Harry Batstone, who was playing his first year of football at Queens and Lionel Conacher, who was then the star gridder with the Toronto Argonauts and both were slated to play football on Saturday the 14, 1922. However, when the teams lined up at Peterborough neither Batstone nor Conacher were playing, their respective football coaches refusing permission in the event of injuries. Jack "Chief" Williams again ascended the mound for the locals, while Ed "Cannonball" Scott went to the hilltop for the heralded Hillcrests.

IT WAS A REAL PITCHERS' battle with a ninth inning finish that comes only once a lifetime and then mostly in story books. Belleville was trailing 4-2 going into seventh when Walter Gerow's locals gladdened the hearts of 3,000 biased district fans by knotting the count and so it remained until the last half of the ninth. With two out Wicky Ross worked Ed Scott for a walk bringing up "Peeney" Mills, who waited for a two-and-two count forcing Scott to grove one. The rest is history—Mills drove the ball on a line down the right field line with "Teedie" Walker, Hillcrest right gardener, racing in a desperate but futile effort to make a shoe-string catch. Of course with two out Ross was off with the crack of the bat and was rounding third in high gear, when Walker finally retrieved the evasive spheriod and then the race was on between Ross, streaking for the plate, and Walker's well-timed throw. Catcher Duke Hennessey anxiously reached out for the ball when Ross hurled himself into a hook-slide and when the dust had settled there lay Ross and Hennessey prostrate over the plate with Umpire Alex Kay, of Peterboro, standing over the top of the play with out-stretched arms indicating Ross was safe and Belleville winners.

IT WAS A BITTER DOSE FOR the mighty Hillcrests to swallow, but the box score told the tale. Belleville outhit the heralded Toronto all-stars 7 to 5 and outscored them 5 to 4. Babe Casey and Peeney Mills had two hits each but it was "Big Peeney's" ninth inning triple that proved the million dollar bingle, that put Belleville into its second senior O.B.A. finals in four years, the Grand Trunks had won the senior baseball championship of Ontario back in 1919. Williams struck out 9 to Scott's seven and walked but three while "Cannonball Ed" passed six. The Hillcrests only had one earned run off Williams, while Belleville had four that memorable day in Peterboro on October 13, 1922. Belleville had been playing ball exactly six months to the day they vanquished the mighty Hillcrests. The cry then was "On to Galt and the Championship".

MANAGER GEROW SWITCHED his line-up for the Peterboro game using Wicky Ross as lead-off man, then came Vern Weir at short, Bill Mills catcher, Harry Mills first, Jack "Crock" Williams third, Al Meagher second, Babe Casey right, Stan Hagerman, left and Jack "Chief" Williams pitcher. With Casey and Peeney Mills getting two hits each, "Chief" Williams helped his own cause with a bingle, "Crock" Williams got a double and Stan Hagerman a single to give Belleville seven hits and five runs. Pete Irwin, the Toronto left fielder, was the only Hillcrest to touch Williams for more than one hit, he got two of their five.

FROM THE PAST OF BASEBALL to the future of wrestling it's Earl McCready over Jerry Monahan tonight, that is if the big Regina grappler entertains further hopes for a shot at the British Empire crown he'd better be at his best against "Irish Jerry" tonight. In the meantime Manager Walt Gerow has purchased a new ring post, broken last week by that Nebraskan ruffian, Jake Burns, and generally repaired the Hume Arena ring. "We've installed new wire cables and reinforced the entire structure so that wrestlers can bounce about to their hearts' content without fear of the ring caving in on their noggins", stated Manager Gerow today. Incidentally Burns will be back tonight, when he meets a newcomer to Belleville wrestling circles in Ivan Kalminoff, the mad Russian, but what the patrons are interested in is the McCready-Monahan go, if for no other reason than "Irish Jerry's" challenge to Earl.

REMEMBER WHEN JOE PRIMEAU, former star of the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey team, stepped out of active hockey three years ago today when he resigned as coach of the Toronto Goodyear seniors of the O.H.A. senior series. He was later replaced by Eddie Powers.

MANY NEW FACES WILL BE seen on the rosters of the Belleville Collegiate and St. Mikes junior six-man football squads as they pry off the district interscholastic football group this afternoon. Only Don Barrett, Jerry Moher and Bob Wilson are left of last year's champion Irish squad, while Ralph Bateman, Norm Mills, Doug Burns and Bruce Bishop are left-overs from the Collegians' 1941 roster. Incidentally Coach Jack Doran lost the services of Dick Fitzpatrick his most promising rookie, who was advised by his physician to remain out of the game for a year. Naturally the kid's heart was broken, but so was Coach Doran's who was counting on Fitzpatrick as one of his ace ball carriers.

THIS AND THAT—IN THE 1943 batting order of the champion Zellers' nine of the Ladies' Softball League a new name may appear next season in that of Mrs. D. F. Reddick (nee Wilma Clarke). . . Congratulations to both the bride and groom of only a few days. . . The Major "B" bowling league opened at the Recreation Alleys last night with the printing "Nomads" being the only team to take four points. . . . It must be tough in the major B's this season with a quintette of healthy lassies bowling in competition . . . .Although five of the clubs in the United States Amateur Hockey League withdrew from competition, the loop will continue with more clubs than ever. . . Five dropped out owing to transportation difficulties but six new clubs were accepted, all from the Greater New York area. . . Only 25 per cent of the players will be Canadian and exhibition games with Canadian service teams are to be arranged in order to test the relative playing strength of American-born amateur pucksters . . .. The experts picked Tex Hughson of the Red Sox and Mort Cooper of the Cards, as the best pitchers in their respective major leagues during the 1942 campaign. . . . Congratulations to "Soup" Campbell's Oshawa Colts—"All-Ontario" intermediate "A" softball champions—The Motor City nine who eliminated Kingston here last month, eliminated North Bay two straight in the north-south O.A.S.A. finals . .Previously Campbell's chappies had won the O.A.S.A. title by beating Guelph. . . . . They brought to Eastern Ontario its only 1942 softball championship; so we say "Thanks Oshawa" . . . Wouldn't you—

Capitol Theatre Includes New Screen In Many Renovations Made Recently

In maintaining its policy of providing city and district theatregoers with the finest in moving picture entertainment, the Capitol Theatre has installed a new Walker Plastic Moulded Screen. This screen, according to Manager Tommy Mascaro, is made for the purpose of bringing out the greatest detail that can be projected from machines and is one of the latest in motion picture screens.

The screen was installed a few days ago, and has already shown a decided improvement in clarity and outline of detail as well as enhancing the beauty of technical films.

Manager Mascaro has not left the comfort of his patrons at this. The heating system of the theatre has been overhauled and is now producing a warm comfortable atmosphere that will provide an evenly heated degree for the coming winter days.

In the immediate future the interior decorative scheme of the lower Front Street place of entertainment will be overhauled. A brand new color scheme and decorative modernistic motif has been selected by the theatre management which will add to the improvements already noted. The lobby will be remodelled and a new frontal marquee built. The Capitol with its new interior and exterior garb will add an architectural lustre to its own section of the city.

SHIP IS BEACHED

Lying Quietly on Water

The Lensen was lying quietly on the water, listing to the starboard but apparently not in immediate danger of sinking. A steel plate had been split up through the centre, leaving a narrow crack on her port side, and the plates around it were bulged outward as if from terrific pressure within.

We didn't stay with her. One quick turn around and we were racing out off her port beam with our submarine-detective Asdic sweeping the water in search of an under-water craft.

We picked up nothing, but were cheered—and jolted almost off our feet—by two quick blasts as a Fairmile to starboard let go two depth charges. The Fairmile spun around after the blasts and recrossed the spot but apparently she found no contact because she fired no more charges.

Get Close to Coast

All this time the convoy was steaming down the river, with two lake vessels smoking into shore stepping faster than they ever had before. Their object was to get close into the coast, using their shallow draft, where they would be comparatively immune from attack.

The escorts let them go, concentrating on continual sweep in the water from which another attack on the ocean-going ships in the convoy might be expected. No further contacts were picked up however, and no additional attack developed.

Naval men advanced the theory the sub had fired its shot from extreme torpedo range. It appeared well-nigh impossible that the U-boat had made the attack from close-in and escaped.

The fact that the torpedo struck an obviously unloaded ship when there were several far more tempting targets in the convoy strengthened the belief in the long-range attack theory. It was considered probable that in such a case the sub had fired a "browning shot," one aimed at the convoy in general from a great distance rather than a close-in attack on any particular ship.

Had to Watch Convoy

Had the escorts been able to go farther afield in search of the enemy they might have found him with their detecting asdics, but they had the convoy to think about and "safety of the convoy" is their watchword.

The corvette stayed behind to tow the Lensen in, with a Fairmile circling around to ward off any submarine.

Remainder of the escort, still going at top speed, went chasing down-river after the merchantmen and finally got them rounded up again into convoy formation—their best protection against attack.

All through the night that followed the depleted escort kept guard on the convoy, in full expectation of an attack, which failed to materialize.

By morning, other escort ships had joined us and we finished the trip without further incident. That one daylight attack was the main excitement on an eight-day trip that saw us start out with one convoy, leave it in the gulf to make a special offensive sweep, and finally pick up the second convoy and take it through to its destination.

stroyers and a 5,000-ton transport. The enemy sank a destroyer unidentified as yet by the Navy.

Failing in its landing mission, the Japanese fleet steamed away but was caught a few hours later in a torpedo and dive-bombing assault by pursuing Navy and Marine Corps planes. At least one more cruiser was badly damaged and a destroyer was sunk. Later in the day, the planes attacked again, leaving a destroyer sinking and smashing either the damaged cruiser or another one sufficiently to cause the crew to abandon ship.

Marines Launch Offensive

Meanwhile, the Navy added, the Marines on Guadalcanal launched their first offensive in weeks. Against bitter resistance from reinforced Japanese troops seeking to recapture the island's valuable air base, they enlarged their gains and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy jungle forces. Army fighter planes strafed the Nipponese troops and installations in the two-day battle.

A four-flight attack of sixty-five Japanese bombers and fighters was intercepted over Guadalcanal by Army, Navy and Marine Corps fighter planes. Eight enemy bombers and four Zero fighters were shot down and the remaining bombers were forced to drop their explosives in an open field. Two American planes were lost.

Ships Damaged in Harbor

In the Aleutians, army heavy bombers with fighter escort rained demolitions and incendiaries on the Japanese Kiska foothold Friday and Saturday. Damage was reported on ships in the harbor and fires were seen on shore.

Enemy resistance was described by the Navy as "only moderate" anti-aircraft fire. Not a Japanese plane rose to the counter-attack. Meanwhile, as Australian jungle troops edged toward the Japanese Kokoda base in New Guinea despite enemy resistance, heavy Allied bombers joined the Solomons' conflict to the east by blasting the invader's Buka airdrome.

The great Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, west of Buka, was the target during the night for a big force of bombers. Large fires and explosions were caused on runways and dispersal areas of the air base where many planes and at least 30,000 enemy troops were assembled.

ALLIED AIRMEN

By the month's end, the Allied had established a phenomenal 22-to-1 ratio of Japanese plane losses to their own even though the bulk of the fighting was over enemy territory.

Since Oct. 3 the raiders occasionally have spotted a few planes scattered on the water at Kiska. None of these ever has left the surface, and the conclusion here is that they probably are damaged, useless hulks.

A Desperate Bluff

In the last days of their air defence, the Japanese resorted to desperate bluff. A favorite trick was for an enemy pilot to simulate a deliberate collision with an attacking bomber, hoping that, to avoid the crash, the bomber could be made to veer from its course.

The pilots soon became wise to this strategy and refused to swerve from their bombing run, forcing the Japanese instead to turn aside and expose themselves to heavy machine-gun or cannon fire.

Willkie Leaves Alta. On Last Leg of Trip

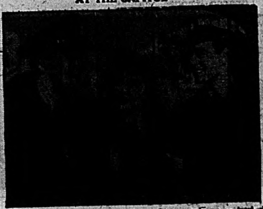
Edmonton, Oct. 13 —(CP)— Wendell Willkie left here today by plane for Minneapolis on the last lap of his 30,000-mile round-the-world flight to Allied countries as personal representative of President Roosevelt.

The Willkie party travelled in a Consolidated Liberator B24.

Willkie intimated in a prepared statement last night that he would have something to say about "flippant statements made by certain public officials" concerning his second front utterance in Moscow after he arrives in the United States.

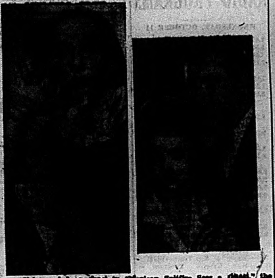
He arrived at Fairbanks, Alaska, Sunday after flying across Mongolia and Siberia.

AT THE CAPITOL



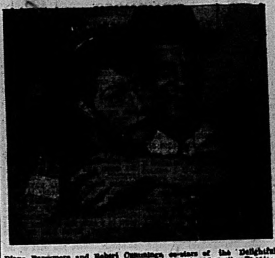
Lyle Talbot, Veda Ann Borg and Robert Lowery make up an intriguing romantic threesome in "She's in the Army" opening next at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program, "Jesse James Jr." features Don "Red" Barry.

AT THE BELLE



Lupe Velez and Leon Errol in "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost," the screaming comedy hit, now at the Belle. Donna Reed and Philip Dorn, featured with Lionel Barrymore in M.G.M.'s medical adventure, "Calling Dr. Gillespie," the major feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY



Diana Barrymore and Robert Cummings, co-stars of the Delightful Comedy which is drawing large crowds to the McCarthy Theatre. Others in the cast include Kay Francis, John Boles and Andy Devine.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Between Us Girls"

Co-starring lovely Diana Barrymore and Robert Cummings, the delightful romantic-comedy "Between Us Girls" is a screen treat every lover of motion pictures should not fail to enjoy, now closing a highly successful holiday engagement at the McCarthy theatre. If by chance you have not yet seen this excellent film we recommend that you do not let anything else stop you this evening. A splendid array of short subjects precede "Between Us Girls" making the entire program a perfect show.

"Flight Lieutenant"

Featuring Pat O'Brien, Glenn Ford and Evelyn Hayes, the next attraction which opens at the McCarthy theatre is "Flight Lieutenant" which promises to be one of the most exciting aviation films yet produced. On the same program for added enjoyment Roy Rogers and George "Gabby" Hayes in an action-packed western "Sons of the Pioneers" is good news for all action fans, as Roy Rogers is fast becoming one of the most popular western stars on the screen. This week the Foto Nite offers are first $175.00 and second $45.00 which reminds us to tell you that if you are registered for Foto-Nite at the McCarthy theatre, be there this week, your name may be selected.

AT THE BELLE

"Calling Dr. Gillespie"

A new glamour girl and a promising new acting discovery are featured with Lionel Barrymore, Philip Dorn, Donna Reed and a large cast in M-G-M's "Calling Dr. Gillespie" dramatic medical mystery, now showing at the Belle theatre. In addition to thrills and excitement glamour, music and comedy embellish this new adventure of Dr. Gillespie which deals with the story of a man with a "split" personality.

"Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost"

Rollicking fun in a supposedly haunted house is presented in RKO Radio's "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost" latest in the popular series starring Lupe Velez and Leon Errol, the added laugh feature attraction.

The Belle Latest News Events described by Lowell Thomas complete the program.

"Maisie Gets Her Man"

A new co-starring team that bids fair to be one of the most popular on the screen makes its debut in "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Maisie Gets Her Man," which opens next at the Belle theatre.

The team, Ann Sothern and Red Skelton, is one that specializes in laughter and romance. The present picture also marks Skelton's elevation to full-fledged stardom for his much applauded work in "Lady Be Good" and "Ship Ahoy."

Heretofore Ann Sothern, in each picture, has had a beau, but they've all been different. Now, if present responses are any indication, she should find that she has turned comedy star Skelton into a first-rate screen leading man.

"Old Bailey"

"Old Bailey," famed London Court is one of the many interesting settings in "The Girl in the News," new thrill-laugh hit which stars Margaret Lockwood, Barry K. Barnes and Emlyn Williams the second worthy companion feature.

Margaret Lockwood, who plays a nurse twice accused of murder, goes on trial in the austere old court. However, a clever bit of courtroom strategy by Barry K. Barnes, her lawyer, unmasks the real murderer in the thrilling climax.

A clever Pete Smith screen novelty "Victory Quiz" will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"She's in the Army"

(First Belleville Showing)

Quite aside from its exciting qualities as a motion picture story, there is much of interest in "She's in the Army," the Monogram production which opens an engagement at the Capitol Theatre.

The entire background of the story is formed by the activities of the Women's Ambulance and Defence Corps of America, that vast organization of patriotic women who have volunteered for wartime service in cities that may be bombed or otherwise attacked by the enemy. Much of the action is laid in their cantonments, which are conducted with regular military precision and discipline, and several hundred uniformed members take part in the film.

Actresses appearing in the leading roles, ostensibly as members of the Corps are Lucille Gleason, Veda Ann Borg and Marie Wilson, and all contribute importantly to the enjoyment of the picture. Principal male roles are played by Robert Lowery, Lyle Talbot and Warren Hymer, who handle their assignments in their customary capable fashion.

"Jesse James, Jr."

"Jesse James, Jr., the newest entry in Republic Pictures' popular series of westerns starring Don "Red" Barry, will do the next attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Barry will be seen as a fearless young law officer who single-handedly cleans up a frontier town which has gained a reputation of being the hideout for the toughest desperadoes in the West.

Lynn Merrick has the leading lady role, while Al St. John enacts a comedy characterization. Douglas Walton, Karl Hackett, Lee Shumway and Stanley Bystone are others in the cast.

A colored cartoon and the 10th chapter of "Spy Smasher" conclude an ideal program for the entire family.

GIVEN PLAYERS' FAREWELL

Winnipeg, Oct. 14—(CP) — Joe Ryan, manager of Winnipeg Blue Bombers when they won the Canadian football title in 1935, '39 and '41, was given a players' farewell last night by Coach Bob Fritz and members of the Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers in the Winnipeg Senior Football League.

Ryan is leaving shortly to take a position with the government at Ottawa.

ARMED MEN SECURE $1,000

Montreal, Oct. 14—(CP)—Three armed men took about $1,000 in cash from the safe of the Orpheum Theatre here last night, and then escaped into crowded St. Catherine St.

The men forced Acting Manager John Godfrey to reveal the combination of the safe, then bound his hands with tape, rifled the safe and escaped.

Rommel's Army In Perilous Trap On Egyptian Front

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Wherever else the Allied diversion offensives against the Axis may be building up, it seems obvious that the Nazi leadership expects the first blow to fall on Egypt and is making frantic efforts to bolster that front.

The presence of Marshal Rommel in Berlin recently invited conjecture that he was there to demand reinforcements, particularly in air power. His African corps, stalled for months in the narrow Egyptian corridor, is in a perilous trap. The growing Allied air superiority emphasized by Mr. Churchill the same day that Mr. Roosevelt spoke has been nowhere more clearly demonstrated than in the Egyptian Mediterranean theatre.

Tending to confirm the view that Rommel's mission to Berlin was to make urgent personal appeal for help, even at the cost of withdrawing air or other forces from Russia, Cairo now reports a furious new Axis air assault on Malta. A record one-day bag of enemy planes by Malta's defenders was one result. Seventy-five Axis ships were downed or damaged against five British.

That is a ratio of fifteen to one, a staggering loss. It seems clear that with the longer route across the Eastern Mediterranean from Crete or Greece to Tobruk under constant blasting by long-range American as well as British bombers based in Egypt, the Axis is again resorting to the short line from Sicily to supply and reinforce the African corps. British planes and submarines based on Malta are the greatest threat to that communication line. There seems little doubt that heavy Axis night movements across the Sicilian Straits are being attempted.

If that is true, and if a transfer of German air forces to Africa for either offensive or defensive use is in progress, it must be from the Russian Front they are being withdrawn. That might account for the change in tactics at Stalingrad foretold by Nazi broadcasters.

Moscow accounts of the fighting at Stalingrad for several days have made virtually no mention of German dive-bombing. Berlin versions have stressed air operations not against Stalingrad itself but against Russian communications across the Volga and in the Don-Volga corridor west of the river supporting the Soviet relief offensive.

There is at least a suggestion that some part of the German air forces concentrated against Stalingrad, particularly dive-bombers, have been switched elsewhere. Their most probable destination would be Egypt where Allied preparations to take the offensive are well advanced.

Winter is closing in on Russia north of the Don-Volga battle front. That makes even less likely a new Nazi offensive in Russia to which dive-bombers or other attack weapons were being diverted from the Stalingrad sector. Coupled with obvious efforts to strengthen Rommel in Libya and Egypt, it points strongly to German expectation of a British attack there at any moment.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was thinking behind his cigar and ma said, Well, William it seems you never know just when you may need the services of a locksmith. I'm thinking of that old empty pigskin grip in the storeroom that somehow got unaccountably locked with the key unaccountably inside, she said.

Why, who's going away? pop said, and ma said, Well nobody's actually going away, naturally, but you never know when some unexpected twist and turn is going to make a travelling bag necessary to some extent. I'm thinking of the last time my sister Fanny came to visit us and somehow or other managed to have more stnuff to take home than she arrived with, so we lent her the black suitcase with your initials on it, ma said.

Yes and by gollies she's never returned that bag to this day, and that's another mark on her long criminal record, pop said. But for Peet sake are we so hard up for conversation that we have to talk about your sister Fanny? he said, and ma said, Well yes and no, I mean history has been repeating itself since the beginning of recorded books, and who are we to try to stop it? In my last letter to Fanny I made the unthinking mistake of mentioning how wonderful Dr. Climber is as a dentist, and it seems Fanny needs some dental attention that may take a week or two, and my abstracted remark gave her the idea of coming here to have it done by Dr. Climber. But I dont see anything to worry about yet, William, she said.

I see practically everything to worry about, blast it to blazes, pop said, and ma said, But why? I mean even if she comes she may take advantage of the occasion to bring your black suitcase with her, and in that case, if she needs an extra bag again we'll have one, so we wont have to call in a locksmith after all, she said.

I'll be back later, pop said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 19

Loneliness

"He doesn't resent Larry because Larry isn't on his way up. Isn't that it? Larry just goes along—plodding."

"Forbes resents me and I don't know what I'm going to do about it. Clinton is a branch office and Forbes can make the home office in Baltimore think I'm no good if he wants to. I could, if I wanted to stoop that low, make Forbes lose his job if I talked about the mismanagement of the Clinton office. But Forbes has a swell wife and two daughters who are reaching the expensive age. If anybody steps out, I've got to." Though he smiled, she knew that he was worried. "Of course there's always the WPA . . ."

Why did she bother? What did she care what happened to Stephen Larrabee?

He said, "I've never worked for any other company."

"You're not afraid, are you?"

He looked startled for an instant. Then his chin lifted. "No, I'm not afraid. But I want to get somewhere. I'm not satisfied to stand still."

"You want things . . ."

"Yes, the best." He smiled. "Quality before quantity and the only way to do anything is the right way and usually there's only one right way. I've never had very much. There were a lot of us and my parents worked hard to bring us up. My Dad never took a vacation and my mother has never had a servant. They kid me about always wanting the best. You—" He looked at her steadily. "Oh, nothing. Let's skip it. You'd probably laugh."

Could she laugh at anything?

It was not until they were standing outside her apartment door that he said, "I'm going home tomorrow, you know. You should."

"Am I being reproached?"

"No! But they."

She nodded. "You think I'm selfish keeping to myself on my vacation." She thought, "I'm drifting and it doesn't matter much if I drift to Clinton along with Stephen. I want to see them but I don't want them to know. I don't want them to be worried about me."

"You probably think it is none of my business."

"I wasn't thinking that at all. I'll let you know in the morning."

"You're going home."

It was the most positive thing he had ever said to her.

Judith and Stephen were on the train at noon and in Clinton four hours later. They had lunched on the train, but their conversation had been meagre and casual since she had felt too depressed to talk and he had had the interest in strange faces. Stephen was like a child whose world became more vast each day and who cannot see or grasp or learn enough. His eagerness for knowledge of people and manners and good taste touched her. She thought, "He hasn't found himself. He's drifting, but not floundering as he drifts."

After luncheon they did not talk but sat in opposite chairs, each staring out of the window.

For her had come the time when there was no fury or pain, but numbness and lethargy. She merely stared at passing landscapes she had once thought beautiful, she felt nothing. Her eyes burned and she closed them against the afternoon sun. When she opened them again, she saw Stephen reaching for their bags.

"Sleepy-head," he said and smiled at her.

When the taxi stopped before her parents' big frame house that looked both solid and indolent in the quiet of a March afternoon, Stephen said, "I'll call you . . . that is, if I may. I'll take your bag up."

"No, it isn't heavy. I'll take it. Yes, do call me. Good-bye."

"Good-bye and thank you for . ."

"Please don't thank me for anything."

Judith did not glance back at Stephen who watched her slender, graceful figure walking up the cement path to the wide front porch. And so she did not see the tenderness and the hope in the eyes of the man who had always wanted the "best."

Bessie, the old colored maid, opened the door and uttered her usual joyful exclamations on seeing her. Then she said, "Your father's the only one that's home, Miss Judith. He had a little cold. He's upstairs in the study. Ain't sick enough to be in bed."

Nicholas Barth was sitting in the old red leather chair in his small, book-flanked study. He wore a familiar blue woolen robe and he was reading when Judith paused in the doorway He glanced up and blinked through the horn-rimmed spectacles he wore while reading.

"Well!" he chuckled, "shall I rub my eyes and look again?"

"No. I'm not an apparition. In the flesh." How glad he looked. "Don't get up. I'll come to you to kiss you."

"You'll do nothing of the kind. Do you want a nasty head cold? Sit down and give an account of yourself. I'm all alone. Your dear mother made me stay away from the office today in order to nurse me, but when Harriet called asking her if she would stay with the children while Harriet rushed into town to a sale, the children won. I was relieved. Isobel kills me with kindness." He regarded her inquisitively. "Were you fired or did you quit?"

"Neither. I'm on my vacation."

"Oh! Then you must be broke not to have gone somewhere . ."

"You're looking tired . . ."

"I'm not broke either, Dad."

"I have been . . "

Folding his large hands, he regarded her again inquisitively, then earnestly. "Well, honey, you'll think I'm an old-fashioned father making noises but—I've been doing a good bit of thinking about you lately. Funny, when I saw you standing there and remembered that this is a week day, I thought you'd come home . . to stay.

"I've never interfered with you and I don't intend to begin now. I'm very proud of what you've made of yourself as all my friends will testify. And it isn't because of your mother that I want you back—freedom is too dear even for parents to interfere with—but because I've been thinking that it would be best for you."

He went on, "I'm not referring to such nonsense that you are a young and attractive girl alone in a big city. You're quite capable of taking care of yourself. It's that—I don't know I can exactly put it into words—but it's that I believe the essence of good living is here rather than in New York for you. You don't believe that, do you? Judith, there is no lonelier person on earth than a lone, successful man or woman."

He rubbed his forehead and frowned. "A city of three hundred thousand souls isn't a small town. Clinton is a young and growing city where there are innumerable opportunities for young people. New York to me is like a tired, middle-aged woman who uses too much make-up. Or maybe it's because I don't want to see you become one of those lone, successful persons with a place to live in you call home, but which is really a place to have cocktail parties in. That is not the essence of good living.

"I'm a nondescript person. Just a big middle-aged man who pays his taxes and goes to church and has his fun in the movies and over a bridge table. Nobody would turn twice to look at me. But I know the essence of good living because I've had it. Your mother and I have had all of life, Judith. We haven't been cheated or neglected and we haven't been very far from our own fireside. People are mistaken who think that life is more exciting or different elsewhere. The little man or woman on the street you don't notice has often lived more than you and known a higher degree of happiness.

"Happiness isn't something you go out to find. It's in you, and you have to search yourself to find it. Other people may think you are more fortunate than Harriet. She could have made something of herself, too, in some professional capacity. She was good in chemistry and interested in it. I think that Harriet, who hasn't any of the pretty clothes that you have, who has to juggle pennies to make ends meet and who is married to a nice boy who will never be a big success is more fortunate than you. Because Harriet has love and she is living."

He lifted his heavy dark brows and smiled a half-smile. "I don't pretend to know very much about art, but I've always wanted you to do something that I could hang on the wall here or exhibit in the local museum. Every woman should have a hobby and I'd hoped that art would be yours, a hobby not a business. You used to fool around with oils."

"That was a long time ago." Everything that had happened before Max seemed such a long time ago. "I did fool around with oils. I starter mother's portrait and decided it was too bad to go on with it."

Axis Partners Differ Over Trieste Control

Berne, Oct. 14 — (AP) — Istanbul and Stockholm correspondents of the National Zeitung of Basel reported indications today of a German-Italian disagreement which might cost Italy her Adriatic port of Trieste and one dispatch said the rift stemmed partly from recent Italian-American developments.

The Stockholm correspondent quoted the newspaper Dagens Nyheter as reporting that German-Italian differences were accentuated by Italian permission for Myron C. Taylor's plane to land at Rome when the special envoy of President Roosevelt was on his way recently to conferences with the Pope at the Vatican. Also reported adding tinder was the announcement by United States Attorney-General Francis Biddle that Italians in the United States no longer would be under restrictions as enemy aliens.

The Istanbul correspondent said that a new meeting of Hitler and Mussolini was expected soon, and that rumors had been heard in Turkey that Germany wanted to take over full control of Trieste.

Increase Forces in Yugoslavia

London — (CP) — Official Yugoslav sources here said today that both the Germans and Italians recently increased the size of their occupation forces in the Balkans, the Germans apparently because of dissatisfaction with Italy's failure to subdue the region.

There are increasing signs, said these sources, who could not be identified by name, of growing tension between the European Axis partners over control of dismembered Yugoslavia.

Dispatches from Ankara relayed an unconfirmed report that the Germans intended to take full control of Croatia and Slovenia and of the Italian Adriatic port of Trieste as well.

An authoritative Balkan source here intimated that the rumor might have been Axis-inspired to raise false hopes among the Allies.

One official Yugoslav source said that "if Germany intends to relieve Italy of responsibility for Croatia and Slovenia it is because of Italy's inability to control the Yugoslavs."

"Any decision to take over Trieste," he added, "will be dictated by military strategy."

Two Railwaymen Are Killed In Separate Crashes

London, Ont., Oct. 14 — (CP)— Two Canadian National Railwaymen were killed, and one was injured in separate accidents here today.

The dead: Malcolm McLellan, member of a work train crew, and Francis Smith, 42, of London.

Ralph Johnson, engineer of the work train was injured and his condition is fair.

The accident involving McLellan and Johnson occurred when a freight train reportedly rammed a standing work train.

Smith, a yard employe, slipped under a train in East London and both legs were severed. He died en route to hospital.

4 of Crew Able To Bail Out

London, Oct. 14 —(CP Cable)— Sgt. Norman MacKenzie of Winnipeg today was identified by Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters as the pilot of a Halifax bomber who gave his life recently in an attempt to save his crewmates by keeping his burning bomber on a steady course while they jumped to safety.

Four of the crew of seven were able to bail out before the plane crashed in flames. They were returning from a raid when the port outer engine caught fire. Only four had bailed out when the port wing and engines were blown off by an explosion and the machine crashed in flames.

Three of the crew, all Canadians, are safe. The fourth, a Canadian wireless operator who was the second one to leave the ship, is missing. The survivors are Pilot Officer Ed Mason of Rockglen, Sask., Sgt. Jim Alexander of Nanaimo, B.C., and Sgt. Joe Kaucharik of Fort William, Ont.

80-YEAR-OLD MISSING

Caledonia, Ont., Oct. 14 (CP) — A search party was combing the bush in the nearby Six Nations Indian Reserve today for Peter Atkins, 80, former postmaster and merchant missing from his home since last night. He resided at Six Nations, five miles from Caledonia.

2 Brazilian Ships Sunk by Subs

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 14—(AP)— German submarines have sunk two more Brazilian merchantmen — the 20th and 21st sent to the bottom by U-boats in this war—the government announced today.

It said that the sinkings were the first since Brazil declared war on the Axis as a result of attacks on her shipping and that both occurred last Sept. 29 off the northern Brazilian state of Para.

The two were the 5,472-ton freighter Lages and 2-736-ton Osorio, both in service between Brazilian and United States ports.

All 21 sinkings have occurred since last Jan. 29 when Brazil, following the United States declaration of war, broke diplomatic relations with the Axis.

The Osorio, originally the Lake Elkwater, was built in 1919 at Ecorse, Mich., and figured in an earlier Maritime disaster when she picked up 11 survivors of the United States freighter Robin Moor which was torpedoed May 21, 1941, between Brazil and West Africa.

Three of the Lages' 45 crewmen were missing. The Osorio carried 38.

Aircraft Industry Trying to Reach 5,000 Planes Monthly

Washington, Oct. 14—(AP)—The United States Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce reported today that the aircraft industry "has been pressing toward the 5,000" monthly production rate asked for by President Roosevelt after passing a rate of 4,000 a month in May.

More than $4,000,000,000 worth of airplanes, engines and propellors will be produced during 1942, the organization forecast, and there was "a huge increase in the number of heavy, long-range aircraft."

The organization commented:

"Despite the stellar performance of America's combat planes, the aircraft manufacturers are perfecting new and improved types of fighters, heavy bombers, medium bombers, patrol bombers, dive bombers, torpedo planes and scout observation planes which can fly higher, travel faster and spray more lead and destruction than the models presently in service."

Tells of Recent Trip to Britain

Montreal, Oct. 14 — (CP) — Herve Major, Montreal La Presse news editor, telling of his recent tour of Great Britain today told members of a service club "It is the toughest country in the world. The British have suffered the worst privations without losing their taste for living."

"Do you know what their attitude was when savagely attacked as they were?" added Mr. Major. "They were infuriated to be powerless and not in a position to retaliate. Now they can."

Mr. Major, who toured Britain along with other Canadian newsmen, cited various incidents illustrating both the courage and the coolness of Britishers.

"If the United States will make use of its manpower along the lines the United Kingdom does, about 40,000,000 workers would be employed in war work there. Until last month, comparatively speaking, twice as many arms and ammunition were made in Britain than in the United States as well as twice as many military aircraft. About 55 persons out of every 100 are in the government's pay in the United Kingdom," said Mr. Major.

FIFTY HOSTAGES TAKEN

London, Oct. 14 —(CP)— Fifty persons have been arrested as hostages in the Belgian city of Ghent because a bomb was thrown into a school requisitioned as barracks for the German army, killing a German guard, Belgian sources reported today.

The Germans also imposed a fine of 500,000 francs on the town.

The Free Belgian news agency reported the Germans had court martialed and executed Richard Soupart, Belgian Labor leader at Mons. The charges against him were not known here.

Axis Partners Differ Over Trieste Control

Berne, Oct. 14 — (AP) — Istanbul and Stockholm correspondents of the National Zeitung of Basel reported indications today of a German-Italian disagreement which might cost Italy her Adriatic port of Trieste and one dispatch said the rift stemmed partly from recent Italian-American developments.

The Stockholm correspondent quoted the newspaper Dagens Nyheter as reporting that German-Italian differences were accentuated by Italian permission for Myron C. Taylor's plane to land at Rome when the special envoy of President Roosevelt was on his way recently to conferences with the Pope at the Vatican. Also reported adding tinder was the announcement by United States Attorney-General Francis Biddle that Italians in the United States no longer would be under restrictions as enemy aliens.

The Istanbul correspondent said that a new meeting of Hitler and Mussolini was expected soon, and that rumors had been heard in Turkey that Germany wanted to take over full control of Trieste.

Increase Forces in Yugoslavia

London — (CP) — Official Yugoslav sources here said today that both the Germans and Italians recently increased the size of their occupation forces in the Balkans, the Germans apparently because of dissatisfaction with Italy's failure to subdue the region.

There are increasing signs, said these sources, who could not be identified by name, of growing tension between the European Axis partners over control of dismembered Yugoslavia.

Dispatches from Ankara relayed an unconfirmed report that the Germans intended to take full control of Croatia and Slovenia and of the Italian Adriatic port of Trieste as well.

An authoritative Balkan source here intimated that the rumor might have been Axis-inspired to raise false hopes among the Allies.

One official Yugoslav source said that "if Germany intends to relieve Italy of responsibility for Croatia and Slovenia it is because of Italy's inability to control the Yugoslavs."

"Any decision to take over Trieste," he added, "will be dictated by military strategy.'

Two Railwaymen Are Killed In Separate Crashes

London, Ont., Oct. 14 — (CP)— Two Canadian National Railwaymen were killed, and one was injured in separate accidents here today.

The dead: Malcolm McLellan, member of a work train crew, and Francis Smith, 42, of London.

Ralph Johnson, engineer of the work train was injured and his condition is fair.

The accident involving McLellan and Johnson occurred when a freight train reportedly rammed a standing work train.

Smith, a yard employe, slipped under a train in East London and both legs were severed. He died en route to hospital.

4 of Crew Able To Bail Out

London, Oct. 14 —(CP Cable)— Sgt. Norman MacKenzie of Winnipeg today was identified by Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters as the pilot of a Halifax bomber who gave his life recently in an attempt to save his crewmates by keeping his burning bomber on a steady course while they jumped to safety.

Four of the crew of seven were able to bail out before the plane crashed in flames. They were returning from a raid when the port outer engine caught fire. Only four had bailed out when the port wing and engines were blown off by an explosion and the machine crashed in flames.

Three of the crew, all Canadians, are safe. The fourth, a Canadian wireless operator who was the second one to leave the ship, is missing. The survivors are Pilot Officer Ed Mason of Rockglen, Sask., Sgt. Jim Alexander of Nanaimo, B.C., and Sgt. Joe Kaucharik of Fort William, Ont.

80-YEAR-OLD MISSING

Caledonia, Ont., Oct. 14 (CP) — A search party was combing the bush in the nearby Six Nations Indian Reserve today for Peter Atkins, 80, former postmaster and merchant missing from his home since last night. He resided at Six Nations, five miles from Caledonia.

Under Close Study

London, Oct. 14 (CP)—The House of Commons correspondent of Press Association reported today that the question of chaining of war prisoners still is under close study by the British government, and added: "I have every reason to believe there is reliable information indicating that the putting of British prisoners in chains was done under the personal order of Hitler."

2 Brazilian Ships Sunk by Subs

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 14—(AP)— German submarines have sunk two more Brazilian merchantmen — the 20th and 21st sent to the bottom by U-boats in this war—the government announced today.

It said that the sinkings were the first since Brazil declared war on the Axis as a result of attacks on her shipping and that both occurred last Sept. 29 off the northern Brazilian state of Para.

The two were the 5,472-ton freighter Lages and 2-736-ton Osorio, both in service between Brazilian and United States ports.

All 21 sinkings have occurred since last Jan. 29 when Brazil, following the United States declaration of war, broke diplomatic relations with the Axis.

The Osorio, originally the Lake Elkwater, was built in 1919 at Ecorse, Mich., and figured in an earlier Maritime disaster when she picked up 11 survivors of the United States freighter Robin Moor which was torpedoed May 21, 1941, between Brazil and West Africa.

Three of the Lages' 46 crewmen were missing. The Osorio carried 38.

Aircraft Industry Trying to Reach 5,000 Planes Monthly

Washington, Oct. 14—(AP)—The United States Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce reported today that the aircraft industry "has been pressing toward the 5,000" monthly production rate asked for by President Roosevelt after passing a rate of 4,000 a month in May.

More than $4,000,000,000 worth of airplanes, engines and propellors will be produced during 1942, the organization forecast, and there was "a huge increase in the number of heavy, long-range aircraft."

The organization commented:

"Despite the stellar performance of America's combat planes, the aircraft manufacturers are perfecting new and improved types of fighters, heavy bombers, medium bombers, patrol bombers, dive bombers, torpedo planes and scout observation planes which can fly higher, travel faster and spray more lead and destruction than the models presently in service."

Tells of Recent Trip to Britain

Montreal, Oct. 14 — (CP) — Herve Major, Montreal La Presse news editor, telling of his recent tour of Great Britain today told members of a service club "It is the toughest country in the world. The British have suffered the worst privations without losing their taste for living."

"Do you know what their attitude was when savagely attacked as they were?" added Mr. Major. "They were infuriated to be powerless and not in a position to retaliate. Now they can."

Mr. Major, who toured Britain along with other Canadian newsmen, cited various incidents illustrating both the courage and the coolness of Britishers.

"If the United States will make use of its manpower along the lines the United Kingdom does, about 40,000,000 workers would be employed in war work there. Until last month, comparatively speaking, twice as many arms and ammunition were made in Britain than in the United States as well as twice as many military aircraft. About 55 persons out of every 100 are in the government's pay in the United Kingdom," said Mr. Major.

FIFTY HOSTAGES TAKEN

London, Oct. 14 —(CP)— Fifty persons have been arrested as hostages in the Belgian city of Ghent because a bomb was thrown into a school requisitioned as barracks for the German army, killing a German guard, Belgian sources reported today.

The Germans also imposed a fine of 500,000 francs on the town.

The Free Belgian news agency reported the Germans had court martialed and executed Richard Soupart, Belgian Labor leader at Mons. The charges against him were not known here.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 14 —(CP)—Narrow losses showed a slight margin over gains on Toronto Exchange today.

Industrials gave the weakest display. Bell Telephone, Imperial Oil, Brazilian, Dominion Foundries and Fanny Farmer were soft spots. Distillers-Seagrams, Ford A and Montreal Power were narrowly higher.

Golds were down. Kerr-Addison, Pickle Crow, Preston, Macassa and Buffalo Ankerite were off narrowly. In Base Metals International Nickel, Steep Rock and Ontario Nickel posted minor losses. A setback of 2 to 2.22 for Home Oil showed.

DIRECT HIT ON OIL DUMP

A huge pillar of smoke rises from a blazing U.S. Marine oil and gasoline supply dump on Guadalcanal Island when Japanese planes scored direct hits after Yankee forces captured the strategic point in a surprise assault.

Department of Defence Explains Assigned Pay and Allowances If Soldier Reported Missing

Ottawa, Oct. 14 —(CP)— When a soldier is reported missing disbursement of assigned pay and dependents' allowance on his account ceases at the end of the month but his dependents receive an interim allowance, it was learned at the Department of National Defence today.

The dependents' allowances regulations authorize this interim allowance pending a determination as to whether the man is dead or a prisoner of war.

If he is a prisoner of war he continues to be entitled to his pay and dependents' allowances. If he is dead his dependents become entitled to pension.

If the soldier turns out to be alive and adjustment is made so that he and his dependents receive the full amount they would have received had he never been reported missing.

Payments to or on behalf of soldiers are of three kinds: 1. Pay to the soldier himself, 2. Assigned pay which is that part of a soldier's pay which he himself authorizes the government to pay to someone else, and 3. dependents' allowance which is paid to his dependents in addition to the assigned pay.

When a soldier is discharged, his pay and dependents' allowances stop but he receives a pension if he is entitled to one.

When a soldier dies, his pay and allowances stop but his dependents, if entitled, receive a pension.

Entitled to Full Pay as Prisoner

When a soldier becomes a prisoner of war he is still entitled to full pay but as he cannot receive pay himself the amount which is due him is credited to his account. The amount assigned to his dependents continues to be paid as well as the dependents' allowances.

Here is what happens to the three items when the soldier is missing.

The soldiers' own portion of his pay stops as it cannot be delivered to him.

The assigned pay and dependents' allowance is replaced by an interim allowance which, in the case of a man with a wife and children, comes to approximately the same amount. It is the equivalent of either the assigned pay and allowance or a pension, whichever is the less.

The wife of a sergeant or a commissioned officer who might be entitled to more by way of assigned pay and allowance than by way of pension might receive a little less in the interim allowance than she received before.

Cheques Sent Out

An authoritative source said cheques to all persons who had been receiving dependents' allowances went out at the end of September, either for the usual assigned pay and allowance or for the interim allowance in the case of men reported missing.

Some nine cases of reported failure of dependents to receive a cheque were brought to the attention of the Board by Capt. W. S. Nurse, the Dependents' Allowance Board's representative in Toronto. In eight of the cases it was found the cheque had gone out and in one it was found it had ben stopped in error. A cheque was mailed special delivery to this soldier's wife on the day this case was reported.

Frau Hess Wants To Join Husband In Great Britain

London, Oct. 14 — (CP) — Frau Ilse Hess, wife of the one-time Deputy Fuehrer of Nazi Germany, Rudolf Hess, wants to join her husband in his British internment, a report reaching the House of Commons said today.

Will Thorne, Labor, gave notice he would ask Anthony Eden, foreign secretary: "What reply is being made to the request of Frau Hess, wife of Rudolph Hess who is now somewhere in England, for permission to join her husband."

Little is known of Frau Hess' movements since her husband left Germany in a Messerschmitt plane May 10, 1941, and landed in Scotland, presumably in an effort to negotiate a peace between Britain and Germany or to invite Britain to join in a war on Russia.

After Hess' flight she was reported to have gone to Italy and, later, to Switzerland, but these reports apparently were not true. She was seen in Berlin a week after Hess left.

A brunette, mannishly-dressed woman she always shunned the society events which attracted the wives of other leaders in the Nazi hierarchy and spent much time in her Munich home, caring for her only child, five-year-old Ruediger Hess.

SMUTS ATTENDS PARLEY

London, Oct. 14 — (CP Cable)— Prime Minister J. C. Smuts of South Africa attended a meeting of the war cabinet today after spending the morning in conference at South Africa House.

It was the second meeting of the war cabinet attended by the Prime Minister, whose arrival in Britain was announced by the Dominion Office last night. He is expected to stay in Britain more than a week.

4 Airmen Injured When Practice Bomb Explodes

Four airmen, members of the Mountain View Air Station personnel, were injured, three of them seriously, early today when a bomb cartridge exploded at the bench at which they were working.

Names of the injured airmen are withheld by station officials until the next-of-kin have been notified.

Three of the men were injured from the blast and bomb fragments the fourth receiving minor injuries and burns about the hands and face. Two of the more seriously injured are now in Belleville General Hospital under care of Dr. G. H. Stobie.

According to information received here, the bomb exploded in a workshop where practice bombs are filled with explosive.

HELD FOR SHOPBREAKING

Toronto, Oct. 14 — (CP) — Two Toronto youths, Vincent Hand, 19, and Arthur Castle, 17, were arrested on charges of shopbreaking early today after a police officer chased them through downtown streets, firing two warning revolver shots in the air.

The officer, said he heard the sound of shattered glass and saw three men run away from a clothing store.

Two of the trio were captured after the constable called reinforcements but the third man was not apprehended.

COMMANDOS RAID NORWAY

London, Oct. 14—(CP) — The Swiss radio last night quoted a Swedish newspaper report as saying six, British commandos had landed on the Norwegian coast and blown up an important electric power station in Nordland province.

The account said that all the commandos were later taken prisoner.

17 AXIS PLANES SHOT DOWN OVER MALTA TUESDAY

Three-Day Total of 56 Planes Destroyed and Over 500 Badly Damaged

TOBRUK ATTACKED

Cairo, Oct. 14 (AP)—R.A.F. fighters, beating an almost constant stream of axis bombers over Malta, shot down 17 axis planes yesterday, making a three-day total of 56 axis planes destroyed and more than 50 badly damaged, a joint R.A.F.-British headquarters communique said today.

"Enemy activity over Malta was continued and again our fighters successfully broke up all attacks before the damage could be inflicted," the communique said.

Defenders of the island, which is a constant threat to axis convoys moving across the Mediterranean, lost only one Spitfire yesterday. In addition to the 17 axis planes destroyed many others were damaged, the communique said.

Heavy and medium bombers attacked Tobruk and along the North African coast and night fighters carried out an offensive sweep over Daba, the communique said.

Pupil Absenteeism Subject of Talk At H. & S. Club

Home and school problems, including the all-too prevalent enigma of low school attendance, was the topic of an address by Principal W. Gordon Anderson to members of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club as they met in the school auditorium on Tuesday evening to inaugurate their winter season of activities.

"Belleville schools have the lowest attendance record of any city in the province of Ontario," stated Principal Anderson. "Many children in this city are kept out or allowed to remain at home for no apparent good reason. This creates bad habits which remain throughout adult life; the children lose a valuable link in their education and their schools lose part of their provincial grant."

The inaugural meeting of the Home and School Club was staged as "get-acquainted" party, with the many mothers present being invited to meet their children's teachers in their class rooms from eight o'clock until eight-thirty. In the mother's attendance count Miss Lockhart's room won the prize.

Mrs. Stackhouse acted as pianist for a period of community singing with Mr. Wishart acting as song leader. —With the president of the club, Mrs. Wishart, presiding, the business of the night was conducted, this including a discussion of bathing conditions at the Belleville Beaches. A committee was appointed to discuss the matter with the Beaches Association.

A new teacher at Queen Alexandra School, Miss Dorothy Reid, was introduced to the club members by Principal Anderson, while Miss Gordon, the new school nurse was also introduced to the assembly. Miss Gordon spoke briefly to the mothers concerning the children's health and announced Medical Health Officer Dr. G. S. Cronk would give diphtheria serum to all school children and children of pre-school age next Tuesday. Parents wishing their children to take the serum were asked to make arrangements with Miss Gordon.

Mrs. Gordon Barclay conducted a quiz program during the evening with the meeting being closed with the singing of the National Anthem, following which coffee and biscuits were served by Miss Lockhart.

Wendell Willkie To See Roosevelt

Minneapolis, Oct. 14 — (AP) — Wendell Willkie took off from the airport here at 10:09 A. M. E.D.T. today on the last lap of his round-the-world airplane tour of most of the principal war sectors. He was expected to fly direct to Washington, arriving in six hours.

Willkie took off in the same four-motored army ship "Gulliver" in which he arrived from Edmonton yesterday.

Willkie, fresh from the front lines in Egypt, Russia and China, probably will see President Roosevelt later today.

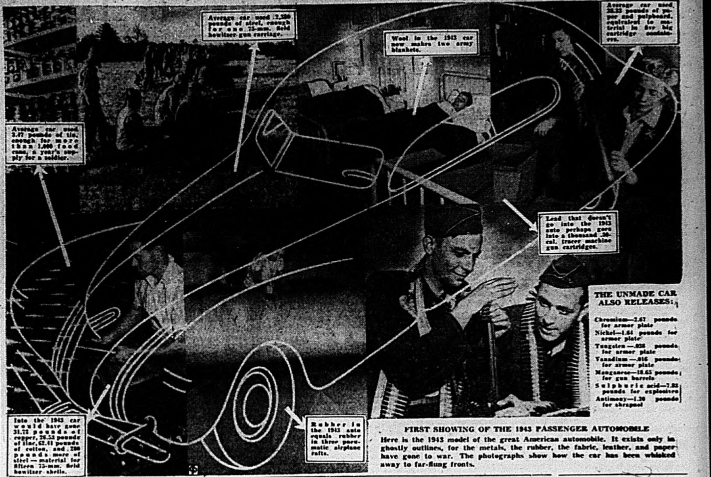
GERMAN GENERAL KILLED

Ankara, Turkey, Oct 12 — (Delayed) — (AP) — The death of the German Armored Division Commander, Gen. Erwin Mack, "at the head of his troops in an operations in the Southwest" was reported in the Berlin newspaper Boersen Zeitung in its Sept. 27 issue received here today.

The report was interpreted as indirectly confirming Yugoslav advices of several weeks ago that German and Italian troops in Yugoslavia had been engaged in a fierce battle in July and August with forces under Gen. Draja Mihailovich.

Yugoslavs here said a German armored division operating with Italian, Hungarian and Croatian troops fought strong Yugoslav forces in Bosnia, finally forcing Gen. Mihailovich to retire into the mountains of South Bosnia but only after he had captured quantities of Italian artillery.

HERE'S HOW THAT CAR THAT YOU CAN'T BUY IS AIDING THE WAR FRONT



Average car used 2,380 pounds of steel, enough for one 75-mm. field howitzer gun carriage.
Wool in the 1943 car now makes two army blankets.
Average car used 26.33 pounds of paper and pulpboard, equivalent to material in five big cartridge containers.
Average car used 3.47 pounds of tin, enough for more than 1,000 food cans, a year's supply for a soldier.
Lead that doesn't go into the 1943 auto perhaps goes into a thousand .30-cal. tracer machine gun cartridges.
Into the 1943 car would have gone 31.72 pounds of copper, 26.53 pounds of zinc, 62.41 pounds of cotton, and 280 pounds more of steel — material for fifteen 75-mm. field howitzer shells.
Rubber in the 1943 auto equals rubber in three pneumatic airplane rafts.

THE UNMADE CAR ALSO RELEASES:

Chromium—2.67 pounds for armor plate
Nickel—1.64 pounds for armor plate
Tungsten—.038 pounds for armor plate
Vanadium—.016 pounds for armor plate
Manganese—18.65 pounds for gun barrels
Sulphuric acid—7.83 pounds for explosives
Antimony—1.20 pounds for shrapnel

Here is the 1943 model of the great American automobile. It exists only in ghostly outlines, for the metals, the rubber, the fabric, leather, and paper have gone to war. The photographs show how the car has been whisked away to far-flung fronts.

ILSLEY STRESSES NEED OF SUPPORT FOR VICTORY LOAN

Substantial Subscriptions Expected From Well-to-Do and Middle Classes

WORKING MEN AS WELL

Toronto Oct. 14. (CP) — The need for support of Canada's Third Victory Loan from everyone in Canada was stressed today by Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Federal Minister of Finance, in an address prepared for delivery before combined service clubs here today. "The magnitude of the undertaking is so great that it cannot succeed without support from all parts of the nation and all groups in the nation", he said.

Substantial subscriptions must be expected from the well-to-do and from the middle class, Mr. Ilsley said. It is "getting progressively more difficult for them to subscribe" but it "is getting more difficult or less necessary" to spend money in other ways.

"Victory Loan subscriptions on top of taxes will not only help the nation to carry on the war—they will help us to force ourselves to live as we should in wartime".

Rely On Wage Earners

"However much we obtain from business and the well-to-do", Mr. Ilsley said "we must rely for a great deal of our requirements upon savings by wage earners, and now by farmers. This is not only highly desirable as a matter of social policy—it is essential, as a matter of arithmetic. We need so much of the National Income now for war purposes—passing through the treasury—that all the incomes of the rich, all the profit and savings that business can make, will by no means meet our requirements.

"We must persuade the working men and women of this nation—who are naturally receiving a large and growing share of its income as employment expands—to save a large portion of their earnings now so that they may spend them after the war, or retain them as security".

Mr. Ilsley said that selling bonds in factories and to other workers is a new and difficult task, but added that with the experience in the First and Second Victory Loans and in War Savings Campaigns, an efficient and widespread organization has been developed.

Reviews War Situation

Mr. Ilsley reviewed the war situation briefly and paying tribute to Russia and China, he said:

"Time and again I keep thinking that what would seem to us the goal of wartime economy, the minimum standard of health and decency, would seem to them the lap of luxury. How far have we gone in sharing even the economic burdens with these, our Allies . ."

The Finance Minister stressed that income tax being deducted from earnings nowadays should not be used "as an excuse for refusing to subscribe to the Victory Loan or to War Savings." He said the tax deductions "are not more than all can be expected to pay as a minimum."

"The post-war importance of saving for victory loans is of first-rate significance," he said. "By deferring our spending until after the war, we help to ensure one another work at that time when we can and should devote our efforts to providing the highest possible standard of living for Canadians."

Mr. Ilsley compared Canada's war effort to the total war being waged in the active war theatres. "It is hard for most of us to realize that we are at war other than economically," he said. "The fighting is thousands of miles away except where the enemy lurks in submarines. We have not suffered the horror of invasion nor even the terror of bombing.

"Nevertheless, we must somehow bring ourselves to realize the great emergency and the great necessities without that terror and that horror being upon us. And we must do so soon if we are to survive. It will be too late if we wait until the enemy arrives."

GUNS ROAR IN DESERT AS OPPOSING ARMIES TRADE BLOWS

Long distance artillery duels are a constant part of desert warfare even when the opposing forces are not engaged in major offensives and counter-offensives. In this picture from North Africa, an enemy shell is exploding near a six-pounder gun position of the British forces, but the gunner crew goes calmly on with their sight laying and firing. New action in the desert may break out at any time.

Report Von Bock Under Arrest

London, Oct. 14 —(CP)—Reuters News Agency said today that Tass, the Russian news agency, had issued a dispatch in Moscow, under a Geneva dateline, reporting that several German generals and chiefs of motorized infantry corps have been removed and also cited a Tass report that Field Marshal Fedor von Bock has been placed under arrest.

Rumors that von Bock was relieved of command of Nazi forces assaulting Stalingrad have been current for several weeks but have not been confirmed.

FREE SERVICE OFFERED

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 14—(CP)— The Ontario County Bar Association yesterday announced that service of all its members will be placed, gratis, at the disposal of soldiers and their dependents should the need arise.

A special committee has been appointed to investigate all cases to see if legal assistance is needed.

Lord Tweedsmuir Takes His Seat In House of Lords

London, Oct. 14 — (CP Cable) — Lord Tweedsmuir took a half-day off his duties as staff officer in the intelligence branch of Canadian Army Headquarters to take his seat in the House of Lords today.

Accepting the prerogative of a service officer to dispense with formality, the son of the former Governor-General of Canada, John Buchan, Baron Tweedsmuir, who died in 1940, took the oath of allegiance to the King and signed the roll of parliament without the customary ancient pageantry with which peers take their seats in peacetime.

Lord Tweedsmuir, who came to Britain with the First Canadian Contingent in 1939, was in army uniform. He is a Major.

His mother watched the brief ceremony from the gallery.

4,250,000 Men Now in U.S. Army

Washington, Oct. 14. (AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson, arguing for the draft of 18 and 19 year olds, estimated today that the United States army now has 4,250,000 men and next year will swell to 7,500,000.

He gave this breakdown of 1943's army needs to the House of Representatives Military Committee:—

Air Forces	2,200,000
Organized Ground Units,	3,300,000
Services of Supply and Related Duties	2,000,000

The Secretary told the Committee the United States wants to have in 1943 "the largest Air Force with sustaining units . . . which production and transportation will permit".

U.S. PICTURES BANNED BY VICHY

MERCHANT SHIP TORPEDOED IN ST. LAWRENCE

Attack is Made Farther Up-River Than Any Before

4,000-ton Ship Was Struck Last Thursday Night—12 Of Crew Missing

SUB BELIEVED SUNK

(By FRANK FLAHERTY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Metis Beach, Que., Oct 15. (CP) A westbound merchant ship was torpedoed and sunk last Thursday night off this summer resort on the St. Lawrence River's south shore, farther up-river than any previous submarine attack.

The ship was struck just after midnight and 12 of her crew are missing. The 18 others were picked up by Canadian naval vessels which tried to locate and counter-attack the U-boat.

Disclosure of the loss of the 4,000-ton merchant ship, one of the vessels in a small convoy, was withheld until today for naval security reasons.

(In Ottawa today Navy Minister Macdonald announced the loss and said:

("Although some abatement in the toll of merchant ships taken by submarines in the Western Atlantic has been noticeable in August and September, the continuing attacks in the St. Lawrence have impressed the conclusion upon us that there can be no relaxation of our efforts".)

No Confirmation

(At an Eastern Canadian port the quartermaster of the sunken ship said: "I'm sure one of the Canadian escorts got the U-boat". Other crewmen expressed agreement but there was no official confirmation for this remark. Mr. Macdonald's statement said simply: "The U-boat was not seen".)

The incident, one of a number of sinkings which have occurred in the St. Lawrence River during the past three months, startled residents on the shore—particularly Octave Gendron, lighthouse-keeper, and his family who live on a point jutting out into the river.

Gendron, awakened by the explosion of the torpedo and the subsequent firing of star shells by naval vessels in order to light up the area and find the submarine, thought his lighthouse was under bombardment.

Planes Were Too Late

Operational aircraft were sent to the scene at once but by the time they arrived the shooting was over and all they saw was some floating debris, presumably the remains of the sunken freighter.

Previous announcement have disclosed the sinking of nine other ships in the St. Lawrence area, and the damaging of one other. These earlier sinkings took place further down stream, mostly in the vicinity of Cape Chat where the St. Lawrence is about 100 miles wide and gives the undersea craft ample room to manoeuvre and hide. At Metis, near Mont Joli, about halfway between the river mouth and Quebec City, the river is about 20 miles wide and it is estimated last week's sinking occurred about 15 miles out in the river from Gendron's light house.

Submarines have been reported sighted in many parts of the river but it is difficult to be sure of a sighting unless the submarine sinks a ship or is hit.

Gendron, a middle-aged man with a family of 13 children, claims he saw a submarine in the bay between the lighthouse point and the beach last July 10. It remained there about an hour during the evening and then disappeared.

As a dance was in progress in the hotel at the beach that night it is believed this may have been the incident referred to in a German communique which quoted a submarine commander as saying his crew listened to dance music on the shores of the St. Lawrence.

Reported Incident

Mr. Gendron reported the incident to local authorities and said several officers came to question him about it. He also wrote a letter to Defence Minister Ralston about it and received a reply stating the matter had been referred to Navy Minister Macdonald.

Because of the position of the lighthouse, the Gendron family got more of a shock from the sinking than other residents who could see and hear less, although many heard enough to know that something unusual was taking place.

"Did you think they were shooting at you?" he was asked.

"Certainly", was the emphatic reply, which was echoed by his 21-year-old son David, who helps his father, and four of the smaller Gendrons.

David was up late the night of the sinking, writing at the roll-top desk in the big, well-furnished living room but the rest of the family and Esther Leblanc, the local school teacher who boards with the Gendrons, were asleep.

David said the first explosion, which wakened the rest of the household, was at 12:10 a. m. This was followed by another blast five minutes later, and soon the skyline to the east was alight and the booming of guns was heard.

Mistakes Gunfire

This gunfire was what made Gendron think the enemy was firing at his lighthouse but what was really happening was that Canadian corvettes were firing star-shells to illuminate the area in the hope of sighting the submarine.

"But the subs take no chances," a naval officer in the area said.

He said it is easy for a submarine to lie in wait until it gets a shot at a ship and then make itself scarce, remaining underwater with motors stopped until the danger has passed.

The job of fighting submarines in the huge expanse of water which is the lower St. Lawrence is carried out jointly by the Royal Canadian Navy and Royal Canadian Air Force. The navy's ships make patrols in the river and escort convoys. The air force maintains a 24-hour patrol.

WILLKIE RENEWS HIS PLEA FOR SECOND FRONT

Has Opinion Where Front Should be Established but Won't Name Spot

RUSSIA PRAISED

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Oct. 15 (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie stepped out of the role of personal representative of President Roosevelt and back into that of private citizen today after ending a circuit of the world and appealing anew for a second front.

From the White House, where he reported to President Roosevelt yesterday on a 31,000-mile tour that took him to fighting fronts in the Middle East, Russia and China, Willkie urged that a second front be established. He made the same appeal in Moscow.

Yet he told reporters: "In my judgment, Germany will never conquer Russia."

Willkie said he had his own opinion where a second front should be opened, but he was unwilling to name the spot. He said he based his decision that there should be one on talks with "military men all over the world." He had seen such men in Egypt and in the Middle East, and had sounded out British, Russian, Chinese and American Generals.

"May I say without boast that I have had considerable experience in judging recommendations of technical men," he said.

CROATIA REVOLT ADDING TROUBLE TO AXIS ARMIES

4,000 Well-Organized Peasants Battling Puppet Government Of Dr. Ante Pavelic

COUNTRY IN TURMOIL

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 15 — (AP) — The Nazi-created State of Croatia today was reported torn by civil strife with followers of the powerful peasant leader, Dr. Vladimir Macek, in open revolt against the puppet government of Dr. Ante Pavelic.

Yugoslav sources, who would not permit use of their names, said an army of about 4,000 well-organized peasants is battling Pavelic's brown-shirted Ustachi — the militia which he organized in emulation of Mussolini's Blackshirts.

The revolt added to complications facing the Axis armies of occupation in Yugoslavia, already engaged in bitter strife with the forces of Gen. Draja Mihailovich, who has been waging warfare from the fastnesses of the Yugoslav mountains.

Gen. Mihailovich was said to be constantly reinforcing his army, and the effectiveness of his campaign was demonstrated by official Italian figures showing that 4,389 Italian soldiers had been killed and 4,490 wounded in the Balkans in the last 10 months.

Germany May Take Control

(Advices from Ankara, Turkey, said reports were current there that the Germans might take over control of Croatia and Slovenia because of dissatisfaction with Italy's failure to cope with continued anti-Axis outbreaks. These reports said Germany might also demand full control of the Adriatic port of Trieste, which Italy got from Austria at the end of the First Great War.)

Communications in Yugoslavia were reported in a turmoil as a result of repeated attacks by insurgents upon railway trains. Yugoslav quarters said 46 trains had been derailed in Croatia alone in September and declared Nazi troops were compelled to guard the whole length of the Zagreb-Belgrade railway.

These quarters expressed belief the Croat revolt had been stirred by the arrest of Macek and five other leaders of the Croatian peasant party for their refusal to co-operate with the Axis.

Macek, who for years had the largest popular following of any Croatian leader, was opposed to Pavelic's Fascist-type regime, but being an exponent of moderation had not actively opposed it.

News of the revolt followed by two days a German radio report that Pavelic's cabinet had resigned and had been replaced by a new set of ministers pledged to govern according to "Ustachi principles."

Berlin States Commando Raids Indicate Preparation for 2nd Front

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Oct. 15—(AP)— DNB, German news and propaganda agency, reported today a series of British commando raids along the coast of France last month and said "it can be deduced that the British command intends to give way to the Soviet demand for a second front and to make Normandy the scene of such an attack."

"In early September, commando raids on a larger scale were carried out by the British," it said, adding that they were in preparation for "a British landing on the coast of Normandy."

(Dominions Secretary Clement Attlee told the House of Commons this week that commando raids have been taking place in undisclosed frequency but that no announcement concerning them could be expected.)

One night during the month, DNB said, the German post on a small rocky island in the Casquets group of Alderney was attacked.

(This position is in the channel northeast of the Channel Islands and west of the peninsula on which the French port of Cherbourg is situated.)

Sept. 7, it said, British forces attempted to approach the west coast of the Cotentin Peninsula off Anneville, but coastal defences were asserted to have driven off the boat.

Further such attempts were observed on other points off the coast of Normandy during the same period, it said.

(The last raid on German positions in France itself to be announced was the Aug. 19 Canadian-led attack on Dieppe.

(Later, after the Germans described a small-scale raid on the channel island of Sark, Britain announced that a party of 100 officers and men raided Sark the night of Oct. 3. They said the raid was one of many such operations which frequently were carried out but not ordinarily announced.

Malta Raiders Engaged Before Making Targets, 23 Axis Planes Downed

Cairo, Oct. 15—(AP) — British fighters shot down 23 Axis planes over Malta yesterday, engaging most of the raiders before they were able to do any damage, a joint communique of the R.A.F. and British Middle East Headquarters said today.

Air activity over the Egyptian battle front was reported on a reduced scale, but Allied fighter-bombers attacked Axis targets in the Salum area and at El Daba, it was announced, and two direct hits were reported on a large merchant vessel in a daylight raid on shipping at Tobruk Harbor.

The twenty-three Axis planes downed over Malta were among a total of at least sixty-five reported bagged at that island stronghold since Sunday. The communique said the day's victims were 12 bombers and 11 fighters.

All the raiders were engaged before they reached the island and damage inflicted by those which managed to get through the fighter screen was slight, it was announced.

"Our aircraft losses were five Spitfires, but three of the pilots are safe," the communique said.

The United States army headquarters announced a daylight heavy bomber attack staged yesterday on Axis Supply Shipping in the Port of Tobruk. Two direct hits were scored on a large merchantman.

A lighter alongside the merchant vessel was said to have been demolished by another direct hit.

IMPORTANT NAZI SUPPLY SHIP SUNK BY BRITISH

Two Escorting Vessels Damaged Severely the Admiralty Reports

ANOTHER SHIP SUNK

London, Oct. 15 (CP)—A heavily escorted German supply ship, described as important, was sunk in the English Channel early Wednesday by British light naval forces, the Admiralty announced today.

Two escorting vessels were damaged severely by gunfire, the Admiralty said. It reported that in a separate naval clash near the Channel Island of Guernsey one German E-boat was blown up and a torpedo boat was damaged.

"An important enemy supply ship was intercepted and destroyed by light naval forces in the English Channel on Wednesday morning," the Admiralty said. "The strength of the escort which consisted of torpedo boats and minesweepers was such that it was obvious that the enemy attached great importance to the safe passage of this vessel."

Coastal Batteries Used

The engagement was said to have taken place off Cape De La Hague and the Admiralty said that in this action and in the subsequent clash near Guernsey "enemy coastal batteries opened fire on our ships without effect."

The flames from the two damaged escort vessels were visible from the English coast, the communique said. The rest of the escort was reported to have scattered and withdrawn.

The important supply ship was damaged by gunfire and then hit with two torpedoes in a motor torpedo-boat attack.

"A heavy explosion followed," the Admiralty said. "The enemy ship blew up."

The communique said "only superficial damage was sustained by one of our ships. Casualties were confined to two sailors wounded."

Explosions at Sea Shake Lisbon Buildings

Lisbon, Oct. 15. (AP)—Explosions at sea shook buildings and shattered windows yesterday afternoon on Cape Roca, westernmost point of Portugal, tending to bear out earlier reports, still without confirmation, of a naval engagement in the Atlantic off Portugal.

What happened could not be seen from the shore owing to poor visibility but the action evidently was close by. Cape Roca is west northwest of Lisbon.

CHILEAN POLICE MOUNT GUARD

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 15. (AP) —Chilean police were reported mounting guard today over Dr. Hans Borchers, former German Consul-General in New York and former Consul in Cleveland, who arrived in Chile last March without diplomatic or consular credentials.

It is understood that Borchers, ousted from the United States in 1941 following the closing of German consulates by Federal order, has been placed under surveillance at Zapallar, seaside resort north of Valparaiso.

RUSSIA APPROVES PUNISHMENT OF AXIS RINGLEADERS

Announcement Issued on Behalf of Stalin by Foreign Commissar

WILL CO-OPERATE

Moscow, Oct. 15 — (AP) — The Russian Government, contributing Premier Stalin's view on punishment of Axis war leaders, proposed today that a special tribunal undertake at once to punish "any one of the leaders of Fascist Germany who, in the course of the war, has fallen into the hands of states fighting against Hitlerite Germany."

While Rudolf Hess was not mentioned specifically in this passage of the Russian announcement, he seemed to be the most important if not the only captive Axis adherent falling in the category of prisoners against whom immediate action was sought by Russia.

Hess, former Deputy Fuehrer, has been a British prisoner since May 10, 1941, when he parachuted to earth in Scotland, bearing what both Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill later said was an overture to Britain to make peace with Germany and join the Reich in war on Russia. The German attack on Russia started June 22, 1941.

Proposal Startles London

(Hess has long been known as a bitter opponent of Communism.

(The Russian proposal startled London. A British foreign office commentator said that "Hess, of course, is regarded as one" of the Nazi leaders who might be affected by the British government's own earlier declaration proposing a tribunal to indict war criminals.

(He emphasized, however, that "Hess became our prisoner on May 10, 1941" and "of course while there were plenty of crimes to be charged against the Nazi leaders prior to that date the atrocities affecting the Russian people and the majority of those against other European peoples occurred later.)

The Russian government announced approval of the program outlined by British leaders and President Roosevelt and went further by reciting names.

Mustang Fighters Raid Railways

London, Oct. 15—(CP)—Mustang fighters of the R.A.F. attacked railway facilities in Holland and damaged three small Axis vessels off the coast yesterday afternoon, the Air Ministry announced today.

None of the Mustangs were lost in the forays, which coincided with a series of offensive sweeps over northern France by Spitfires and Beaufighters.

The Spitfires were credited with damaging two enemy minesweepers off the French coast and shooting up a railway workshop near Lannion, while the Beaufighters were reported to have strafed two Axis E-boats.

SOLOMON ISLANDS BATTLE ENTERING CRITICAL PHASE

Newly-Reinforced Jap Troops Determined To Recapture Guadalcanal Airfield

U.S. MARINES CONFIDENT

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 15 (AP) —War Secretary Henry Stimson disclosed today that substantial army ground and air forces have arrived on Guadalcanal to help defend the Solomon Islands key point against Japanese attacks.

Stimson reported at his press conference also that army forces now are in the New Hebrides and Fiji Islands on the route between the United States and Australia, as well as at other points where their presence had been disclosed previously.

"Recently army ground and air units have moved to Guadalcanal to reinforce the marines who seized important positions in the Solomons and are tenaciously holding them against vigorous Japanese counter-attacks," the War Secretary said.

Close Co-operation

"The army and navy forces in this area are fighting in the closest possible co-operation under the unified command of the navy," he added.

Stimson said the army troops on Guadalcanal were under command of Maj.-Gen. Millard F. Harmon of the air forces. Gen. Harmon, the Secretary said, has his headquarters in New Zealand but has spent most of his time at his advance base in New Caledonia.

In New Guinea, Stimson said, army fliers for months have been taking a heavy toll of Japanese aircraft and shipping and rendering "splendid support" to the Australians in the advance over the Owen Stanley range.

Stimson did not disclose when the army forces reached Guadalcanal.

Meanwhile, United States naval quarters regarded recent Japanese naval losses as severely sapping the enemy's supply strength in the Pacific. Japanese ship casualties announced in the last three days totalled 11 vessels sunk, two probably sunk and five damaged.

Aim at Quick Decision

This toll of shipping coupled with heavy plane losses, naval observers said, may cause the Japanese to drive desperately for a quick decision on Guadalcanal in an effort to regain control of the Solomons.

Rear-Admiral John S. McCain, who recently relinquished an air command in the Southwest Pacific, expressed confidence only two days ago, however, that the American forces can hold their positions in the Solomons.

Now Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, he said the American display of "sufficient superiority in material and men" justified his belief.

VEHICLES "FROZEN"

Canberra, Oct. 15—(AP) — All new commercial vehicles in Australia were frozen today under an order of the Transport Board. In future nobody can dispose of, deliver or acquire a new commercial vehicle or chassis without a permit.

ROMMEL BACK IN AFRICA

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Oct. 15—(AP)—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has returned to North Africa after a visit to Berlin and has resumed active command of the Axis forces on the Egyptian battlefront, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung reported today.

Surgeon Performs Operation Almost Without Parallel in Medical History

Brighton, England, Oct. 15—(CP) —Henry Coates of London is alive today thanks to the courage of a surgeon who removed a live German Messerschmitt cannon shell from his thigh—a dangerous operation almost without parallel in medical history.

Coates was wounded when a German plane bombed and machine-gunned the building in which he was working.

Surgeons, knowing that shells of that type frequently explode at the slightest touch, were faced with a rare dilemma. Finally they called in a bomb-disposal squad, which suggested that with extreme care the shell might be removed.

Disregarding the danger to himself, Dr. Donald Hall, chairman of the Royal Sussex County Hospital, undertook to perform the delicate operation. Assistants and nurses volunteered to help and the operation was carried through without mishap.

Montreal Prepares Warm Tribute At Rally Tonight

Homecoming Was Wartime Secret Until Men Arrived Early This Morning

HOMETOWN FETES

Montreal, Oct. 15—(CP)—Smiling and happy, seventeen veterans of the Battle of Dieppe came back to the Canadian homeland today to receive the nation's tribute as representatives of the men who fought the gallant nine-hour assault on the blood-stained beaches of France.

Home to be feted here and in their hometowns to which they later will go, the men arrived here by train early this morning from an east coast United States port where they had been welcomed by Col. H. DesRosiers, Deputy Minister of National Defence.

Their homecoming a well-kept wartime secret, the returning men surprised work-bound Montrealers as they trooped into uptown Windsor Hotel out of buses which had brought them from their train.

Leading them into the hotel lobby were Lt.-Col. Dollard Menard of Quebec, his arm in a sling from wounds suffered with Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal at Dieppe, and Capt. W. S. Osler of Winnipeg, who was wounded with the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders.

Smiles split their faces as they filled the lobby and then moved upstairs for breakfast before facing a monster Press conference at which they will tell for the Canadian people the story of the Aug. 19 assault on the French coastline.

Nine Have Been Decorated

The officers in the returning group—which included nine men decorated for their part in the raid—included Capt. Ronald B. Murray, of Kingston, Ont., Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps; Capt. Dennis Bult-Francis of Westmount, Que., wounded at Dieppe; and Honorary Capt. the

NO DELAY BEING CAUSED

Saint John, N. S., Oct. 15—(CP) —Two freight trains of the Canadian National Railways collided head-on early today 10 miles east of McGivney Junction and both locomotives were slightly damaged.

Frank Griffin, C. N. R. Superintendent in the Edmundston area, announced the only person injured was a fireman, C. Colpitts of Moncton, who suffered leg injuries.

The full extent of the damage was not known but it was believed two freight cars were derailed, and that the line would be cleared this evening, causing no delay to passenger trains.

ALL THEIR WORK FOR NOTHING

Peterboro, Oct. 15 — (CP) —Two Smith Township boys peddling vegetables here returned home deep in the red. Their horses became frightened, ran away and scattered the produce over city streets before smashing the wagon.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 15 — (CP) — Unless he's careful, a rude awakening awaits the person who stole seven caps from the Malvern Construction Company here. Police said the caps were made of fulminated mercury and would explode if jarred too much.

2 BELLEVILLE MEN INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK AT OTTAWA

Howard Gray and W. G. Bannon Admitted to the Ottawa Hospital

20 HORSES KILLED

Ottawa, Oct. 15 — (CP) — Five persons were injured, none seriously, and about 20 horses killed when two Canadian National Railways freight trains, one bearing at least 40 horses for the Canadian Army, collided head-on last night on the steel overhead of the Ottawa-Morrisburg highway at Billings Bridge, Ottawa suburb.

The injured, all railwaymen, were W. G. Bannon, 30, and Howard Gray, 55, of Belleville, Ont.; William Wickens, 45, of Ivanhoe, Ont.; A. Gavreau, J. A. Lemay and Lorne Costello, all of Ottawa. Bannon, Gray and Wickens were the only ones taken to hospital.

Gavreau, engineer of the train carrying the horses, and his fireman, Costello, saved themselves by jumping down an embankment approximately 35 feet high when they saw the other train approaching.

Locomotives Lock

The two locomotives were locked together in the collision, and as they were being separated by a wrecking engine from the C. N. R. shops several hundred spectators were waved back out of danger by two air raid precautions workers, J. W. Presley and Richard Rafter, of Billings Bridge.

A flat car loaded with lumber pushed two cattle cars carrying horses sideways when the collision occurred, and sent them headlong down the embankment. Some of the animals were killed outright; others, suffering from broken legs or pinned under wreckage, were shot by Inspector Joseph Friend of Ottawa Humane Society.

It was not expected that the track would be cleared until late today.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

BASS AND LUNGE FISHING NEARS END

At sundown today the bass and maskinonge fishing season closes. However, there is at least one happy angler in Belleville who realised the zenith of his fishing career, when he landed a fine 20-pound maskinonge, that measured 44 1-2 inches long, in Stoco Lake on Wednesday. The finny beauty was hooked by Mr. J. C. Palmer, 14 Ridley Avenue, in the city. Recent reports of prolific 'lunge catches throughout the district indicate the season now closed was productive of some of the finest maskinonge caught in the Quinte area in many years.

BOTTOM OF BOAT RIDDLED WITH BULLETS

Destructive persons, with the aid of a 22 calibre rifle, sank a skiff at the foot of John St. in the bay recently. The boat is the property of Hazen Stavis, 167A Church St., and had been moored along the bay shore last week. When Mr. Stavis returned to his skiff on Wednesday to enjoy an afternoon of angling in the bay he found the craft partially submerged, he reported to police. Investigations proved some person had riddled the bottom of the boat with 22 calibre rifle bullet fire. Numerous holes were found in the boat and police promised thorough investigation of such malicious destruction of private property.

CHILDREN WARNED AGAINST PLAYING IN LEAVES ON STREETS

With the advent of autumn and the falling of leaves, city police today issued warnings regarding the practice of children secluding themselves beneath piles of leaves on city streets.

"Quite innocent of the danger they are placing themselves in with motor traffic passing by, reports that small children have been piling leaves along the street curbs and then secluding themselves beneath the piles. Passing motorists cannot be expected to know that some child may be hidden beneath a pile of leaves on the roadside," stated police officials here today as they urged parents to warn children against such practices that endanger life and limb.

NAMES OF AIRMEN INJURED RELEASED

Condition of the two airmen from Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, who were admitted to the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday following the explosion of a bomb cartridge upon which they were working, is as good as can be expected, it was announced by hospital authorities this morning. Four airmen were injured in the explosion but only two were admitted to the Belleville hospital.

The two airmen admitted to Belleville hospital were Flt.-Sgt. D. L. G. Edwards of St. Catharines, but presently living at Cottage Inn, Belleville and LAC. J. P. Weese of Toronto, living at 59 Station St. Both airmen are married it was reported. Announcement of airmen's names was withheld pending notification of relatives.

REPAIRED TOWER FILLED WITH WATER

Following completion of painting and repair work, the water tower of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission situated at the rear of the Tabernacle United Church, was filled yesterday, officials announced today.

The tower has been given three coats of paint on its interior surface, and two on the outside. Former paint surfaces were removed with sand-blast machines. The work was done by the Dominion Steeplejack Company of Toronto.

The city now has 150,000 gallons of water in reserve after being without any extra supply for some time.

POLICE BLOTTER

Belleville police are endeavoring to ascertain the whereabouts of one H. Russell, no address known. Recently police found a 1934 light delivery Chevrolet truck abandoned on Foster Ave., and had the vehicle towed to a local garage for security. The vehicle carried Ontario licence plates number 86785-C and had the name "H. Russell" painted on the side.

Punt Reported Stolen

R. Scriven, 138 West Dundas St., reported the theft of a punt from the waters of the slip near the filtration plant. Mr. Scriven has been in the habit of mooring his craft at this point for some years past, he told police.

Two persons reported losing their National Registration cards to police officials yesterday. Helen Collison, 82 Purdy St., and Albert Matthews, 26 Octavia St., both asked police to assist in the possible recovery of their registration certificates.

Encounter Broken Up

City police broke up a fistic encounter on Front St. early Thursday morning when several airmen became engaged in a fight. As police ordered the belligerents to "move on", one refused and later had to be taken into custody on a charge of intoxication. Later it was established the airman held had been the instigator.

Interest Increases In A. R. P. Work

Increased interest on the part of the local residents in the newly-formed Civilian Defence organization was evident on Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A. when the greatest number so far noted was in attendance at the second lecture of the basic training course dealing with "First Aid in Air Raids."

Lecturer for the evening was Mr. John Hodgson, instructor in first-aid for the Belleville branch of the St. John Ambulance Brigade. Mr. Hodgson gave practical demonstration on a living model of the best manner in which to treat many of the injuries to be expected as the result of air raids.

Mr. Harold Seldon, vice-chairman of the Belleville Civilian Defence Committee and through whose efforts the organization has progressed in this city, expressed appreciation at the increased attendance and to the fact that additional interest was being shown in applications.

The meeting was attended by a better representation from local industrial firms, it was stated by Mr. Seldon. This shows that interest in civilian defence in this city is gradually mounting.

One of the highlights of the evening's lecture was the showing of a "March of Time" film depicting the various phases of air raid precaution work. Special emphasis was given in the film on the proper method of handling incendiary bombs.

The third in the series of eight lectures in the basic training course will be held next Wednesday evening when special emphasis will be given high explosive bombs. A portion of the lecture will be devoted to explaining how to set up adequate refuge rooms as protection against high explosive bombs.

Obituary

MASTER FRED WIGGINS (Deloro)

Marmora — (Special) — The sudden passing of little Fred Wiggins at Deloro on Monday afternoon has occasioned widespread sympathy for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wiggins. The child who was in his fifth year was apparently well until Sunday, when he was taken ill shortly after dinner. He passed away at 3:30 p. m. on Monday. Besides his sorrowing parents, he is survived by five brothers:—Wilbert, Donald, Marvin, Halsey and George and four sisters, Donalda, Thelma, Dorothea and Elveda. The funeral was conducted at the home of the parents at 11 a. m. on Wednesday with Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher officiating. Interment took place in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

LATE MRS. JESSIE DOOLITTLE

The funeral of Mrs. Jessie Doolittle, late residence, 39 Sinclair St., and widow of Benjamin Doolittle, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 14th. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Stirling cemetery was conducted by the Rev. H. O. Eastman, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Lionel Harris, Talbot Ketcheson, Charles Ridley, Charles Brown, Garfield Lloyd and George Glover.

Trenton and District

Trenton — (Special) — Red Cross workers were busily engaged on Tuesday afternoon with all the various branches of sewing, knitting, etc., and several shipments were made of finished articles to headquarters at Toronto. During the afternoon donations were received from several classes of the College St. school; $3. from Miss Stauffeur's room brought in by pupils Stanley Sexsmith, Frances Patrick, Jimmy Kirk, Mac Robinson, Shirley Bellamy and Irma Bennett; $1.00 from Miss Walker's class and $1.00 from Miss Young's class.

At the close of the workroom, the regular monthly meeting was held with the president, Mr. B. F. Joyce in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the Secretary Mrs. V. Carswell, and the Treasurer's report presented by the Treasurer Mr. Geo. Sprentall. The net proceeds from the concert presented by the Elgar Junior Choir in King St. Church early in September was reported as $65.83.

The advisability of setting up an emergency nursing reserve in connection with Red Cross was discussed and it was decided that this should be done at once and the work convener was advised to go ahead with the ordering of material for making twenty-five hospital units, to consist of sheets, pillow slips, bed gowns, hospital binders and many other articles. These units are to be made ready and stored in a proper place in our community for use only in the case of emergency.

A report of the shipping committee showed 348 articles had been shipped during the month of September, valued at $218.75.

Police Court

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd presided over police court on Tuesday afternoon with County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C. prosecuting.

Adolphus Williams charged with being drunk in charge of a car was sentenced to seven days in jail and costs of $14.80, in default of payment another fifteen days.

Reta Chard for concealing a deserter, to wit a soldier in His Majesty's Forces was given 1 year suspended sentence on payment of costs of $2.50.

Hubert B. McCoy charged with having faulty brakes on his car fined $10 and costs. The McCoy car struck the rear of a transport which was stopped for traffic signals at the corner of Dufferin and Dundas on Monday afternoon, resulting in serious damage.

A. F. Ferguson for having liquor in a public place paid $10 and costs, while F. Robertson and J. Thompson for consuming were also charged $10 and costs.

Leon Matthews for obtaining board by fraud was ordered to pay the board bill and costs of $2.00. On account of his youth he was given suspended sentence of six months and a strong warning by the Magistrate.

Hitler Engineers Drastic Shakeup

London, Oct. 15—(CP) — Belief that Hitler has made a drastic shakeup in his military commands ousting both Col. Gen. Franz Halder and Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock, was expressed today by qualified London observers on the basis of persistent reports from Stockholm.

Halder was chief of the German general staff and Von Bock commanded the powerful Nazi drive on Stalingrad.

These observers, whose names could not be disclosed, said that the continued reports that the generals had been ousted appeared based on fact, but that the names of their successors had not yet been disclosed.

The Stockholm correspondent of The Daily Telegraph reported the dismissal of Halder on "the most reliable authority," and said the reported dismissal of Von Bock had been confirmed from five separate sources.

The Stockholm report said Halder, who headed the German general staff since 1938, was believed to have been replaced temporarily by General Alfred Jodl who has been with Hitler as an advisor at the German eastern front headquarters.

Concession to Party

A Stockholm dispatch to The Daily Express said Halder's removal was a concession to the Nazi party which had opposed him. He was said to have demanded last month that the German offensive into Russia be halted to enable the army to consolidate its positions and prepare for its second Winter on the eastern front.

Reuters quoted a Tass report from Geneva yesterday that Von Bock had been placed under arrest.

(A Berlin broadcast, heard by CBS in New York, denied the report that Von Bock had been arrested. It had nothing to say, however, of the report that he had been relieved of command on the Stalingrad front.)

British journalists, including representatives from all of London's great newspapers, are expected to visit Sweden this fall for a tour of the country.

One Hundred Percent Co-operation Needed to Make Loan a Success States Air Commodore F. McGill

It has now been definitely established that the war cannot be won by the armed services alone. The fourth service the civilian population, must co-operate to the fullest extent if final victory is to be achieved, Air Commodore Frank S. McGill, officer commanding the Trenton Air Station, RCAF, said here Wednesday night.

Speaking to a group of employer-employee committeemen and representatives in support of that phase of the forthcoming Third Victory Loan, the high-ranking air force officer told his listeners that only one hundred percent co-operation on the part of every Canadian, whether he or she is in the uniform of the King or in civilian clothes, would bring about the efforts necessary to the successful prosecution of the present struggle.

"Only this co-operation," he said, "would bring about the immense quantities of ships, planes, guns and tanks and other war material and supplies, that are necessary to defeat an enemy who has no ethics or rules, and nothing but ruthlessness and cruelty."

He made an eloquent appeal for the all-out support of the "lads, who should and must get the best of equipment to beat Hitler and those dirty little rats, the Japanese."

Must Bear Sacrifices

In support of the employer-employee phase of the Victory Loan, Air Commodore McGill stressed the point that civilian workers should invest all available spare funds in Victory Bonds. Sacrifices must be borne by the nation as a whole and as individuals. Employers, he said, should co-operate with every resource at their disposal, cut down unnecessary costs and thus add to the national war effort through their own mediums.

The civilian population has done a fine job in other Victory Loans, he said, but a greater and more urgent need is now apparent. Purchase of Victory Bonds is not confined to the civilian population alone, members of the armed services are also contributing to the nation's appeal for the loan of money by buying bonds from their service pay. Many stations of the R.C.A.F., especially Trenton has been systemized with this end in view.

Appreciation Expressed

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Lizotte, of the Reliance Tool and Aircraft Company while the appreciation of the gathering for the fine address was expressed by Mr. S. B. Wright of the Deloro Smelting Works, Deloro. Mr. Gus Freeman, manager of the Stephens Adamson Company here and chairman of the Employer-Employee Committee of the local General Victory Loan Committee was in charge of the meeting after it was handed over by General Chairman James Barclay.

Mr. Clark Kinnear, briefly outlined the employer-employee plan of the campaign explaining that it was a mass selling of bonds to employees by employees for cash on a pay-roll deduction basis.

The meeting was held in the assembly room of the Y.M.C.A. which is now colorfully decorated with flags, bunting and other Victory Loan patriotic features.

Display of Children's Work Outstanding at Marmora Fair

Marmora (Special)—Favored with ideal weather conditions, Marmora's annual fair drew a crowd on Wednesday close to two thousand which found an interesting afternoon's program awaiting them. With the exception of flowers and baking entries in the various classes were heavy. Children's work was one of the best in the history of the fair, having a patriotic motif. Women's work was represented with an attractive display of garments.

Many Livestock Entries

Livestock entries were abundant. Annual exhibitors of cattle included M. H. Pimmett and Son, Indian River with Scotch bred Shorthorns; Ben Bleecker, Holloway, Durham Shorthorns; A. E. Hubble, Havelock, Jerseys; T. E. Neal, Marmora, and Allan McComb, Bonarlaw, Holsteins. Horses, sheep and swine created good competition and poultry classes were finely represented. Special exhibits of garments for overseas were staged by Marmora Chapter I.O.D.E. who had a White Elephant table with sale of knicknacks, and refreshments; Marmora's Women's Institute and Marmora Warworkers also having displays of clothing for overseas distribution. Marmora Women's Institute also operated a refreshment booth.

Tag Day was observed by the Salvation Army and young girls also sold tags for the National Institute for the Blind.

Entomological Exhibit

The Division of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture had a most interesting exhibit in the main exhibition building with Dr. G. H. Hammond in charge. Emphasis was placed on the Japanese beetle menace while the work of other destructive insects was also illustrated in various ways.

Fine Children's Contests

The midway was one of the largest of recent years. A program of children's sports was the first counter attraction to the horse races and later an exceptionally good entertainment was held on the grandstand with T. E. Pitchard Master of Ceremonies. The appearance of Miss Marion Perry Land's pupils from Peterboro in a series of dances and songs "Young Canadians on Parade," evoked admiration from all present. The series throughout showed clever training of the girls and boys who made up the cast. Standing out conspicuously in individual original numbers were nine-year-old Audrey Duggan, who amazed all with the execution of her acrobatic dances and Doreen Hogge as comedienne and comic dancer.

The remainder of the program was in the form of contests, prize winners being as follows:

Step dancing, over 14 years—Orval McGarvey, Marmora; Thos. Hannah, Marmora.

Step dancing, 14 years and under—Marion Reynolds, Marmora; Jean Cook, Marmora.

Cowboy singinig — Ruth Bain, Bonarlaw; Robert McFaul, Marmora.

Fiddling — Charlie Campion, Marmora; John Izzard, Deloro.

Log sawing contest — E. Barrons and J. Edwards, Cordova Isaac McInroy and Clifford McInroy, Bonarlaw, (tie for first place).

Good Harness Racing

The horse races compared well with the best to be seen at rural fairs.

Conant Proposes Food Minister For Dominion

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 15 — (CP) — Creation of a Ministry of Food for Canada was urged by Attorney-General Conant in speaking last night at Columbus, near here, during the South Ontario Plowing Match banquet. This he urged in interests of protecting the farmer against high production costs.

"The necessity for such a ministry has surely been indicated recently, when we witnessed the spectacle of what is said to have been a quarrel between Donald Gordon, head of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and Hon. James Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture," said Mr. Conant. "Mr. Gordon quite properly wants to keep the cost of living down and so he wants foodstuffs to be available for the consumer at the lowest possible price. Gardiner, on the other hand, wants farmers to get maximum prices for their beef and other farm products. He is also to be commended for his efforts."

Mr. Conant said it is difficult to reconcile these two viewpoints.

Must Be Price Control

"I sympathize with both of them," he said. "There must be price control if we are to avoid inflation. Inflation would be disastrous to all of us. At the same time the farmer must obtain at least the cost of production if we are to maintain and increase our production of foodstuffs.

"A ministry of food presided over by a capable minister is most desirable in this situation. There is much to be done in every aspect of the production, marketing, pricing and rationing of food products. Such a ministry would go a long way toward convincing our farmers that the Dominion Government is concerned with their welfare. Up to the present time there has not been much encouragement in this direction."

A ministry of food operates in Britain and would be workable here.

"We already have ministers for almost every conceivable function of government in the Dominion, some of them concerned with matters less important than food," he said.

"The rationing of foodstuffs alone in future will require considerable administration because all our essential food items will probably be rationed within the next year."

U.S. FLIERS IN HOT FIGHT

Cairo, Oct. 14 —(AP)— Twelve United States fighter planes yesterday fought 20 Messerschmitts over the German lines and shot down two, a statement from United States Army Headquarters said today.

A third German plane was damaged and the rest forced to disperse, the statement said.

Although American heavy and medium bombers have played an active role in this theatre for several months, this was described as the first important combat for United States fighters.

September Cheese Production For Hastings County Leads Prov. For Third Time in Succession

With a September production of 1,603,174 pounds, Hastings County for the third time in succession, led the province in county production of cheese, according to statistics released today.

With the provincial production amounting to 16,784,263 pounds, Hastings September production is equivalent to 10.4 per cent of the Ontario figure for the month just past.

The September output is down some 46,000 pounds from that of the same month last year due to dry pasture and other atmospheric conditions. The production for the eight-months period of 1942, however, is 7,166,496 pounds as compared to 6,048,089 of the same period in 1941, or an increase of 1,118,407 pounds.

Hastings County's September output of cheese for the month of September exceeded that of the entire Western Ontario section by 403,905 pounds.

Other heavy provincial producers were Prescott County with 1,282,636 pounds; Glengarry, 1,155,622; Leeds, 1,073,925 and Stormont, 1,005,392.

The cheese production of the province for the first eight months of the year amounts to 87,968,420 as compared with 68,067,390 for the first eight months of 1941, or an increase of 19,901,030.

MONTREAL

Rev. Joseph Armand Sabourin of Montreal, chaplain of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, mentioned in dispatches for his services in the raid.

Capt. Sabourin took time out to tell a reporter that "it was sad at Dieppe but the boys who went there and came back are anxious to return." He added: "And those who did not go are jealous of the others."

Monster Rally

The men, who will be presented to the people of Montreal tonight in a monster rally at east-end Lafontaine Park, were accompanied from the United States by Col. DesRosiers, Brig. A. E. Nash, Vice-Adjutant General; Col. H. J. B. Keating, Director of Transportation and Movement and other Defence Department officials.

In tonight's ceremonies, they will be greeted by Air Minister Power and Justice Minister St. Laurent.

Then, as soon as it can be arranged, the men will be sent to their homes throughout Canada.

Non-commissioned officers in the party follow:

RSM. Rosario Levesque of Montreal, Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, winner of the Distinguished Conduct Medal. He is a native of New Brunswick.

CSM. George Gouk of Winnipeg, Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Canada, winner of the Distinguished Conduct Medal.

Cpl James Murphy of Toronto, Royal Regiment of Canada, winner of the Military Medal.

Sgt. G. R. Hunter of Montreal, First Battalion Black Watch of Canada.

Cpl. J. Hope of Hamilton, Royal Hamilton Light Infantry.

Cpl. J. A. Gregory of Calgary, Alta., South Saskatchewan Regiment, winner of the Military Medal. He suffered wounds at Dieppe.

L. Cpl. W. H. J. Parr of London, Ont., Royal Canadian Engineers

Pte L. Taylor of Windsor, Ont., Essex Scottish Regiment, wounded in the thigh at Dieppe.

Pte. A. S. Chisholm of Toronto, Toronto Scottish Regiment, winner of the Military Medal.

Gnr. H. J. Rose of Victoria, Royal Canadian Artillery, winner of the Military Medal. He was wounded at Dieppe.

Pte. T. P. Bibby of Woodstock, Ont., Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, winner of the Military Medal.

Pte. C. W. J. Helmer of Nordegg, Alta., Calgary Tank Regiment, winner of the Military Medal.

The men were accompanied home by Capt. Ronald B. Murray of Kingston, Ont., Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, Capt. Dennis Bult-Francis of Westmount, Que., wounded while serving overseas with a reconnaissance battalion, and Honorary Capt. the Rev. Joseph Armand Sabourin of Montreal, Chaplain of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, who was mentioned in dispatches for his services at Dieppe.

They were not among the 14 Dieppe veterans returning as personal representatives of their comrades in the raid.

Special Reception

It was understood that when men reached their hometowns special receptions would be held under the direction of the civil authorities assisted where possible by the military.

The returning troops were welcomed at their disembarkation port in the United States by Col. DesRosiers.

In a brief address, he told them that Canada has had "many proud moments but few have been prouder than these, as a grateful nation welcomes home this group of her brave soldiers who enscribed upon the sands of Dieppe this nation's determination to fight for freedom's cause."

He added:-

"Your achievements have provided Canadian history with one of its most thrilling chapters. The part which you and your comrades played in that raid gave the Nazis an unpleasant surprise. It gave the free peoples of the world a thrill. It gave the oppressed peoples of the world a new measure of hope.

"Today you are back in Canada to bring those of us at home the true picture of what our fighting forces did. You are the personal emissaries of the Canadian army overseas . . . . .

"For you the hardships of training have borne fruit. And you have been an added inspiration to our boys training both in Canada and overseas. Your success at Dieppe has lent added impetus to Canada's already fast-rolling army.

"To the British Empire and the rest of the world the word Dieppe has taken on deep significance. It has become much more than a word. It has entered legend and taken its rightful place alongside Ypres, Vimy and Passchendaele."

NAVY CHIEF

Rear Admiral John S. McCain, new chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics, Washington, D.C., made the flat statement: "We can hold the Solomons and expand them." He testified at a conference called by Secretary of the Navy Knox, to determine that the United States has shown a sufficient superiority in materials and men, to justify the assertion that America can hold all its gains in the Guadalcanal area.

Bancroft Lodge Welcomes DDGM

Bancroft, Oct. 15 — Monday evening, October 12th, was the occasion of the official visit of the D. D. G. M. George F. Little of Brighton to Bancroft Lodge A. F. & A. M. No. 482. The District Deputy was accompanied on his visit to Bancroft by Mr. G. L. Langdon and A. A. Martin also of Brighton. A second degree was the work of the evening exemplified by the Wor. Master, George Davy and his officers.

Following the closing of the lodge the local members and the visiting brethren repaired to the Eastern Star Room, where the Eastern Star ladies catered for the Masonic Banquet. A beautiful turkey dinner was served and other delicacies in keeping with such.

During the dinner Wor. Brother J. L. Churcher, Secretary of the local lodge, acted as Toastmaster, who proposed the first toast to the King. Wor. Brother W. E. Wiggins, oldest member of the lodge, then proposed the toast to Grand Lodge and Grand Lodge officers responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. G. F. Little. The toast to the visiting brethren was proposed by W. Carroll and responded to by several brethren from the district. A toast to Bancroft lodge was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. Little and responded to by Wor. Bro. George Davy. In closing the toastmaster expressed the appreciation on behalf of the lodge and visitors to the Eastern Star Ladies, who were present for the splendid way in which they had prepared the banquet tables and was responded to by the Worthy Matron Mrs. P. McCaul of the local Eastern Star Lodge. The pleasant evening was drawn to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Miss Mona Rouse who is attending business college in Toronto returned home over the weekend and is spending a few days visiting at her home in Bancroft.

Miss Lugo Reynolds of Toronto spent Thanksgiving holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Reynolds of town.

Miss Ethel Plumley is spending a few days visiting with relatives in Toronto.

Mr. Gordon Crapper, Imperial Oil mechanic of Ottawa is in town this week.

Mr. J. L. Churcher was a business visitor in Belleville Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Seward of Warkworth spent over the holiday at the home of Mr. Charles Plumley Sr., of Bancroft.

Dr. S. S. Lumb, local surgeon, motored to Lakefield Monday, to visit his son Stead who was ill at the Preparatory School which he is attending.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Plumley of Pembroke spent the holiday visiting at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Plumley of Bancroft.

WILLIAM GREEN AGAIN HEADS AFL

Re-elected President for 18th Time Promises Full Aid to War

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 15—(CP)—Pledged to do all in their power to assist in winning the war the 600 delegates and 400 visitors who attended the 62nd annual convention of the American Federation of Labor returned to their homes today after winding up their sessions last night.

The convention adjourned last night after re-electing President William Green, Secretary-Treasurer George Meany and all thirteen vice-presidents and choosing Boston as the convention city for 1943.

Scheduled to last for two weeks, the convention opened Oct. 5 and business was speeded up this week to permit adjournment ahead of schedule so delegates could return to their duties.

In his speech accepting the presidency for the 18th time, Green pledged to give "all I have to you, to Labor, to my country and to the cause of the United Nations" and voiced a belief that the war might end in 1943.

"I believe within my heart that the year 1943 is going to be the decisive year," he said, "and I firmly believe that some time during this decisive year the German military machine is going to collapse of itself."

'PIGGY BANK' FILLED

Atlanta, Oct. 15 — (AP) — An Atlanta woman, riding home on a bus, realised she had left a "piggy" bank at the postoffice while mailing letters. She hurried back, found the bank on the counter, and then noticed it was heavy. Generous Atlantans, thinking it was there for aiding some worthy cause, had put many coins in it.

WILLKIE

Sure Allies Will Win

Willkie declared with confidence: "Sure, we're going to win this war. We have the power and the resources on our side." He added, however, he was concerned over the cost in human lives and human values and over winning the peace as well as the war.

Willkie, the 1940 Republican presidential candidate, toured 14 countries in 50 days accomplishing "certain things." These things he regarded as confidential.

In a formal statement, he said he had two other purposes:—

1. To "demonstrate to our Allies and to a good many neutral countries that there is unity in the United States on the purpose of winning this year." He said this was his own idea and nobody had asked him to do it.

2. To find out all he could about the war and how it could be won—"won quickly so that we can get back to our jobs again, and won securely so that the peace which follows it will hold."

No Written Report

He said he had made some reports along the way but he wanted to put a lot more in writing and to make "careful, crystal-clear reports to the American people. He told reporters he planned to submit no written report to Mr. Roosevelt.

A four-motored army plane, which flew the paint off her nose, took Willkie around the world. But he returned to New York City, his starting point, by train early today. He plans to rest a few days at his home in Indiana before buckling down to work on his reports.

In the course of his 90-minute conference with Mr. Roosevelt, Willkie said the President had volunteered word that any report the President had criticized him while he was abroad was entirely erroneous.

RUSSIA APPROVES

Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov issued the announcement on behalf of Premier Stalin.

"The Soviet government undertakes to co-operate fully in providing information of specific crimes by specific persons and bringing the criminals to book in meting out punishment," it said.

"The whole world knows the names and bloody crimes of the leaders of the Hitlerite clique — Hitler. Goering, Hess, Goebbels, Himmler, Ribbentrop, Rosenberg and others."

The statement said Russia is "in full sympathy with the sufferings of the people of the countries of Europe occupied by Germany."

Understood by Soviet

"The miseries, degradation and privation inflicted on peoples by the Hitlerite tyranny are all the more readily understood by the people of the Soviet Union since the Hitlerite invaders in temporarily occupied Soviet areas are perpetrating their crimes on a monstrous scale," it said.

The Russian declaration was given in reply to a collective note from the governments of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia, Norway, Greece Belgium, Holland Luxembourg "expressing the desire that the Soviet government should give a warning concerning responsibility for crimes perpetrated by the Hitlerites in countries occupied by them."

The announcement said "the Soviet government considers it essential to hand over without delay to the courts of a special international tribunal and to punish with all severity of the criminal code any one of the leaders of Fascist Germany who, in the course of the war, has fallen into the hands of the states fighting against Hitlerite Germany."

Statement Not Amplified

(This statement was not amplified. Rudolf Hess, a prisoner in Britain since he made his mysterious flight from Germany to Scotland May 10, 1941, is in the category outlined.)

President Roosevelt differentiated between Axis leaders and Axis peoples in a statement Oct. 7 on the punishment for high crimes against humanity under the terms of a United Nations victory.

"It is not the intention of this government or of the governments associated with us to resort to mass reprisals," he said.

"It is our intention that just and sure punishment shall be meted out to the ringleaders responsible for the organised murder of thousands of innocent persons and the commission of other atrocities which have violated every tenet of the Christian faith."

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Oct. 15—(CP) — Wing Cmdr. M. M. Fleming, a veteran D.F.C. from Ottawa who has been appointed commanding officer of the famous Moose Squadron of Wellington bombers, has been a member of the R.A.F. since 1936.

Fleming, who succeeds the missing Wing Cmdr John J. Fulton, D.S.O., D.F.C., A.F.C., of Kamloops, B.C., held a "B" flying licence when he left Canada as a civilian. He trained in England and when war broke out was posted to a Whitley bomber squadron with which he did a long tour of operations against targets in Germany and Italy "We had a spot of trouble here and there but nothing exceptional," was the way he described his bombing experiences, which earned for him the blue and white ribbon of the D.F.C.

After his first tour of "ops," he was posted as a station navigation officer in a bomber group. Shortly afterwards he was made navigation officer of No. 4 Bomber Group. In 1941 he went to Canada for a specialists' navigation course, after which he piloted a Hudson to England for Ferry Command. Before his appointment as C.O. of the Moose Squadron, Fleming was a navigation officer at Bomber Command headquarters.

Sqdn. Ldr. Richard Gordon Stone of Winnipeg met an old friend in Flt. Lt. W. H. Baldwin, D.F.C., of Ottawa when he joined the first R.C.A.F. bomber squadron as a flight commander. Stone and Baldwin, the squadron navigation officer, were together in Toronto.

The 26-year-old Stone formerly was a clerk with the Winnipeg Hydro. He came overseas in Feb. 1941, and was posted to a Wellington squadron. He completed a tour of operations on Wellingtons and Stirlings, then became an instructor with a Stirling conversion unit and later with a Wellington conversion unit.

Stone's latest appointment brought with it promotion to squadron leader.

Flying Officer Joseph (Chas.) Chasanoff, former Winnipeg lawyer serving with an R.C.A.F. Spitfire squadron has lost the distinction of being the youngest R.C.A.F. squadron adjutant in Great Britain. The mantle has fallen on the shoulders of 24-year-old Flt. Lt. Frank Moore of Cobourg, Ont.

Moore arrived overseas in September to assume the job of adjutant in an R.C.A.F. bomber squadron led by Wing Cmdr. Don Ferris of Edmonton. He trained for air crew at Trenton, Ont., and Camp Borden, Ont., but his aeronautical career ended by a crash in which he suffered head injuries and concussion of the brain.

In an Air Ministry casualty communique the alphabetical list of those killed on active service contains, between Jones and Lewis, the name of Kent. It is necessary to look at the adjoining column, where ranks are given to realize it is that of H.R.H. the Duke of Kent whose name thus appears between those of two flight sergeants.

The list also contains the name of Wing Cmdr. Fulton, who failed to return from the last raid on Hamburg.

Y., a year ago. A few hours after the ceremony he left for duty with the United States Navy.

Plans are Made For K of C Program Of Coming Season

Tuesday evening the Knights of Columbus had their opening meeting which was very well attended. Grand Knight George O'Brien welcomed all the brothers. Much business was transacted. The Grand Knight received a donation of one hundred dollars from the Deloro Refining and Smelting Co. War Chest for the K. of C. Army Huts, also a donation of five dollars from Mrs. McAlpine from the C.W.L. of Marysville, for the same fund.

It was voted to give a donation of $25 to the Community Service Campaign.

After all business was disposed of Lecturer Ted Royal gave a splendid talk on Columbus as Columbus Day was celebrated on Oct. 12. This talk was greatly enjoyed. He also outlined activities for the coming winter.

The Knights of Columbus also discussed and endorsed the program being arranged by St. Michael's Parish for the entertainment of the Airforce and other service men. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

The Gold Mine Problem

The announcement in the United States of the closing of the gold mines to release men and material for other needs has aroused a fear that possibly the Dominion Government may follow suit. The towns in Northern Ontario and Quebec are particularly apprehensive of such a move, since the federal minister of labor stated in Toronto a week ago that "upwards of 10,000 gold miners will be transferred to base metal mines and other war industries in a planned gradual movement."

Closing of the mines would place an unfair burden on all the people whose livelihood depends entirely on the continued operation of the mines. Even as it is most of the gold mining companies are feeling the pinch of labor shortage. A substantial number of miners have left to work in war plants and base metal mines. Many others have joined the armed forces.

The Northern Miner in a leading editorial, discusses the question by stating it is impossible to shut the gold mines without the loss of millions of dollars of ore, should the war continue to any great duration. Timber must be extensively used, rockbursts are common, and if the timber were permitted to rot the mines would cave in and the ore become irrecoverable. It would cost at least $25,000,000 a year to maintain the mines if they were closed down and the government would have to stand this expense.

The mining paper also states that gold mining production is worth $180,000,000 a year, of which the government gets $90,000,000. If the mines were closed this revenue would be lost plus $25,000,000 to maintain the mines and another $40,000,000 to maintain the municipalities and farming communities around the mines. So in place of a gain of $90,000,000 a year there would be a loss of $155,000,000 which is no trifling sum even in wartime. The Northern Miner in conclusion believes the government can get all the labor presently required by the base metal mines by suggesting they cure the disease of absenteeism which amounts to 14 percent in some of the largest base metal mines and in war factories is even more.

To some of us it seems as if a compromise might be tried whereby the mines would release a number of miners, say up to 50 percent of their personnel. If this loss of manpower would cause a loss in operating costs the mines affected could be reimbursed by the government.

In this way the government could get sufficient labor for the base metal mines to tide them over for some considerable time. It would not cause so much disruption in the communities supported by the gold mines if they were closed down completely. We appreciate the fact that this would cause hardship among investors in gold mine securities but they stand to lose in any event, and it seems better that the mines be kept open even in a small way rather than be closed altogether. The mines could then resume full-time production when the war ends and the loss borne by the government would be reduced to a minimum. Canada is certainly going to need her gold mines after the war is over for we must have gold to support our dollar on the markets of the world, otherwise our trade with other nations would suffer acutely.

Protect Your Tires

The frequent number of tire thefts reported in this district recently should be a warning to all car owners to take every precaution to protect their own tires. It should be remembered that when tires are stolen and not recovered the motorist is out of luck for the duration.

There are a number of devices on the market that helps to foil this kind of crime. Chief among these are locks that fit over a hub bolt which makes it almost impossible to remove the tire. Then there is an electrical alarm that operates the car horn when the car is disturbed even by a slight jar. Garage doors should be locked, and it is unwise to leave cars on the streets all night for that is inviting trouble. Above all, care should be taken to take down the serial numbers of every tire so that when tires are recovered by the police there will be a means of identifying them. If one or more of these precautions are taken it will be trouble well worth taking.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS . . .

By Geo. Lyons

THE YOUNGEST PRIVATE

The story has just come to light but it is worth the telling.

On a recent Sunday when the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) were out on tactical manoeuvres the lads of the rank and file were surprised to notice a young recruit marching along with them.

The young soldier, eight-year-old John Hinchey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hinchey, 148 George Street, "fell in" with the troops as they marched past his house where he was playing soldier complete with tin hat, a toy rifle and other accoutrements.

He marched with the troops to the point where they deployed for action, and crawled with the soldiers through underbrush an dacross open fields to capture an objective.

Lunch time came and an anxious mother began to worry about her son. He did not return by the time the noon meal was ready and she went looking for him in the family automobile. Knowing his liking for soldiers and aware of the fact that the Argylls had marched by that morning, she traced the regiment to its point of manoeuvres.

By this time the soldiers had "broken off" for lunch. They sat along the roadside munching sandwiches and cake, and in their midst sat young "Private" Hinchey enjoying the sandwiches given him by the troops and as happy as the proverbial lark.

The only regret the young "Argyll" had was the fact that he was not equipped with a bayonet to enable him to cut his way through underbrush and thus keep up with his older "comrades."

THE GOLFER

"Who's the stranger, mother dear?
  Look, he knows us — ain't he queer."
"Hush, my own, don't talk so wild;
  He's your father, dearest child."
"He my father? No such thing.
  Father died away last spring."
"Father didn't die, you dub.
  Father joined a golfing club.
But they've closed the club, so he Has no place to go, you see—
No place left for him to roam—
  That is why he's coming home.
Kiss him—he won't bite you, child;
  All them golfing guys look wild."

WE ASK BUT LITTLE . . .

In our sour moments, remarks the Minneapolis Star Journal, we wonder whether our postwar hearthside wouldn't be closer to the bower of bliss if we could have:

A telephone cord that doesn't twist itself up like an armful of jungle undergrowth.

An alarm clock that you can't forget to set the night before you have to get up extra early.

A set of storm windows you can put on without (a) almost falling off the ladder when a high wind blows and (b) finding after two or three tries that you're fitting the wrong window.

A glass jar top that your wife can take off without a family strong man contest.

And a bottle you can get olives out of.

Could anyone wave a magic wand for us when he finishes with the princess?

And we might add to the above:

A lawn mower, that you discover belongs to a neighbor after you've spent five bucks for repairs.

A ketchup bottle, the contents of which doesn't do a Stuka dive, after the first three taps.

A napkin that doesn't want to convene with the floor-rug at a swanky dinner party.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 15th., 1922.

Meats are dropping in price, we were informed by a local butcher today and he predicted a further slump in prices. Beef carcasses bring 7 cents to 9 cents per pound. "Critters" sell for 3 cents to 4 cents per pound. It is expected that hogs will be down another 50 cents in a day or two. Mutton is off to 13 cents to 15 cents and lamb to 16 cents to 18 cents. Poultry is included in the drop. Four pound birds bring at the rate of 18 cents per pound, and five pounders 20 cents per pound.

City Engineer Campbell left today to spend a short time in Galt, his old home town.

Mrs. J. Gossens of Crofton, and Mrs. F. Spencer of Frankford, were visitors in the city yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack O'Brien have taken up residence here. Mr. O'Brien will be manager of the women's wearing apparel store which is being opened here by Messrs. J. A. McNabb & Company. The firm also has stores in Peterboro and Kingston.

30 YEARS AGO

October 15th., 1912.

Mr. J. B. Leslie of Owen Sound was in town yesterday.

Mr. M. J. Murphy left yesterday for his home in Virginia, Minn.

Mr. A. N. Sprague of Trenton was in town today.

Mr. J. O. R. McCurdy spent the weekend with friends in Brighton.

Mr. James P. Pratt of the legal department of the G. T. R., Montreal, formerly of Belleville, is spending a short time in town.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Gollett of Stirling were visitors in town today.

The Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' Church, will leave tomorrow to attend the Provincial Synod of the Church of England.

40 YEARS AGO

October 15th., 1902.

Mr. E. E. Holden of the Bank of Montreal staff here for some time, has been transferred to the Stratford Branch, and he will be succeeded here by Mr. Burton of the Peterboro branch.

Mr. S. Haryett of Bancroft is a visitor in town and is stopping at Hotel Quinte.

At the adjourned annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association which was held yesterday afternoon the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. (Dr.) Clarke; Vice Presidents, Mrs. L. W. Yeomans, Mrs. R. J. Bell, and Mrs. E. G. Sills; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Williamson; Recording Secretary, Miss Frances Caswell; Treasurer, Mrs. J. J. B. Flint. Mr. J. Frith Jeffers was appointed auditor.

Mr. Sanford Burrows has returned home from Des Moines, Iowa, where he visited friends.

50 YEARS AGO

October 15th., 1892.

A telephone has been installed in the office of the City Clerk. It will, no doubt, prove to be a great convenience.

Summer is back again! Ice cream will be served tomorrow at the store of H. C. Dickens & Sons.

The dredge is doing good work in the harbor. During the week many large boulders and large pieces of flat rock were removed.

Mr. George E. Fax of this city will sing at a concert in Kingston tomorrow evening.

Mr. H. T. Wills, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Orangeville, and formerly of Belleville, is here on a short visit to relatives.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 15 —(CP)— It is difficult to picture Winston Churchill as a "grub shop" orator when you see him rise to speak in the House of Commons, but that's where the Prime Minister began his "political" career.

Maj. G. C. Garrick of Betchworth, Surrey, a younger contemporary of Mr. Churchill at Harrow, recalls how the Prime Minister's lower school political dissertations were delivered mainly in a store kept by a purveyor of buns and pop.

With one leg on a spare chair and an elbow on the counter, Spencer-Churchill, as he was known at school, would hold forth eloquently on home rule, the leading political subject of the day.

Churchill too, Garrick recalls, was one of Harrow's best "dolphins"—or swimmers. Before new boys were allowed to use the deeper parts of the "ducker"—the school swimming pool—they had to pass an 80-yard swimming test.

Any boy who did not pass it during the summer term had to submit to it before the term ended if he had not learned to swim. Lazy boys had to struggle in six feet of water and it was the dolphins' duty to pull them out when they were in danger of swallowing too much water.

"I can see our Prime Minister of today waiting on the high diving board ready to dive in and rescue some half-drowned small boy," says Garrick. "His red head and chubby features made him conspicuous."

First Class Stoker W. J. Edwards, Labor M.P. for Whitechapel, almost certainly will be released temporarily from the navy to enable him to discharge his parliamentary duties. It is understood Edwards declined to ask for release although it would have been granted had he done so.

However, six months' leave likely will be granted him so he can get a proper grasp of parliament without naval pre-occupation and at the end of this period his position will be reviewed in the light of circumstances.

The position of members in the services is that they have no legal right to discharge or partial release from duty, but in practice are given all reasonable facilities to do their parliamentary work.

Edwards, incidentally, was the only service member speaking in the parliamentary debate on pay and allowances who was not an officer. He had the additional distinction of making his address his maiden speech. . .

You still hear rumblings around Whitehall of the stir Sir Stafford Cripps created by criticizing members whose lunch-time absence from the House cut short the war debate at the close of the last session. Precedent for the Lord Privy Seal's action was established in 1640 by the Speaker of the Day, a Mr. Lenthall.

One day, Lenthall was so annoyed when the House emptied at dinner time during a debate that he told M. P.'s "they were unworthy to sit in this great and wise assembly that would so run forth to their dinners."

Labor Minister Bevin has a sentimental as well as ministerial interest in his present efforts to put the catering trade on a proper footing of pay and conditions. His first job was as a "buttons" — or page boy — in a Bristol hotel.

His second job also connected with the catering trade, was as a van driver delivering ginger beer to hotels and restaurants. It was during this phase of his career he first became interested in trade unionism.

A peace-time grievance of the House of Lords that peers were overworked near the close of parliamentary sessions has been overcome in wartime with its dearth of legislation. Before the war the lords complained that the Commons passed on much legislation to them in a last-minute rush.

This necessitated four or five sittings a week in place of the normal three and frequently kept peers at the House after the dinner hour.

Birthdays: Petty Officer A. P. Herbert, M.P., who at 52 is busier than ever with dual jobs in the Royal Naval Auxiliary Patrol and in parliament. His birthday pledge for the new parliamentary session—"To continue the same old battle against humbug" . . . William Brace, 77, and retired but still remembered as the best-dressed Labor member during his stay in parliament from 1906 to 1920. The minister of mines' first chief Labor advisor, Brace boasted the biggest moustache the Commons has known in many years.

The Ministry of Pensions is expanding at a greater rate than any other Whitehall department. An example of its magnitude is the fact that at least two Lancashire cotton mills have been taken over by the minister, Sir Walter Womersley, for pigeon hole purposes.

Most persons jump at the chance for an exchange of opinions with Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, but the man who "won" the Battle of Britain made little impression on an American air force officer he met on a train. Sir Hugh, in civilian clothes, tried to open a conversation by asking the American how he was getting on and whether he liked British aircraft. Not recognizing the affable air chief marshal, the American glanced at a "careless talk" poster in the carriage and replied in biting tones: "I haven't the least idea."

A MAGIC METAL

It is estimated that by the end of 1943 the production of magnesium in the United States will be about 100 times greater than it was in 1939.

Magnesium is a vital material because it is used as a structural metal in fighting planes and as one of the chief ingredients of incendiary bombs.

In 1915, when the American magnesium industry was born, this metal was a structural curiosity and sold for $5.00 a pound.

Today magnesium sells at 22¼ cents a pound. Measured by cubic feet, it is cheaper than aluminum at 15 cents a pound.

Dr. Charles M. A. Stine, vice-president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company advisor on research and development, says that about half a ton of magnesium on the average is going into every American fighting plane being built.

Magnesium is about 60 percent the weight of aluminum and about one-fifth the weight of steel.

Now magnesium is being produced from brine and sea water as well as from ores and for the first time in the history of the world a structural metal is being obtained from the sea by chemical processes.

The production of magnesium in Germany in 1940 was 42,000,000 tons. During the present year the magnesium production of the United States is expected to be 200,000,000 tons, while that of Germany will be less than half that amount.

In its pure state magnesium is a silver-white, light, malleable and ductile metallic element.

The lightness and strength of magnesium make it an important material for airplane engines as well as other aircraft parts.

Magnesium in the free state ranks fifth in abundance among the metallic elements on the earth.

Military uses of magnesium, besides incendiary bombs, includes tracer bullets, flares and flashlight powder for photographing the results of bombing at night.

Magnesium got its name indirectly from Magnesia, a district in Thessaly, Greece.

The term was first applied to a magnetic stone found in that region.

"Magnet," "magnetic" and several related words are derived from the same source.

TACKLES PROBLEM OF ARDUOUS POST IN SHIRTSLEEVES

Director of National Selective Service Has Had Varied Training, Boy and Man, for His Big Job

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 15. (CP)—Elliott M. Little has rolled up his shirt sleeves to tackle one of the most difficult problems a Canadian ever faced. It may be part of the dual personality of this worker-executive who heads National Selective Service, that he feels more at home when he sheds his coat and rolls up his sleeves.

But shirt-sleeves approach does not detract from the trim appearance of this husky 42-year-old. Outside his office, in conference with the cabinet or other officials, he usually appears in flannel slacks and a loose-fitting jacket.

The informality of his clothes is typical of Mr. Little—"Ellie" to most of his close associates. He is a man easy to meet but with a straight-from-the-shoulder attitude that is apparent as soon as he talks and there's a determination that shows in his jaw.

He left his desk as a paper-mill executive, head of the Rothermere interests in Canada, to do a war job. That job was to help the government tabulate the country's technical personnel — engineers, scientists and research workers. Establishing the wartime bureau of technical personnel he made a success of that assignment and when the time came to choose a manpower boss Mr. Little was asked to take over.

To Work at 14

Part of the confidence he has been able to inspire among both workers and employers is probably due to the fact that before he attained an executive post he did manual work in a paper mill. He started at 14 as an office boy but, after several years in the mill and then training as a pilot in the First Great War, he managed to scrape up enough money to complete a university course in electrical engineering.

That experience has given him a clear insight into the problems of labor and has put him in a position from which he told several hundred union delegates recently that "Labor . . . should demonstrate a greater appreciation of the difficulties which face management these days".

He has been equally outspoken in talking to employers. He has told them, without pulling any punches, that it is time they placed more confidence in labor and time they set up plant organizations to give labor a voice in management. And he has warned that unless employers want to do it voluntarily selective service may find it necessary to use compulsion.

Still he is convinced that voluntary action is preferable whereever it is possible. The product selective service deals in is human beings. Elliott Little has shown that he is careful to remember that. Some of the steps necessary to the war effort are painful but the director of selective service has had enough hard knocks in his own life to inflict as few as possible on others.

In Training in 1918

Born in Beachburg, Ont., in the Ottawa Valley, he went to Haileybury, Ont., with his family when he was three. At 10 he entered high school and four years later was an office boy in the Abitibi paper mill.

He was doing odd sorts of manual work when he enlisted for the Frist Great War at 16, but his family objected because of his age so he was discharged. At 18 he joined the Royal Flying Corps and was in training when the war ended. He worked for a time, took a returned soldiers' course and then entered University of Toronto. In 1925 he was back at Abitibi as a qualified engineer.

In 1928 he joined the Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills of which he now is general manager and on loan to the government— a dollar-a-year man who doesn't ask for the dollar, not even toward his own expenses.

SANG "TIPPERARY" AND HELD CALAIS UNDER DUNKIRK

King's Royal Rifle Corps Gallantly Covered British Flank in 1940 Evacuation from France

Written For The Canadian Press
By CLAUD GOLDING

London, Oct. 15 (CP)—It was the gloomiest day in the defence of Calais in June, 1940, and the commander of the attacking German forces thought it an appropriate time to demand surrender.

So through the British lines, with a flag of truce, came a fussy little German officer. Leading him were two British riflemen, wide grins splitting their powder-smudged faces. The German was conducted to Brig. Claude Nicholson who replied with a clipped "No" to the Nazi demand.

This was just one incident in a glorious six days of valor by British troops, including a battalion of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, who had been ordered to stop the Germans from breaking through to Dunkerque where the British Expeditionary Force was embarking for Britain.

Hold on they did. Overwhelming German forces pressed upon the perimeter and laid down an unending bombardment. German tanks nibbled at the defences. Sharpshooters sniped from windows and roofs. Finally the climax was reached. A platoon of the Rifle Brigade was rushed up to support the K.R.R.C., holding the western section of the perimeter. A platoon of the Queen Victoria Rifles was withdrawn into the inner perimeter after holding out until they had fired their last round. An anti-aircraft battery marched wearily into the town after three weeks' fighting.

Good Old Tipperary

A half company of the King's Royal Rifles found a piano in a hotel they were defending. Soon above the thunder of the bombardment the voices of men singing "Tipperary" and "Pack up Your Troubles" were heard in the street. Along the streets, hugging every bit of cover, the Germans were advancing. The soldiers who had been singing drove them back. The Germans then demanded unconditional surrender. The men were prepared to die instead.

When cease fire came over the ruins of Calais four British battalions had been destroyed, among them the K.R.R.C., raised in North America in 1755 as the 62nd Royal Americans. A year later it became the 60th and in 1824 the Duke of York's Own Rifle Corps and finally the name it bears now. Wolfe gave the regiment its motto: "Celer et Audax"—Swift and Bold.

Canadian regiments associated with the famous force are: The Regina Rifle Regiment, the King's Own Rifles, The Royal Rifles, the Dufferin Rifles, the Brockville Rifles, Victoria Rifles of Canada and the Halifax Rifles.

SOVIET MINISTER SURE OF VICTORY

Fedor Gusev Grants Interview on Arrival in Dominion

Ottawa, Oct. 15 —(CP)— Fedor Gusev, Russian minister to Canada, said at a press conference yesterday his first job was to establish normal diplomatic relations with Canada and expressed confidence Russia eventually would drive out the German invaders.

Gusev arrived in Ottawa Monday and is the first diplomatic representative of his country to Canada since the Russian revolution in 1917. Announcement of the name of Canada's minister to Russia is expected shortly.

Asked if he believed the Russian people would overthrow and drive out the German armies which have overrun a large part of his country Gusev replied through his interpreter: "Never have a doubt of it."

He said a consulate would be established in Halifax, with Michail Vadielov as consul. This consulate was in the process of being established. He would not comment on a report that a Soviet consulate was to be opened in Quebec city.

The newly-arrived minister told interviewers, without amplification, there was "no connection" between the Communist Party of Canada and the Soviet Government.

Short and slender, the 38-year-old minister is a graduate of the state university of Leningrad. He was accompanied on arrival here Monday by his wife and their three-year-old daughter, Nina, and a considerable office staff.

Gusev said his mission in Canada was primarily to establish "normal diplomatic relations." After getting settled, he intended to travel in the Dominion as much as circumstances permitted.

Arrangements are to be completed today for him to present his credentials to the Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone.

Mr. Battley succeeds John Roberts who as managing director of National Railways Munitions Limited is now devoting his services to the important work of that company.

MARIE TEMPEST DIES IN LONDON

Dame Tempest Known to Admirers as "Queen of Her Profession"

London, Oct. 15 (CP)—Dame Marie Tempest, 78, celebrated actress, died today in her London home.

She had been in poor health for some time and collapsed on Tuesday.

The sorrows and hardships of war fell heavily on Dame Marie Tempest, but the actress—known to admirers as "the queen of her profession"—never faltered in the face of adversity.

At 77, recuperating from a serious illness and obliged to sell art treasures from her bombed home, she told friends that after all she had "really been lucky."

"Hitler has taken nearly everything from me but my life," she declared, "but you can't live on regret. You've got to live for the present and future—not the past."

Born in London July 15, 1864, Marie Tempest's real name was Marie Susan Etherington. She was educated in a Belgian convent, and later in the Bohemian atmosphere of Paris.

Started in 1885

The bare outline of her stage careers fills five columns of "who's who in the theatre," the full story would require a bulky volume. She first appeared on the stage in May, 1885. She became ill in 1941 while touring Britain in "The First Mrs. Fraser" and had to leave the cast but she started rehearsals last summer for another play.

She started as a performer in musical comedy and light opera, then, at the peak of her fame, switched to straight plays, acting in dozens of hits over all the world.

She made her first New York appearance in August, 1890, in "Red Hussar." That year and the next, she toured Canada and the United States with the J. C. Duff Opera Company. Subsequently, she paid numerous visits to United States cities, where she was a prime favorite.

Marie Tempest was married three times.

NEW CONFIDENCE SEEN IN MOSCOW

Capital Celebrates Anniversary of Diplomatic Evacuation in New Strength

Moscow, Oct. 15—(AP)—Moscow, which just a year ago was being evacuated under German land and air attacks, stood with new strength today.

The morning of Oct. 15, 1941, Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov called in Sir Stafford Cripps and Laurence A. Steinhardt, the ambassadors of Britain and the United States at that time, and told them the foreign colony must leave.

The diplomatic train pulled out in a snowstorm that night for Kuibyshev, on the Volga more than 500 miles southeast of the capital. Other trains, trucks and motor cars carried withdrawing Russians.

The first anniversary generally went unnoticed. But to those who went through it and returned, Moscow presents a striking contrast.

Then the Germans were driving eastward through Mozhaisk with the full momentum of a giant ground offensive. Now, they are back on their heels behind Mozhaisk, where they were thrown by the Red Army's winter counter-offensive.

Then air-raid sirens screamed almost nightly. Now Moscow shows virtually no signs of attacks and has not been bombed since April 5.

Then the population of 4,000,000 was reduced by half. Now fresh blood flows in and the figure is back up to 2,800,000.

Ample food stocks are on hand for another war winter. The Moscow coal basin around Tula, a battleground a year ago, is estimated to be producing 20 to 30 per cent. over plans.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollinger, Foxboro, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Eveline, to Mr. Donald Dunham Johnson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Johnson, Mount Pleasant, Rawdon; marriage to take place high noon, October 31, at the home of the bride.

Miss Grace Gillard was a weekend guest of her sister, Mrs. Frank Timleck, Brockville.

Mr. Ralph Graham, Toronto, has left for the West to assist in harvest work.

Miss Barbara Kerby has returned to Ottawa, after spending the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kerby, Charles Street.

Mrs. Wm. Lane returned to the Kingston General Hospital, on Monday and is progressing slowly.

Miss Muriel Todd has returned to her home in Campbellford after spending two weeks with relatives in this city.

Misses McKeown, Bonarlaw, Fern McMullen, Trenton, and Marjorie Mills, Campbellford, are among the twenty-five girls making up the class of preliminary students who have entered the Kingston General Hospital School of Nursing. The class opened on Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. and Mrs. "Bud" Day and little daughter, Carol, have returned to Dunnville after visiting with Mrs. Day's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kerby, Charles Street.

Mrs. James Bly, Toronto, returned home after spending two weeks at her brother's, Mr. Wm. Lane's.

Lieut. E. E. Plummer, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Plummer of Trenton, formerly of this city has returned safely to Canada, after being in England for the past thirteen months and is a patient in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto.

Opening their fall season of entertainments for airmen, the Belleville Hospitality Club held an enjoyable dance last evening in the Collegiate gym. Trenton R.C.A.F. orchestra provided splendid dance music, and the program was in the capable hands of Mr. Irvine Wismer, Y representative. Novelty and prize dances were included in the entertainment. Refreshments were served in the Cafeteria by the hostesses of the Club.

Miss Loretta Carroll efficient office manager of the C.D.S. Store, Peterborough, for the past eight years, has been transferred to the Belleville store, where she will take charge of the Ladies' Ready to Wear Department. Prior to her departure she was presented with a beautiful desk chair from the firm; a desk lamp from her bridge club and a silk umbrella from her associates at the store.

The ladies of the C.N.R. War Veterans' Association, held a very successful card party in the Engineers' Hall, Tuesday in aid of the cigarette fund. A very happy time was spent in playing euchre. An interesting feature of this party was the drawing of the lucky ticket on the beautiful afghan which was made and donated by Mrs. Newsome. The holder of the lucky number was Mr. A. Calcutt, 30 Chatham Street. The prize winners for the euchre were as follows: ladies' first, Mrs. F. High, second, Mrs. Johnson; third, Mrs. Smith; men's first, Mrs. Elvins, second Mr. McCaw, third, Mrs. Ceigler. The travelling prize was won by Mrs. Shaddock. Draws were sold on a cake which was donated by Mrs. Grant. The lucky number went to Mrs. Schrieder.

WEDDINGS

MOORE—CLEETON

Kingston—A lovely Autumn wedding was solemnised, Thursday, October 8, at six p.m., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Cleeton, deputy warden's residence, Bath Road, when their only daughter, Dorothy Irene, was united in marriage to James Peter, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Moore of Belleville.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. M. Seymour before an improvised altar, banked with ferns, palms, and standards of bronze 'mums. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a street length frock of dusky rose wool sheer, with matching accessories, and corsage of orchids. She also wore the groom's gift a white sapphire pendant. Her only attendant was Mrs. D. T. England, who chose a powder blue ensemble with black accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses. The best man was Mr. D. T. England of Kingston.

Miss Jane Keech played the wedding music, playing the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the bride entered the drawing room and "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

Immediately after the reception, the young couple left for a short honeymoon in Quebec. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Among the out-of-town guests were the following from Belleville: —Mrs. Peter Moore, Mrs. Jennie Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Webb, Mrs. Robert Livesay.

BERRY—VANCE

In St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Toronto, with the Rev. Mr. Jackson officiating, the marriage took place on October 3, of Miss Elizabeth H. Vance, only daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Vance, to Mr. Walter John Berry, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Berry. The bride wore a brown ensemble and hat, shoulder veil and corsage of gardenias, Token roses and swansonia. Mr. Clarke was at the organ. The couple left on a motor trip.

BUSH—HUGHES

A wedding of interest here took place at St. John's Church, Pendlebury, England, on Saturday, August 29., when Gladys Lillian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hughes, of Irlans o'th Height, Manchester, England, became the bride of Sgt. John Bush, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bush of Orillia, formerly of Belleville. Sgt. Bush, who enlisted with the 34th Battery, and was a non-commissioned officer in that unit before going overseas, is serving with a Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment. The Rev. H. F. Steel officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of white figured cloque and satin, a veil embroidered with satin lover's knots, held in place with a small wreath of apple blossoms and she carried a bouquet of deep red roses. Miss Marjorie McGrath, the bridesmaid, wore a dress of Marina blue taffeta with cream lace trimming, a Juliet cap of the same material and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Sgt. Harry Gibson, L.A.A. of Belleville, Ontario, was best man.

A small reception was held afterward at St. John's School, following which the bridal couple left on a short honeymoon trip. The groom is well konwn in this city, where he resided before going overseas.

Popular Couple Showered by Friends

Rawdon — The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison was filled to overflowing on Thursday evening when neighbors, friends and relatives gathered to honour their daughter Mary, who was recently married to Mr. Tom Bedford.

Rev. L. F. Townsend, B. A., B. D., pastor of Rawdon circuit was Master of Ceremonies and gave a splendid address. Rev. Leslie Harding of Stirling led in a round of community singing. Mr. Frank Harding contributed two solos with guitar accompaniment.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen rendered "Caleb's Courtship" and Mrs. L. F. Townsend gave "Without a Wife." Rev. Harding delighted with a piano solo, "Melody of Love." Miss Elda McMullen contributed a solo with her guitar. Mrs. Sam Elliott read a poem "Advice to the Bride". Rev. and Mrs. Townsend were heard in a duet "The phone bell rang".

Mrs. Will Heath and Mrs. Harold Elliott rendered a piano duet. Brief impromptu speeches were given by John Scott, John Morrison, Bert Bedford, Rev. Harding, Mrs. M. Hayton (Mary's school teacher), Mrs. Thomas McMullen (Her Sunday School teacher).

The newlyweds were given seats of honour, the bride wearing her wedding dress and Mrs. Gordon Green read an appreciative address signed by Edith Hagerman, Frances Heath, Jennie Vance, Bertie Diernery and Madeline McGee.

Both Mary and Tom graciously replied thanking their friends for the large array of gifts which they later unwrapped and invited their friends to visit them when they are settled in their home at Harold.

After the gifts were opened and displayed an appetising lunch was served and then the Young People of the gathering tendered the newlyweds a rousing charivari.

About thirty girls gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison on September 24th and tendered their daughter Mary, a kitchen shower in red and white. Miss Verna Sutherland read the address and an appetising lunch of jellies, sandwiches, cake and cookies was served. Mary graciously thanked her friends for their kindness.

On Saturday evening October 10, the spacious home of Reeve and Mrs. G. B. Bedford was the scene of a happy gathering when a host of friends gathered and presented M. and Mrs. Tom Bedford with a studio couch and several other articles.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W. I.

Miss L. Anderson entertained the Women's Institute at her home on Friday, October 9th. Rednersville Institute was also represented, the occasion being the visit of Miss Hamilton from the Institute Branch of the Department of Agriculture.

Owing to the busy time only 30 were present.

Miss Hamilton, who was introduced by the president, Mrs. L. Wallbridge, based her talk on "Aids to Health." She stressed the importance of giving teeth the proper dental care as a great many aches and pains are derived from the teeth.

Easy and efficient ways of bandaging the wrist, finger and knee were demonstrated.

Miss Hamilton also gave some helpful health hints regarding common diseases.

Mrs. B. Anderson moved a vote of thanks to the speaker for giving so many helpful suggestions in her talk.

Miss Audra Brickman, president of Rednersville Institute, in a few short remarks told about the jam making they are doing. They hope to finish 3000 pounds before the end of the year.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 13, in the Ladies' Parlor of the Tabernacle Church, members of the afternoon auxiliary of the W.M.S. met for their Autumn Thank-offering and Thanksgiving meeting.

Promptly at half past two o'clock the President announced the opening of the meeting with the singing of the Doxology, followed with prayer by Mrs. Adamson.

The business period brought forth a satisfactory financial statement from the treasurer, and a fine article read by the Temperance Secretary on the use of our Ontario grapes for either jam or brandy, stressing that the Liquor interests in our province is looking to the future when Ontario may take the place of France as a brandy producer, and suggesting the probable results to our young people, and upon our family life.

A nominating committee to secure a slate of officers for the year 1943 was elected as follows:— Mrs. C. Hogle, Mrs. A. Palmer, and Mrs. A. H. Fisher; and a discussion period on the duties of the various officers as printed in the Auxiliary By-Laws was conducted by the president.

The Thanksgiving Hymn "Sing to the Lord of Harvest" introduced the worship service and was followed by the prayer of General Thanksgiving in unison. Responsive reading of Psalm 96 was led by Mrs. T. G. Bell; Mrs. A. H. Fisher had charge of the Bible Lesson and Study, Mrs. J. Brennan read a poem "On Thanksgiving Day" and Mesdames Cornell and Duff favorably rendered an appropriate duet.

The meeting closed with a short Memorial Service in honor of a recently deceased Life Member, Mrs. G. Horton, conducted by Mrs. Proats using the hymn, "Fight the Good Fight" and the Mispah Benediction.

Fashion Show is Sponsored By Tweed Red Cross Society

Tweed—A very successful fashion show was sponsored by Tweed Red Cross Branch in auditorium of the Separate School. The products of a well-known cotton manufacturing firm were on display. There was an attendance of well over three hundred ladies with a fair sprinkling of the male sex. Many very attractive ladies' and children's dresses, negligees and other articles of wearing apparel were on display.

At the conclusion of the Fashion Show a draw was conducted by Mr. W. S. Gordon, president of Tweed Red Cross with the following winners: Miss Marion Moon was the owner of the first ticket drawn from the box, receiving a bed set; Mrs. Fred Leal, owner of the second ticket received a pair of pillow cases. The following received Bunny banks, Mrs. (Dr.) Bowlby, Mrs. F. H. Cotton, Mrs. W. H. Sayers, Mrs. H. Emerson, Miss Teresa Rashotte, Mrs. C. R. Porritt, Barbara Johnston, Mrs. Don Hotts, Pauline LaVallee, Mrs. Geo. Robinson, Miss Mildred Badgley, Mrs. John Orr.

The Red Cross Branch received from the Cotton Company the sum of $30 for sponsoring the show. Articles for sailors' ditty bags which will be packed by Tweed Branch were sold and nearly $20 was realised from this sale. The purchasers donated the articles to the Red Cross for the ditty bags.

Those who acted as models were: Mrs. Parnham, Mrs. Rupert, Marion Hall, Anna McGuire, Colleen Colgan, Irene Shannon, Judy Johnston, Mary Johnston, Beverly and Barbara Parnham, Margaret McNeil, Margaret Rupert, Mary Meraw, Delta Austin, Charles Myles, Kathleen Lajoie, Margaret LeSage, Mary LeSage, Noreen LeSage, Donna Champagne.

Thanksgiving Service

Thanksgiving Services were conducted in Tweed churches on Sunday, October 11th. At the United Church decorations in keeping with the harvest season were arranged by the C.G.I.T. group under the direction of their leader, Mrs. S. R. Curry. The pastor Rev. H. L. Morrison delivered an appropriate address, while the choir, assisted by Miss Reta Rowland, Toronto, and Mrs. Melvin Oatman, Massassaga, rendered special Thanksgiving numbers.

Mrs. Amy Geraldi, teacher in Rawdon township spent the holiday weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson.

Mr. John Combs, Toronto, member Jarvis Collegiate Institute staff, was a weekend visitor in town. Mr. Coombs has joined the R.C.A.F. with the rank of pilot officer and reports for duty at Lachine, Que., on October 15th.

Misses Enid and Joan Connor of Toronto, were guests of their parents Mr and Mrs. S. H. Connor. They were accompanied by Miss Reta Rowland, Toronto.

Miss Lois Wilkinson, Toronto, spent the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Wilkinson.

Miss Ethel Kerr, Toronto, was a Thanksgiving guest at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kerr.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Crosbie and son Bob, spent the holiday in town with friends. Mr. Crosbie was former District Forester in Tweed and is now holding a responsible post in the Department of Forestry, Parliament Buildings, Toronto

Mr. and Mrs. M. Bradley and family Navan, and Mr. and Mrs. W. McGee and family Toronto, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. S. B. McGee.

Mr. and Mrs Dawson Boyd and family were holiday visitors with Mr R. T. Graham.

Mr. M. Ardenne of the Department of Forestry, Toronto, spent the weekend at his home in Tweed.

Mrs. Jack Arber, teacher at Roseneath was a weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Arber.

Miss Marjorie Frost, teacher at Weslemkoon spent the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Frost.

Miss Barbara Barnett, Toronto, was at her home for the holiday.

Mrs. Blaney and Miss Florence Blaney spent Thanksgiving at their home in Maxville.

Those Giving Three Blood Donations To Receive Blood Donor Buttons

While local women are busy with the very important handiwork phase of Red Cross endeavours, the local branch carried out its part in the other and manifold aspects of the work of the Red Cross Society.

Nursing Course

The Home Nursing and Emergency Course in which many local women have completed in other seasons will be given this year starting on Monday evening, October 19. The Classes under the chairmanship of Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson will be held in the Kiwanis Building.

The importance of this course is stressed by the fact that the Divisional Committee has decided that examinations, written and oral, will be held at each centre and the successful candidates will be issued Home Nursing Certificates. The examination for those who have already completed the course and wish to have a certificate will be held on October 28. Dr. G. S. Cronk, Miss Thompson, Miss Soutar, Mrs. E. Keeler and Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, will constitute the local examining officers and the papers will go to Toronto for final marking.

Blood Donor Buttons

The Divisional Blood Donor Committee has just made an announcement which will be of interest to blood donors. At its last meeting it authorized the issuance of Blood Donor Buttons to donors of blood for local transfusion and blood banks after three donations have been given.

Letters are being continually received by the Canadian Red Cross expressing thanks for parcels sent to British prisoners of war interned in enemy war prisoner camps. Parents and wives in Great Britain have sent to Canada their appreciative thanks for the wonderful boxes that their soldier-relatives have received. An interesting account of life in a German prisoner camp is published in the September issue of the Red Cross "Despatch" by Mrs. K. N. Strachan who was among the British survivors of the ship "Zam-Zam". Mrs. Strachan stresses in her article her gratitude for the box received from Canadian Red Cross, a further evidence that these parcels safely arrive at their destination.

Personal Cable-Messages

A new service to prisoners in enemy and enemy occupied countries has been inaugurated by the Red Cross, that of being responsible for the sending of personal cable messages from Canada. As great care must be taken that all such messages avoid the giving of valuable information to the enemy the Government has made arrangements that all personal cables must be filed with the nearest Red Cross branch, Miss Helena Lynch, in this district being the representative for this service. Suitable forms are obtainable at the Red Cross headquarters here, together with information as to the price of sending such messages, etc. The sender of the message will have to give the name of someone guaranteeing his integrity. The message will be passed on by the government, of course, and there can be no guarantee of it being sent, or if sent, delivered to the person intended, nor the date of sending.

On Tuesday afternoon the Red Cross rooms were filled with packing cases sent on by the Divisional Headquarters and containing five disaster units of sterile articles, and other items needed in emergencies such as hot-water bottles, covers, quilts, bed sox, shawls, bands and rubber gloves. These will be kept on hand in case of special need. Sheets for Russia, nearing the end of the quota were received, many of these being completed by Deloro Red Cross. Local women have been very busy with these and other Red Cross activities. One Belleville woman who has given invaluable aid is Mrs. Connell, Station Street, who has assisted greatly in cutting out garments and making buttonholes.

IN TANK WARFARE MEN'S BRAINWORK IS GREAT FACTOR

Veteran Commander of Canadian Armored Division Overseas Tells of Progress in Battle-Competence

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Oct. 15. (CP)—Maj.Gen. F. W. Worthington, keen-eyed pioneer of Canada's armored formations, is whipping his own armored division into shape for campaigns the coming months may bring.

Converted from infantry to tanks by intense training in Canada, Gen. Worthington's division has been moved to Britain in recent weeks for a spell of drill that will make it fully ready to do battle.

The division's immediate objective is to acquire the same battle-competence achieved by Canadian troops which have been training in Britain since early in the war. It will also aim to draw abreast of another armored division which under Maj.-Gen. E. W. Sansom has been hard at work overseas about a year.

"We'll catch up with the other formations or we're just no damned good", said Gen. Worthington in his matter-of-fact fashion. "It's our first job to do just that". The commander, in battle-dress and wearing the tankmen's black beret, slapped the steel shell of a Canadian-built tank largely of his own design. While he spoke briskly of his division and its training first in Canada and then in Britain, he studied the big tank towering above him. He explained the role it would play in battle and the performance that might be expected of it. Asked what part he had in its design, he replied: "Yes, I did have something to do with it".

Change From Infantry

Switching back to the subject of training, Gen. Worthington praised the training accomplishments of Gen. Sansom's division. "Taking everything into account, Gen. Sansom's division has performed wonders", he said. He told about his own division's conversion to armor. "Infantrymen make excellent tankmen, we found", he declared. "The tankman qualifies as a good tankman with what he has up here. It's what's in his head that counts".

The general touched his grey head with the end of his black, leather-covered stick. "Our men have the brains, the energy and the enthusiasm. They showed that in the camps of Canada when they turned into tankmen".

Gen. Worthington moved away from the tank as he went on to tell how the men of his division did their training in shifts that filled the day's 24 hours to speed up their transformation to soldiers in armor. "It was the only way to do the job quickly", said Gen. Worthington. "Everyone responded. My men worked like trojans. They seemed to sense the need for speed that inspired the 24-hour-a-day system. There wasn't a complaint. They'll do a fine job right through, no doubt about that".

The general moved back to the tank concealed in tall, green bushes. He walked about it poking at its treads with his stick, examining its guns, peering closely at its thick armor plate. He talked quietly with all, bronzed officer of his division while a blue overalled mechanic clambered about the deck of the juggernaut.

Tank Fire-Power

The general moved away from it again and tapping his knee with the stick discussed tank fire-power, the reasons behind tank design, the tank battle in Libya, employment of smoke-screens in tank warfare and methods of outwitting an opponent in armor.

Tanks—tanks— tanks. The subject seemed to be the general's only interest. He walked to his automobile. A big driver opened its door and the general leaped into its interior. The automobile took him quickly to his headquarters a few minutes away. There, in his office, he pulled his beret from his head, quickly packed his pipe and lit it.

He talked a moment more. "In the training of an armored formation", he said, "there are many considerations. But if energy and enthusiasm were the only requirements, our men would be fully-trained right now".

National Control Of Coffee Export Brazil's Problem

South American Ally Finds Country Can Grow Too Much of a Good Thing and Sets Wartime Economy to Meet It

(By G. L. LANDSBERG)
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Rio de Janeiro, (CP) — Brazil's coffee trade has lost last glimmer of romance.

A trader no longer even has to bother about competition. A glance at the world coffee market, normally one of the most complex, is enough to show him everything; simple, cut and dried. There is no European coffee market left. There is no Middle East or Asiatic market. The market is the United States and "comparatively insignificant" amounts go to Canada, the Argentine and South Africa. But that is all.

(Before the present war Canada imported an average yearly of 2,000,000 pounds of coffee and chicory. Present rationing restricts Canadians to four ounces of coffee weekly providing no tea is bought on the same coupon. It is expected this restriction will greatly reduce Canada's coffee consumption and, consequently, its importation of the product from Brazil.)

All that any respectable coffee exporter, who has a reputation for shipping up to contract grade, has to do is to sit back and wait for his usual customer to send in his usual inquiry for his usual grade. Neither the exporter nor his customer's order in hand goes to the Federal Coffee Department, who promptly tell him at what price the shipment in question can be made and that is that. The profit made by the coffee exporter is presently very satisfactory about 50 cents a bag of 112 lbs.

Government Control

Brazil's economy has done surprisingly well considering the wartime circumstances. The Brazilian federal coffee department has had to submit to a volume quota far below production but what it sells it sells well—without "gyping" the consumer. The planter is grateful because although he is not sitting pretty as is the trader, he appreciates the fact that he has been saved from complete ruin through careful governmental control eked out by skillful diplomatic dickering with the favorably disposed allied governments.

Like wheat in Canada so coffee of a good thing. However, the success story of how Brazil is handling her similar problem may be revealing. Long before the world depression of 1929 Brazil—at the time a one product export country—saw its product hit and hit harder than any other staples were subsequently hit. In fact no staple was hit so soon, so hard and for so long a time as coffee. Incidentally this economic fact necessitated strong governmental control in order to avoid economic chaos and its resultant social chaos.

The export of coffees from Brazil for 1938 were just over 17,000,000 bags and volume was kept well up for the first war year at 16,800,000 bags. This year, 1942, they are running at the low level of some 11,000,000 bags of which the original United States quota was fixed at 9,000,000 bags. It is hoped that this quota will be increased to 10,000,000 bags. However, prices have been pushed as volume decreased so that the financial returns to Brazilian economy have not been as unsatisfactory as tonnage figures would lead one to believe.

Increase in price paid to the producer does not affect the pocketbook of the ultimate consumer perceptibly. The spread in North America between the cost of the unroasted coffee beans and the selling price of ground, roasted and packaged coffee to the consumer is so great that the actual cost of the coffee is a relatively minor consideration; what really counts is advertising, containers, handling, etc. An analagous situation exists in regard to wheat. A five cent fall or rise in the price of a bushel of wheat on the Canadian farm does not usually affect the size of a penny bun at the local bakery in England.

The control of coffee production is far more difficult than of wheat. A cereal is planted every year and if there is too large a carry-over the acreage can be restricted or devoted to some other crop.

Not so with coffee, which is in fact an orchard product. One talks of a coffee 'bean' but this is a misnomer. Coffee is more like a cherry and the "bean" is really the pip. Coffee trees take seven years to come into bearing by which time they represent a very heavy investment and with constant care they go on producing for 25 to 35 years. The many lean years the Brazilian coffee planter has gone through has prevented him from taking proper care of his plantations which have consequently died off quicker and been generally less productive.

Brazilian production has consequently been falling off gradually but we still do produce enough to furnish the full requirements of the whole world. So much so that a 25 per cent "sacrifice quota" is collected in kind by the Federal government. Every planter in the act of shipping his coffee gives up or "sacrifices" 25 per cent of his government. Every planter in the Formerly this "sacrifice quota" was burnt. This year it is being stored because there was a severe frost which blighted the current crop in many zones of the chief coffee state, Sao Paulo. It is believed that this accumulated surplus is earmarked for immediate shipment to starving Europe when peace at last comes.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

Winner of D.F.C. at Dieppe 1st Graduate Of BCATP to Head Squadron

L. V. Chadburn Youngest Commander in R.C.A.F. Congratulated by Navy for E-Boat Attack

Editors—Note—This is the latest in the series of biographical sketches on commanding officers of R.C.A.F. squadrons overseas.

A graduate of the initial class turned out under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Squadron Leader Lloyd Vernon Chadburn, of Aurora, Ont., who won the Distinguished Flying Cross for his work in the Dieppe action, was the first training plan pupil named to command a squadron.

Not yet 23 years old when he received the appointment — his birthday falls on August 21st—he is also the youngest squadron commander in the R.C.A.F., and heads a fighter unit of Spitfires which is playing an important part in the battle against Hitler.

Chadburn, the first Aurora boy to win his pilot's wings in the R.C.A.F. and also the first airman from his home town to go overseas, spoke on the radio shortly after the Dieppe raid and described his impressions of the "umbrella" of aircraft which flew over the Canadian and Allied troops during the stab at the fortified French coastline.

Excellent Show

"The pilots made an excellent show all the way through", he said. "I have every confidence in them".

Squadron Leader Lloyd Vernon Chadburn, D.F.C., of Aurora, Ont., who commands squadron of spitfires. —R.C.A.F. Photo.

Though he said nothing of his own part in the raid it was obviously a stirring role, as his leadership and personal achievements won him the D.F.C.

Dispatches from London, however, described his squadron as taking part in a number of dashes across the English Channel, once engaging a formation of 15 FW 190's. They shot down three and damaged another. In a later sweep the same day they damaged three more enemy aircraft.

Squadron Leader Chadburn has been congratulated by the navy for "magnificent results" following an attack on a German E-boat — he sank it — and has had a wide experience in all types of work in which fighter command units overseas take part.

Son of an automobile dealer, Chadburn was born in Montreal August 21, 1919. He went to school at Oshawa, Ont., and Aurora. Then he attended Northern Vocational School in Toronto for four years, and "played quite a bit of hockey and did a little studying".

Varied Career

His first job was driving automobiles from the factory at Oshawa to the showrooms in Montreal. Next he went into the Bank of Toronto, as a junior, and after a year had risen to be ledger-keeper.

His next job was with a tea company, where "I started to find out why people bought our tea or why they didn't." He never did find out, though, because after three weeks his application to join the Royal Canadian Air Force, made a year before, was accepted.

In April, 1940, he entered Manning Depot at Toronto, trained at the Hunt Club in Toronto, at the Windsor, Ont., Aero Club, and at Uplands, near Ottawa, winning his wings there in September, 1940.

That first class was a memorable one as far as its graduates were concerned. Besides Chadburn, Squadron Leader F. Kelly has risen to command a squadron, and half a dozen other classmates are flight commanders.

No "Operational"

Chadburn went overseas in November, and without going to an operational training unit was posted immediately to an R.C.A.F. fighter squadron, headed at that time by Wing Commander Gordon McGregor, D.F.C.

He remembers well his first operational trip on March 23rd. With another pilot he went out over the Wash to look for an enemy aircraft which had been reported in the area.

"I had my wheels down most of the way out, and I wondered why I was lagging all the time. I guess I was pretty excited, and probably it was lucky we never did find the enemy".

The first time he ever fired at a German plane he was on the ground.

"A JU88 came over the aerodrome where we were stationed, and for a few seconds nobody recognised it. Another pilot and myself were sure it was an 88, so we opened fire with Ross rifles. When it started to shoot up the buildings the rest of them believed us, and opened fire with everything on the station. I guess the rifles didn't have much effect, but they started something".

Last November with Sgt. Charles Charnock, D.F.M., of the R.A.F., Chadburn was sent out to attack an enemy aerodrome somewhere near Flushing Harbor, Holland, but they never did get to it. Instead they found an enemy destroyer there, and gave it a pretty good "pasting".

Shortly after this he got his E-boat. Twenty miles off the Hook E-boats were attacking a convoy, and Chadburn and another pilot were sent out to intercept them. There were three E-boats, and after the battle the one Chadburn had attacked was in flames and sinking, another was crippled, and the third was speeding away.

"We would have done a bit more but we were out of ammunition", Chadburn explains.

Navy Thought Otherwise

The navy, however, thought they had done quite well, for Chadburn still treasures a copy of this signal from the Admiral at Yarmouth:

"The navy congratulates you on your engagement with an E-boat and the magnificent results."

It was February 18th of this year he was posted to his present squadron as second-in-command. The commanding officer was away at the time, however, and did not return, so Chadburn was virtually in charge of the squadron from then on. He received his "third ring", promotion to the rank of squadron leader, March 9th.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Montreal, Oct. 14 (CP)—Brian Percy Pettit, 30-year-old civilian radio operator of the British Overseas Air Corporation was ordered today by Judge Maurice Tetreau to stand trial at the November session of the Court of King's Bench on charges preferred under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

The British-born operator was ordered to stand trial when he appeared for voluntary statement and pleaded not guilty to charges of spreading reports and making statements likely to cause disaffection to the King and to be detrimental to recruiting and the prosecution of the war.

THAT "HALF LOAF" NOT SATISFYING BRITISH FIGHTER

Sixpenny Increase in Pay Recently Granted Brings Criticism on Government From Many Sources

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 15 —(CP)— Sir Stafford Cripps, government leader in the House of Commons, had barely finished announcing a new plan including a sixpence (11 cents) daily increase for "other ranks" of the army, navy and air force beginning Oct. 1 than members of parliament, newspapers and servicemen belittled the raise.

British privates and non-commissioned officers battling grimly alongside higher-paid Canadians, Americans and Australians, have been granted a long-overdue raise. But the increase hasn't stifled criticism and demands for more money.

Rt.-Hon. L. Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary and outspoken government critic, summed up the general view during a parliamentary debate in which fierce invective was used. "You (the government) have no right to pay the army on a mixed system of pocket money and Poor Law," he declared. "It would be churlish to pretend that the increases go any way towards meeting the difficulties . . . The way to rise from penury to affluence is not on a staircase of sixpenny pieces."

Sir James Grigg, War Secretary, admitted the increases "would not satisfy everbody" and declined to answer when asked if he was satisfied. Members, too, failed in an immediate attempt to have a delegation, representing all shades of opinion on service pay and allowances, meet Prime Minister Churchill. The Premier said "there are other ministers in charge of this business for the government and I am so frequently abjured not to take too much on myself that I hope I may consider the proposal without being definitely committed."

Various Comment.

Commenting on the increases, Guy Eden, Daily Express parliamentary correspondent wrote:—"The Cabinet has set itself against any attempt to compete with the Dominions in service pay, on the ground there is no true comparison between living costs here and overseas. But it is certain there will be strong pressure in the new session of parliament for the addition of another sixpence daily and general increases in allowances."

This view was also expressed in other quarters. The Star, for instance, under a heading, "Petty Cash," commented:— "In practice the government offers a half a loaf and hopes this will be looked upon as a final settlement . . ."

Under the new wage scale privates and N.C.O.'s of all services will find an extra three shillings and sixpence (about 77 cents) on the weekly pay table, to spend as they please. This brings the weekly income of the lowest-paid unmarried ranker from seventeen shillings sixpence weekly to 21 shillings (about $4.85.) It will be in addition to proficiency pay, long service and good conduct pay, or tradesmen's pay.

No provision has been made for an increase in wives' allowances, but more will be paid for the children of servicemen. In future, the government will pay nine shillings sixpence, a shilling increase, for the first child; eight shillings sixpence, a two shilling increase for the second child and seven shillings sixpence instead of five shillings for the remaining children of a family. Thus a serviceman's wife with four children will draw 33 shillings (about $7.25) for the children, compared with 25 shillings (about $5.50) previously.

Members of the women's auxiliary services also benefit under the new scales. Their war bonus of two shillings fourpence weekly will be doubled. The lowest paid member therefore, will draw 14 shillings (about $3.10) weekly with no strings attached.

Officers' Pay.

In disclosing the increases Sir Stafford said: "We consider that the junior officers up to the rank, but not including the rank of captain, in the army or the equivalents in other services, require some improvements in their positions. But the benefits to acrue to these officers aren't so simply distributed as those among "other ranks." A junior officer must still rely upon promotion to obtain better pay, but the normal promotion period has been considerably shortened.

Under the old scheme promotion from second-lieutenant to lieutenant in the army normally occurred after 18 months and in the Royal Air Force a Pilot Officer usually stepped up to Flying Officer in 12 months. These periods now have been reduced to six months. This rule will also apply to affiliated women services. But it does not apply to the Royal Navy where there is a greater difference in duties between the two equivalent ranks. Automatic promotion cannot be speeded up in a similar manner.

Young naval officers, therefore, enjoy an increase in pay. Acting sub-lieutenants will get nine shillings (about $2.) daily instead of seven shillings eightpence and sub-lieutenants 11 shillings (about $2.45) instead of nine shillings.

Potato and Apple Yield Lower Than Last Year

Toronto, Oct. 15 —(CP)— Wet weather throughout Ontario last month delayed seeding of fall wheat and retarded harvesting of late vegetable crops and buckwheat the Ontario Department of Agriculture said in its monthly crop report, issued here yesterday.

Frost damaged tobacco and garden crops last month causing loss of an estimated 8,000,000 pounds of flue-cured tobacco. Threshing of spring grains was still general at the end of last month as operations were retarded due to wet weather and labor shortage.

The average yield of late potatoes was reported to be 50 percent of the normal crop as a result of blight and early frost damage.

The apple crop in Western Ontario was rated 15 percent below the 1941 figures or approximately 321,000 barrels. The Eastern Ontario crop was estimated at 199,200 barrels, 16 percent less than last year's crop.

Low night temperatures during the latter part of September caused frost damage to tender vegetable crops in most Western Ontario areas. The tomato crop was seriously affected in most districts, while green beans, peppers and vine crops suffered severely with some localized damage to corn.

The Eastern Ontario potato crop suffered blight in the first week of September. The tomato crop was below average quality standards due to cracking and rotting from extreme temperatures. Corn and onion crops yielded better than expected.

USE NEWSPAPERS AS TEXT-BOOKS

Pupils in Alberta's Capital Get New Incentive in Current Events Work

Edmonton, Oct. 15.— (CP) — Newspapers are being used in Edmonton's public schools as textbooks. School officials described the system as educational and students are intrigued and interested.

Items in the daily newspapers are studied by the pupils practically every day in the current events classes. Teachers clip articles from the papers and use them for discussion.

R. L. Sheppard, superintenent of schools, said: "Educational and valuable information and habits are resulting from the adoption of newspapers in the classroom. In my visits to schools I have seen the daily papers put to every kind of use from scrap books to world events studies".

The only fault some of the parents and teachers had to find with the use of newspapers as a text book was that sometimes the pupils became so interested in their current events work, they had a tendency to neglect other subjects.

Using daily newspapers, one class has one day a week set aside for oral discussion on current events. Taking turns, the pupils give an oral review to the rest of the class of some article or feature about which they have read and studied the night before.

One former student said the training she gained from her daily perusal of the newspapers during her school years has developed in her a curiosity about world affairs which she believed she would not otherwise have enjoyed.

Crown Will Lay More Serious Charge

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 14 —(CP)— Crown Attorney Harvey McCulloch said in court here today that "a more serious charge" will be laid against Vivian King, 29-year-old rooming house proprietor, as the result of the death of Nick Grahame, restaurant chef, in hospital yesterday.

King originally was charged with assault following a fight in King's home in which Grahame allegedly suffered injuries necessitating hospital attention.

On his court appearance on the assault charge today, King was remanded one week.

"In this case I would ask for an adjournment of one week and request that no bail be granted, as a more serious charge will be laid," Mr. McCulloch said.

"Irish" Open Rugby Season With 17-0 Win Over 'Collegians' Scoring All Points in Last Half

Champions of Last Year Again Produce Light but Fast Squad

ROOKIES MAKE GOOD

Running roughshod and showing their heels to the enemy, Coach Jack Doran's St. Michael's Academy "Irish" opened the 1942 junior six-man Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. campaign with a 17 to 0 win over the Belleville Collegiate "Collegians" before upwards of 1,000 students and adult patrons on the Collegiate campus Wednesday afternoon. Commencing where they left off as league champions of 1941, the lighter St. Mikes squad proved speed can triumph over power, as they raced through to a last half victory. With no score registered in the initial half the winners made it 7-0 at the three-quarter whistle and 17-0 at full time.

Following a scoreless first half, during which the bulk of play was centred around the mid-field stripe, owing to initial-game fumbles and over-anxiousness on the part of both youthful squads, the Irish coupled speed and a prolific aerial attack, that left their heftier Collegiate rivals bewildered and defeated, despite attempts at futile power attacks. The winner's scoring punch was evenly divided with Doug Green romping over for the first major score, Bob Wilson counting the second try and Don Barrett putting the game into the well-known sack with a third major count. Only twice in the entire game did the Collegians move the pig-skin into potential scoring position, but a sturdy defence and poor field generalship took its awful toll to leave the losers scoreless.

No Score in First Canto

There was no score in the initial stanza, as play hovered about the mid-field stripe owing to continued fumbles and the lack of adequate punting on the part of both squads. The feature of the first half, which proved humorous to the patrons, but embarrassing to Jerry Moher, St. Mikes' halfback, who had his rugby pants literally torn asunder. Moher was running back a B.C.I. punt when tackled. His pants failed to withstand the tackle and were rent in twain, but the loss of outer clothing did not thwart Moher, who continued for further gains before being downed. Later he was given the protection of fellow players to the side lines where outer coverings were obtained in place of the ruined pants. Later Bunton pitched to Moher to bring the ball to the Collegians' 20 and Bunton booted over the goal line, but Clarke was not given yards on an attempted rouge and no score resulted.

Relieved Pressure

To open the second half Green and Wilson brought the oval to the Collegians' 20, but Bruce Bishop, the defenders' quarterback, leaped high into the ozone to snare an attempted forward pass and relieve the pressure, but on the return the Collegians fumbled and Bob Wilson kicked a point to open the scoring in favor of the "Irish." Bishop fired a pass to Bruce Philp for a B.C.I. threat, but the Irish held firmly on their 17. Jerry Moher fired two successive forwards, one to Barrett and a second to Doug Green, who was in the open and romped over for a unmolested major score, that was converted making the three-quarter score 7 to 0 for the Irish.

The third stanza saw the Doran-coach Irish run rampant to score two unconverted touchdowns, as Bob Wilson intercepted a forward pass and galloped 30 yards for a major score. Again the Collegians booted the oval about, when attempting a third down forward in desperation, Don Barrett intercepted and ran the pigskin 27 yards for the final score of the game.

The Collegiate sextette showed the lack of coaching in practically every department, with Rookie Bruce Philp, a first-year player, showing his elders the way and starring both ways, with Bruce Bishop getting in some timely defensive play. For the victorious Irish Coach Doran's regulars carried the burden, with Wilson and Moher showing speed, Bunton firing passes and the youthful Doug Green proving an artist going both ways, in his initial gridiron appearance. The next league game on Monday brings together Belleville Collegiate versus Albert College.

St. Michael's Academy: Wilson and Moher halves, Bunton quarter, Green snap, Barrett and Temple wings, Thomas, Donovan, Adams and McCauley spares.

Belleville Collegiate: Clarke and Dodson halves, Bishop quarter, Bateman snap, Potter and Dawson wings, Philp, Haggerty, Flander and Spencer spares.

St. Mikes	0	0	7	10—17

COMMANDOS MAY WITHDRAW FROM QUEBEC LEAGUE

Balk at Plans to Limit Number of N.H.L. Players to Each Club

STORMY SESSION

By HAROLD ATKINS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Oct. 15—(CP)—Ottawa Commandos balked at Quebec Senior Hockey League plans to limit to four the number of former National Hockey League players on each team last night, and left definite makeup of the league in doubt as they asked for more time to consider their entry.

The new Ottawa club had entered the league to round out an eight-team circuit when the motion concerning N.H.L. players was passed. Until that motion came up, it appeared definite that the league would consist of four civilian and four service clubs.

Two of the armed forces teams were the Royal Canadian Air Force Manning Depot Club of Lachine and a Military District No. 4 squad, both of Montreal. Cornwall will also be represented by an army club as was Ottawa's intention. The four civilian clubs are Royals, Pat's and Canadiens of Montreal and Morton Aces of Quebec, who have been granted the old Quebec Aces' franchise.

First opposition to any one club having too many N.H.L. players came from Gus Ogilvie of Royals, who contended that the pick of these players were available to the armed forces but not to civilian clubs.

The Royal official said that if the league allowed the armed forces clubs to "pack" their teams then Royals would ask their franchise to be discontinued.

Paul Haynes, coach of Canadiens supported Mr. Ogilvie and said Canadiens would also have to pull up stakes this winter if the league didn't decide to make it an even-balanced circuit.

Jim McCaffrey, President of Ottawa Senators, who have transferred their franchise to the Ottawa army team said that the "criticism and legislation was aimed at Ottawa," and added "the motion is foolish."

"The league would be making a more sensible move if they made it an all-services league," said McCaffrey. "It's going to come and the sooner you realize it the better."

A rider was added to the motion defining an N.H.L. player as anyone who played in the N.H.L. last winter.

Cornwall Also Dissents

Tommy Gorman, manager of the Canadian Arena Company and Canadien Hockey Club which operates the amateur Canadiens, said "rather than make trouble Canadiens, Pat's, Royals, Morton Aces and possibly Shawinigan Falls could operate a civilian league. We'd be much happier this way."

"We don't intend to be the goats for the rest of the league," added Gorman.

Cornwall was the only other dissenting vote, besides Ottawa, against the motion.

Before the rift in plans occurred, the meeting had decided to operate this winter on a triple schedule, with six of the eight clubs qualifying for the playoffs.

A motion was also passed limiting the number of players to dress for a game to thirteen, including a spare goaler. Last year the teams could dress fifteen men, including a spare goaler.

Application by Shawinigan Falls for entry to the league was turned down, when the meeting felt nine teams would bring about transportation difficulties. This all happened, however, before the motion on limiting N.H.L. players came up, and the Shawinigan delegates had left the meeting.

President George Slater asked the clubs if they would co-operate in getting the league off to an early start so that it will allow more time for the playoffs.

Toronto, Oct. 15. (CP)—Need a job done, like taking the dog for a walk, interviewing the landlord about new wallpaper for the living room, or scoring a touchdown at a crucial moment in a rugby game? Then send an SOS for Leading Seaman Spike Larabee! If Spike will do it he'll do it well.

Larabee, an Ottawa lad, is groundman at the Navy League recreation centre in Halifax. A quiet, unassuming little fellow, popular with all, Spike finished his chores at the centre last week-end, dug out his rugger togs and turned out with Navy for the opening of Halifax English Rugby League. Playing outside on the Navy line, Larabee was the fastest, trickiest man on the field and put Navy in scoring position more than once as the Sailors beat Dalhousie Tigers 16-3. Next day, Navy seamen tackled the powerful Navy new entries in the Canadian Football League and, although they were outclassed 36-0, Larabee fought his heart out in the seamen's backfield. Spike's 50-yard run was the best of the game.

Ken (Halifax Herald) Chisholm commented: "When you play in two Senior games on a week-end that's something; when you star at both of them, that's something further; that's Spike."

Incidentally:

The half-mile running champion of Canada's overseas army, Sgt. Tony Williams of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, has returned to his Winnipeg home after three years in England. . . A track star before the war, Williams attributes his recent racing successes to the hardy army life and expert coaching by Al Pennington, England's British Empire games quarter-mile champion in 1938. . . Tony has been chosen to train for an army commission at Gordon Head, B.C. . . Coincident with talk that Seattle and Portland may be dropped from the Pacific Coast Baseball League for the duration to make it a six-team All-California Circuit and eliminate necessity for the long northern train jumps, Bob Brown, Vancouver promoter, says there is definite possibility the British Columbia City will be included in a Northwest Baseball League. "I think a good six-team league could be lined up, embracing Portland, Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver and possibly Salem and Bremerton," said Brown.

McCREADY PROVES OLD MAXIM IN WINNING MATCH

Science Triumphs Over Brute Strength in Main Bout of Wrestling Card

GOOD PRELIMS

Proving that science will ultimately triumph over brute strength "Big Earl" McCready, the pride of western Canada's wrestling fraternity soundly trounced "Irish Jerry" Monnahan, the former masked wrestler from California, before 1,000 satisfied muscle-bending patrons at the Hume arena last night.

With matters all even in the main scrap at one fall each, somewhat of a double play went into action for the McCready victory, as Monnahan attacked Referee Phil Lawson and in the subsequent mellee all three in the squared circle went to the mat with McCready winning the final fall with a reverse body slam as Monnahan still clung to Lawson's body in a futile attempt to evade defeat.

Early in the scrap Monnahan reverted to villianous ring practice and in his pugnaciousness actually attacked the press table after being hurled from the ring by McCready. Later, police surrounding the timer's bench, Monnahan reverted to ring business, but made another mistake, when he implicated Referee Lawson into his win-or-die effort "Irish Jerry" won the initial fall with a reverse body press, but McCready bounced off the ropes to gain a neat rolling barrel scissors to equal matters in the second round. All even the final victory went to McCready as Monnahan implicated Referee Lawson into the picture and thus lost, much to the heartfelt gladness of the Hume Arena patrons.

Otherwise the opening bout, between Walter Siroris, the Flying Frenchman, and Pedro Martinez, the pugnacious Mexican, was tops. There were no quarters asked nor given in the opener as the powerful Martinez applied every trick in his bag and brought Referee Cliff Fox into the picture as a middleman while the boys staged a thrilling 30-minute draw scrap.

The night's semi-final proved rather slow and saw Ivan Kalminoff a beared Russian youth triumph over George Burns who happens to be one of the Nebraska Burns' grapplers, with a surf-board hold, that made the Nebraskan say "uncle" in a matter of some 21 minutes. Following the show Promoter Frank Tunney announced that "Whipper Billie" Watson, former Empire champion and popular wrestler in this district, had personally challenged the winner of the McCready-Monnahan bout, which naturally brings together McCready and Watson here next week. That'll be a classic—no dock-smacking scrap, but rather clean orthodox wrestling.

COMBINES WIN LACROSSE TITLE IN FOURTH GAME

Score Four Goals in Last Quarter to Win Mann Cup

MASDEN A HERO

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 15—(CP) — Carl (Alababa Gus) Madsen isn't exactly the kind of fellow you'd expect Mimico-Brampton Combines to choose for a hero, but he was pretty close to that stature today as Combines celebrated victory in Canada's world series of lacrosse.

Madsen played such a rugged defence for St. Catharines Athletics during the regular season that his popularity rating with the rival Combines dropped way below zero. Then the Mann Cup finals started and Madsen joined the Ontario champions as one of three replacements allowed under Canadian Lacrosse Association rules.

The climax came last night before 2,515 fans as Madsen figured in three of Mimico-Brampton's last four goals to give Combines a 10-9 victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies in the fourth game of the best-of-five Dominion championship series. Combines won the first two games 10-7 and 15-9 and Salmonbellies took the third 14-8.

In what was easily the best instalment of the series, Mimico-Brampton raced from behind to win with one electric burst of power. They trailed 2-1 at the end of the first period, went ahead 5-3 at the half and then entered the final frame on the short end of a 7-6 score. Salmonbellies added two more in the first few minutes of the fourth period—and then the lightning struck.

Could Sense End Coming

Whipper Arthurs beat 19-year-old Bill Scuby on a pass from Bill Mullis and you could almost sense the end right there. Ross Gimblett made it 9-8 on a pass from Madsen. A minute later big Ed Downey of Salmonbellies spilled Madsen in front of the New Westminster net and Madsen made good on the penalty shot to knot the count. George Masters converted Madsen's pass for the winning tally at 12:03.

Bill Isaacs, Onions Smith and Masters scored two apiece for Combines with the others split evenly between Ken Dixon, Arthurs, Gimblett and Madsen. Jim Douglas, one of the shining stars of the series, had three for New Westminster. Downey tallied twice and other Salmonbellies to beat Bert Large in the Mimico-Brampton nets were Marcus Smith, Clayton (Blackie) Black, Clifford (Kip) Routley and Bill Wilkes.

After the game, Coach Jack Wood said it "just wasn't in the books" for New Westminster to win.

"We'd have to play 25 per cent. better in Toronto anyway to beat the referees," he said. "Maybe they play that way the year round, but the interpretation of some of the rules is certainly new to us."

The Mimico-Brampton players, passing around drinks in the $2,500 Mann Cup donated in 1910 by Sir Donald Mann of Toronto and presented to them in a post-series ceremony, had no time for complaints. One of their particular heroes was netminder Large, who returned to the line-up last night after making way for Pete Anthony in the third game. Large, veteran of thirteen seasons in lacrosse, was announced as 1942 holder of the Mike Kelley Memorial Trophy won last year by Black of Salmonbellies.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Oct. 15. (AP)—Wanta be an athlete? . . . Probably not, but Dapper Dan Ferris, the A.A.U. Secretary-Treasurer, has an idea that may get Americans out there yet trying to show that they're healthy specimens . . . The plan is simply to arrange a series of tests in various sports, such as track and field, basketball, etc., in each community, with standards set low enough that almost anybody can get by after a little practice. . . They'll be arranged according to age groups so the flat-footed, wind-broken guys of 40 will have as much chance as 20-year olds. . . The main idea, Dan explains, is to catch them when they're not looking and make them healthier. . . The A.A.U. once tried a similar stunt on a much smaller scale and the poor guys who volunteered to do the timing and measuring were overwhelmed.

Louisiana golfers have been playing for three titles at once in New Orleans . . . First day's rounds counted for the State pro-amateur tournament and the first halves of the city pro championship and the State open. Entries in the latter two events played a second time with the scores counting one or two ways. . . .

SWEDISH TRACK STARS TO RACE IN UNITED STATES

Haegg, Anderson and Lidman to Furnish the Competition

COME BY PLANE

New York, Oct. 15 — (AP) —One of these days three fast-stepping Swedes will jump, not out of the weeds, but out of an airplane to give indoor track competition the stimulus it will need to carry on through the coming winter season.

In spite of the difficulty of trans-Atlantic travel and of conducting negotiations at long range, Gunder Haegg, Sweden's record-breaker at distances from 1,500 to 5,000 meters, Arne Anderson, his leading rival, and Erik Lidman, a crack hurdler, are almost certain to race in the United States this winter.

"They're eager to come," Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union said today. "I just had another radiogram that indicates they still want to run although we couldn't arrange some outdoor meets for them in California."

The problem of getting the visiting athletes to the United States seems fairly simple. Planes are running from Stockholm to London and it is only necessary to get priorities for them on a Trans-Atlantic plane. But digging up the kind of competition that will pack Madison Square Garden in a bigger task.

'Name' Athletes in Army

Practically all the "name" athletes who competed last winter are in the armed forces or otherwise unavailable. The most notable exception is miler Gil Dodds, a Divinity student and therefore exempt from the draft. Even Greg Rice, the two-mile champ has been classified 1-A, despite the triple hernia that makes running a hazardous occupation for him.

However, officials are going ahead with plans for all the major indoor meets this winter in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Cleveland.

"The draft of 18 and 19 year olds will hurt us a lot," Ferris said. "That will take a lot of boys who might be competing in the lesser events. Still, we'll have the college students who are signed up with the navy's V-7 program and other deferred classes and maybe some of the boys in the services will be able to compete."

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

Commencing just where they left off last fall as Bay of Quinte Interscholastic junior football champions and using the same gridiron tactics of speed and aerial attacks, the St. Michael's Academy "Irish" pried off the 1942 school football lid with a decisive 17 to 0 win over Harold Partridge's B. C. I. "Collegians" yesterday. Paced by those two smoothies — Bob Wilson and Jerry Moher, the Doran-led Irishmen ran rough-shod over the Collegians in the last half, following a scoreless initial two frames. Speed and aerial attacks saw the Collegians completely eclipsed as they fielded one of its poorest coached squads in years. Fumbles proved costly to both teams early in the game, but the fighter and more speedy Irish whittled close to the letter of their coach and kept pitching forward passes until they finally clicked for the first major score and then it was merely a waltz.

Rookies on both squads earned their spurs and strangely enough these two first-year players were sons of former Belleville athletes. For the Collegiate Bruce Philp, son of Bill "Lefty" Philp, baseball pitcher of another era, was a standout, while Rookie Doug. Green, son of Bill Green of Belleville hockey fame 20 years ago, walked off with similar first year honors for the victors. A humorous picture was seen in the second canto when a B. C. I. tackler literally tore the trousers off Jerry Moher in an attempted tackle. Undaunted, Moher continued pantless until finally downed. Then, in his embarrassment, he was protected by players while the missing pants were replaced. As there was no score in the initial half, Moher's pantless episode was the feature of the initial half, insofar as the fans were concerned. Intercepting passes and a third period aerial attack gave the 1941 champions first fruits of 1942 league victory.

Maybe "Irish Jerry" Monahan will think twice before issuing wrestling challenges again. Last week Monahan hurled a challenge into "Big Earl" McCready's teeth, and the Regina farmer accepted in his waltz towards a return bout for the British Empire title. The result was proven last night at the Hume Arena when McCready matched all unorthodox efforts of the "Big Irishman" and pleased the Hume Arena patrons with a clean-cut victory. Monahan became so displeased he even attacked the press table, but once a cordon of police were present, the Californian remained within the confines of the squared circle. However, for good wrestling entertainment, the opening bout between Walt Sirois and Pedro Martinez was tops and productive of the best wrestling of the night. In the meantime "Whipper Billie" Watson has asked for a bout with McCready here next week. Ain't that sumpin?

In the major baseball league circles of 1942 the Chicago White Sox established one record and Danny Litwhiler, of the Philadelphia Phillies, another. The Pale Hose, in playing only 148 of their scheduled 154 games participated in the fewest contests since 154 became standard for a season in the majors. Previously, they had shared the record of 149 with the Athletics of 1906 and 1935, Red Sox of 1933 and Yankees of 1935, in the American League, and the Phils of 1907 and 1934 in the National League.

Litwhiler did not make an error all season, while playing in 147 games in the outfield for the Phils. No gardener participating in 150 or more games ever had a perfect fielding season in the majors, the previous low being three, made by Zack Wheat of Brooklyn in 152 games in 1922, and Edgar Hahn, Chicago White Sox, in 156 games in 1907, and Ervin (Pete) Fox, Detroit Tigers, 155 games in 1938.

Remember when Stanley Ketchel, claimant to the world's middleweight boxing championship at the start of the century, was shot and killed in Conway, Missouri, 32 years ago today? Ketchel won the title after knocking out "Twin" Sullivan in San Francisco on Feb. 22, 1907, but lost the crown to Billy Papke the same year.

THIS AND THAT — THERE'S something in the Yankee baseball wind . . . .Yesterday Marse Joe McCarthy fired "Doc" Painter, who has been trainer of the Bronx Bombers for 13 years . . . No explanation was given, McCarthy merely stating he "desired to make a change". . . .Instead of holding two annual meetings, as is usually the custom, the major and minors leagues will convene at the same time on December 1st in Chicago. . . . .If the major ball loops adopt a three-loop swing, instead of four, each club will save about 20,000 miles of travelling which will help all concerned. . . However, if professional baseball really means to assist the war effort, they should shorten their playing schedules leaving players more time to be employed at war work. . . There are always repeated rain postponements in April, so why not leave the opening until the last week in April, and close along in the middle of September? . . . The Boston Bruins are giving over the total receipts of four National Hockey League home games to war charities, commencing with their opener. . . . 18-year-old Red Garrett, former Marlboro junior, is wearing King Clancy's former Maple Leaf number at the Toronto N.H.L. club's fall training in St. Catharines . . . Coach Hap Day thinks highly of the former Marlboro defenceman and predicts he'll be a Red Horner and Wally Stanowski all rolled into one. . . Well, what more would one ask—

BOBBY COULTER PLAYS WITH RCAF

Former Argo and University Star to Lineup With Sprague's Team

Ottawa, Oct. 15 (CP)—PO. Bobby Coulter, physical instructor at the Arnprior, Ont., elementary flying training school, has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force Football Club here, and is due to play with and against some old football friends very shortly, it was learned last night.

Coulter, brilliant University of Toronto and Argonaut quarterback and ball-carrying ace, will be in Dave Sprague's lineup, when the Air Force team meets Civil Service in a Senior City Football League fixture at Lansdowne Park Saturday.

In the Senior League, Coulter will oppose Ottawa big four players of other years when the airmen meet the current edition of the Rough Riders. He has played against George Sprague, Doug Annan and other new R.C.A.F. team mates.

Coulter, serving as a field general, should provide the leadership the Flyers missed so badly in their First League game last week. Ike Norris, former Sarnia Imperial lineman, is reported to be headed for the local R.C.A.F. team.

TINY THOMPSON TO HELP BROTHER

Goalie Coming Out of Retirement to Play for the Chicago Hawks

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP)—Tiny Thompson, whose ability as goalkeeper during his years of service in the National Hockey League is attested by his winning the Vezina trophy four times, is coming out of retirement to help brother Paul.

Paul, manager of Chicago Black Hawks, hasn't a capable goalie to start the season and Tiny who didn't play last year, heard of his plight.

Tiny, for years a star with Detroit and Boston, is going into the Royal Canadian Air Force but he has advised Paul that until he is called he will be willing to don the pads and guard the Hawks' goal.

Brother Paul accepted the offer. He also announced purchase of goalie Bert Gardiner from Montreal Canadiens.

HOCKEY LEAGUE MILITARY UNITS

Loop Will be Composed From Corps Now Stationed in Capital

Ottawa, Oct. 15 — (CP) — At a meeting of the recently-formed National Defence Hockey League here last night it was decided that professional hockey players now wearing khaki will be barred from the National Defence League if they are playing with the Commandos in the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

It was learned earlier this week that a team to be known as the Commandos will take over the franchise held by Ottawa Senators in the Q. S. H. L. The Commandos will be an all-army team.

CSM. Robert Montgomery, president of the league, presided at last night's meeting of the N. H. L., at which all participating teams were represented.

It was decided that any professional hockey player who does not play for the Commandos is eligible to play in the league and, if he enlisted after Sept. 15 of this year, he will be "pooled" and assigned to a team by the league executive committee which, in their opinion, should be strengthened.

Participating teams are the corps of military staff clerks, the Royal Canadian Engineers, the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps and the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps.

AIR FORCE PAPER DOWN BY ATLANTIC HAS BOMBISH NEWS

House Organ of Flier Unit Around East Coast Aims to be Morale Builder for Ground and Air Crew

(By FRANK LOWE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An East Coast Canadian Air Base, Oct. 15. (CP)—"Depth Charge" is the name of the newspaper published at this Royal Canadian Air Force Station, and it packs a wallop like its lethal namesake.

Sixteen pages of explosive news, the paper comes out once a month, edited by FO. C. H. Schapiro of Yarmouth, N.S., a writer whose articles have appeared in most of the leading Canadian newspapers and periodicals. But backer of the paper is the commanding officer himself. Group Captain N. S. MacGregor of Hamilton, Ont., believes a station periodical is a "Morale Builder"—has believed so for years.

He was the man who started the Air Force's first publication, "Boom", and when that squadron moved from here, taking "Boom" with them, he immediately began to put out "Depth Charge". The name was chosen by Sqd. Ldr. Arthur Kenyon of Ottawa, now stationed in Halifax.

Wields Blue Pencil

It's no unusual sight to see this busy officer wielding a blue pencil as he reads proofs, but it is Mr. Schapiro who does most of the work. So far he has put out three issues, and is looking forward to seeing the fourth materialize "if only something will happen that is worth writing about".

His reporter at large is Flt. Sgt. D. P. Moors while the rest of his permanent staff is made up of Flt. Sgt. Harry Sisore of Hamilton, Ont., advertising manager; Cpl. Jack Pettet of Yarmouth, treasurer; and PO. C. A. Cramp of Toronto, sports editor.

Pictures are scattered profusely through each issue, all taken by the station photographic department, and all concerning events that have taken place on the field. Demand for the paper exceeds the output. Every month 1,750 issues are rolled off the presses, but the cry goes up for more. Every airman gets a free issue. Spare ones, if any, are taken to a nearby town and sold on newstands for a nickel a copy.

They go like hot cakes too, mainly because—it is maliciously rumored—of the gossip columns that tag the doings of the men. Local girl friends snatch the issues to find out what that guy of theirs was doing the night he said he had to work.

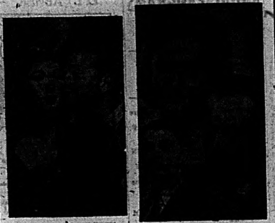
AT THE BELLE



The screen's newest comedy team, Ann Sothern and Red Skelton, appear together for the first time in M.G.M.'s "Maisie Gets Her Man." The story concerns Maisie's adventure in vaudeville with Red Skelton as a comedian. Margaret Lockwood and Barry Barnes in "Girl in the News" is the added thrill hit at the Belle.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Shes in the Army"
(First Belleville Showing)

A film which has a background of unusual interest is "She's in the Army," the Monogram picture which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre with Lucile Gleason, Veda Ann Borg and Marie Wilson in the featured roles. Rollicking comedy characterizes the story and the picture is filled with hilarious incidents.

Incidental to the story, the picture features the wartime activities of the Women's Ambulance and Defence Corps of America, an organization of many thousands of women who have enlisted as volunteers for service in cities which may be bombed or otherwise attacked by enemy forces. Hundreds of these uniformed women, who have been formed into regulation military units, take part in the picture, and give valuable demonstrations of the proper method of dealing with incendiary bombs and other instruments of war. Many mechanical devices recently perfected for use in bombed cities are also shown in uses.

The picture was filmed with the active cooperation of the Corps' principal officers, technical direction of the sequences in which they participated being placed in the hands of Lieut.-Col. John W. Colbert, founder of the organization; Victoria Brown, national commander, and Lieut. Martha Warner of the Los Angeles unit.

"She's in the Army" was directed by Jean Yarbrough, and the cast appearing with Miss Gleason, Miss Borg and Miss Wilson includes Robert Lowery, Lyle Talbot and Warren Hymer. T. H. Richmond produced.

Jesse James, Jr.

Don "Red" Barry plays the part of a rough-and-ready law officer who cleans up a wild frontier town, in "Jesse James, Jr.," his latest Republic western the second hit at the Capitol Theatre. Lynn Merrick has the leading feminine role, while Al St. John enacts a comedy characterization.

A colored cartoon "Crazy Cruise" and the serial "Spy Smasher," completes a grand double bill for all.

THEY SMELL AS SWEET

AT THE BELLE

"Masie Gets Her Man"

The adventures of Masie continue fast and furious in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Masie Gets Her Man," latest in the series of which Ann Sothern is the star, and which is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Sharing starring honors with Miss Sothern is Red Skelton, radio and screen comedian, who appears as an aspiring vaudeville comic. The teaming of Ann Sothern and Red Skelton is a "natural" and the first-night audience will leave no doubt that there will be further demand for other vehicles for the this pair.

Knife-Thrower's Aide

Maisie appears as a jobless showgirl in search of a job after she quits a knife-thrower's act when that gentleman turns up for work drunk. She wanders into a building known to its regulars as the "Larceny Building," and Maisie's life is just a series of adventures after that.

Maisie and Red form a vaudeville team, get a booking but they fail because of Red's incurable stage fright. Thereafter they get mixed up with a racket in the "Larceny Building." How they clear themselves comprises the rest of the story.

Adventure and Comedy

The story, a swift compounding of elements of adventure and comedy is ably aided by a strong supporting cast which includes such able veterans as Donald Meek, Allen Jenkins, Leo Gorcey, Fritz Feld and Rags Ragland. Direction Roy Del Ruth, responsible for topnotch musicals, is fast paced and able.

Toronto Critics Acclaim Thriller

It is seldom that such unanimous acclaim greets a motion picture as welcomed Carol Reed's latest thrill-laugh hit "Girl in the News" the second feature hit at the Belle theatre Toronto's critics praised it to the skies.

Jack Karr who writes the Toronto Star's "Movie Go Round" advised Hollywood producers of mystery films to pack away their cameras and leave the field to British studios exclusively. "No one," he said, "can hold a candle to the work they're doing in Britain to scare the daylights out of motion picture audiences with suspense melodramas." "The latest," he stated, "is that enjoyable spinetingling tightly-packed melodrama "Girl in the News" a swiftly-moving, magnificently acted film of the finest calibre." In case you haven't guessed it by now, Mr. Karr is convinced the picture is "one of the best of the year."

Equally flattering was Helen Allen who reviews movies in the Toronto Telegram. Starting her review with the heading "Cheers!" she said, "the whole thing is so highly exciting that half the town will be busy recommending it to the other half" and climaxed her report by describing the acting as "a perfect cast in a perfect picture."

Roly Young in the "Globe and Mail" bestowed five stars—the limit—on "Girl in the News" and called it "a yarn filled with suspense and excitement from start to finish. To balance it off there are a number of comedy scenes that are just about tops, the whole business rounding up as the outstanding thriller of its kind in many, many moons."

When the Toronto movie critics agree so wholeheartedly a picture must have something—and Belleville and district moviegoers who see "Girl in the News" at the Belle will find it has —definitely.

An entertaining screen novelty "Victory Quiz" complete the program.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

Chapter 28

He smiled again. "Well, Judith, advice is cheap. Older people love to spout to the young. In that one way they think they have the edge over youth. I'm 48 and I've never ceased being astonished at the things human beings do. They're far less predictable than animals. I'm still curious and I'm still learning. You can forget everything I said, but I just wanted to say it once. Consider it or," he grinned, "or check it off to the meditations of an old foggy."

"I wouldn't be at all surprised if everything you said isn't true."

"Fashions in love and living change, but human beings—never." At the sound of a door opening and closing downstairs, he said, "That's probably your mother. She'll be tickled to death to see you. And by the way, Overton's here is being enlarged. It'll be a block long and the last word in department stores. They've a new manager there, an up and coming chap . . . I hear your mother coming up the steps."

▼ ▼ ▼ ▼

Judith had been home a week, a week that had passed quickly, so casually and quietly did one day slip into the next. The days were better than the nights, for her mother and Harriet filled them by suggesting luncheons in town and shopping and movies and driving out in the afternoon and calling on old friends.

How many living-rooms had she sat in during that week looking at familiar faces and utterly banal remarks while her heart had still been crying for Max! But the days were better than the nights when, retiring early, the walls of her room seemed to be closing in on her and she went to sleep on a wet pillow or just stared into the darkness, feeling nothing, caring for nothing.

Both Harriet and her mother had remarked, "You look tired, Judith. You really needed this rest." If only she could rest. But either she was incapable of feeling anything or this inner seething that was part hurt, part bitterness, part disappointment tore at her.

Twice she missed Stephen's telephone call, once because she was in bed and once when she had been out with her mother and Bessie had taken the message and he would call again. It did not matter since Stephen as well as her family seemed queerly remote. Even in the living-room at night with her parents she could not lose that awful sense of being the only person left in the world. It was frightening.

Good-bye to New York

At the end of the first week Judith walked to Harriet's home for dinner, passing familiar houses in which she had often been as a child. It was cold and the wind was blowing, but already there were signs of Spring.

She had a decision to make and she had told her mother she would rather walk than ride because she wanted to be alone.

Where was the efficient, self-contained, self-sufficient Judith now? Confused, drifting, still driftting, a brown-clad figure walking to Harriet's house on a cold day in March which was to have been one of her days with Max. And Fay probably was with him still. Wasn't it odd that she could feel only mildly jealous? No sharp jealousy of Fay and Max's being together stabbed her. Would that come later? She thought, "Perhaps you can stand just so much and I don't dare include jealousy with the rest of it. Or maybe I can't be jealous of her. I can't be fair and be jealous of her. Are they married? If only I knew that . . But would it matter if they were? I love Max and hate him all in the same moment, but the hate doesn't last. Only the love lasts . . . and hope, this vain, senseless hope."

She could not continue like this. She must think clearly. And first she must return to New York to work. . . . But the thought of the apartment without Emily and with some strange girl living with her was painful to contemplate. Even if the girl were satisfactory, what then? Her work, of course. But you could not work always. Sid Biddison and Phyllis and Ames and the other friends she had not seen for a long time—that was all and it was so little.

The other alternative—remain in Clinton. That was not especially pleasant to contemplate either, but it was, she admitted pleasanter than returning to New York. At least here were no reminders of Max other than the charm bracelet she continued to wear. At least here she would be relieved of the responsibility of the apartment and the expense. Yet in trying to decide between the two she knew that she desperately needed her family, that their love comforted her and that her presence once more in the home gave them joy. She could get a job in Clinton and remain here until she was mentally and emotionally well again. Then she would return to New York. To become a lone successful person? She thought, "I must not try to think beyond now. When I look ahead and can't see Max, my thoughts go in circles crazily. I feel desperate. I want to go out, be extinguished like turning off a light so that I can't think at all or want him."

Harriet's house was a small white brick structure with green shutters. Straight little cedar trees grew around it and a crooked stone path led to the front door. This was the centre of Harriet's existence, this house constantly worked over and worried over.

Harriet, neat in a dark dress, opened the door and Judith stepped inside into the living-room furnished with overstuffed pieces, a little faded and stained.

"Didn't you come in the car?" Harriet asked. "I thought Dad was leaving it home for you."

"I told him to take it this morning, that I'd walk." She took off the brimmed brown felt hat and the short brown sports coat. "Where are the children? It's so quiet."

Harriet laughed. "I got rid of the two imps this afternoon and it is so quiet I wonder if I'm home. It's little Phil Reed's birthday and Ada is giving him a party. She's showing movies to them." Later she said, "I thought of asking Steve to dinner tonight — and didn't. He enjoys my cooking. But I didn't ask him because I didn't know how you'd feel about it. I didn't think you'd want him to get too fond of you. There are plenty of nice girls here."

Stephen? Oh, yes. She had to make herself remember him.

"I don't want to hurt him, Harriet, even if I could." She smiled. "But a good dinner is something else again and you should have asked him." She looked at her sister. "I'm going to be one of the girls in Clinton, too. I've decided to try to get a job at Overton's and come home for a while."

Harriet's dark eyes opened wide. "Why, Judith, that's wonderful! That's the best news I've had in ages! But why? Or shouldn't I ask?"

Judith wanted to tell her about Max, but couldn't. . . . Later perhaps . . not now.

"Of course you may ask. Things have changed for me in New York. I miss Emily and . . ."

She could say no more and no doubt Harriet sensed it.

Harriet said, "I'm so happy about your doing this. You know how happy it will make Mother and Dad? Do they know? I've learned that probably the worst feeling a mother can have is that her children don't need her any longer. Mine work me nearly to death, but they need me. And now I'm really going to see something of you! I couldn't afford to come up to New York to see you."

Presently the children came home, brought by a neighbor, and the house was filled with their voices. They climbed over Judith and demanded to be read to and she was reading to them when Larry, Harriet's husband, came home. Harriet came out of the kitchen to welcome him and the children left Judith and ran to him. The usual marriage with the usual man, Judith thought, watching the cheery, noisy, domestic scene.

After the children had been fed and put to bed, Harriet served a delicious dinner.

Larry said, "I'll take care of the boys tonight and you and Judith go to a movie. I'll wash the dishes so you can go early."

And when Harriet was driving into town in the small, old car she said, "Larry is so good, Judith. He was tired tonight. When I get away from him and the house and the children, I realise how lucky I am. Sometimes you have to get away from the things and people to appreciate them."

"In New York Stephen was telling me about the conditions in his and Larry's office."

"Pretty bad conditions, aren't they—for Steve? There's such a thing as being too smart for your job. It's Forbes or Steve and I think Steve will go. The whole thing is, of course, that Forbes is afraid of his job. I don't know what Steve will do. Go back to Baltimore probably. I'll miss him. Because I'm interested in him only as a friend, he's a comfortable person to have about, but a lot of girls here are excited about him. He's such good husband material running around loose and so good-looking."

"He's a nice boy."

"He's more than just a nice boy. He's honest and fair. He could, if he wanted to press the issue, have Forbes ousted. But where could Forbes find another seven thousand-a-year job? He couldn't and Steve knows that. He knows Mrs. Forbes and the two girls, too."

COULDN'T RAISE ARMS ABOVE HEAD; PAINS WERE SO SHARP

Syntona Brings First Relief to Nearby Resident After Months of Suffering; Had Rheumatic Pains in Joints and Muscles; Backache and Constipation.

"It was almost impossible for me to raise my arms above my head due to the terrible sharp pains in my arms and shoulders," said Mr. Michael Dewan, well known farmer of Ettrick, Ontario, in a recent report.

"For many months I had suffered from severe rheumatic pains and soreness all through my joints and muscles. At times I was simply unable to do my work. At night the pain was so bad I couldn't sleep. My back ached all the time and I had to get up several times each night to relieve my kidneys. I was badly constipated and had frequent stomach upsets. There was a lot of gas in my stomach after meals and I'd belch up bits of sour, undigested food.

"My condition kept getting worse in spite of everything I took, but I had been reading a lot about Syntona helping other people and a few weeks ago I made up my mind to try it. The first thing I noticed was that my bowels began moving regularly and I wasn't having any gas, sourness or belching after meals. Then gradually the pains began to go away. So I kept on taking it and now I am like a different person. The soreness has gone out of my joints and muscles and I have no trouble with backache. I am able to sleep soundly through the night and get up mornings feeling good and rested and ready for a hard day's work.

"I only wish I could tell everyone suffering as I did about Syntona. It's a great medicine."

Syntona is made from 12 of Nature's Finest herbs and roots. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels . . . aids in the elimination of excess acid and poisonous waste matter from the system and improves assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

If you, who read this, suffer as Mr. Dewan did, come to Dolan the Druggist, and get yourself a treatment of Syntona. See how it will help you, too.

Tokyo Facing Early Decision To Combat Peril

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The essential element of the Solomon Islands fighting thus far is that Japan is learning at heavy cost that nothing short of a major naval operation can regain critical lost ground.

Sea losses on both sides have been heavy, but there is every evidence that Japanese ship and plane casualties in the Solomons far exceed American. There is also warrant for the conclusion that the Japanese lack the means to replace losses in the Solomon zone without dangerously weakening their main air and sea fleets deployed to defend all approaches to her vast and ill-digested China Sea conquests.

Thus, Tokyo must be facing an early decision of grave consequence. So far Japan has flittered away ships and planes she could ill spare in futile efforts to dislodge American forces from Guadalcanal without diverting major forces to that mission.

Must Fight or Quit.

That cannot long be endured. Sooner or later Tokyo must make up its mind either to risk a sea fight that could become a crushing, perhaps decisive disaster, or abandon the Solomon Islands altogether.

If enemy forces available in that area are unable to retake Guadalcanal and its important air base, they cannot expect to hold the rest of the Solomon group as the American attack expands. They have the word of such high American naval authorities as Admirals Nimitz and McCain that it will expand; and their expressions of utter confidence that Guadalcanal is too firmly held to be retaken, whatever Tokyo's action.

Behind that confidence stands complete information as to American naval and air dispositions in the Pacific. What must be gravely worrying Tokyo is whether those dispositions are such now as to warrant an American attempt to lure the main Japanese fleet or a substantial part of it into a decisive action. The real strategic purpose of the American advance in the Solomons, unquestionably an offensive rather than a defensive move, is yet to be revealed.

Deadly Thrust.

That unfinished battle is as definitely an aggravating and perhaps deadly menacing thrust in the flank of Japan's over-extended position in the Pacific as Stalingrad is in Hitler's Russian war scheme.

Whatever the purpose of the Japanese retreat from hard-won summer gains in Southeastern China, events both at Stalingrad and in the Solomon islands within the last few weeks cannot be ignored. Both are serving to restrict the field of conceivable new Japanese aggressive action.

It matters not whether Nipponese forces were being regrouped for action against Russia to match once-expected Nazi establishment of the Don-Volga line, or mustered for an attempted invasion of India. The American offensive blossoming in the Solomons and the growing American-Australian power concentration in Australia must be reckoned with.

RUSSIANS REPEL 5 COUNTER-BLOWS NORTH OF CITY

Minor Tank Penetration In Mozdok Sector Repulsed With Heavy Losses to Nazis

AIRMEN DESTROY TANKS

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 15—(AP) — The Battle of Stalingrad was deadlocked today in comparatively small-scale actions with every probing thrust by German tanks and infantry reported repulsed.

Red Army lines remained stable. The Germans buried additional men on the approaches to a workers' settlement in Stalingrad's northwestern suburbs, fallen in assaults which failed to reach the factories forming the backbone of the defence.

Although the invaders are using far smaller forces than they employed in the earlier Stalingrad offensive, the Army newspaper Red Star said they had concentrated a considerable group of infantry and tanks in an effort to occupy the northern quarter.

The noon communique said attacks by Nazi armored and infantry forces were turned back and Russian artillery fire wiped out parts of two German battalions.

Attacks Repelled

Five German counter-attacks were repelled northwest of Stalingrad and about 300 Germans were killed, the communique said.

A minor tank penetration of Russian lines in the Mozdok area of the Central Caucasus was announced, but the communique said Red Army men subsequently beat off attacks of German infantrymen upon a height and killed about 400 of the enemy. Russian fliers aided the defenders.

"Soviet airmen destroyed seven German tanks and 40 trucks and, in air combats, four enemy planes were brought down," it was announced.

About 300 Germans were reported slain in two days of action on the Leningrad front. The communique said Soviet artillery and mortar gunners of that region — which is already in the grip of seasonal cold — had demolished 12 German blockhouses and silenced four gun batteries.

The Soviet Information Bureau announced that the fighting yesterday caused no significant changes at the front.

(A Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Express said Col.-Gen. Franz Halder, Chief of the German General Staff, was reported dismissed four weeks ago because of Nazi party displeasure over his recommendation that the invasion army drop its Russian offensive and consolidate positions for the coming winter.)

Shellfire from Russian guns was declared to have destroyed two ammunition-laden trains at a German-occupied railway station southeast of Novorossisk, on the Black Sea coast.

Further Reduction In Gas Ration Hinted by Paper

Ottawa, Oct. 15 (CP) — Le Droit, Ottawa's French language newspaper, said today that Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle will order, within a week, a new restriction on the value of gasoline rationing coupons.

"The gasoline ration coupons will be reduced from four to three gallons in Ontario, Quebec and the four Western Provinces, the newspaper said. "The nine provinces of Canada thus will be on the same footing, in this respect since gasoline ration coupons have only been worth three gallons for some time in the Maritimes."

The reported reduction would affect motorists in all categories, those in the AA rating as well as those in A and higher categories. AA motorists receive the smallest number of coupons in their ration books, and thus are entitled to the smallest amount of gasoline. The number of coupons rises in each category.

THE WAR TODAY

By GLENN BABB
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Hitler obviously is turning his keen, perhaps anxious, attention to his southern front. Stymied at Stalingrad and finding little reason for comfort elsewhere along his eastern battlelines, he patently feels impelled now to give increasing thought to Africa and southern areas nearer home, Italy, for instance, and the Balkans.

The movements of his subordinates, the switching of his U-boat packs to new hunting grounds and a growing volume of searching speculation from his propaganda machine all indicate the Nazis expectation that the war is approaching a new phase, the African phase. This shift of emphasis differs significantly from similar changes in the past. There is a new note in Berlin's propaganda. This time, for the first time, the new battlefield is not of Hitler's choosing. He appears to be uncertain as to exactly where it is to be. The Berlin radio, throwing out a multitude of reports on Allied dispositions, seems to be either fishing for information or trying to impress the United Nations with the thoroughness of the German Information Services. But the general tenor is conviction that a blow is coming, and that the initiative will not be Germany's.

Yesterday it was a story of British - American concentration in Gambia, the British territory nearest Dakar, the pivotal point of the whole West African area. With this was spread a report, admittedly unconfirmed, of an Allied convoy approaching Dakar. While it would be naive to take Berlin's radio emissions at face value, there is a strong impression that the German command faces without any taste for it the prospect of warfare spreading from one coast of Africa to the other, a battlefield more vast even than that of Russia.

Berlin is displaying, too, an uncommon interest in the journey to London of Field Marshal Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa who a generation ago played the leading role in wresting from Germany her African empire. Smuts' visit, the Germans seem convinced, means ominous happenings in Africa. So they beam both to the Vichy French and to Smuts' own country a blast of warnings about American designs in Africa, which, said one Berlin broadcast, Mr. Roosevelt is planning "to make a glacis (outer defence space) for his own Western Hemisphere."

Marshal Rommel, having received marked honors at the hands of Hitler in Berlin, has returned to the command of his African armies. Himmler of the Gestapo, that grim specialist in the morale of the home front, of occupied territories and Allied states—if there is a difference there—has gone to Rome. New generals have been sent to the Balkans. And Admiral Raeder's submarine flotillas are making their greatest effort of the moment in the waters off West Africa and the Cape of Good Hope. Berlin and London are agreed on this last. Hitler is desperate to cut those lifelines to West Africa and around the Cape to North Africa.

A new factor sharpens the Nazi anxieties. "The Yanks are coming," is in effect the refrain of a stream of radio outpourings from Berlin. "The belief is voiced that American troops will play a very important part in the coming developments," said the Berlin station last night. One day a military commentator reports new conceptions of Gen. Montgomery's British 8th. Army deep in Egypt, below the Qattara Depression and speculates, in a vein reassuring to the home folks, as to its significance. Again the Nazi radio reports Allied movements menacing to French West Africa with the scarcely veiled threat that the French had better stand firm there or else.

British Airmen, Stranded in Desert, Fly Back in Two Stolen Axis Bombers

Cairo, Oct. 15 — (CP) — Two British airmen, shot down in the Egyptian desert and faced with a long trek back to their own lines, solved the problem by stealing two enemy bombers from a German airfield and flying them back.

They had already set out from the wreck of their crashed plane and had walked ten miles toward the east when they saw a German bomber coming down to land not far away. An enemy airfield was somewhere near.

Climbing to the top of a rocky hillock, they saw the field. There were no buildings; only a few tents and lorries and these seemed poorly guarded. There were only a handful of men around.

They decided to attempt to steal an aircraft. They waited until nightfall when, they felt sure, their British flying kit wouldn't be recognized in the darkness. One of the airmen spoke German almost as fluently as English.

They strolled on to the flying field and the bombers were surrounded by a swarm of ground crew and sentries.

It was too late to turn back so they walked straight to a couple of planes. In his best Prussian one Briton blustered: "These should be ready by now," adding, "Why weren't they ready long ago?"

He was hastily assured that the planes were ready. "Right, then, we're off with them to base," the airman said. A show of hesitation was quelled with a flow of invectives and threats. Engines were started up, wheel blocks removed and the two Britons were away.

13 Traffic Cases In County Court

Maybe the number had something to do with it, but regardless, 13 traffic cases saw eleven motorists fined for various infractions of the Highway Traffic laws in County Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today.

Charges of failing to come to a stop before entering upon a through highway brought fines and costs amounting to $7.50 in all from Robt. Giguere, No. 3 R.D., J. Hode, Trenton LAC. D. Ferguson, No 6 R.D., Albert Sanford, City, and Roy Duesberry of Trenton. Duesberry also was convicted of speeding in a restricted area and fined an additional $5.00, as was John Richardson of Cobourg. Claude Reid, of Holloway, was assessed $10 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of careless driving while W. Hindson, Trenton, paid a similar fine after being found driving without a current year's operator's licence. J. J. Morch, Belleville, was assessed $4.50, including costs, for failing to produce his driver's licence, while a second charge of not being in possession of a National Registration card was withdrawn at the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., who assured the court Mr. Morch had left his identification cards in a second motor car when halted by police on Highway No. 2 recently.

Given Nine Days

Rudy Kleinstuber, Picton market gardener, appeared on charges of dangerous driving and also of drunk driving. The accused pleaded guilty to both counts and was sentenced to nine days, to date from the time of his arrest on Oct. 8th, on the drunken driving count while on the dangerous driving charge His Worship assessed a fine of $10, while the costs amounted to $34.05. Mr. F. L. Ward, Picton barrister, appeared on the accused man's behalf.

Charges in the day's court were entered by Traffic Officers W. G. Milton, J. H. Hatch, while Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed preferred the last two charges listed.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

BATTLE FOR CONTROL OF S. WEST PACIFIC RAGES

Violent Disorders in Unoccupied France Reported

Troops Occupy Strategic Points And Blood Flows

Pressure Increased By Nazis to Get French Workers To Go to Germany

OUTBREAKS MINIMIZED

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 16 — (AP) — Violent disorders have broken out in the unoccupied zone of France as the Nazis increased their pressure to get French workers to go to Germany, dispatches to the Swiss Press reported today.

Lyons, Chambery and Annecy were mentioned as trouble centres in a dispatch to the Tribune De Lausanne, which said that, while details were lacking, it "is known that violent outbreaks occurred and that public forces (whether police, gendarmes or army units was not specified) had to intervene and that blood flowed."

This dispatch said there were unconfirmed reports "that bombs were thrown that the public forces had used weapons, chiefly hand grenades, that railway stations and other strategic points were occupied by troops."

Vichy Minimises Outbreaks

Vichy sources, however, said officials of the Laval government were minimizing the extent of the disorders and insisting that it was not yet known that bloodshed had occurred.

The outbreaks were said to have started when the Nazis posted in factories lists of workers who were asked to go to Germany. It was said they were not actually requisitioned, as has been done in Germany, but were asked to "volunteer."

At Chambery, the reports said, the railway line was tied up as workers refused to move trains. Trouble was reported also in the Lyons railway yards, while at Annecy women paraded with placards declaring, "We will not let our husbands go to Germany."

French Council Meets

(DNB, in a dispatch datelined Vichy, reported that the French ministerial council met this morning under the presidency of Chief of State Petain. It may have dealt with the disorders.)

The Lyons area in recent weeks has become a centre of dissidence within the unoccupied zone of France. It is there that the longtime mayor and former president of the Chamber of Deputies, Edouard Herriot, has been placed under "home detention" as a result of his declarations against Vichy collaborationists.

Lyons is a railway and manufacturing city, specializing in fabrics, glassware and chemical products, an inland shipping centre with miles of quays on the Rhone and Saone Rivers, and capital of Rhone Department. The population in 1936 was 570,622, making Lyons the third largest city of France, outranked by Paris and Marseille.

JAPANESE CAMP AT KISKA BOMBED

American Troops Take Over Another Island in the Andreanoff Group

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP) — An air attack on the Japanese camp at Kiska in the Aleutian Islands started many large fires and destroyed three enemy seaplanes on the water, the United States navy reported today.

The raid was carried out Wednesday by army Liberator bombers, accompanied by twin-engine Lightning fighters, a communique said. While the bombers rained incendiary bombs on the enemy camp, the fighters strafed and destroyed the Japanese seaplanes.

No enemy air opposition was encountered, but one of the army fighters was lost.

The Alaska defence command disclosed earlier today that American troops had taken over another island in the Andreanoff group of the Aleutians, in a "routine operation."

On October 11, the navy communique said, army long-range bombers dropped six tons of demolition bombs on the Kiska camp, but results were not observed. The raiders Wednesday saw three beaches and two sunken ships at Kiska, the result of previous bombings.

ATTACK ON BURMA CAN BE EXPECTED SAYS GEN. WAVELL

Returns to New Delhi After Reconnaissance Over the Battle Area

MONSOON SEASON ENDS

(By PRESTON GROVER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Delhi, India, Oct. 16 (AP)—Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander-in-chief in India, returned today from a reconnaissance of the northeast frontier under circumstances accepted here as heralding possible action to retake Burma from the Japanese.

A brief formal communique issued here said:

"His Excellency the commander-in-chief has returned to headquarters in New Delhi after a four-day inspection of forward positions on the northeast frontier. During the visit Gen. Wavell crossed the Burma frontier."

Reliable but unofficial sources indicated that Gen. Wavell gave a suggestion that an attack upon Burma could be expected.

This information, the source of which can not be identified by name, dovetailed with President Roosevelt's hint in his speech this week that the Allies could expect to begin hitting back soon.

Burma is one of the few land fronts where the Allies can hit the Axis directly and at the same time re-open the most accessible supply route to China.

British and American forces in India are restless. The soggy monsoon season has ended; good flying weather is at hand. Travel is possible over Burma trails for the first time since Gen. Sir Harold Alexander's British army and the Chinese and American staff under Lt.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell straggled out ahead of the Japanese last May.

Air reconnaissance has been intensified on both sides recently.

CAR STRIPPED OF TIRES

Delhi, Ont., Oct. 16 —(CP)— Locking his car didn't help A. J. Schram of Middleton, nine miles southwest of here. Thieves stole the machine, drove it to a deserted road and stripped it of all tirs.

A REAL ENDING TO SEASON

Brockvill, Ont., Oct. 16 —(CP)— For fisherman's luck, it's hard to beat Herman Feinberg of Syracuse, N. Y. He hooked a two- pound black bass in Alexandria Bay, the fish was swallowed immediately by a 30-pound maskinonge and Feinberg landed both.

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 16 — (CP)—Something new in fruit trees is growing in the garden of M. Kuzak here, where a leafless pear tree is blossoming and bearing fruit at the same time.

British Press Plays-Up Achievements Of Canadian Ace With RAF at Malta

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 16 (CP Cable) — British newspapers this week are giving 20-year-old PO. George Beurling of Verdun, Que., as big a play as they have given any Allied pilot of this war for his remarkable achievements as top man in the aerial defence of Malta.

This Canadian in the R.A.F. hit the front pages hard in Britain's skimpy newspapers today for his six air victories during hectic raids this week, three on Tuesday and three yesterday. His total now is 29 Axis aircraft destroyed — 27 of them over Malta.

His superior officer replied: "You're going to get it all the same."

But one of the best sidelights on this rising ace was given by a Canadian who served with Beurling before he went to Malta. This Canadian said:

"George is the most untidy R.A.F. pilot I have ever seen. His hair looks as if it's never brushed, and he is careless about his clothes. In fact he is careless about everything but flying. But what a flier!"

Beurling, then a sergeant, first came into public notice last July when he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal for destroying three bombers and damaging another in one day. The Evening Standard at that time ran a story about him in black-face type under the heading, "The Man From Verdun."

Since then he has been awarded a bar to the D.F.M. and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Newspaper writers told —of his exploits in terms they used to use for the colorful Douglas Bader, legless fighter pilot now a prisoner in Germany, and the late Paddy Finucane, Irish ace who became a legend in Britain before a chance shot brought him down off the coast of France.

The air reported of the Evening Stadnard predicts in a lengthy article that if the Axis air offensive over Malta is maintained for a few more days, Beurling may pass the mark of 35 enemy planes destroyed by Wing-Cmdr. A. G. Malan, a South African who holds top score in the R.A.F.

British pilots have nicknamed Beurling "Skewball"—a nickname for which Canadians here have not been able to find a "translation."

COLOGNE RAIDED BY STRONG FORCE OF RAF BOMBERS

Several Squadrons Of R. C. A. F. Aircraft Included in Attack On Rhineland

18 BOMBERS MISSING

London, Oct. 16 — (CP) — Britain's biggest bombs fell in crushing weight on Cologne last night from a raiding force of hundreds of great four-motored bombers after the R. A. F. had ignored the blackened Rhineland city in the 4 1-2 months since it was made the target of history's first thousand-plane raid.

The industrial Rhineland—Germany's "bomb alley"—was the general target of the assault, probably one of the largest against the Nazi homeland in weeks. Four squadrons of Royal Canadian Air Force bombers took part in the attack.

Cologne Focus of Assault

3 Canadian Bombers Lost

Three Canadian bombers failed to return, R.C.A.F. headquarters announced in a communique. It was the first time Canadian air losses in the European theatre were announced separately, and it was not known whether the practice will be continued.

The communique also reported Canadian fighter aircraft carried out offensive patrols over enemy-occupied territory during the night.

Cologne apparently was the focus of the night bomber assault which, the German radio said, hit widely scattered centres.

The R.A.F. lost 18 planes in the night attack. (Presumably this figure included the three Canadian planes announced as lost by R.C.A.F. headquarters.)

Cologne apparently was the focus of the assault which, the German radio said, hit widely-scattered centres.

The R. A. F. lost 18 planes in the night attack.

"Block busters" — devastating two-ton bombs — were dropped on selected targets in the whole area and some of the biggest were saved for Cologne, attacked for the 110th recorded time and the first since a great area of it was pulverized by an air force of 1,130 planes on the night of May 30.

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, (CP Cable)—Crews of four R.C.A.F. squadrons who took part in Thursday night's R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. attack on Cologne reported that great fires were visible for a long time after they left the target area. Some blazes could be seen almost from The Netherlands coast by the returning bombers.

Early arrivals over the Rhurland city encountered little opposition from anti-aircraft or searchlights, and Sgt. A. H. Taylor, 29-year-old gold miner from Kirkland Lake, Ont., who is a rear-gunner in a Wellington, said: "I think they

Two British Subs Sink 3 Axis Ships, Damage 4 In the Mediterranean

London, Oct. 16. (CP)—Two British submarines have sunk three Axis Supply ships and damaged four others in the Mediterranean, the Admiralty announced today.

This disclosure, coupled with the Axis aerial siege of Malta, strengthened Allied suspicions that the attacks on Britain's Island Air base athwart the supply route from Europe to North Africa were to cover new shipments of reinforcements and material for enemy armies in Egypt.

The Admiralty Communique located at least one of the sinkings off the coast of Libya and described all as the result of operations "against enemy sea communications".

Another torpedoed enemy supply ship, it said, was hit after it had gone around on the Southern Italian coast after being bombed by the R.A.F.

AIR POWER PLAYS LEADING ROLE IN PACIFIC WAR

Statement Supported by Record of Action in Different Battles

MUST HAVE SUPPORT

By WALTER B. CLAUSEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 16 (AP)—Air power is playing a leading role in the war in the Pacific—a statement amply supported by the record of action in the Coral Sea battle, at Midway and in the Solomons.

Those directing American military operations agree that sky forces have been Japan's key to success, and that her chief failures have been recorded when she encountered superior air power.

These leaders, however, emphasize that aviation must have the support of other branches of the armed forces to prove effective.

The current operations in the Solomons present a clear illustration. Army and navy air forces at Guadalcanal are receiving the active co-operation of all the services —the ships and transports of the navy, the marines, the army and crews trained in the work of construction and repair.

In these operations the most difficult problem is one of supply. Holding what already has been won requires considerable land forces, for the thick jungles of the Solomons offer cover in which enemy forces may lurk for months, and mopping up is a slow process.

All the munitions, food and fuel for land forces must be brought in from outside, for there is none to be found in the island except what may be captured from the Japanese.

Japan, having developed the Mandated Islands just north of the Solomons during the last 20 years, has the advantage in the battle of supply lines, for she already has the bases from which to operate close at hand.

Military leaders say these island bases must be the targets of concentrated attacks just as the ships which ply between them. The Japanese are giving these bases and their shipping as much air and naval protection as is in their power while striking back at supply lines.

Aussies Drive Toward Kokoda

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 16 —(CP)— Allied forces driving toward the Japanese base at Kokoda, New Guinea, are maintaining strong pressure upon the enemy in the Templetons Crossing area on the northern side of the Owen Stanley range, warfront dispatches said today.

Reports are lacking of any further Allied advance but the Melbourne Herald's correspondent at the front said the drive is being "delayed more than halted" by suddenly-encountered Japanese resistance.

Havocs and Airocobras supporting Allied ground forces strafed and bombed Japanese positions yesterday around Templetons Crossing.

QUINTUPLETS TO PARTICIPATE

Toronto, Oct. 16 — (CP) — The Dionne Quintuplets will come to Toronto to participate in a series of six Victory Loan rallies Sept. 26, 27 and 28, it was announced today by Harold Fry and Ivor Lewis joint chairmen of the Toronto Publicity Committee for the Thrid Victory Loan.

The Quints will be accompanied by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, as well as several other members of the Dionne family.

MALTA DEFENDERS TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF AXIS PLANES

14 Shot Down Thursday Bringing Total to 95 Since Sunday

QUEBEC PILOT SAFE

Cairo, Oct. 16 (AP) — The defenders of Malta shot down 14 Axis planes in daylight yesterday as the enemy continued to batter at that island stronghold in the central Mediterranean, a British communique announced today. Three of the Nazi planes were destroyed by the Canadian ace, PO. George Beurling of Verdun, Que., who himself had to parachute from a damaged plane. He was rescued.

Four British Spitfires were lost in the action which brought the total of enemy planes destroyed over Malta since Sunday to 95.

The communique said still another German Junkers plane was shot down into the sea south of Crete, and announced the loss of two more British aircraft over the Egyptian coast.

Tobruk Raided

British aerial activities in this zone included attacks on Axis transport columns by fighter bombers yesterday and raids the previous night by medium bombers on Tobruk, Sidi Haneish and Salum.

Operations on the Egyptian land front were reported limited to patrol activity.

Beurling escaped with only a wetting in his jump from his riddled Spitfire. His three enemy planes yesterday, coming after 3 others on Tuesday, brought his total to 29—all but two of them shot down over or near Malta.

The Germans and Italians sent both bombers and fighter-bombers on sweeps over the island but damage was described as negligible.

Nazis Execute About 500 Serbs

London, Oct. 16 —(CP)— Balkan sources said today the Germans had executed about 500 Serbs charged with participation in a new insurrection against the Nazi conquerors of Yugoslavia and that occupation forces recently have been increased in the turbulent country.

These sources reiterated reports of the arrest of Dr. Vladimir Macek, Croat Peasant Party leader. They said Macek had been placed under German Blackshirt guard as the aftermath of a revolt by several thousand members of his party against the Pavelic regime.

Other Balkan sources said anti-Axis feeling was spreading also in Rumania because of the transfer to the Russian front of several additional divisions which, they said, Rumania had been promised that she could keep at home to guard the country's frontiers.

ONLY 25-CENT REWARD

London, Ont., Oct. 16 — (CP) — Harold Davies found a purse containing $610 in the back seat of his taxicab and he held the money for a claimant. A woman telephoned and identified the purse, rushed to Davies' office in a rival firm's cab —and gave him a 25-cent reward.

DEER COMMON AT LYNDHURST

Lyndhurst, Ont., Oct. 16 — (CP) —Deer have become a common sight here, but now bears have invaded this Leeds county district. George Day of Lyndhurst was almost as surprised as the bear, when it dashed across the Short Point Road in front of his car.

NAZIS ADVANCE DANGEROUSLY IN SOVIET DEFENCES

Renew Once — Stalemated Offensive On One-Mile Sector In City's Suburbs

USING LARGE FORCES

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 16 — (AP) — The defenders of Stalingrad retreated to new positions under cover of early-morning darkness today and with their backs to the broad Volga were reported making a new and stubborn stand against a desperate German effort to hack a path to the river.

Two infantry divisions paced by 100 tanks and supported by 500 planes formed the spearhead with which Germans hoped at all costs to split Stalingrad's defences.

The attackers had penetrated dangerously into the Russian defences in a one-mile-wide sector of the northern suburbs in this renewal of the offensive after several days of stalemate and the army newspaper, Red Star, said "The vile enemy aims to capture the city at any cost."

(By German claims the victory envisaged by the attackers—a broad salient to the river — had been won. German reports asserted the attackers had reached the Volga on a two-mile front after capturing the Czerzhinsky Tractor Works Thursday.)

The battle of Stalingrad, like the long struggle for Sevastopol in the Crimea, had disrupted the Germans' offensive schedule.

MOSCOW, Oct. 16 — (AP) — German armor and infantrymen dug dangerously into Russian defences on a one-mile-wide sector of Stalingrad's northern suburbs today in a renewal of their once-stalemated offensive and the newspaper Red Star said "The vile enemy aims to capture the city at any cost."

Possession of a factory settlement was the immediate issue. Dispatches said the main struggle raged "several kilometres deep" within the settlement, with garrison forces pitted against the onslaughts of two infantry divisions and 100 tanks. The Nazi corps, plane-supported, was less than half the size of the offensive force used last week, but more men could scarcely be packed profitably into the narrow salient.

Petain Warned Against Nazi Military Aid

London Oct. 16 (CP)—The Daily Mail in a Madrid despatch said today that reports from Vichy received in the Spanish capital declared General Maxime Weygand and General Henri Giraud had called on Marshal Petain to protest against Paris press agitation for acceptance of German military aid against a purportedly impending Allied attack on Africa.

Weygand, commander of French forces in North Africa, and Giraud, a former German captive who escaped from his quarters and returned to Unoccupied France, were reported to have told the Marshal that the French Army in Africa would not stand for such "co-operation."

Hamilton Man Invents New Type Of Armor Plate to Protect Soldiers

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 16 (CP)—A Hamilton man has invented and a local company has developed a new type of armor plate behind a shield of which, a fraction of an inch thick, one could approach with impunity to within short range of a machine-gun firing .45 calibre bullets.

Lleo V. Sullican, whose process transforms the cheapest grade of steel into plate that has already been tested by the United States Army Ordnance Corps, states an option has been taken by one of the major corps, steel plants and it is on the border of being manufactured.

Canadian and U.S. steel and munitions experts saw firing tests of the new armor plate last Monday, when Sgt. Arthur Catterall of the Hamilton civic guard fired machine-gun bullets that only dented the armor. The bullets did not spatter or fly off the plate but dropped harmlessly to the ground.

Showdown Is Near For Prized Air Base On Guadalcanal Is.

Stepped-Up Aerial And Naval Action Seen Throughout Battle-Inflamed Area

BUKA BOMBED

By JOHN WIGGINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 16 — (AP) — The struggle for control of the Southwest Pacific see-sawed in thunderous spurts around the Solomon Islands today as strengthened American and Japanese forces strove for knockout blows.

Stepped-up aerial and naval action throughout the whole battle-inflamed area bolstered likelihood that a showdown is near for possession of the pivotal Guadalcanal Island and its prized airbase captured more than two months ago by United States Marines.

Within the last 24 hours, the Navy reported last night, Japanese bombers have blasted at the flying field, following an earlier bombardment from the sea by an enemy armada that included battleships, cruisers and destroyers.

Strong Fleet Operating

Near Savo Island, scene of recent Japanese and American naval battles at the approaches to the enemy-held northern portion of Guadalcanal, a strong Nipponese fleet was operating, the navy said.

A Japanese naval vessel, believed to be a submarine, also shelled Espiritu Santo Island the night of Oct. 14-15. The island, site of an American airbase, is 450 miles southeast of Guadalcanal.

While the struggle between reinforced Japanese and American troops developed on Guadalcanal, Allied bombers continued a two-pronged offensive from United States airfields and Allied Australian headquarters.

Army Flying Fortresses splashed explosives on the airfield and shore installations at Buka, Japanese base about 375 nautical miles northwest of Guadalcanal, wrecking or damaging 10 enemy bombers and fighters.

Six more Japanese fighter planes were shot down at the enemy base on the southeast coast of Bougainville Island, and two enemy cargo ships were damaged on Oct. 12.

Lighter Cruiser Damaged

At the small island of Fa[illegible] off the southern tip of Bougainville, Allied headquarters announced last night (Friday, Australian time) that Allied bombers seriously damaged a Japanese light cruiser.

COUPLE CONFESS TO KIDNAPPING

Four-Year-Old Child Taken Off Street and Promised 'New Doll'

Red Bluff, Calif., Oct. 16 (AP)—Four-year-old Vivian Miller waited in Grants Pass, Ore., for her "real Daddy" today as police at Red Bluff held Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont Du Bois of Portland, Ore., who confessed they kidnapped the girl. Du Bois was quoted as saying he had always wanted a child of his own.

Vivian was found unharmed in a Grants Pass school yesterday. Almost simultaneously—though it did not become known for some time—Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont B. Du Bois were arrested near here for questioning. Several hours later Du Bois dictated a brief statement confessing the kidnapping, said Sheriff James Froome. Both he and his wife signed it.

In San Francisco, Mrs. Louise Miller, the child's mother, cried for joy when informed Vivian was safe. Later she talked by telephone with Vivian in Grants Pass.

"Thank God, she's well," commented Morris Miller, the child's father, a shipyard worker.

Sheriff Froome said Du Bois' statement stated he picked Vivian off a San Francisco stret with the offer of a a "new dolly" and then drove to a library to get his wife.

"She asked me who the child belonged to and I said it belonged to me and my ex-wife."

Du Bois is 39, his wife 43. They were married last May.

The child told police at Grants Pass the couple who had taken her for "a long, long ride" was "my new daddy and mommy."

"My real daddy's name is Morrie and my mommy's name is Louise, but my new daddy is going to buy me a dolly," she said.

EXCESSIVE FRICTION PROBABLE CAUSE OF BLAZE IN MILL

Caused apparently through excessive friction in the grain elevator shaft, a minor fire at Cunningham's Grist Mill on Coleman Street resulted in the local fire department being called on Thursday at noon. Damage to the elevator shaft was only minor, it was reported today by firemen, who extinguished the blaze with the use of hand water pumps. Firemen ran a line of hose to the building but it was not found necessary to bring a heavy stream of water into play to extinguish the fire.

A second alarm answered by the department was to Coleman Flats where the marsh grass had in some manner become ablaze.

BRANCH OFFICE OPENED IN MARMORA

Deemed advisable in order that work in all parts of the county might be facilitated, a branch office of the provincial Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowance board will be opened in Marmora around the first of November, it has been announced by Hon. Dr. Faulkner, chairman of the board.

At present central offices of the two boards had been located in the county buildings in Belleville but the convenience of having a more central office established from which to conduct business in the central and northern parts of the county has been realized. The new headquarters in Marmora will be in charge of the present board inspectors, Miss Gertrude Gunter and Miss Anne Hurley.

AMATEUR CONTEST MARKS FOTO-NITE

After a lapse of several weeks an amateur contest marked the regular weekly Foto-Nite held at the McCarthy Theatre last evening. Guest artist of the evening was Miss Loreen Fralick who sang "Oh Johnny." There were four amateur performers, with Dorothy Gerow singing "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree" being awarded first place with Terry Adams singing "Carry On," taking second position. Other performers were Beverley Asselstine and Brock Stackhouse.

Neither of the two persons whose names were called were present at the theatre. Miss Ann Schreider, 140 Burnham Street, was called for the first offer of $175 and Mrs. J. A. Robertson, 333 Bleecker Ave., for the second offer of $75.

MAIL CARRIERS WILL COLLECT OLD RUBBER

Mail carriers of the city will cooperate with the Rubber Controller in the collection of scrap rubber from houses and offices served on their various routes. The carriers have volunteered their services and their extra duties will start immediately.

Notices to this effect were left in residences and offices of the city this week, and the carriers ask cooperation of all.

Rubber is essential to the country's war effort. It is scarce and consequently of the utmost importance that every bit of scrap rubber be salvaged so it may be converted into urgently needed raw material.

Worn-out or unused articles of rubber such as stamps, pads, ash trays, matting, sponges, etc., should be disposed of. All such articles collected will be promptly turned over to the authorized salvage depot.

CITY HALL DECORATED FOR LOAN DRIVE

The exterior of the City Hall today took on a holiday appearance with flags and red, white and blue bunting being placed into position on the walls and windows as a decorative scheme in compliance with the decision of the city fathers to dress up civic buildings for the inauguration of the Third Victory Loan scheduled to get under way next week. City firemen were supervising the placement of the decorations.

FRANKFORD ANGLER GETS 18-POUNDER

Frankford (Special) — Muscote Bay in the Bay of Quinte is apparently not the only water in the district where the big ones are to be caught. At least that is the claim of Mr. Ira Rogers of this village who on the last day of the 'lunge fishing season was successful in landing an 18-pound muskie in the Trent River.

Mr. Rogers, together with his son Wilbur and Mrs. Miles Palmer was fishing in the river a short distance above the village when the big fellow was hooked and landed after about an hour's fight. This is the second muskie for Mr. Rogers this season. He with his daughter, Mrs. Younge of Rochester, N.Y., last summer landed a 35-pounder in the same place.

Obituary

LATE MRS. HERBERT R. FOX
(Thurlow Township.)

The funeral of Mrs. Herbert R. Fox took place Thursday afternoon, Oct. 15th., from the residence of Mr. Milton Ross, 5th. concession of Thurlow Township. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Davis of Cannifton United Church, assisted by the Rev. J. McAvoy of Deseronto.

Interment was in Elmwood Cemetery and the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Davis.

The bearers were: Messrs. George Hicks, Benjamin Clarke, J. Homan, S. Homan, M. Ross and George Moorman.

MRS. FREDERICK HORNBY
(Trenton)

Following an illness that had extended over several weeks, Mrs. Frederick Hornby, 71 Murphy, St., Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, October 15. In her 33rd year, Mrs. Hornby had been a patient in the hospital since September 1st.

MRS. DANIEL CULHANE

Mrs. Daniel Culhane died at her home, 290 Albert Street, on Thursday evening, October 15th. She was apparently in good health earlier in the evening and her passing occurred suddenly as the result of a heart seizure.

The late Mrs. Culhane, who was in her 55th year was born at Read in Tyendinaga Township and prior to her marriage she was Miss Annie Naphan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Naphan. For forty years she resided in Belleville and in the regard of many friends she held a high place. Her sudden passing has brought sincere feelings of regret to those who knew her and enjoyed her friendship. In religion Mrs. Culhane was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church and in connection with the parish she was a member of the Catholic Women's League and the Altar Society.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her husband, Mr. Daniel Culhane; one daughter, Mary at home; three sons, Mr. Leo Culhane, Mr. Frank Culhane and Mr. John Culhane, all of Belleville; two sisters, Mrs. Walter Merritt, Vancouver, B.C., and Mrs. Harry Brusseau, Detroit, Mich.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Tire Theft Brings 6 Months Term In Reformatory

Clarence Rivers, 21-year-old Thomasburg farm lad, was sentenced to serve six months determinate and a further indeterminate term of three months, in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of the theft of two complete automobile wheels, tires, tubes and rims from the motor car of Ray Phillips, a neighbor, when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, in County Police Court here today. Carman Geen, 18, and an associate in the theft, was sentenced to one month in the common jail. Both lads pleaded guilty as charged.

Rivers and Geen were arrested by Chief J. C. Hayes at Tweed last Saturday night following police investigations that revealed two complete wheels, tires and all sundries, reported stolen from a car in Mr. Phillips' garage, had been found on Rivers' parked motor car in Tweed. They were charged with breaking and entering the barn of Mr. Phillips and stealing the wheels. Chief Hayes testified the wheels stolen were from the same model of a car driven by Rivers. "When I first questioned him Rivers stated he had purchased the tires, but later admitted the theft," testified Chief Hayes.

"The stealing of tires during a period of restriction is a serious offence. The only reason Rivers wanted the tires was for pleasure driving and I strongly urge a penitentiary sentence," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. He said public opinion would be adverse to any degree of leniency.

Mr. E. E. Follwell, local barrister, appeared on behalf of the accused youths and pointed out that neither had ever been in trouble before. "Rivers works a 219-acre farm for his father, who is in ill health. He was recently exempted from military service owing to his being needed on the family farm," pointed out Mr. Follwell, who urged leniency.

"This is no ordinary case. Here breaking and entering was associated with the stealing of tires and it was only through the vigilance of police that apprehension was possible. If it had been something badly needed the picture might have been different, but with tire scarcity being so acute it is a serious crime to steal such commodities at this time," pointed out Magistrate Lloyd. He sentenced Rivers to the reformatory and added that the Criminal Code provided for a maximum term for such a crime was 14 years in the penitentiary.

"This young man was merely helping a friend. He did not gain anything but doubtlessly knew better. However, he comes before this court highly recommended as a clean living youth and I would recommend a lesser sentence, say a month in the common jail," stated Mr. Donnan, when Geen appeared for sentence. His Worship readily agreed and the matter was closed.

SHOWDOWN IS

Allied ground troops, meantime, were battling the invaders in New Guinea, about midway from the Japanese base at Buna and the Allied Port Moresby base. The communique did not announce progress of the battle.

The Japanese raid on the Guadalcanal airfield was made by 27 bombers yesterday, Solomons time. The results were not reported immediately.

The navy announced, however, that three enemy transports previously reported damaged by bombs were observed to have been beached by the Japanese and still were burning yesterday.

As strengthening of marine forces by army troops on Guadalcanal was made known, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz expressed belief at Pearl Harbor that "even the Japs will agree that we have both the men and the tools for the task" in the Solomons.

Declaring, however, the task was "tremendous," the Admiral added: "It will go tougher as we go forward. The end is not yet in sight."

Merritt Portrait Presented to City

A magnificent photograph measuring three feet by four feet, of Lieutenant Colonel C. C. I. Merritt, V. C., has been presented to the City of Belleville by the Department of National Defence, Mayor Glen E. Thompson announced today.

The photograph which depicts Canada's only Victoria Cross winner in the present war, in a gay smiling posture, arrived yesterday addressed to the Mayor. It will be framed and with a copy of the citation which accompanied the award, be hung in a prominent place in the City Hall.

Lieut.-Col. Merritt won his coveted award at the now famous Battle of Dieppe, and is now a prisoner of war in Germany. He is a son-in-law of Ex Mayor Jamieson Bone of this city.

"Belleville feels honored with the presentation of this fine photograph," Mayor Thompson commented, "and in tribute to Col. Merritt's 'matchless gallantry' and to the fine boys of the Canadian Army overseas, the City Council and myself feel that it should be given a position of the greatest prominence here."

Classes in Home Nursing to Begin

Classes in Home Nursing sponsored by the Belleville Red Cross Emergency Corps will begin next Monday night at the Kiwanis Centre home of the Blood Donors' Clinic, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, commandant of the corps, announced today. Lectures will begin at eight o'clock.

During the course a series of first aid lectures will be given. This course, it is pointed out, is the same as that given by other first aid organizations, and the Red Cross Emergency Corps does not wish in any way to interfere with the work of these organizations. Persons desirous of taking lectures in first aid, can get them at any of the classes of the various organizations now given them.

The Red Cross classes will be under the supervision of Commandant Mrs. Ketcheson, Reg. N., and her assistant officer Mrs. Eric Keeler, Reg. N. Lectures and demonstrations and practical work will feature the classes and prominent physicians of the city will assist in the work. Graduates in Home Nursing will be given appropriate diplomas.

were caught asleep."

His machine went in between two groups of fires, dropping bombs which Taylor saw start two new fires.

Sgt. Gerry Lanteigne of Caraquet, N.B., a French-speaking wireless operator of the same Wellington, said fires started by early arrivals could be seen 25 minutes after he left the target. "There were some good fires going all right," he said, "though they seemed scattered."

Concentrated Fires Reported

More concentrated fires were reported by later arrivals. PO. Lloyd Parnall, 27-year-old insurance man from Lakefield, Ont., described them as "among the best fires I've ever seen."

Parnall, observer in a Wellington, said sticks of bombs were falling all over the place while he was there, and lots of fires were starting.

By the time Parnall reached the target there was intense, heavy flak and great searchlight activity—which some crews called "real fireworks."

"You could see molten metal flying around as one shell burst quite close to us," Parnall related. "We'd just made a turn when it exploded. If we had gone on a straight course for another few seconds we would have been set on fire by it. Several other bursts followed the first one and seemed to be from the same shell. Yellow, red and green stuff was showering about and you could see a lot of it was molten metal. It was like a lot of brilliantly-lighted Christmas trees rocketing around."

Dropped Missiles Between Fires

Sgt. Robert Williston, bomb-aimer formerly a clerk at Edmonton, said he dropped his missiles between two lines of fire. The rear-gunner of this Wellington, Sgt. J. Aitken, 20, a student from Imperial, Sask., saw two 4,000-pounders burst in the target area. He said the "flames were ruddy, then two big red blobs seemed to grow out of built-up areas where they fell about 500 yards from each other."

WO. S. F. Gannon of Montreal, second pilot in a Halifax bomber, described the scene over the target as a "beautiful picture" and said there had been heavy activity in a 30-mile ring. The trip was "okay," he said simply.

The raid was the second trip for a crew of which PO. W. A. G. Hardy of Windsor, Ont., was navigator. His mates included Sgt. R. M. Reilley of Montreal, as bomb aimer.

"We found the trip a lot harder than to Kiel," Hardy said. "When we left fires were scattered all over the area but of course we did not start them all!"

PO. William Palmer, D.F.C., of Dundalk, Ont., and his crew was detailed to stay behind over the target to reconnoitre. While watching results of the raid his aircraft was hit by flak but damage was confined mostly to a flat tire.

Seven huge fires were burning brightly when he headed for home, Palmer reported.

Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, Moira, Fifty-Nine Years Wed

Highly esteemed residents of Huntingdon Township for the past eighty years, Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, residing one mile north of Moira Village, today celebrated the 59th anniversary of their wedding.

With only the members of the immediate family present due to the indisposition of the elderly couple, the event was quietly celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Elliott, near Tweed. Mrs. Elliott is the former Martha Thompson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson, who is in his eighty-second year, married the former Marjorie Hollinger, now eighty, at Fuller, Huntingdon Township, fifty-nine years ago today. The Rev. M. Brown was the officiating minister. The ceremony took place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hollinger, on the 4th concession of Huntingdon.

Three children were born to the union, Mrs. Elliott, and two brothers, Nelson, now in Toronto and Grant, who died in Vancouver a few years ago.

Mr. Thompson was born near Gilead and moved with his parents when he was three years old to his present home on the 6th concession where he has lived ever since. With Mrs. Thompson he is spending the winter with his daughter, Mrs. Elliott.

He is a descendant of sturdy pioneer stock and has been a farmer all his life. Neighborly qualities, friendly, amicable dispositions and other sterling characteristics of pioneer forebears earned for Mr. and Mrs. Thompson a high status of regard and esteem in their community, which they have maintained through four score years of association. Both are held in high regard not only in their own immediate district but in a wider circle of friends throughout the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are members of the United Church. Mr. Thompson has been a member of the Orange Order for several years, but never became interested in municipal affairs. He devoted practically all his time to his farming vocation.

He has been in poor health for the past years while Mrs. Thompson enjoyed good health up until the past six months when she became indisposed.

Two Local Men Given Jail Term For Brass Theft

Stanley Babcock and Harvey Schryver, both of Belleville, were sentenced to one month in the common jail after being convicted of theft before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court here today. Babcock and Schryver were charged with the theft of a quantity of brass from their employer, Abraham Safe, local junk dealer.

"This practice of stealing scrap metal from one junk dealer and selling it to a competitor is hard to stop," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"This amount of scrap may be comparatively small, but the junk dealers have to trust their employees and the vigilance of the police in such matters and it was only through good fortune that Mr. Safe recovered his goods," added His Worship before passing sentence, which he dated back to the time of their arrest on Oct. 5th. Mr. Robert Pringle, local barrister, appeared on behalf of the accused men.

Stole Bed Comforters

"Seems to run in cycles," commented Mr. Donnan when John Cole, 84 Station Street, appeared on a charge of the theft of two bed comforters, the property of Thos. Hutchinson. Again Mr. Pringle appeared for the defendant and pleaded that his client had been intoxicated when the comforters were found in his home.

"I cannot differentiate between cases," explained His Worship, as he sentenced Cole to one month after finding him guilty as charged.

A charge of vagrancy was dismissed against Alvin Richards, Belleville. "This is the man who was seen on Mr. Jenkins' premises some weeks ago," explained Mr. Donnan as he tendered no evidence.

Shipping Ring Now Functioning

Disposal arrangements for stock to be shipped through the recently organized livestock shipping ring of the Foxboro and District Farmers' Co-Operative, have now been completed with shipments of stock expected to take place in the near future, it was announced yesterday by Mr. Morley Sine, president of the organization.

Five members of the Foxboro Co-Operative, including President Morley Sine; Secretary-Treasurer Frank Tummon, and delegates E. B. Finkle, Dave Hollinger and John Frederick, visited Peterboro on Thursday to make arrangement for disposal of stock through the Canada Packers plant there. The shipping post will be situated at Foxboro.

While in Peterboro, the Foxboro Co-Operative delegates were the guests of the Peterboro Co-Operative Services, which was holding its annual convention. During the convention session problems relating to feeds and feed shortages, and livestock shipping questions were discussed, it was reported by Mr. Sine.

C.W.S.F. Raising Funds to Send Christmas Boxes

Besides carrying on their duties at drill and attending motor mechanics courses at the Collegiate Institute, members of the Canadian Women's Service Force here are finding time to raise money to send Christmas boxes to Belleville soldiers overseas, who will receive none from other sources.

Major Maloney, officer commanding, Captain Marion Harden, Lieut. Florence Walden and the other ranks of the company have received a fine reception in the sale of tickets on a blanket, which was purchased with funds generously donated by the officers and N.C.O.'s of the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment here.

A substantial sum has already been raised, and the girls are now busy packing and preparing boxes for shipment overseas. Twenty boxes at the cost of five dollars each, is the aim of the company and present indications, according to ticket sales, point to the attainment of this objective. However, there are plenty of tickets left and no one need be disappointed.

NO CRIMINAL CASES LISTED FOR ASSIZES STARTING ON MONDAY

Six cases, four of which are damage actions with counter claims, are listed for trial at the Fall Assizes of the County of Hastings before the Honourable Mr. Justice Chevrier here on Monday. No criminal cases are on the docket, Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn announced today.

The Murray versus the Board of Education civil action resulted from an injury sustained by a public school student at Queen Victoria School some time ago, while the Rawson bus line is being named defendant in a civil case that resulted following the death of a Mrs. Grigg, of this city. The plaintiffs allege that death resulted from injuries sustained when the deceased woman fell in a city bus. All other cases are the result of motor accidents, each having counter claims.

Kinsmen Double Milk Shipments To Bombed Britain

Meeting with public approval at every conceivable turn the Kinsmen National "Milk for Britain Fund" was able to double its allotted shipment of powdered milk even in the initial year of operation. In August of 1941 the National Council of Associated Kinsmen Clubs in Canada agreed to provide two million quarts of milk within a period of 12 months to be sent to the aid of "bombed babies of Britain" in their hour of need. The appeal met with instantaneous response when presented before the Canadian people with the result, that at the end of the first year of operation four million quarts of powdered milk had been sent to Great Britain and distributed in hospitals, charity institutions and homes where milk was vitally needed as the basic nourishment for little children. In their second year of operations, now in progress, the Kinsmen have guaranteed to increase their initial year's effort and send 5,000,000 quarts of powdered milk through their "Milk for Britain Fund."

Citizens of Belleville and district have helped in the provision of 35,000 quarts of milk for this worthy fund, as the Belleville Kinsmen Club has to date contributed $3,500.00 to the fund, all monies having been raised by various charity enterprises, of which their annual tag day is one of the principal means of raising money for this cause. The annual Kinsmen tag day will be held in Belleville on Saturday at which time the citizens can materially assist the "Milk for Britain" fund and always remember a dime buys a quart of milk for a "bombed baby in Britain."

Frankford Lodge Puts on Degree

Benjamin L.O.L. 274, held a very successful meeting in their lodge room on Tuesday evening when upwards of 70, which included visitors from Trenton, Point Anne, Brighton, Foxboro, Shannonville, and the Degree team from L.O.L. 240, Frankford.

Wor. Bro. W. J. Hall was in the chair.

The Frankford brethren exemplified the Orange degree and in the smartness of their work did a good deal of credit to their captain Bro. Geo. Striker and members.

Bro. John Elliot and Bros. Cecil Palmer acted as Master and Deputy Master during the initiation of candidates.

The lodge had several distinguished visitors present which included Bro. N. A. Graham organizer, Bro. H. Morrow, County Master, Bro. Miller Carl, Grand Marshal, Bro. H. B. Fetterly, Past Grand Master, Bro. B. Hinchliffe, Wallbridge, Bro. H. Spencer, Past County Master Northumberland County.

A social evening presided over by Bro. W. J. Hall followed when a light lunch was served by the ladies who assisted in no small manner to make the evening the success it was.

The chairman called upon Bro. M. Carl to introduce the guest speaker Mr. Geo. F. Stokes, M.P., South Hastings, who gave a very instructive address which was much appreciated by the company present.

A vote of thanks was accorded the speaker by Bro. H. B. Fetterly which was heartily responded too. The singing of the National Anthem brought a very pleasant evening to a close on the stroke of midnight.

Picton and District

Picton, Oct. 16—Hon. Justice Makins presided at the Supreme Court sitting for Prince Edward County here this week. He was presented with a pair of white gloves, there being no criminal cases on the docket. Three divorce cases were listed and all were granted.

Among Picton and district men who arrived overseas with the last groups were Signaller Jack Jones, R.C.A. and LAC. Arnold Cunningham R.C.A.F., also Nursing Sister Rebecca Hepburn.

Word that his son Sgt. Hans D'Aperng, R.C.A.F., overseas, has been seriously wounded, has been received by his father.

Sale of cooking apples has been hard hit as a result of the restrictions on the use of sugar, F. J. Webster, manager of Picton cold storage stated yesterday. Sales are practically at a standstill and it is especially a serious problem for the fruit grower. There is an abundant crop.

Leaves to Take Course

Paratrooper George Wright who recently returned from overseas, left this week for a month's course at Fort Benning, Ga.

Roy O. Dulmage, for ten years principal of Massassaga school, has enlisted for active service, and is stationed at No. 3A Depot, Fort Frontenac, Kingston, with the rank of Lieutenant. He was formerly with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (R.F.).

OS. Vernon Wheeler, R.C.N.V.R. has been posted to Kingston from Toronto.

Two large shipments of clothing were reported at the meeting of Sir Thomas Picton. Chapter I.O.D.E. There were 110 pieces in the bale for British bomb victims and 40 pieces for Polish relief. The sum of $50 was voted the National Fund for prisoners of war. It was decided to place winter wreaths on the graves of three airmen buried in the local cemetery, victims of a plane crash. It was also decided to establish a library for a corvette. Letters were read expressing thanks for previous shipments of clothing to Britain.

POLICE BLOTTER

Sneak thieves stole the pedals and rubber handle bar grips off a parked bicycle on Front Street Thursday night. The theft was reported by George Palmatier, Thurlow, owner of the bike.

Property Damage Results

Property damage only resulted when a motor car driven by Mrs. W. D. McLaren, Barrie, was in collision with the Public Utilities Commission truck near the intersection of McDonald Ave. and East Dundas St. Thursday at noon. The truck was being driven by Harold Arnott at the time.

John Lloyd, operator at a service station on West Bridge St., reported the theft of ten feet of water hose taken from his premises some time Thursday night.

Victory Loan Opens Monday—It's Up to Hastings County

Largest Military Parade in City's History Will Escort Commando Dagger to Cenotaph On Sunday to Officially Open Victory Loan

Great War Veterans, R.C.A.F., 34th Battery, Argylls, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and Women's Divisions Will Take Part in Colorful Ceremony; War Veterans Will Act as Special Guard of Honor for Dagger Which Will be Presented to the County of Hastings; Clergy Will Take Part in Ceremony at Cenotaph — 1,200 Expected to March in Parade Through City Streets

FOUR BANDS IN PARADE

The largest military parade in the history of the city of Belleville will swing through the main thoroughfares on Sunday afternoon to officially inaugurate the Third Victory Loan here.

It is expected that upwards of 1,200 members of the nations armed services and women's divisions will form an escorting body to the famous Commando Dagger, symbol of the Loan, which will be officially presented to the County of Hastings in a brief ceremony at the Cenotaph on Station Street.

The parade will leave the Armouries at 3 p.m. Sunday and will march to the Cenotaph where prominent members of the city clergy will assist in the ceremony.

Included in the parade will be squadrons from No. 5 I.T.S., Royal Canadian Air Force, Belleville, under Wing Commander Snetsinger; the 34th Battery, R.C.A., Captain S. A. Sword; the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank), Major B. C. Sisler; the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; the Canadian Women's Service Force, Major Maloney; a detachment of the Royal Canadian Air Force (Women's Division) and the Belleville Squadron of Air Cadets.

The Belleville Municipal Band will lead the parade on the route of march and take part in the Cenotaph ceremonies. Other bands in the parade will be the Drum and Bugle Band of No. 5 I.T.S.; the Argyll Pipe Band, and in all probability, the band of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The route of parade will be:—Leave the assembly ground at the Collegiate Institute, south on Church Street to Bridge Street, west on Bridge Street to Front Street, north on Front Street to Cenotaph.

Returning, the parade will march south along Station to corner of Church Street, south up Church Street hill to Victoria Avenue, east on Victoria Avenue to George Street, and south on George Street to Bridge Street, west to Church Street to the Collegiate campus.

Loan Starts Monday

Organization for the Victory Loan canvass for the County of Hastings is now complete. On the lower section of this page will be seen the full list of committees and their organizations.

These men, public-spirited residents of the city and county, and loyal subjects of His Majesty the King, have given their time and their efforts to the successful completion of the Third Victory Loan. They realize that a tremendous task lies ahead of them, but they are prepared to meet the job with a smile and the full powers of their endurance and efforts.

The rest of the job remains with the residents of all walks of life in Hastings County, business man, industrialist, workman, clerk, merchant, salesman, stenographer, doctor, dentist, lawyer, farmer and those who have retired from active life.

"NOTHING MATTERS NOW BUT VICTORY."

The objective for the County of Hastings has been set at $2,100,000, the same amount that was asked for in the Second Victory Loan, and which was generously oversubscribed. The city of Belleville will be asked to loan $675,000 In the last loan, this amount was exceeded. It simmers down to the fact that "we did it before—and we can do it again."

Traditionally famous for its loyalty to the Empire, its residents, descendants of the United Empire Loyalist and other rich Empire stock, Hastings County has always been to the forefront whenever an emergency that had to do with the Empire arose. Today hundreds of her sons are in the uniforms of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. They are fighting on many far-flung fronts of the Empire. Many of them have given their all that we back home may have the privilege of carrying the torch they threw to us, through the medium of our dollars.

Many of her daughters, too, have given up the comfort of their civilian lives to don the uniform of the King. Many of them are in the Canadian Women's Active Service Force, others in the uniform of the Nursing Service.

Job Will be Done

It is therefore safe to say that the task asked of the residents of Hastings County will be done as only Hastings can do it—and that is well done.

Hastings, then, must think of these lads and girls overseas; they are looking back home for help—for the planes, ships, guns, tanks, that will give them an advantage in their fight against our deadly and powerful enemy.

We may as well face the truth. We are confronted with a real and terrible danger. We've all got to help. We've got to give these boys what they need to fight with, and we can't do it unless we deny ourselves the luxuries and conveniences that not only cost money to buy but take labor to produce.

We can lose this war if we don't supply those vital war materials. Each must do his or her share. Any price we pay for freedom is not too high.

Victory will come—we are sure of that. But the price is going to be high. It means harder work on the home front; a tightening of belts from coast to coast; the saving of more money and a program of self denial so we can lend more and more money to Canada.

Investments in Victory Bonds will help give us better-trained, better-equipped soldiers, sailors and airmen in this global struggle for human justice, decency and freedom.

Canada's great resources, her minerals, her wheat fields, her forests and factories, could be put to wonderful use by the ruthless bullying boys from Germany, by the polite little yellow savages

Famous Commando Dagger Symbol Of Victory in Forthcoming Loan; Weapon Will Be Presented Here

The Commando Dagger, the proud symbol of Canada's Third Victory Loan campaign and the weapon which our Canadian soldiers carried with them to the Beaches of Dieppe, has a history. This Dagger, or fighting knife, was designed by Major W. E. Fairbairn. It is officially known as the "Fairbairn-Sykes" fighting knife and is manufactured by the historic Wilkinson Sword Company of England. The Dagger is an issue to all troops in the Commando Services.

The knife is carried in a leather sheath. It has a 6 1-2" blade, with grip, 11 1-2". The length of the sheath is 13 1-2". The width of the blade at the hilt is 7-8". It is a true dagger, a stabbing weapon with a relatively short pointed and edged blade.

In close quarters fighting there is no more deadly weapon than the Commando Dagger. The sudden flashing of a knife is frequently enough to strike fear into the opponent, causing him to lose confidence and surrender.

Major Fairbairn for the past 30 years has been connected with the Shanghai Municipal Police — the toughest police assignment in the world. To contend with the thugs and terrorists, Major Fairbairn organized and led the famous Shanghai Riot Squad and devised the system of close-combat fighting which today bears his name. Fairbairn's task was to invent a style of fighting which would enable the outnumbered constabulary to lick the Jap and other cut-throats to a standstill. It had to be better than jui-jutsu. It had to be potent with or without weapons. It had to serve every requirement of the man who could not call for help—who often had to battle several assailants, come out alive and bring in the erstwhile killers.

When war was declared Major Fairbairn was called home to England to teach his methods to Commando and parachute troops. The "Fairbairn System" is now standard instruction for the British armed forces. In his book entitled "Get Tough" Fairbairn demonstrates his system and his tricks that he calls Chinese "boxing".

During the Victory Loan campaign every advantage will be taken to publicize the Commando Dagger as a symbol of the drive. Some cities will use a large outline map of the British Isles, Germany and her conquered countries, with Berlin in large letters, in their proper location on the map. As the campaign progresses, this may well show a Commando Dagger moving from the British Isles towards Berlin. This will move by steps as subscriptions are received until finally it pierces Berlin as the objective is reached.

Other plans will be to have a large dagger fully sheathed at the start of the Loan, to be unsheathed in steps, until totally unsheathed as the objective is reached. Many other plans for using this worthy symbol will be made.

Why Does Canada Need So Much Money?

We didn't start this war—and we can't set the price of winning it—but, we must win, no matter what the cost.

In this year alone—Canada will spend over $3,300,000,000 for war—about 75c a day for every man, woman and child in the Dominion. By way of comparison—war is now costing Canada every six months as much as the cost of the four years of war from 1914 to 1918.

Adding in the costs of government at home, Canada's Budget this year amounts to $3,900,000,000.

Only $2,050,000,000 comes from Taxes.

This year Compulsory Savings will amount to less than $100 millions . . . which is only 5% of the amount that must be borrowed by the sale of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. Also, don't forget you get back your Compulsory Savings after the war, with 2% interest added.

It is expected that insurance companies, industrial corporations and other business firms will lend Canada about $600,000,000 this year. This means the rest ($1,200,000,000) must come from the voluntary savings of individual Canadians—from the millions of wage and salary earners like you and me. As much as possible of this amount must be raised through the Third Victory Loan.

Persons with larger incomes must save more than ever before—even though they're paying very high taxes For instance, a married man with an income of $7,500 a year now pays $3,270 in Income Tax and Compulsory Savings—a man with an income of $20,000 pays $11,279—a man earning $50,000 pays $34,553.

These men will be expected to buy Victory Bonds to the limit of their ability—they, too, must do their share of the job.

This isn't a war that can be won with spare change. Remember, there are millions of us—and altogether we earn over 75% of the National payroll. Individually our savings may not seem large—but, if everybody does his share, the total can reach a huge amount—and we can buy a big part of the Victory Loan.

And don't forget this Tens of thousands of families now have three or four people steadily employed. Many family incomes are now two to three times what they were before the war. Every member of these families should buy Victory Bonds.

The money you put in Victory Bonds will be paid back when the Bonds mature—in the same way as the Victory Bonds of the last war were paid off. In the meantime, you will get interest on your Bonds at the annual rate of 3%, that is, $3 for every $100 you invest.

You can always sell your Victory Bonds—or, if you prefer, you can take them to your bank and borrow money by using them as security. But, of course, Canada expects you to hang on to them "for the duration"—and only to sell in case of real necessity, such as sickness or other emergency. If this necessity arises, you'll be mighty glad to have your Victory Bonds to fall back on.

Amateur Critics Harmful

The publication last week of "An Open Letter From the Editors of Life to the People of England," by Henry Luce, publisher of Life Magazine, has raised considerable indignation on this continent and in Britain. For those who did not see the article the following quotation of the main paragraph will indicate the theme . . . If your strategists are planning a war to hold the British Empire together they will sooner or later find themselves strategizing all alone. Take this unhappy matter of the second front. In a war to hold the Empire together a second front might not be so important at this time. But in a war to assure victory for the United Nations, it does seem to be most dreadfully urgent. If you cling to the Empire at the expense of a United Nations victory you will lose the war. Because you will lose us. . . .

Notice of this type of sniping at Britain by some American publishers was taken by the Asbury Park Evening News of New Jersey. in an editorial on September twenty-second, under the heading "Assailing Our Friends." The News' editorial, in part, follows:

"Far from the lest imposing obstacle to all-out prosecution of the war is the persistence with which so many Americans assail our allies. There is no doubt of the source of this criticism. It emanates from Axis sources, which find it a most effective means of attack. But while this is understandable it is puzzling that so many patriotic citizens should succumb to enemy propaganda.

Every citizen knows the character of this criticism. It strikes at the British on the fantastic charge that the people of England are not wholeheartedly fighting the war and that they have refused to make great sacrifices. It aims similar attacks at Canada. The Russians, on the other hand, while admittedly waging a terrific war, are smeared for having failed to subscribe to our religious or political and economic views.

Fortunately the facts belie this censorious attitude. The British fought this war alone for a year. They stood alone when Russia was a passive ally of Germany. They sacrificed heavily at Dunkirk and on the streets of London and Coventry. They held tht Axis at bay until the weight of this country and of Russia could be brought to bear upon it. And still they are in the thick of the battle. British airpower has given air superiority in the west to the United Nations and the British navy continues to control the Atlantic. How close the Germans would be to our own throats were it not for British resistance can be imagined only with a shudder.

The Canadians have fought with equal determination. Their overseas force is many times larger than ours on a population basis. Witness the commando raid upon Dieppe to see how valiantly our neighbor to the north is sending her sons into the bloodiest battles.

Every American should be grateful that in this battle the British and the Russians have proved themselves valiant allies, having sacrificed longer and much more deeply than we have. Under the circumstances nothing could be more disastrous to our own purpose than falsely to criticize them by echoing the propaganda that the Axis is manufacturing in the hope that we shall employ it against our friends and thus against ourselves."

It will be seen from the foregoing that the News recognizes the part the various members of the United Nations are making and have made to the war. It administers a proper rebuke to those who belittle what has been done by Britain.

At the same time we can hardly believe that the Life article was inspired by Nazi sources for Luce has been too good a friend of the British people in the past. Nevertheless, it sounds a sour note that is regrettable at this time. It supplies ammunition for Goebbels and Co. and they will use it to their own purposes, chiefly to show that there is disunity among the Allies.

Many United States papers have criticized the Life publisher for his lack of good judgment and ask that his views be not taken too seriously. We trust, in the future, Mr. Luce will confine himself to publishing the pictorial magazine he owns, and leave editorializing to others more qualified to perceiving the facts as they are and who are not carried away by the sense of their own importance.

AH, 'TWAS SAD

The time had come for this sort of parting.

This was the end. After months of close companionship the time had come to part.

Sadly he thought of the good times they had had together when they walked to and fro in the soft summer evenings while he, silent himself, had listened to the shrill chatter of his companion.

He could still remember the scent of roses they had enjoyed in each others company. He still could feel the grasp of her hands, as she went slowly across the greensward. How silent she was when he murmured sweet nothings to her in the twilight of a summer evening. In the morning she had chattered gaily to him as she sped across the lawn in front of him.

But now it was all over. With one last lingering look he closed the door and strode swiftly away to submerge his sorrows in warm water.

Which, after all, is the proper thing to do, after greasing the lawnmower and putting it away for the winter.

"BROTHER, WHAT'S HIS ADDRESS?

A traveller who stopped at a crossroads garage in the backwoods, asked the attendant for gasoline.

"How'd you like the bombing of Tokyo?" the motorist asked.

"What bombing?" inquired the hillsman.

"Why, you know, the one the papers have been full of for a month . . ."

"Why bomb Tokyo?" persisted the other.

"There's a war on, you dope. Didn't you know that?"

The attendane shifted his chewing tobacco.

"Can't say I did, stranger."

"You didn't kn . . . Look! never mind the gasoline. Just roll me out four new tires!"

Democratic Ideals and Reality

II

New York, Oct. 16—If, ignoring other news, I continue to write about the international political situation at the moment, it is because it is the fundamental question of the whole war.

We are in the most critical moment of this war. This moment is not critical because of the military situation, which is better than we might have expected. But perhaps because it is better, an opportunity is given to groups and personalities—and even Governments — to raise questions that would not have been raised if we were in a desperate military situation. These questions involve matters of political strategy. And they reveal that the United Nations have not a common political front.

The lack of a common political front even can affect the military strategy. For a united military strategy is only possible among Allies that really trust one another.

We are not in a moment of critical danger from either the Germans or the Japanese. We are in danger of the fate that befell the builders of the Tower of Babel. That imposing structure, being built to touch the sky, fell because the workers could not speak a common language. That is a fascinating parable and warning.

Lacked Discipline of Plan

If the builders had accepted the discipline of a plan, and had set the limitations of the structure according to the means at their disposal, they could have completed the building in spite of the fact that they belonged to many different nations. But since they argued about the structure while they were building it, and set no limitations upon themselves, they built nothing at all.

The ideal of the United Nations is to build a world of freedom. But the site for such a structure already is occupied by those who are building a world of slavery. And first we have to get them off the site.

For accomplishing both purposes —getting the enemies of freedom fof the site and building the new structure — we have strictly limited means. They are the means at the disposal of Britain and the British world, China, Russia, and America. Those are enormous means—means sufficient to remove slavery from the site and erect a world of freedom.

But we are now quarrelling about the architecture of the building — before we have possession of the site. Some say we don't care for the British style—it's outmoded; others dislike the Russian style — they say, "Let the Russians build a tower of their own, but don't let them participate in our world building." There is a great deal of discussion about Oriental style—mostly by people who never have studied Oriental architecture. And, finally, there are Americans who will accept only a streamlined American skyscraper.

We can call this the fight of the idealogies among the United Nations. And the profound danger in this state of affairs is that one or another of the builders may fall into despair and decide to abandon the whole idea.

This already has happened in this war three times: At Munich, with the abandoning of the Franco-Russian alliance; at Moscow, with the signing of the Russo-German pact; and in the spring of 1940 when France abandoned the project and even—to all purposes—went over to the other builders.

Three Hordes of Termites

If we review the history of this epochal struggle, one things stands out—namely, that the Axis has won its major victories by politics. It has managed to divide and strike, thus picking off one victim after another. The breaking of the Franco-Russian pact destroyed France; and the making of the Russo-German pact almost destroyed Russia; and the breaking of any of our present alliances, or even the serious crippling of those alliances, can destroy every one of us.

There are three different hordes of termites working consciously or unconsciously for the Axis in all countries. In our own, there are the isolationists, who care for none of the alliances, and believe that America can stand alone and build her own tower in any kind of world.

There are those who strongly support the Russian and Chinese alliance but regard Britain as a conditional ally—"We'll fight with you if you do what we say."

And there are those who regard Russia as a liability instead of an asset.

Fail to See Principles.

If we argue with them, they say, "Shall we abandon our principles?" They fail to see that there are principles for winning a coalition war which are primary.

Those principles can be stated in four words: trust, honor, fidelity, humility.

And the most difficult to achieve of these is humility.

In all the babel about principles that has gone on for the last few weeks, one quiet, sensible word has been spoken by the least considered of our great allies: China. The voice of China spoke through T. V. Soong at a meeting in New York last Saturday night. Mr. Soong asked for an interallied political council — now. Such a council is the only way in which a synthesis of political aims can be achieved — and only the syntheses should be published.

We cannot fight out the enormous questions involving the leading powers of the world as though it were a Democratic-Republican election.

The Poor or Ill Behaved Child

I have spoken before of having made a physical examination of 300 boys in a reformatory and found that more than half of these boys came from broken homes, broken by death, desertion, divorce.

I have also mentioned the fact that where the mother died while the child was young, these children often became problems, behavior problems, in the home and community.

However, even where both parents are alive and well in the home, there are some children who are behavior problems.

What causes strange behavior in a child? At the last meeting of the Ontario Medical Association, Dr. Wm. A. Haroke, stated that behavior problems in children occur because the child does not fit into his surroundings. The cause may be in the child or in the surroundings.

1. Child—(a) intelligence—child may be dull or very backward, (b) physical health —may suffer from focal infection—teeth, tonsils, sinus —or from chronic or deforming illness, (c) emotional control—may be a timid, aggressive or jealous child.

2. Surroundings—(a) home—parents may lack ability to maintain discipline, may be overprotective, neglectful, or cruel. There may be friction between the parents with alcoholism, desertion or separation. There may be poverty and a poor home. The child may be an only child or may have difficulties with the other children in the family, (b) neighborhood—there may be lack of recreation and play groups, or undesirable companions, (c) school—there may be difficulties in general work or in special subjects. The child may not get along well with the other children.

As to the treatment in these cases of poor or ill behavior, Dr. Haroke states that both the parents can be learned facts regarding the child's health, ability, emotional control, the home situation, neighborhood and school record. The physician learns from the child his impressions about the home, school, and neighborhood, and get an idea of his temperament. He can make physical examination, give an intelligence test and get school report.

With the above information, the physician can try to get the child adjusted to his surroundings, keeping in mind what he has learned about the child, the home, the school and the neighborhood.

Sometimes the parents are mostly to blame. "No routine of discipline can make up for lack of courage, will-power, or emotional control on the part of the parent.

SEEING THE WORLD

They are living adventure and living great tales
On the land, in the sky, on the sea,
They are marching and riding the earth's farthest trails,
All for you and for me,
And to set the world free.

Had you heard of the Solomon Islands before
The Marines met the Japs?
Did New Guinea and Iceland mean anything more
Than strange places on maps—
Grass skirts and fur caps?

'Round the world they have gone!
On the seven seas they sail—
North, south, east and west,
Living daily what once was a magazine tale
And mere fiction at best,
Now with freedom their quest.

They have gone from their schools to strange places afar—
Desert, jungle and shore,
And these peoples and countries,
wherever they are,
When the struggle is o'er
Will be free ever more.

ENGLISH WALNUTS

More than half of the "tree nuts" grown in the United States are English walnuts.

What Americans call the English walnut the English themselves call the common walnut.

The American name refers to the fact that this species of walnut was brought over from England by the early Colonists.

But "English walnut" is really an etymological contradiction.

This species was not native to the British Isles, but to Greece, Turkey, Armenia, Afghanistan, Persia and northwestern India, and it was probably introduced into England by the Romans.

The Anglo-Saxons called it "walnut" or "foreign nut," the first syllable of the term being related to "Welsh" and originally signifying "alien."

Its very name literally brands it as non-English.

There are about ten species in the family of true walnuts.

The black walnut, prized for its fine, hard wood, and the white walnut, or butternut, are native American species.

English walnuts are rich in both protiens and fats, contain some minerals and vitamins and constitute one of nature's most concentrated foods.

The wood of this tree is used in furniture, cabinet work and gunstocks.

The husks of the nuts and the leaves of the tree are resinous and astringent and are sometimes used medicinally as well as for dying.

Europeans make walnut sugar very much as Americans make maple sugar.

Recently the U. S. Department of Agriculture designated walnuts, pecans, almonds, filberts and other tree nuts as a "Victory Food Special."

The purpose was to focus the attention of American consumers on an important food crop.

It is estimated that this year's crop amounts to 300,000,000 pounds of unshelled nuts.

English walnuts represent about half of this total, while pecans, almonds and filberts follow in that order.

Before the war virtually closed export markets the United States exported about 13,000,000 pounds of tree nuts a year.

Dieppe Padre Scoffs at Report Nazis Knew in Advance of Raid

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Oct. 16 — (CP) — Officers and men of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal who fought on the beaches of Dieppe "were afraid of nothing and nothing but bullets could stop them from doing what they had been sent out to do," Maj. Joseph Armand Sabourin, Roman Catholic Chaplain who accompanied the attackers, said.

In an interview shortly after arriving here with 16 other officers and men who took part in the raid, Maj. Sabourin said:

"I am proud that Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal were chosen to go to Dieppe. And everyone was brave and conducted himself like a true soldier. They were cunning too, and I would not be surprised if some of our boys who were taken prisoner will escape and get back to England."

Maj. Sabourin, mentioned in dispatches, would tell little of his own experiences during the raid when he went about the beach working among the wounded, consoling the dying and encouraging the fighters.

Sad at Dieppe

"It was sad at Dieppe," he said, "but the boys who went and came back are anxious to return and those who did not go are jealous of the others.

"The raid was not suicide for our boys nor was it a setback," said the Padre, whose promotion to the rank of Major was confirmed after he arrived here. Previously he had held the rank of captain and was attached to Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal only. When he returns to England — he says he's going back within a month — he will be senior chaplain of a division.

He scoffed at reports that the Germans knew in advance the raid on Dieppe was to take place.

Went in Smiling

"Sure they were waiting for us, but aren't they waiting for us wherever we might attack them? Aren't they defending their territory just as we are defending ours? We were not surprised that they met us. They gave us a good reception and we gave them a good reception — one that they will not forget.

"Our boys went into action smiling, and they did their job well. 'It is time to smile, padre,' they said as they were heading into action. They were all brave men."

Asked if he thought the price was worth the raid, Maj. Sabourin replied: "The raid was not suicide for our boys, nor was it a setback."

"You nor I cannot express an opinion on whether it was worth the price. Do you or I know how many men were at Dieppe? Do you or I know anything about the casualties? Do you or I know what was accomplished? Until we know these things how can you or I or the man on the street express a just opinion?"

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Ashley and George; Mr. Archie and Miss Martha Horton; Mr. and Mrs. W. Vandome and Mrs. W. Seeley, attended the funeral on Saturday of Mrs. George Horton of Belleville.

Mrs. M. Brad of Brighton, Mrs. A. Humphrey of Victoria, Miss Helen Brad of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hewie and Clayton of Cameron, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fargey.

Mrs. Frank Ashley, Mrs. Frank Hammond, Mrs. Sandy McCurdy, Mrs. Foster Wilson, Mrs. John Moorcroft, Mrs. V. Barragar, Mrs. Melville Reid, and Mrs. J. S. Wilson attended the Sectional Rally held at Plainfield on Wednesday.

If Your Grocer is out of
Maxwell House...

In some cases housewives asking for Maxwell House have found their grocers out of this finest of all coffees. If this should happen to you, remember that your grocer's shortage is only temporary. He will have a fresh supply within a day or two.

Now that coffee is rationed, consumers naturally want the very utmost in coffee value in return for their coupons. As a result, demands for Maxwell House are heavy. On the other hand, war conditions have made more difficult prompt delivery of supplies to your grocer. If your grocer is temporarily out of Maxwell House, do not deny your family the satisfaction of drinking this wonderful coffee. Leave your Maxwell House order for him to fill—you will not have long to wait.

No item on your grocery list is more worth waiting for than Maxwell House. It is a blend of the world's finest coffees, roasted by a special process that captures every atom of its extra flavor and full-bodied goodness. It offers you precisely correct grinds for each type of coffee maker—DRIP, and REGULAR. Sealed in a Super-Vacuum tin, it reaches you absolutely roaster-fresh. It is always:

WEDDINGS

CLARKE—McLAREN

A pretty Autumn wedding was solemnized on Saturday, October 10th., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Leslie McLaren of Corbyville, when their only daughter, Ruth Winnifred, became the bride of George Raymond Clarke, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude N. Clarke, Belleville. Rev. Wm. Sterling performed the ceremony and Miss Bernice Robinson, A.C.C.M., played the wedding music.

Ferns and Autumn flowers were used as a setting for the ceremony. The bride given in marriage by her father had chosen a floor length gown of white net and taffeta, modeled on simple lines, with finger tip veil, held by orange blossoms. She carried Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Mary McLaren, Ottawa, acted as her niece's maid of honor. She was attractively gowned in blue net with matching headdress and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses. Mr. Roy McLaren, brother of the bride was groomsman.

Mrs. McLaren received the guests wearing a brown ensemble with matching accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom's mother also received in a gown of Queen's blue, with accessories to match and a corsage of Bettertime roses.

A dainty buffet luncheon was served by friends of the bride, Mrs. E. Pascoe, Miss Jean Badgley and Mrs. C. Barlow assisted by Mrs. C. McKeene.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome cedar chest; to the maid of honor, an ivory clock; to the groomsman, a tie set and to the pianist, a hand painted picture.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke left for western points, the bride travelling in a gold crepe ensemble with a beige wool and camel hair coat, brown hat and matching accessories.

Popular Couple Feted By Stirling Friends

Stirling, (Special.) — The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hulin was the scene of a happy event on Monday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. James Hulin of Brighton, were tendered a reception dinner by the members of the groom's family followed by a social evening and shower given by the friends and neighbours. About twenty-five guests were present for the dinner party with Mr. S. A. Murphy acting as toastmaster and each of the honored guests responded to the toasts. Later in the evening guests arrived in a large number to add their good wishes. The groom, widely known throughout the district, was a member of the staff of the local branch of the Dominion Stores and has since become manager of the Cobourg Store. The bride also an employee of the same firm is manager of the Brighton store.

A program of musical numbers and brief addresses by prominent citizens climaxed with the reading of an address on behalf of the neighborhood by Mrs. Claude Tucker. Those assisting included Rev. David Gray, minister of St. Paul's United Church, who acted as chairman, S. A. Murphy, H. E. Hulin, Mr. Jakes, uncle of the bride, and Arthur Duncan, who offered several numbers. The honored couple were recipients of many useful and lovely gifts for which they expressed their gratitude. Among those present were, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hulin, Madoc, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Conley, Carrying Place, Mr. and Mrs. Jakes, Brighton, and friends from nearby centres.

Local friends of the groom tendered him an old time charivari and a dainty luncheon was served at the close of an enjoyable evening.

Brides-To-Be Are Guests of Honor At Interesting Events

Picton, (Special.)— In honor of Miss Phyllis Collier, a bride-to-be of next Wednesday, her sister, Mrs. J. N. Baille entertained at a linen shower on Wednesday evening. Baby 'mums decorated the living rooms while dahlias and marigolds were on the mantel. A fire in the grate added a note of cheer. There were thirty girl friends of the bride-to-be who spent a happy evening with contests and games. The many lovely pieces of linen were presented by little Sally Collier.

Miss Audra Lobb was winner of a memory contest while a bride-piecing contest was won by Miss Chrissie Mitchell. Mrs. L. Taylor read tea cups and Mrs. Harry Carter won the lucky cup prize.

A buffet luncheon was served, the long table in the dining room being centred with pink and white carnations, pink and white candles in silver holders, over a lace cloth. Mrs. W. Collier, mother of the bride, wearing black crepe, poured tea. The table in the breakfast room was centred with green and ivory candles over a lace cloth.

The bride-to-be was smart in turquoise blue crepe with matching accessories, while Mrs. Baille chose a blue tailored dress.

Miss Collier is to be married to Sergeant Pilot Dave C. Taylor in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, this month, at a candlelight ceremony. The bride and her attendants will all be in white.

In honor of LAC. Cyril Hillard and Miss Hilda Hagerman, who are being married tomorrow afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hodgson entertained four tables of guests at their home, Ferguson Street, Wednesday night. Bridge and Romoli formed the amusements. The popular young couple were presented with two pieces of silver as a token of the good wishes of their friends, Mr. Hodgson making a happy speech and Mrs. J. LeHeup presenting the gifts. At the social hour, the hostess was assisted by Mrs. Jesse Mason and Mrs. LeHeup. The bride-to-be was wearing a blue wool dress. Guests included other members of the bridal party.

Good Manners for Good Times

Making Errors in Public

Little do Bob and Jane know whom they disturb as they charge into their movie seats! A pair they'd like to know better—the popular, well-bred young Browns!

And right now the Browns are sighing. "What can you expect of people who don't know that the girl should enter the row first!"

Such points of etiquette are simple enough to learn. On a double date at the movies one man enters the row first, the two girls next, the other man last.

At dances—crude for a man to ask a girl, "Have you got this dance taken?" But smooth and correct is "Shall we dance this?" Nor does a well-bred girl make herself conspicuous by walking across the dance floor alone, but asks her escort to take her.

Very formal parties with a receiving line? No hesitations when you know it's proper for the girl to precede the man down the line, introduce herself and her escort to the person at the head.

Have better times, win new friends by knowing fine points of etiquette. Our 32-page booklet explains manners for movies, dancing, formal parties, other occasions. Gives pointers on introductions correct dress, good form at games.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Etiquette for Young Moderns" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 168 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Reserve a Factor Charm

Greta Garbe's reserve is a part of her charm.

By HELEN FOLLETT

GEORGE MOORE, the writer, once said that he enjoyed being with a stupid woman, he found her restful. He was a great talker.

There are different types of stupid women. The one whose company is least welcome is the one who talks about herself, her family, her affairs at great length.

We also have with us the dumb woman who is too revealing. She complains about the faults of her husband. Her listener hates that, suffers a sense of embarrassment. It doesn't get the talker far; one feels sorry for the husband, no matter what faults he may have.

Reserve is a lovely quality of charm. She who is blessed with it misunderstandings because she keeps her opinions to herself. She wuoldn't think of making a criticism of any kind. Why should she? She knows she isn't perfect.

It is just as well not to bare one's soul. There is a sort of nobility in reserve, as there is self-respect in the friendly, tolerant attitude. The whole world of men, women and children is eternally gabbing. She who sits on the sidelines, smiles sweetly and minds her own business is wise.

Beauty and charm are one fabric which is called personality. As charm is a product of ideas, manners and grace, it is an element of beauty.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girl Friend Took Her Fiance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'd been going with my boy friend for almost a year and we had talked about marriage. Then one day I introduced him to my girl chum and he fell for her. He went with her for a couple of months and seemed to forget that I existed. Then all of a sudden they broke up.

Recently my old fiance came back. He has now enlisted in the Army and expects to leave shortly. He asked me to be friends again, saying that he loves me and that the other girl meant nothing at all to him. I find my old love for him has returned and am wondering if it would be all right to take him back. I don't want to appear cheap.

Grace

If you love him and he loves you, take him back. It will make you both feel happier, especially since he is leaving for the Army and will need all the friends he can have. I hope something nice may come of your friendship.

Drama Class Cures Bashful Boy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My heart went out to your appeal from "Lonesome" for I have a son who was like that. My son is nice-looking, dresses well and is over six feet tall. But he was so bashful it was pitiful.

Someone suggested he join a drama class at night school, which he did, and it has certainly worked wonders with him and he has changed his whole outlook on life. He really is enjoying himself now. He's 24 years old.

Interested Reader

This letter will be a solution to the problems of many of my readers who write they are shy or bashful.

Another great help for bashful people is to know what's going on around you. Read the papers. This doesn't mean you'll have to talk about "deep subjects", which you don't understand, but it will help you talk about things in which the other person is interested.

Mother Approves Older Men

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The man who has been taking me out for the past few months is much older than I am. Mother thinks he's just the man for me to marry, but he doesn't like things I like, such as dancing, movies, and fun of all kinds. He's too dignified. I want somebody nearer my own age.

Not long ago I met a soldier at a dance at one of the nearby camps, and I have been out there more than once to see him at these dances. He wants to come to my house and visit me, but I'm afraid if I ask my mother's permission to go out with him, she'll surely refuse. Do you think I should ask her? This boy likes all the thinks I like, is nearer my age. I want so much to go with him while he's here. And after the war, who knows?

Wondering

An older man who hasn't the same tastes or ideas as you, doesn't seem a very "safe risk" to me, although he is your mother's choice. If you're of age and old enough to earn your own living, you are in a position to tell her frankly of your preference for the younger man. In any case, there's no harm in talking it over with her.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

28th Wedding Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My parents will celebrate their 28th wedding anniversary next month. Will you please tell me what is the appropriate kind of gift for this anniversary?

Thomas R.

There is no special kind of gift for the 28th wedding anniversary. Anything that will be welcomed by and useful to both your mother and father will be appropriate. As a matter of fact, eople don't pay much attention these days to the special symbols for wedding anniversary gifts . . . . instead, they wisely give gifts that they consider will be most welcomed by the couple. This is the general custom, even with such important anniversaries as the Twenty-fifth and the Golden Wedding.

Bride's Questions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—Does the bride take off her bridal veil at the reception? If so, when should she do this?

2.—Who supplies the corsages for my two sisters, my sisters-in-law, and my fiance's sisters and sisters-in-laws? The wedding reception is at seven o'clock, and they are wearing dinner gowns.

3.—My wedding gifts are beginning to arrive. Am I supposed to mail thank-you notes immediately after receiving the gifts, or may I wait until after I return from our honeymoon?

A. R.

1.—No, the bride does not take off her bridal veil until after she has left the reception to change to her traveling-costume.

2.—The bridegroom is expected to send a corsage to his bride's mother and to his own mother. Other relatives in both families buy their own corsages, if they choose to wear corsages.

3.—The thoughtful bride-to-be writes a thank-you note as soon as she possibly can after each wedding present is received.

The bride-to-be who waits to write her thank-you notes until after she has returned from her wedding trip shows a woeful lack of good manners and of appreciation. Remember, too, that prompt thank-you notes are easier to write while the glow of enthusiasm and appreciation is bright.

Acknowledgment Tip

It's unforgiveably rude and thoughtless not to reply at once to an invitation, formal or informal. The hostess is being kind to you to invite you to a party; you are being most unkind to her not to let her know immediately whether you accept or regret. She has plans to make.

HEALTH CHATS

Diet Important When Patient Has Fever

Not many years ago diet was considered of secondary importance during many kinds of illness. Today the properly balanced diet is an essential part of the treatment of many conditions, not the least of which are those producing fever.

Although a patient has fever, he still requires food to maintain his strength. In fact, during fever many of the activities of the body are speeded up and certain kinds of food become especially necessary. During fever the amount of protein destroyed in the body is about three times as great as normal. If, in addition, there are symptoms of toxemia or poisoning, the metabolism is increased to an even greater extent. When there is no toxemia, the fever interferes but slightly with digestion and the use of foods by the body.

Loss of appetite is a very definite symptom of fever. The patient is rarely desirious of food, but if he is fed regularly he will not, as a rule, refuse his food and sooner or later he begins to be hungry and takes his meals when they are offered to him. As to fever continues, small regular additions may be made to the diet.

There are other factors concerned with the diet during fever which require attention. The patient's month must be kept clean. An unpleasant taste in the mouth may very easily be transferred to the food. Until recovery is approaching, the meals may well be given at three-hour intervals. As a rule, if the patient must be awakened to be fed, he will quickly fall asleep right after eating.

When the fever is quite high, giving the patient a bath at a temperature of 80 to 90 degrees or a lukewarm sponge bath will soothe him and improve the circulation and digestion. These sponge baths often have a good effect on the appetite.

During the early period of recovery, and particularly when the patient has not been given enough food, his appetite may become extreme. There is then a tendency to overeat, which may produce indigestion. Pain in the abdomen and vomiting may develop.

Of course, water is a vitally important substance in the diet of the patient with continued fever. Plain cool water is the most aceeptable form. Not enough water my lead to vomiting, damage to the kidneys and diarrhoea and if not enough fluids are obtained, the outcome may be fatal. Even though a patient is unconscious or delirious he must not be deprived of water. Nowadays fluids are given by injection under the skin.

Some persons have the idea that giving protein during a fever will make the fever worse. Protein, including such foods as meat, milk and eggs, which provide a liberal amount of protein, will not increase the temperature nor injure the kidneys.

During fever, many patients are able to take a diet which contains from 50 to 100 per cent more heat value than is considered necessary during good health. Of course, when a patient has fever the physician will outline the exact diet to be used and it is well to follow his advice and not to be guided by custom or by the advice of the neighbors.

BAYSIDE W.M.S.

The Bayside Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. D. L. Moore on Wednesday, October 7, with ten members present. Mrs. Geo. Bush presiding opened the meeting with the theme "Building a Community of Christian Homes". A hymn was partly read by Mrs. R. Jeffery and the remainder was sung.

Mrs. C. Rush led the devotional period. A hymn of prayer was sung. Prayer was given by Mrs. Jeffery, Mrs. Mellow and Mrs. Paice.

A chapter of the Study Book was given by Mrs. Mellow and was very interesting.

Plans were made to have a White Gift service at the next Mission Band and a quilt will be made and all will be sent to Battle River hospital where Miss Elsie Hunt is stationed.

The Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting and the hostess served a dainty lunch.

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The October meeting of Plainfield W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. R. Wilder with twenty-seven present. Mrs. McKenzie and Mrs. Hazard were selected as delegates to the Area convention.

Knitting and sewing were handed out for war work. Mrs. C. Marshall and Mrs. E. Denyes were appointed as leaders for Girls' Work at Stirling. Mrs. Meeks led in community singing and roll call was answered by "Don'ts for the Baby".

Letters were read from the boys overseas who had received boxes of chocolates from the Institute. Mrs. Simmons, social welfare convener, then took charge of meeting. A reading "A Happy Farmerette" was given by Mrs. Violet Elliott. Mrs. McKenzie gave a splendid paper on "Infantile Paralysis".

Mrs. Simmons gave a short talk explaining where Social Welfare first started in our Institute. Mrs. Harrison explained where obligations lay in regards to Social Welfare in the W.I. It was decided to send Christmas boxes to all local boys overseas this month. Meeting closed with "A Prayer In Time of Peace". Collection $1.25. Two new members joined. A delicious lunch was then served by the hostess and helpers with Mrs. McKenzie pouring tea.

Raid Enlightening, Necessary Perliminary to Forthcoming Permanent Landing Report

By JACK BRAYLEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Oct. 16 — (CP) — His arm in a sling and a D. S. O. ribbon pinned to his chest, tall Lt.-Col. Dollard Menard of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal strode into a hotel leading a party of 17 battle-scarred Dieppe raiders and told of that bloody fight which he described as "the enlightening and necessary preliminary to the forthcoming permanent landing."

Under a constant barrage of photographers flash bulbs and while news-reels whirred and shutters clicked, Col. Menard and other members of his party told 50 newsmen, conducting a mass interview, that:

1. Dieppe was necessary;
2. German prisoners were treated honorably;
3. Security precautions leading up to the raid were excellent;
4. The raid accomplished its object;
5. Our tanks, planes and naval craft timed their operations effectively and efficiently;
6. The men are ready to go back tomorrow and finish the job.

The interview was conducted in a big lobby of the hotel after the party, which arrived earlier from an East Coast United States port, had breakfasted.

Most of Men Shy

Most of them shy, all of them bearing scars of the tough fight, they told their stories with hesitation until asked about the treatment of German prisoners. Then they strongly reiterated the statements of other returning Dieppe men that, contrary to German charges, prisoners were treated — as Col. Menard put it—"honorably and in the case of wounded with great kindness."

"Our men, before the battle, were 'briefed' on the subject of treatment of prisoners," Col. Menard said. "They were told there must be no brutality or unkindness and German wounded must be taken care of where it was at all possible. I watched those orders being carried out."

He had talked with one German prisoner — a young Pole who told him he had been forced into an "occupation unit" of the German army by threat of imprisonment or even death. This suggested the Germans might be using an infiltration of foreign reinforcements to make up for their Russian losses. "That chap was pretty glad to get into our hands and so were the rest — German or non-German", the officer said.

Germans Not Shackled

Col. Menard, whose D. S. O. citation says he continued to lead his men even after he had been wounded five times, laughed derisively at the German suggestion that German prisoners were shackled.

"What the hell would we use to shackle or even bind them," he declared. "We don't play it that way and naturally we didn't take excess equipment along on that jaunt. Anyhow we certainly wouldn't have needed to use it. The Germans I saw were pretty docile fellows, who looked a bit emaciated and very fed up with the whole business. It was not necessary to tie them up because they showed no fight."

He thought the security precautions leading to the Dieppe raid had been "excellent." He added: "I am sure that if it had not been for the chance encounter of German patrol boats with the units cruising in on the left flank we would have taken the whole works by surprise. As it was we got a lot on the right flang and right centre out of bed."

What of his own men? The young Colonel's eyes glinted and his voice changed as he said movingly: — "They were magnificent, simply magnificent." His men were "tough" and "they have a complete disregard for Hitler's supermen and are ready to go back to finish the job whenever it is necessary.'

Protecting Blanket Perfect

He said the protective air blanket over the raiding force was "perfect" and that the off-shore shelling by the navy and later their daring runs in and out of the beaches with complete disregard for enemy fire deserved the highest praise.

Cpl. J. A. Gregory of Calgary, Alta., quiet, soft-spoken member of the South Saskatchewan regiment that penetrated into Dieppe for two miles—the farthest point reached by any unit—also had a word to say about prisoner treatment. He captured seven along the route and "found them pretty quiet lads who held up their arms and came along without trouble. We gave them some cigarets and then put them to work as stretcher-bearers picking up their own and our wounded. They worked willingly and were glad of our "fags".

He last saw his gallant "O.C"—Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt, V.C., of Vancouver—leading a party of men forward, to organize an advance post designed to fight the rear-guard action when the Canadians withdrew.

"I watched him running along the road in the direction of the enemy fire. It wasn't worrying him. All he was worried about was providing good cover for our withdrawal. We all hoped he'd get away although we knew he would be the last to leave. We were glad to learn he was still alive, even though he is a prisoner".

Taken By Surprise

The stubby corporal, who lost an eye and received other wounds, said his right flank unit had taken the German defenders completely by surprise. "They obviously had no wind of our approach for we saw a couple of German officers poke their heads out of a window to look us over and noticed they still had shaving soap on their faces. We captured one of these officers and he was not fully dressed".

After charging through the shell-ridden two miles to his regiment's objective, Corporal Gregory said he found he was still uninjured. He got back to the beach "and I looked around for some wood to touch as I figgered I'd been pretty lucky. But just then a sniper's bullet ricochetted off the iron side of a landing craft and took my left eye. Later I was struck by shrapnel".

But he still thinks he was fortunate: "You see I was lucky enough to see action in the raid and the rest of the army who had to stay home would have traded places with me. . . Eye or no".

Received Well By French

Cpl. Gregory said he wouldn't like to say too much about how the Canadians were received by the French people. "I understand reprisals have already been taken against them and I wouldn't like to add to their trouoles by anything I say".

He did say, however, that he came upon an old French lady crying. He told her not to worry she wouldn't be injured if she kept indoors. "She retorted pretty sharply she wasn't afraid of being injured. The only thing that was making her cry was the BBC broadcast and our leaflets telling the residents it was only a raid and not a permanent landing".

He said the Canadian "cleaning up" operations had been hampered by the cautious German billeting system. It was a staggered arrangement with every other house containing soldiers and the remainder containing only civilians. "This meant we couldn't shoot through doors for fear of hitting Frenchmen and the Germans on the other hand could shoot us down if we withheld our fire while we investigated whether a house contained soldiers or civilians".

He described his entrance into one house where two German soldiers had apparently been having an all night drinking bout with some girls. He crashed open the door with the butt of his rifle and the slightly-drunken Germans, their clothes rumpled, wobbled to their feet and gave him a smart salute apparently mistaking him for a German officer in the half-light of early dawn.

"I took them along", he said.

Making Up For Lost Time

Gnr. Hank Rowe, M.M., Royal Canadian Artillery man from Victoria, was sent to Dieppe with others to get a complete German "Ack-Ack" gun of a certain type because the British General staff wanted to have a look at its sighting mechanism which was supposed to "be pretty hot".

And here the big, six foot three inch basketballer who played on the Dominion Champion Dominoe team of 1938-1939, chuckled.

"I was in that left flank outfit that had the chance encounter with the E-boat patrol and naturally the Germans, warned of our approach, gave us hell", he said. "So, instead of taking back an "Ack-Ack" gun—a thing we all had our hearts set on doing—I got back to England in my underwear and a blanket".

A barrage of shrapnel had given him minor wounds and torn his clothing. Before he was placed on board a destroyer, three smaller craft had sunk under him and in the subsequent struggles in the water he lost or cut off most of his clothing. "A big English sailor grabbed me out of the water the last time, told me cheerily I was indecent and gave me a blanket. That's the way I arrived back in England".

His only complaint was that one piece of shrapnel lodged in his jaw near his ear and "made eating uncomfortable for quite a while. However, I'm going to make up for it now".

WHERE EVEN CAMELS NEVER TROD!

"Dick" McMillan who has served as war correspondent for BUP on many fronts. He has earned the reputation of being one of the most accurate and prophetic reporters of the war.

—"In a cruel, fantastic land where you feel you are in another world, resembling the mountains of the moon"

by RICHARD D. McMILLAN

British United Press Correspondent In the Middle East.

With the Eighth British Army in the Libyan Desert (By Cable)—Lusting for power over all the southern valley of the Nile and the desert beyond, Persian King Cambyses once sent an army to extend his sway over the Siwa Oasis. His army never was seen again. It was swallowed up in the desert sands without trace.

In the campaign of 1917 against Senussi tribesmen, a British patrol followed in the footsteps of King Cambyses' warriors. But its cars were ill-equipped to conquer the uncharted sands and broke down. The men of the gallant patrol died of thirst.

Now, after two years of war, the British Eighth army not only has mastered the desert, but it has turned forbidding wastes into a network of highways—byways as familiar to the desert troops as a London bus route. The men who mapped the desert had the heart of Empire in mind, and names like Knightsbridge appear on remote signposts where British history is being relived.

Many miracles of the desert are now accepted as commonplace, but one miracle still stands out. I've travelled 50,000 miles over the desert and I have marvelled at the stamina of our motor transports. I've ridden a Canadian-built Chevrolet and seen it take the terrific beating only the desert can give.

I would like to see the Canadian workers who built her. I would like them to see how this car could take it—in the dash out of Tobruk, shells and bombs bursting all around, and sprayed with machine gun bullets as she sped along, out into Cyrenaica and to Mekili, and up and down the Gazala line. Every inch of the way you hit a boulder or a wheel dropped into a drift of sand. She was waiting outside Bir Hakeim where we watched Rommel's Africa Corps hammering against a desert fort. She passed through Libyan wire entanglements beyond the Omars where even camels never trod—down south where the sun really gets molten and you spend half your time digging out of the sands and the other half blowing your breath on the radiator, the only air you can find in this burning cauldron.

I have watched convoys of Canadian-built trucks rumbling across the desert under the Stuka dive-bombers and the rain of shells from long range German artillery, but still carrying forward the sinews of war to the troops in the front line.

The Libyan dust makes you look like a vaudeville comedian and makes you feel—well you want to lie down under the lash of a sandstorm and die—but those drivers take a gulp of tepid water, fight on, and their trusty trucks never let them down.

On an Axis street near El Adem, I have watched a convoy of tank transporters negotiate a stiff escarpment. A desert Khamseen was blowing, making the desert like a London blackout. I called it a day, but not those lads. They ploughed through the packed dust and crawled up the escarpment, hauling General Grants and General Lees, like steel mastodons, to the front.

It is hard going in the desert, but many times a truck got me there. One even got me there along the Qattara depression where you feel you are in another world, resembling the mountains of the moon. It's the ideal desert vehicle.

The Eighth Army needs guns and tanks and planes, but it also needs the right kind of vehicles. So workers of Canada, if you have more to spare, send them over! Send them soon! Then maybe we'll get to Tripoli and drive down the Victory road—through Italy.

"I would like to see the Canadian workers who built these trucks. I would like them to see how these cars can take it. The Eighth Army needs guns and tanks and planes, but it also needs the right kind of vehicles. So, workers of Canada, if you have more to spare send them over! Send them over soon! Then maybe we'll get to Tripoli and drive down the Victory Road—through Italy!" . . . McMillan.

● This direct cable from the famous British United Press correspondent with the Eighth British Army in Libya explains why our fighting men all around the world are clamouring for vehicles built in Canada. Modern military strategy demands their use in overpowering numbers, regardless of transport conditions in the bad lands of every continent. Thousands of these vehicles, we are proud to say, are built in the plants and shops of General Motors of Canada, where men and women stand devotedly to their tasks, for . . . VICTORY IS THEIR BUSINESS!

Canadian Army Men Behind Fighting Men Taking Stiff Assault Drill

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Oct. 16—(CP) — The Canadian Army's men behind the fighting men — battle-dressed members of supply and ammunition companies, members of transport and petrol companies, engineers and ambulancemen — are taking the same stiff assault drill as the troops upon whose success their work depends.

They put on a demonstration of the hard-hitting tactics they had learned in four weeks' schooling in assault and Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, one divisional commander and the commanders of their units were among spectators who saw what they could do.

They landed in two waves on a rocky beach on the South coast, scaled a 40-foot cliff and were away out to sea again 20 minutes later after having destroyed a theoretical radiolocation plant.

The men were led ashore by Lieut. W. Pell of Newcastle, N. B., and Lieut. W. Allen, Toronto, who splashed into the water as the boats neared the narrow beach and guided them through the mock raid.

The raiders dashed across the beach through the midst of the spectators, who included officers of the Royal Navy and R. A. F., threw a grappling hook to the cliff-top and then mounted by means of ropes quickly dropped down one after another by the first men to reach the top.

Direct Operations

While the raid was in progress the commander of the task force, Capt. D. Morewood, Ottawa, member of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, remained on the beach directing the operation by means of a wireless set with which two of his men swam ashore. Patrols moved out on either side of the commander to protect the beach.

The realistic make-believe went on to the accompaniment of grenade explosions and machine-gun and rifle fire.

An explosion was the signal that the radiolocation plant had been destroyed and the raiders left under a hail of live ammunition while Spitfires dived low to harass the defenders.

Thick smoke screens shrouded the beach as the men waded out to the boats which returned to pick them up but heavy fire poured from cliffs and explosives sent columns of water 50 to 60 feet into the air. Tanks ashore hammered away with live shells at figurative targets out on the water.

When the smoke screen drifted away, the boats were some distance off-shore heading out to sea.

BLITZED PLYMOUTH BY MOONLIGHT

Here is a new picture of blitzed Plymouth, England, taken by moonlight. On the LEFT can be seen the tower of St. Andrew's church, the only remains of the mother church of the city. The roofless Guildhall can be seen in CENTRE and on RIGHT is the Council Tower offices. In foreground is a heap of rubble in the shopping centre.

Traffic Again Moving Normally

Ottawa, Oct. 16—(CP)—Traffic was moving normally today across the Canadian National Railways overhead at Billings Bridge, Ottawa suburb from which wrecking crews have cleared the debris from Wednesday night's head-on collision between two freight trains.

The accident, which injured five members of the C.N.R. train crews and killed twenty Canadian Army horses, occurred atop an 85-foot embankment only a short distance from the Ottawa-Morrisburg highway, over which the tracks pass.

W. G. Bannon, of Belleville, Ont. and William Wickens of Ivanhoe, Ont., two of the three crew members taken to hospital after the crash, are being detained there for observation. Their condition is reported to be "very good." The third man, Howard Gray, of Belleville, was discharged from hospital today.

BUY TO LAST
SAVE TO WIN

These Six Words Describe a Wartime Duty That Every Good Citizen is Glad to Face

The fact remains and cannot be dodged, that we as civilians can help win the war by buying only when it is necessary and then buying only longer-lasting products. For the longer an article lasts the less often it needs to be replaced, resulting in a saving of our country's raw materials—a saving in factory facilities and labour. Also remember that buying for longer service is an economy.

Today more than ever before take care of your battery. Make sure before you buy a new one that your present battery is worn out. The Exide Dealer in your district has been carefully chosen to give honest battery service. He will help you to get from the battery you now have all the service it is capable of giving. LISTEN TO A REAL CANADIAN!

"I'm making pretty fair wages right now. But as a citizen of Canada, I recognize that I've got definite obligations. I've got a duty I owe to the boys overseas. They've got to have more guns and tanks and planes. That means I've got to lend just as much as I can so that my country can buy its fighting men everything they need for Victory."

"Sure—I know I'm paying more taxes. But my taxes—and all the other fellow's taxes—aren't enough to do the job. My wife and I have talked it over—we're willing to stop buying the things we can get along without—we're glad to tighten our belts—we're proud to save money for our country."

It's a great spirit—a fighting spirit! You wouldn't expect a real Canadian to say anything else. And when Victory Bonds are offered for sale again, Canadians will once more reach—and exceed—their country's quota.

Here is a definite method which will make it simpler for you. Authorize your employer to set aside a regular sum from each pay envelope to buy Victory Bonds. The repayment of every dollar you invest in Victory Bonds, plus a fair rate of interest is guaranteed by Canada.

72nd Anniversary Foxboro United Church Marked by Service

The Seventy-Second Anniversary and Thanksgiving Services of Foxboro United Church were held on Sunday, Oct. 11, at 11 a.m., and 7.30 p.m. The first church, which is now the Sunday School, was built in 1870 and dedicated in January 1871. The present church was built and dedicated in 1894. The beginnings of the congregation go back to 1850 when Rev. John Black started services in the old school house. There was then opposition to religion and all the windows of the school were broken and the minister was driven out. There were six flourishing hotels and no church. In 1854 the Rev. H. Williams conducted evangelistic services in Henry Mitchell's barn with success and a class was formed. The church has continued with an unbroken record ever since. The present membership is one hundred and sixty.

Thanksgiving Day this year was a day of glorious sunshine enhanced with a riot of Autumn tint and color which made an ideal setting for Thanksgiving service and large congregations gathered both morning and evening. The church had been beautifully decorated with flowers by the young people which offered a cheery welcome to the many visitors and friends back home for the weekend. The guest minister was Rev. Denzil Ridout F.R.G.S., Associate Secretary of the United Church Missionary and Maintenance Committee, Toronto. In the morning he preached on God's purpose for Church based upon Christ's words to His Disciples in the Upper Room. He selected three words, Happiness, or Joy, Consecration, and Harmony or Unity. He interpreted these in the light of present day conditions and needs and individual experience as a result of war's demands. He himself has sons in the fighting services and spoke encouragingly and sympathetically to many of his hearers.

In the evening Mr. Ridout gave an illustrated lecture on Labrador and Newfoundland. With one hundred beautiful slides taken with his own camera, which involved a journey of 800 miles, in a picturesque and apt manner, he showed how the people got their living, where and how they lived, and the place of the church and religion, in "The Land Down by the Sea".

He held the large congregation, even to the smallest child, enrapt in interest for one hour and twenty minutes.

On Monday, Oct. 12, at 8 p.m. he gave another of his travelogues on "Africa, the Dark Continent". The procuring of the information in this lecture involved a journey of 30,000 miles.

For these and other journeys and the contribution made to geographical knowledge Mr. Ridout has been honoured by the Royal Geographical Society.

In this last lecture Mr. Ridout followed a similar pattern as on the previous evening. He showed how Africans live, where they live and the difference that Christian Missions make.

In a few well chosen words Mr. J. Waddell moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer which was heartily endorsed by the congregation.

The Presbyterian congregation and minister, Rev. J. W. MacDonald, withdrew their Sunday service and joined with the United Church on Sunday. The offerings were something over $400.

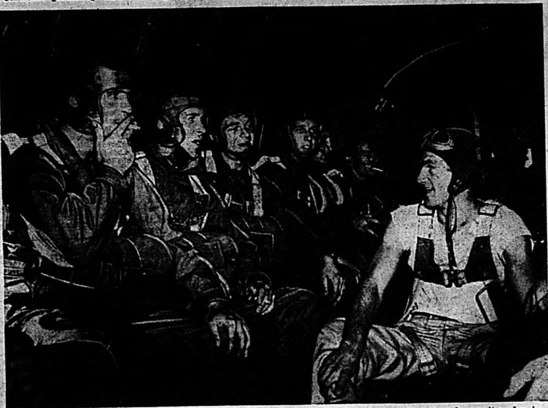
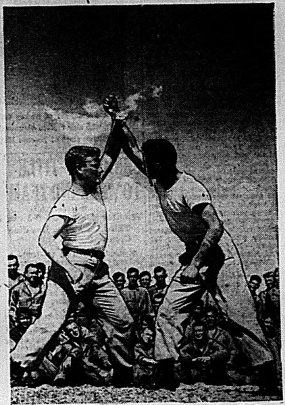
These close-ups of some typical members of the group of instructors who recently completed their course at the big U.S. Army school at Fort Benning, Georgia, give a good illustration of the rugged kind of fighting men who have been selected to form the nucleus of the first Canadian paratroop unit. This group will serve as instructors at the paratroop training school being set up at Camp Shilo in Manitoba. From left to right they are: Lt. T. A. R. Brier, St. Johns, P.Q.; Cpl. N. R. Chapman, Vancouver, B.C.; Sgt. H. R. Bowlby, Yarmouth, N.S.; Sgt.-Major A. T. Clifton, Ottawa; Cpl. C. W. Shaddock, Ingersoll, Ont.; Capt. H. A. Fauquier, brother of R.C.A.F. ace.

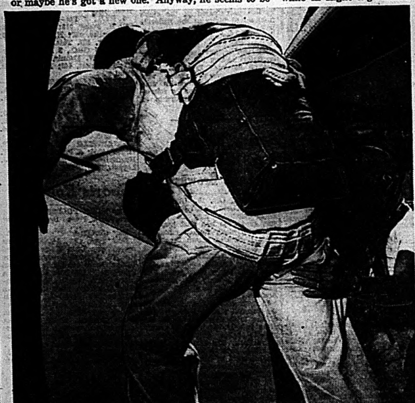
Tumbling down from the blue expanse of the sky these Canadian paratroopers are the vanguard of many more to come. Their band numbers only the strong and brave.



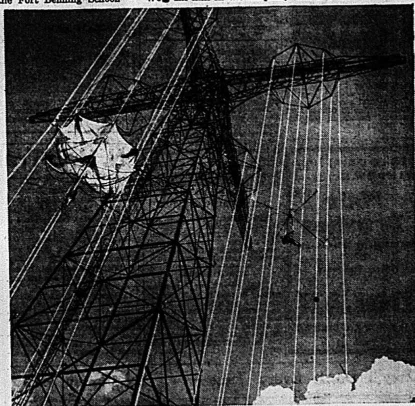
Maybe the jump master is telling them the old one about sending their chutes back if they don't work or maybe he's got a new one. Anyway, he seems to be pepping the boys up as they tensely await order to jump. Picture was made by Photographer Harry Rowed while in flight high above the Fort Benning School.



Training is tough. Class is shown watching jiu-jitsu demonstration. "If you have to break his arm, break it. We'll fix him in the hospital," advised one instructor.



Next stop terra firma. Captain H. A. Fauquier, Ottawa, brother of famed R.C.A.F. ace Johnny Fauquier, steps out into space from the big transport plane as the jump master signals with pat on leg. Note special release cord fixed to plane.



Paratroopers took their initial training on this tower. Student at left will descend when his chute has been hauled to the top. Man dangling at right has dropped about 20 feet, toughening himself to the shock of an opening parachute.

Canadian paratroopers climb aboard a big transport at Fort Benning, Ga., on their way "upstairs" to try their first actual jump. Five are required before wings are awarded. Most of the group had never been up in an airplane before making their jumps. Even veterans admit phase pictured here is a shaky one.

MURRAY GRIFFIN TO PLAY RUGBY WITH BEACHES

Massive Line Plunger and Passer Will Give Balmies Real Threat

NOW IN TORONTO

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Football wouldn't have seemed the same without massive Murray Griffin, so news of his return to the game with Toronto Balmy Beach will be as welcome to the fans as it will be bad medicine for the other five teams in the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

Griffin always was an accurate passer and a powerful plunger. Playing with Ottawa Rough Riders last season out of Kingston, Ont., he established himself as the best "middle man" on an end run in the business. Once Coach Alex Ponton fits him into the Beach lineup—and Griffin doesn't usually need many blueprints — spirits around Toronto's east end should pick up considerably.

Ponton plans to play Griffin at centre secondary Saturday against Toronto Oakwood Indians in the first half of a double-header that may make or break Beaches. Griffin will be flanked by Sammy Sward, an old team-mate, and Bob Cosgrove. That may not give Ponton the best secondary in Canadian football, but it reads well on paper at least.

The fifth-place Indians, a game behind Beaches in the standings, also acquired new strength during the week in Earl Selkirk, a veteran of seven seasons with Toronto Argonauts. But backfield coach Annis Stukus offsets that announcement gloomily with news that four key players — Fred Porter, Norm Dyce, Gord Brennan and brother Frank Stukus— probably won't be in shape to play Saturday.

Even at that, Beaches and Indians don't look too far apart. Hurricanes, who took the Oakwoods 15-1 Thanksgiving Day, said the Indian line was the toughest they had played against all season.

Hurricanes originally were scheduled to meet Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers in the first game of the doubleheader, but O. R. F. U. President Harold Bailey announced it has been moved back to second billing.

Toronto H. M. C. S. York meet Hamilton Wildcats at Hamilton in the third game on Saturday's card.

DEFENCEMEN WHO MAY REPLACE MAPLE LEAF STARS IN UNIFORM

Here is a quintette of hockey defencemen on the ice for their first 1942 drill, who may replace Stanowski, Kampman, Dickens and Goldham, former defence stars of Toronto Maple Leafs, now in uniform. All are seeking jobs with the Stanley Cup holders. From LEFT to RIGHT, they are George Borthman, from the Maritimes, Ken Dixon of Mimico, "Red" Garrett of Toronto, Bom Copp of Toronto, and George Baldwin of Winnipeg.

SENIOR 'A' TITLE TO WELLAND TEAM

Windsor Defeated 9-3 in Third and Deciding Game

Welland, Ont., Oct. 16—(CP)—A Welland team captured the Ontario Senior Baseball Championship for the first time here Wednesday when the canal city Combines whipped Windsor 9-3 in the third game of a best-of-three series for the championship.

The game was played in a steady downpour before 1,300 hardy fans. The diamond was chewed into a quagmire, necessitating a halt after Windsor had batted in the seventh.

Windsor sent Homer Leasser, who had blanked Welland 1-0 on Monday, right back at the Combines, but the veteran curve ball specialist was unable to continue his mastery over the locals.

Leasser was opposed on the mound by Bill Buntrock, Welland right-hander, who pitched the Combines to an 11-1 victory over the Border City club on Sunday. Buntrock was not as effective as he was in Sunday's contest, but he had a definite edge on his mound opponent.

N. H. L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

From a time standpoint, Detroit Red Wings have an edge on their National Hockey League rivals at this early stage of the training season. The 1941-42 Stanley Cup finalists started their second week of conditioning Tuesday. But Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens may make their own late start pay dividends.

In Montreal last night, it was announced that President Donat Raymond of Canadiens and President Charles F. Adams of Bruins have offered the services of their teams to United States War Loan officials for a series of exhibition games in California. Earlier, arrangements for a similar series between Canadian military service teams had to be abandoned.

Bruins went through their first practice skate yesterday at Verdun auditorium. Familiar faces included Bill (Flash) Hollett, Johnny Crawford, Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, Bill Cowley, Johnny Shewchuk, Dutch Hiller, Herbie Cain and the Jackson Brothers, Art and Harvey. Several Junior prospects from Ontario and Western Canada also were on hand to try out with the team.

And who do you think is showing the way in the trails at Canadiens' Training camp? None other than Gordie Drillon, Leaf castoff. Up to his old scoring tricks, Drillon bagged four goals in a practice game to share sniping honors with Stu Smith, who kept in shape this summer by playing baseball with Hull Volants of the Interprovincial League.

MOVING UP

Trying out for a N.H.L. berth with Toronto Maple Leafs is Bud Evans, a goal-keeper from Milton, Ont. Evans will hardly displace "Turk" Broda this term and will probably spend the season with Marlborough juniors.

BOWLING GREENS CLOSE SATURDAY

Local Club Enjoys the Best Season for Many Years

Culminating one of its most successful seasons since opening their new greens at the Exhibition Park, the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will ring down its 1942 curtain on Saturday and close for the current season.

The club champions of the year were announced today by President Cliff Argue, the club's energetic head executive. Winner of the men's singles and the Walker Cup was one of Belleville's veteran lawn bowlers of many years' standing, W. J. Davison. The club doubles title and the Hurley Trophy went to John Shaw and Col. Bonisteel, while the Canadian Hotel Cup, a first year trophy for club trebles, was won by Messrs. George Pauley, Russ Richards and Paul Jones.

To exemplify the increased popularity in which lawn bowling has become in recent years fifty local bowlers participated in the club's final mixed jitney at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club last Monday, doubtless one of the largest collections for open competition of local lawn bowlers ever seen locally. Before closing the year's activities on Saturday President Argue stated there was no reason why the club should not flourish with success in 1943, especially following the increased membership of 1942.

Branch Rickey May Head St. Louis Browns

St. Louis, Oct. 16. (AP)— The goose that laid golden eggs for St. Louis Cardinals may be nesting just across the hall next year.

Despite many rumors circulated since it became known that General Manager Branch Rickey was quitting the Cardinal organization, the boys "in the know" around here are pretty confident that Rickey will join up with the reorganized St. Louis Browns of the American League.

In such case Rickey, father of the baseball farm system and one of the most dynamic figures the game has produced, would merely have to change offices at Sportsman's Park. The move also would take him back to where he really got his start in baseball, as manager of the Browns.

"All the straws bend one way", said J. Roy Stockton, baseball expert of the Post-Dispatch, who flatly predicted today that next season would see Rickey taking over the job of building up the Browns, who last year tasted success for the first time in many moons by finishing in third place. It is Stockton's guess that Rickey will become president or vice-president and general manager of the Browns.

Stockton said he contacted several persons, some associated in business with both the Browns and Cardinals, and some supposedly close to Rickey, who offered to wager that he would be with the Brownies in 1943.

Rickey's reported salary with the Cards is $50,000 a year plus a percentage of the profit. With considerable new financial backing acquired last year, the Browns are willing to match this to obtain the services of baseball's master strategist, the experts believe.

Rickey has been mentioned for many jobs, from insurance executive and United States Senator to general manager of Brooklyn Dodgers. In an interview at Denver, Col., today he admitted it's possible he might become business head of the Dodgers, but added, "I just don't know".

APPEALS TO N.B.A.

Los Angeles Oct. 16 (AP)—Jerry Giesler, as Chairman of the California Boxing Commission, has established something of a reputation for espousing the cause of the underdog, but today he finds himself going to bat for the champions.

Giesler, in private life a prominent trial lawyer, sees no reason why a fighting man, when he swaps the padded mitts for a rifle and goes off to the wars, should find himself in danger of being deprived of whatever championship boxing baubles he may have picked up along the way.

So Giesler has proposed to Abe J. Green, New Jersey, President of the National Boxing Association, that the titles of any champions now in the armed services or who enter them subsequently, be "frozen" for the duration.

Just about everything else is frozen until the war ends, Giesler reasons, so why not boxing titles?

"Boxing, like every other business or profession," he declares "must expect in war-time to take on a different complexion and operate under different rules. The public certainly is not demanding that boys who are prepared to give everything to their country be deprived of or abandon a title which is rightfully theirs.

"Let's let matters remain as they are until after the war, and then they can be straightened out."

He asked Greene to take the matter up with the commission in the 26 states affiliated with the N.B.A.

New York, Oct. 16. (AP)—One reason why Ohio State is rated the No. 1 football team in the United States so far is that Paul Brown tells his boys to take a chance with running the ball instead of kicking when they have a foot or two to go on fourth down. . .And so far they've been getting away with it . . . And Bernie Bierman, whose Minnesota teams seldom passed, has become air-minded since he shifted to the navy's Iowa pre-flight school. . . The Seahawks have thrown 50 passed and completed 28 in four games.

Guest Star

Ed Ray, Tampa (Fla.) Times: "The war has done one good thing for sports—eliminated the 'let's fire the coach' clubs throughout the nation. . . Monday conversation among the quarter backs sounds about like this: "Gee, I hope we don't lose our coach before the end of the season. I don't know where we'd get another'."

Princeton's 150-pound Football squad had a turnout of 151 players this fall so they were split up into 11 teams for intra-mural competition. He has had some flying experience.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

WHEN TED LYONS PICKED out the toughest branch of the United States armed services—the Marines—it was characteristic of the veteran White Sox pitcher, declares Jimmy Corcoran of the Chicago Herald-American, who believes Lyons' action might start a parade of other major leaguers to the same branch of Uncle Sam's service, or, at least, should.

"Now, wouldn't the Marines be the branch of the service that Ted would pick out!" exclaimed Corcoran. "No office job for him. His type craves to be out there where the skirmishing is searing hot and where a man can show just what he has behind the belt.

"A Marine at 41. . . and the guy will be 42 in a few months. Here's one of the most admirable of the human species I've known in all the years I've been in sports. Never have I noted any sham, any hypocrisy or floss in his makeup.

"I've known Ted Lyons for over 20 years, and he has never changed from the kid he was when he reported to the White Sox—a sort of gangling guy, slightly afraid of the big cities and the tall buildings and the fast traveling gas-carts.

"Never was there a choicer companion on a baseball trip. He didn't flick—your rigs with his wisecracks, but he was a great guy to sit around with.

"At times he allowed his imagination to run. He could tell you about the time that he hit a long home run that went so high it was coming down over the home plate when he slid in; and so he promptly caught it himself. Those were the kind of stories Teddy used to tell—all in good, clean fun."

THE BELLEVILLE LAWN BOWLING Club rings down a successful season curtain on Saturday. To prove the popularity of the game made famous by Admiral Drake, President Cliff Argue informs us that last Monday night 50 local lawn bowlers competed in a mixed club jitney, which is perhaps a record for hometown talent bowling at one time. The club champions were named for 1942 and congratulations are in order to "Davie" Davison, club singles champion; John Shaw and Col. Bonisteel, winners of the club doubles and George Pawley, Russ Richards and Paul Jones, the champion club trebles. With lawn bowling having staged a revival in Belleville in recent years at the Exhibition Park, why couldn't the lovers of curling take over one of the buildings at the Exhibition Park and revive that ancient popular game of curling in Belleville. This city once boasted of some of the best curlers in the Dominion and with a little encouragement the pastime might again rise to its former popularity.

APPARENTLY THE FAIR SEX received somewhat of a kick out of Jerry Moher's embarrassment during Wednesday's St. Mikes - Collegiate Interscholastic rugby game when Moher had the misfortune to have his rugby pants literally torn off. Today's mail brings a note from a fair sex spectator who writes: "It appears that a certain player on the rugby field Wednesdy did not lack grit, but did lack a fan." (These girls never miss a bet.)

More Interscholastic football looms on the horizon as convener Paul Goyette phoned to say the Albert College had drafted a senior six-man Interscholastic group with Albert playing at the Collegiate on Oct. 22nd and the return game at Albert on the 29th of the month. Lovers of the fall classic can easily take in these Interscholastic pigskin games as it is usually well after 4.30 p.m. before the kickoff.

REMEMBER WHEN CONNIE Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics of the American League, bought Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, ace Baltimore pitcher, for $100,600.00 cash 13 years ago today? The Maryland southpaw was with the Athletics until the end of the 1933 season when he was traded to the Boston Red Sox for a large sum and players to boot.

THIS AND THAT — Frank Frederickson, or perhaps we should refer to him as Flt.-Lieut. Frederickson, is back in the hockey news once again ... Frank starred with Canada's first Olympic championship hockey team, the Winnipeg Falcons back in 1920 ... Today he is coach of the St. Catharines "Saints" in the senior O. H. A. series .... Frank turned professional in 1925 with Frank Patrick's Victoria Cougars and helped to bring the Stanley Cup to the Pacific Coast .... Later he moved east and played in the N. H. L. with Detroit, Chicago, Boston and Pittsburgh ... Frederickson was an aviator in the last war and served with none other than Wing Commander Dave Harding, now O. C. at Hagersville .... Stories differ, but it's a dead-letter cinch that Branch Rickey is due for a shift from the St. Louis Cardinals ... Rickey and President Sam Breadon have come to the day of parting after the former had instigated the first major league baseball farm system"... Much of the credit for the success of the current world's champions must be placed in the lap of Rickey ... Now they have him working either for Brooklyn or the St. Louis Browns in 1943 ... The latter club bears watching in 1943 ... They do say Leo Durocher may enlist leaving the Dodgers without a manager .... Then again the boys in the know (?) say Del Baker is on the way out at Detroit and name Steve O'Neill as his successor ... Ed Shortt, in charge of sports at the Y. M. C. A., says the remodelled "Y" gym. is ready for business, especially mentioned was the business men's classes in late afternoon ...... it's good for man, woman and child.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICHLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 16—(CP) — The government's decision to ban steeplechasing in Britain this winter sounds a death sentence for at least 500 jumpers. It is considered also to be the writing on the wall for flat racing, just closing its 1942 program.

The ban, imposed under the ever-tightening national economy drive, was not unexpected by the National Hunt Committee, which controls steeplechasing, and by most trainers and owners.

Many trainers agreed the winter jumping blackout means the pistol for all but the younger 'chasers—up to seven or eight years. A few may be kept as "paddock pensioners" but there is no worthwhile market for hacks and jumpers are only in a few cases suitable for harness work.

One trainer expressed "fear" that the steeplechase ruling would mean that horse-meat agents would do plenty of business at jumper sales and noted such agents bid up to roughly $110 at recent Newmarket racing stock sales.

Herbert (Frenchy) Nicholson, who rode Medoc II to victory in the Gold Cup steeplechase at Cheltenham last March and now runs a farm, expressed disappointment, along with other jockeys, at the ruling but added that "if it is going to help win the war, none of us will complain."

Another jockey turned farmer is David Dick, crack boy rider of a couple of seasons ago. Young Dick, rider of the last Lincolnshire Handicap winner, Gloaming, in 1941, has retired from flat racing because he can't keep his weight down.

Ottawa Army Team To Play This Winter

Ottawa, Oct. 16—(CP)—An official of the Commandos, newly-formed Ottawa area hockey club, said last night it "definitely will play hockey this winter," and, should the club sever connections with the Quebec Senior Hockey League, it will lose no time making plans to enter another circuit.

Officers of the club have until next Wednesday to decide whether or not it will operate in the Quebec loop, and plan to hold an executive meeting shortly to discuss the question, raised when the Q. S. H.L. decided to limit each club to not more than four National Hockey League players.

The Commandos held their first practice on Ottawa auditorium ice last night, under Coach Alex Smith.

THIS TORPEDOED TANKER GOT TO PORT

This picture was made from the deck of a neutral ship showing, on the horizon, the fiercely burning medium-sized oil tanker which was torpedoed by a submarine on a morning early this month, off the coast of Oregon. The ship was attacked while wallowing helplessly in the swells with her engines out of commission. Although a tank of fuel oil exploded, the ship was not sunk, but was towed to an unnamed port, somewhere on the Pacific coast.

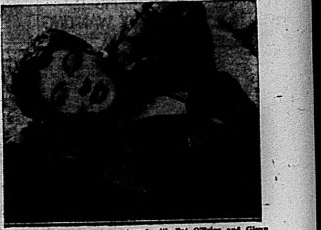
AT THE CAPITOL

Bob Kortman and Don "Red" Barry in a scene from the new Republic Picture, "Jesse James, Jr.", now showing at the Capitol. The added feature "She's in the Army" stars Marie Wilson and Lyle Talbot.

AT THE BELLE

"Girl in the News," at the Belle Theatre, another thrill-laugh hit by the director of "Night Train to Munich" stars lovely Margaret Lockwood and is hailing large crowds. Ann Sothern and Red Skelton in "Maisie Gets Her Man," is the major feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY



Lovely Evelyn Keyes who is co-starred with Pat O'Brien and Glenn Ford in the thrilling aviation drama "Flight Lieutenant" now at the McCarthy Theatre. The second feature is Roy Rogers and George "Gabby" Hayes in "Sons of the Pioneers."

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16 — (CP) —The betting in Washington is that the man who will lead the United Nations forces in the general offensive against Germany in Europe is Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army. He may end up as Generalissimo of all allied forces as Marshal Foch did in the last war."

A rangy, six-footer with reflective blue eyes, a short, pugnacious nose, broad humorous mouth and a stubborn upper lip, Marshall has been a soldier all his life. He is known as an administrative genius, a prodigious worker and an expert, long-range planner. He is 62.

Marshall's one big job in the last war was the organization of the secret movement of 820,000 men in preparation for the Neuse-Argonne offensive in 14 days. It was remarkably successful and led to his rapid advancement.

It is understood here that the British authorities will accept Marshall as the second front commander where they would not accept other possible American nominees.

McNaughton Mentioned

Some observers here believe that close to the top commander would be Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Army overseas. Gen. McNaughton and Gen. Marshall, one an artillery expert, the other an infantry expert, have known of each other for years and their favorable impressions were mutual when they met in Washington several months ago.

One of the minor features of the governmental machinery created by President Roosevelt to gear the United States for war has been the gradual recession of his cabinet in importance and authority. There are 10 members of his cabinet and only three are in the inner White House circle that makes major decisions — Secretary of State Cordell Hull, War Secretary Henry Stimson and Navy Secretary Frank Knox.

On The Outside

The other members of the inner circle are men outside the Cabinet, men like Donald M. Nelson of the war production board. Paul V. McNutt of the Manpower commission. James F. Byrnes of the office of economic stabilization and Maj-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey of selective service. Individually and collectively, these officials have succeeded the cabinet in formulating and administering wartime policies.

To a lesser extent, this same trend is noticeable in Canada. Men like Donald Gordon of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and Elliott M. Little of selective service have tremendous power over the day-to-day life of Canadians and Canada's war effort and yet are not members of the cabinet. Gordon and Little are responsible to the cabinet for their actions and individual cabinet ministers must answer for them.

Goebbels Fails Again

The German propaganda machine, dedicated to the proposition that the United Nations can be torn asunder by internal strife and friction, has been making the most of apparent differences among Russia, the United States and Britain, over a second front.

Goebbels has turned on the full blast of his mighty machine, playing one ally against another, goading one, belittling another, working on latent anti-British sentiment in the United States, anti-American sentiment in Britain, anti-Communist sentiment in both and on Russia's general distrust of the Western capitalist nations.

As an object lesson in how to operate a high-powered propaganda machine it has been enlightening and instructive but so far it hasn't broken up the United Nations.

Notes That Make News

Political beacon lights: Every once in a while someone advocates a national lottery to raise revenue in the United States and at least one big newspaper, the New York Daily News, favors it but it never gets anywhere. The drys are getting busy in the United States, trying to put over the idea of national prohibition as a wartime necessity and, although they have made fair progress in the last two years in states with local-option laws, their national scheme doesn't seem to be making much progress. Incidentally, it is sometimes forgotten that three states are dry, Kansas, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

A copy of "In Flanders Field," the great Canadian poem of the last war by John McCrae, is on display in the library of Congress. It is a signed manuscript in McCrae's handwriting and was loaned by the Royal Victoria Hospital of Montreal but is not, as it is advertised here, the original copy . . . when 1,000 men of Marshal Rommel's Africa corps landed last week in Canada as prisoners of war, a head-writer on the New York Times dubbed it the "Kanada Korps."

It's good news or bad news, depending on how you look at it, but chewing gum is expected to be rationed for American civilians . . . the Senate restaurant is forced by an act of Congress to have bean soup on the menu each day. The price is 15 cents . . .

A few weeks ago a soldier, cleaning a machine gun, accidentally discharged it, sending four bullets spattering against a stone near the top of the Lincoln Memorial, chipping it. A special army board found it was due to the soldier's carelessness and ordered him to pay for repairing the famous memorial. But the board forgot the cost of a scaffold to reach that high, an estimated $1,500. So now the $50-a-month private gets off free.

NOW IT'S "SMOKECHUTERS"

Airborne parachuting forest-rangers are being organized in Montana to help protect forests against sabotage.

NEW CARPETS OUT

There will be no more new carpets, rugs or linoleum in Britain after Nov. 30, the deadline for the release of materials for making them.

Soybean meal is now being used in place of part of fish and meat scrap in poultry rations as a source of protein.

AT THE BELLE

"Maisie Gets Her Man"

Laughter and romance are expertly blended in "Maisie Gets Her Man," newest in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer series involving the abilities of Ann Sothern and Red Skelton, now on the Belle theatre screen.

"Girl in the News"

Carol Reed's latest thrill laugh hit "Girl in the News" is the worthy second feature attraction. Its stars are pretty Margaret Lockwood, Emlyn Williams and B. K. Barnes. Director Reed has brought them together in a murder mystery which is handled with the freshness that always distinguishes his work.

A Pete Smith screen novelty "Victory Quiz" completes the program.

William Powell in "Crossroads"

William Powell returns to familiar ground in M-G-M's "Crossroads" a story of blackmail and intrigue which opens this weekend at the Belle theatre. Long absent from serious dramatic roles, Powell is afforded an excellent opportunity in the film and makes the most of it. Hedy Lamarr is teamed with Powell for the first time, while Claire Trevor and Basil Rathbone lead one of the year's outstanding supporting casts.

The action of the story takes place in Paris before the current war. Powell is a French diplomat happily married to Miss Lamarr. Just as he is made Ambassador to Brazil, an insidious blackmail plot is concocted against him by Rathbone and Miss Trevor. They present proof that he is living under a false identity and is really a petty criminal who robbed and murdered a man fifteen years before. The situation of a man's past catching up with him to destroy all he holds dear is believably and most thrillingly presented, thanks to the expert direction of Jack Conway.

In the acting department the new picture shines with stellar brilliance, for the cast includes in addition to Powell, Miss Lamarr, Miss Trevor and Rathbone, such polished performers as Felix Bressart, Margaret Wycherly, Vladimir Sokoloff, Sig Rumann, H. B. Warner, Guy Bates Post, Reginald Owen, Frank Conroy, Philip Merivale, Fritz Leiber, James Rennie and Mitchell Lewis.

"The Bear and the Beavers" is the title of a color fun cartoon to be exhibited on the same program with the Belle mirror of World Events and a timely and entertaining multiple-reel film "For the Common Defence." On Saturday matinee the third chapter of "Perils of the Royal Mounted" the year's best serial will be presented. Continuous shows will prevail Saturday

AT THE McCARTHY

"Flight Lieutenant"

Honoring America's airmen of yesterday, today and tomorrow, Columbia's thrilling new service drama, "Flight Lieutenant," currently is providing McCarthy Theatre audiences with the breathless excitement of propeller-thundering adventure. Pat O'Brien, Glenn Ford and Evelyn Keyes head the stellar cast of the new film, which was directed by Sidny Salkow from a screen play by Michael Blankfort.

The film concerns itself with the exploits of an adventuresome commercial flyer, who is pronounced guilty of carelessness in flight, leading to tragedy and the death of a fellow-pilot. Discouraged, outcast, he hides himself in the tropics, leaving behind him a young son whom he idolizes and who idolizes him. The boy, without knowledge of his father's disgrace, lives under an assumed name. In time, he also becomes a flyer.

In carrying his story from the decade which followed the First World War through the years up to and after Pearl Harbor, director Sidney Salkow brings to "Flight Lieutenant" a keen understanding of what is needed for edge-of-the-seat adventure.

Salkow makes effective use of the romance between the flyer's son and the daughter of the man he killed. When the boy learns his true identity, on the eve of his entrance into the Army Air Corps, "Flight Lieutenant" zooms to new heights of dramatic and emotional effect. Exceedingly effective, too, is the climactic episode of the new film, with its power-diving thrills roaring across the screen to bring to a heart-warming conclusion a film which is eminently satisfying entertainment.

Pat O'Brien is superb as the father, a hero of World War I ignored by the aces and cadets of World War II until he wipes from the skies the memory of his own tragic error. Glenn Ford and Evelyn Keyes, who appear in the romantic roles, are equally fine, as are lesser members of the stellar cast.

B. P. Schulberg produced "Fright Lieutenant," investing it with all the richness, all the painstaking care and value which are essential to audience entertainment today.

Roy Rogers

In addition to "Flight Lieutenant" at the McCarthy, Roy Rogers and George "Gabby" Hayes in the new musical-western "Sons of the Pioneers" leaves nothing more to be desired by theatregoers looking for entertainment with a capital E. As usual Saturday the performances at the McCarthy will be continuous with matinee prices until six o'clock.

AT THE CAPITOL

"She's in the Army"
(First Belleville Showing)

There is much that is definitely inspiring in "She's in the Army," the Monogram picture which opened an engagement at the Capitol Theatre last night. Though the story itself is primarily one of comedy, the background shows the wartime activities of the Women's Ambulance and Defence Corps of America, and the picture carries a high degree of interest on this account.

Lucile Gleason, Veda Ann Borg and Marie Wilson, who play featured roles, are presented as members of this organization of uniformed women trained to work in bombed cities and all do complete justice to their roles quite aside from the fact that they are demonstrating the carrying out of a grimly patriotic service. The film not only qualifies as an amusing and thrilling entertainment, but at the same time furnishes information which is of value and intense interest to every one.

"She's in the Army" is a very entertaining picture and, on account of its timely subject matter, a highly important one.

"Jesse James, Jr.

Tops in rip-roaring western pictures is Republic's "Jesse James, Jr.," starring Don "Red" Barry, which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre. A trigger-fast action film of the lawless West, it depicts a red-hot rivalry between two frontier towns—Sundown and Fargo—both of which hope to receive a valuable franchise from a telegraph company.

Action, romance and comedy have been deftly blended in this entertaining picture. Barry and lovely Lynn Merrick are outstanding in the starring roles, while Al St. John contributes a side-splitting comedy performance as a blacksmith who is allergic to horses.

A colored cartoon and the serial, "Spy Smasher" complete a grand program.

Pitched Battle On Land, Sea Quite Imminent

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A crisis in the war in the Pacific of imponderable consequence seems at hand in what the United States Navy styles "the current battle" for possession of the Guadalcanal fulcrum for control of the Solomon Islands.

Washington official reports on the action were still too meagre as this was written to define its scope or clearly indicate its trend. There seemed every evidence, however, that Japan had finally answered the challenge of the American seizure of Guadalcanal by making an all-out effort to retake it.

At least one enemy battleship was in action. The language of navy announcements referring to other enemy "heavy units" sighted in the vicinity indicates the other capital ships are supporting the effort to land strong reinforcements on the island, already partially successful.

Nimitz Confident.

The strength and composition of American naval forces available to meet this major attack is not indicated. Only light naval units and navy, army and marine corps planes were mentioned in first accounts. But substantial army ground and air forces have arrived to reinforce the Americans.

In the light of the confidence of American ability to hold Guadalcanal expressed by Admiral Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander, however, it seems a fair assumption that a pitched sea as well as land battle is in prospect or in progress. The possibility that Japan would divert major units of her main fleet from other sectors to back up the attempt to retake the island (an attempt that had lagged for weeks with disproportionate Japanese air and sea losses) was too obvious for American fleet dispositions not to have reflected it.

A savage battle ashore already must be joined. In this case, unlike the situation in the lost Philippines, there is good reason to believe that the air odds are with the American forces.

Jap Plans Upset.

Telling blows, including damage to one battleship, have been inflicted by American air power and gunnery. That the enemy broke through a triple air-sea-land screen to put ashore troop reinforcements is further evidence of the weight and power of the fleet assembled to cover the landing operation.

Even more critical than the land action, however, must be the contact of American and Japanese heavy naval craft which may be developing. Its outcome if any substantial portion of either main fleet is drawn into the action could mark a turning point in the war in the Pacific. It even could influence war developments in the European, Middle Eastern or other distant battle zones as well, including the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

As this was written it is clear that American initiative in sezing the Guadalcanal pivot or sea-air control of the Solomons has upset Japanese plans. It may account, in part at least, for continuing delay in disclosure of the purposes for which Japanese armies in South-eastern China were called back, or Japanese failure to strike at Russia to aid Hitler's campaign in the west, now apparently bogging down for the winter short of the Volga.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop and all of a sudden there was a fierce bang sounding like an accident. Which it was, being a Kola Kola truck smashing into a milk truck, pop saying, Wowie what a sock. Now that's one I saw with my own eyes. That Kola Kola truck must of been travelling 60 miles an hour when it turned that corner. That man's not a driver, he's a menace. If I can do anything to force a criminal like that off the road, by gollies I'm not going to hold back, he said.

And he pushed right through the crowd to where the Kola Kola driver and the milk driver were standing there yelling at each other at the same time with mad faces, and pop said, I saw it, this big fellow turned the corner like a devil on wheels, he didn't look and he didn't blow and he didn't stop.

Go away with that baloney, I was right here an I saw the whole thing with my own eyes, some fat man said. This milk man was cruising along the wrong side of the street like a dope in a dream, no wonder he got it, he said, and pop said, For Peet sake how could he of been on the wrong side of the street when the other man had to swerve way out past the intersection to hit him?

You guys are both talking through your hats, some man with glasses said. I was right here on the spot and this milkman seemed to lose control of his wheel and turned half way around just as the Kola Kola truck rounded the corner, he said, and some lady said, Nothing of the rediculous kind, the Kola Kola man was standing still waiting for the light when the milkman ran into him, I saw it all.

As a matter of fact the whole trouble was between a boy on a bysickel and a woman pushing a baby carriage full of laundry, I ought to know because I was the boy on the bysickel, pop said. Let's get going, Benny, he said.

Which we did.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER 21

Tim is Awakened

"If Stephen goes, then Larry will be made Forbes' assistant won't he?"

"If they don't bring in another man from outside. But I think Larry will get it this time. Forbes will want him because he isn't afraid of him. But it does seem a pity that Steve has to go so that Larry can step in. Probably Steve has thought of that. He knows what an increase and a promotion would mean to Larry and me.

Three hours later Harriet drove away from the Barth home and Judith went in. Her mother was working on needlepoint and her father was talking to her. After so many years of marriage, they could still find something to talk and laugh about.

Isobel Barth looked up and smiled.

Judith looked at her father when she said, "Do you think the new advertising manager at Overton's would give me a job?"

He grinned. "I'm sure he would. Shall I speak to him about it?"

"No. I'll see him."

Her mother looked puzzled. "Why Judith, I don't understand. Have you two something between you?"

Nicholas said, "Judith is coming home, dear."

"To live? To stay, you mean?"

Judith said, "Yes. I'm going to New York tomorrow and get my affairs there straightened out and then come back."

Tears filled Isobel's eyes. "But I won't have you throw away your chances, Judith. I won't have you do it for us. I'd rather go on getting little peeks at you occasionally the way it has been than for you to give up something important to you."

"It isn't important anymore. I'm doing it because I want to."

"And your things in New York, furniture."

"I'll store it."

"You'll do nothing of the sort. The attic here is large and empty. Plenty of room for it. You'll want it again . . . But, dear, I simply won't be happy about this until you tell me you are doing this of your own accord and not for us. I thought you loved it there."

"I did. But this is of my own accord." Her throat felt full. "You see, I found I needed you both again. I'm going up now. Good-night."

She left the room quickly because she was afraid she was going to cry. And so she did not know that Isobel looked earnestly at her husband and asked, "Is something wrong, do you suppose, Nicholas? Why is she doing this? Is it a man?" He said, "Will it matter if we never know? It couldn't be anything else but a man—at her age? Don't pry. Don't ask her any questions."

▼ ▼ ▼ ▼

Judith arrived in New York the following afternoon and went immediately to the store to see Giles Henson.

"You?" he asked, looking up over his cluttered desk. "Where's the sunburn? How was South America?"

South America? She almost winced.

"I didn't go. I changed my mind and went home. And I've come back only to give up my apartment here and—and my job. It's a sudden decision, but the right one for me, I think. If you want me to stay while you get someone to take my place, I'll stay, of course."

"This is a good bit of a shock, Judith. I—I don't quite know what to say except I hate like the deuce to give you up. You're one of my best people. But you know your business better than I do. About staying on for a while, I wish you would for a few days. You're not getting married, are you?"

"No. I'm going to get a job at home."

"You have a lot of talent and a lot of sense that balances it. I'll give you a swell reference."

Walking down Fifth Avenue Judith thought. "Emily said that a girl came to New York not to find herself but to lose herself. It happened to both of us. But was I happy before I knew Max? Was my life as satisfactory as I thought it was? No, he taught me love and living. I don't feel arrogant or smug now. Max taught me what I really wanted, what I'd been missing, what my heart had been waiting for. And now I am running away from Max or running away from becoming a lone, successful person who is the loneliest person in the world? Perhaps six months from now I'll be able to answer that question."

There was no mail for her. When she entered the apartment she was conscious that it had the dusty stale odor of a place unlived in. And this had once been home, these few attractive rooms. How many times had Max kissed her here and she had held up her arms to him! Now she, Judith, was here to take down the draperies and pack the china. She thought, "It's the end of an era, I suppose. But to me it seems the end of my life."

That night she called Sid Biddison who accepted her decision with his usual mildness and good humor and lacking curiosity. Phyllis and Ames were not at home when she called them. Other friends and acquaintances she called and some told her that she was foolish and some told her she was wise.

It was not until four evenings later that she found Ames at home.

"Phyllis is out," he said.

When she told him the news he said slowly, "Well, I don't blame you though we'll miss you, Judith. I can guess how happy this is making your family. Don't forget us. I'll tell Phyllis to call you tomorrow for sure."

But Phyllis did not call the next day.

▼ ▼ ▼ ▼

The moving men had left only a few minutes ago. Now the apartment was bare. Her bag was packed and waiting near the door and she had put on her coat and hat. She wanted both to rush out and linger. Max had done this to her. He had uprooted her. Tears of helplessness rushed to her eyes.

Remembering the day she had met him she thought, "But why do I persist in thinking that I shall see him again, that this isn't the end of Max and me?"

At the sound of heavy masculine footsteps coming down the hall, she began to tremble with an excitement almost too great to bear at the door which the moving men had left open.

It was Tim. He paused on the threshold and blinked at the empty apartment and at Judith. His eyes were red-rimmed, his long legs not quite steady. The sight of her standing in the empty apartment seemed to sober him instantly.

"Hey, what's this? What goes on here?"

"Hello, Tim. I'm moving. Rather I have moved. I'm—I'm going home. Come in. Sorry there isn't any place to sit."

He grinned. "There's always the floor." Coming in, he promptly sat on the floor and drew his long legs up almost to his chin.

"Tell me what this is all about. Going home? What's the idea? Is everybody in New York going home?

"I'm going home because I've decided it's the best idea for me. I'm going to get a job in Clinton."

"Sounds crazy to me. You are doing great here. I really meant to call you up sooner but I . . . What have I been doing? I don't know. I can't remember. I'm crazy—not you. You've always had your feet firmly planted on good old terra firma." With an impatient gesture he pushed back his unkempt hair. "I called the store this morning and they said you'd left. I wanted to take you to lunch."

"I'd like to go to lunch with you, but I really must get a train."

He held up his hand. "Just a minute. Don't go. Trains run every half hour. When—when is Emily coming back?"

"She isn't coming back, Tim."

"He frowned. "Oh! So that's why she doesn't answer my letters? But why—why isn't she coming back?"

She said quietly. "Because of you."

"Because of me? That's why she should come back. I don't get it, Judith."

"She's in love with you." Aching from fatigue, she learned against the rose-colored wall and took a deep breath. Tell him everything, she thought; tell him what Emily couldn't tell him. It's the honest, decent thing to do. "Tim, Emily went home to stay because she didn't want to be just one of the girls you play around with. You're Tim Stevens and your life has been mapped out for you. Those were her words. But you won't continue to play indefinitely. You will get married and settle down and raise a family and be the kind of man your father is today. You have a path to follow. You have certain traditions to live up to. Emily respected that path and those traditions."

"You mean."

"I mean she wanted to be more to you than a pleasant memory of a lovely girl you knew once or a girl you might want to go on knowing and seeing after you married somebody else. You gave wasn't enough. It never is enough. wasn't enough. It never is enough. She wanted everything and she didn't feel she measured up. Grant that she did a brave thing. She loves you in the old-fashioned way, Tim. There are a good many old-fashioned girls beneath the smartest modern clothes. Now you know and now I really must be going."

"Wait a minute. You can't go! I'm having what is known as a revelation. You've got to give me time."

"You had it—Emily's time. She isn't bitter. It was just the way it was. There were circumstances over which neither of you had any control. She said you took all your advantages for granted."

"I didn't take her for granted."

"You don't know what it is to be poor, Tim. You don't know that Emily had to sell her insurance to pay her hospital expenses, the nice room and the special nurses and the best surgeon you ordered for her. You don't know that she, a naturally thrifty person, went into debt to buy clothes so that you wouldn't be ashamed of her in good places you took her. No, you don't know any of that. And you don't know either that that morning in the station she knew she was never going to see you again. And she loves you . . . Tim, these are so many words thrown at you because I'm in a hurry but you can realize the feelings behind them? Emily's feelings?"

"I'm beginning to because I happen to have a few of my own. Don't go. I can't let you go, Judith." He looked at her like a small boy who begs to be understood. "I'm not very bright, I guess. I get by but I'm not very bright. Maybe I have taken it all for granted. Being Tim Stevens, just just having that for a name, always opened doors to me. I've had a lot of fun and little or no responsibility. I've liked girls and girls have liked me. But I never examined my feelings before—before Emily. I don't think I had any until I knew her. I never thought about a girl unless she was with me—until Emily. You know, the little things—her profile when she is laughing, the way she used to scramble eggs. You're right. I didn't think about marrying her. If I've ever thought of marriage at all, it was to think of it as something far in the future for me and something I'd do one of these days.

"I suppose I took it for granted that Emily and I would go on the way we were. . . . And then she went home." He said vehemently, "I've missed her like hell and I've been trying to kid myself by playing around and telling myself what was the difference between one good-looking gal and the next. But it was no good. There is a difference, oNt even a few good sprees helped. I tried them and I came back. She isn't any girl. She's my girl and I'm going out there and get her."

"You're still Tim Stevens." But she could not doubt his sincerity.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Oct. 16. (CP)—Butcher cows and bulls dropped 25 cents cwt. on the cattle market section of the Livestock Market here this week. Steers and heifers were strong to 15 cents higher. Veal calves and hogs were steady. Lambs dropped 50 cents to $1 cwt while sheep held steady.

The liberal run of cattle included more good quality killers than have arrived at the market here since the middle of August. Choice weighty steers sold to packers at $10.75 to $11 with other weighty steers downward to $10. Butcher steers and heifers were $8.50 to $10.50. Fed yearlings sold at $10.50 to $12. Butcher cows were $6.75 to $8.25 with a few tops at $8.50. Canners sold lower at $5.25. Bulls were slow sellers at $8 to $9.50 cwt. Good stockers were steady at $10 to $10.75 with stock calves up to $11.15. Plainer stockers moved slowly at $8 to $9.75. Good milkers and springers sold steady at $125 to $150 each.

Calves were unchanged at $15 to $15.50 for choice vealers with common lights downward to $10. Grass calves were mostly $9 cwt.

Hogs held unchanged at $16.35 dressed for the basic grade with sows at $13 dressed.

After a period of eating lamb in lieu of beef consumers welcomed beef back to their diet and lamb prices took a drop of 50 to $1 cwt. The close was at $12.50 for good ewes and wethers delivered by rail and $12 by truck. Opening lamb prices were $13 generally with show lambs from the Manitoulins selling at $13.50 for first grade. Bucks closed at $11.25 to $11.50 cwt. and culls at $9 to $10. Sheep were unchanged at from $4 to $9.50 cwt according to quality with a few light ewes at $10.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

Britain Prepared To Buy Extra Quantity Cheese

Ottawa, Oct. 16—(CP)—The Agricultural Department announced that the British Food Ministry has advised that it is prepared to purchase an additional quantity of cheese above the 125,000,000 pounds provided for in an agreement covering the twelve months ending March 31 next.

"The additional quantity which the Ministry has agreed to accept will, it is believed, permit of export to the ministry of the greater part and probably all the October made cheese which may be tendered for export," the Department said.

Good pasture conditions and better prices were believed to have enabled the Agriculture Department to run ahead of schedule in the export of cheese in the present year, and it was understood that several million pounds in excess of 125,000,000 could probably be shipped if production remains as in past months.

OFFICER WOUNDS SUSPECTED MAN ON DANCE FLOOR

400 Patrons of Avalon Hotel Near Hull Thrown Into Panic

ONE WANTED ESCAPES

Hull, Que., Oct. 16—(CP) — A Montreal man was shot and critically wounded last night on the darkened dance floor of the Avalon Hotel near Hull while four hundred patrons of the hotel were dancing to the music of an orchestra in the grill room.

The shooting climaxed a search by two Montreal detective-sergeants for persons wanted in connection with a series of hold-ups in Montreal.

Another man and woman, both of Montreal, were taken to Hull police station for questioning. Police are still seeking a third man, who escaped in the confusion following the shooting.

John McEwen, 22, is in hospital with a bullet-wound in one lung. Held for questioning are two persons who gave their names as John Cripton, 23 and Helen Atkinson, 26.

McEwen was shot by Detective-Sergeant Joseph Bedard of Montreal. Bedard was accompanied by Detective-Sergeant Henri Bond of Montreal and Detective Thomas Stoneman of Ottawa police.

Police and eye-witnesses related the incident in the grill room.

Explained to Manager

The three officers went to the hotel and told the manager, Ovila Melcohe, they wished to occupy a table while they looked for persons they wished to interrogate in connection with the holdups.

Later Bedard noticed one man he believed to be one of those sought.

He walked across the room to McEwen's table, took out his revolver, shoved it into McEwen's ribs and said: "Sit down and don't make a move."

Instead of complying, McEwen struck Bedard with his fist and knocked him to the floor. As he hit the floor, Bedard fired, striking McEwen in the left shoulder.

McEwen slumped to the dance floor. The girl rushed to his side as he dropped. Bond meantime detained one of the other men in the party but a third man escaped.

Taken to Hospital

McEwen was taken to a hospital in Hull where he was said to have a "50-50" chance of recovery.

Bedard told newspapermen afterwards: "He (McEwen) jumped me and I let him have it."

He said he and Bond were investigating the robbery of the Orpheum Theatre in Montreal last Tuesday, when three armed men took about $1,000 in cash. Also under investigation was a holdup in downtown Montreal last Saturday that netted $7,916 in cash and $76,540 in cheques from a Canada Packers, Ltd., truck.

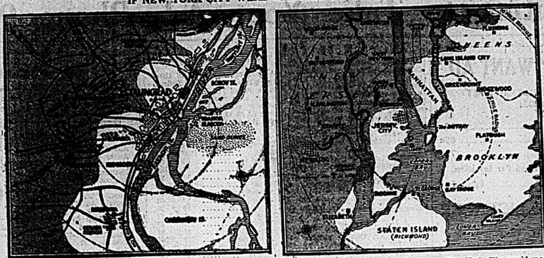
MANY JEWS ARRESTED

Another wave of Jewish arrests has swept Nazi-occupied Norway.

IF NEW YORK CITY WERE BESIEGED STALINGRAD



If you find it difficult to visualize what embattled Stalingrad looks like geographically, comparing its area to New York city will give you a clear picture. The shaded area in the Stalingrad map is the territory held by the Nazis. The same situation in New York City would mean that Edgewater, Hoboken, Newark, Union City, West New York, and Kearney, New Jersey, were in enemy hands.

SOME RUSSIANS HAD STAYED BEHIND

Two German soldiers dash madly for safety as a terrific blast sets an oil dump afire behind their lines. Russians who remained behind to make sure that the scorched earth policy was effectively carried out, blew up the oil wells at Krasnodar even after the Germans had moved in. This photo came from an enemy source.

Largest Military

from Japan. And Canada's boundless acres would provide plenty of living room for the Germans and the Japs.

But what of the Canadians? The answer is simple when one thinks what happened and what is still happening to the Poles, the Greeks and all the others, in terms of slow starvation, slave labor and mass executions.

The dollars invested in Victory Bonds now are fighting dollars which will return as Building Dollars when victory is won, to help build a future for Canada and Canadians.

For when victory is won, the dollars loaned to Canada will come back to Canadians to use as they wish — to build the homes they've dreamed of — the kind of future they now dream about. It is a small price to ask for victory—this foregoing of pleasures and comforts for a time so that Canadian dollars may be made available for war.

So then it is up to Hastings County to once again do its share to make this victory secure. It will mean sacrifices — but this county has known such things before.

"NOTHING MATTERS NOW BUT VICTORY."

NAZIS ADVANCE

The Russians were pressed back at various points — the noon communique reported German seizure of several streets — and numerical superiority of the assault force was announced. Little room was left for manoeuvres on the west bank of the Volga there.

Berlin Claims Volga Reached

(The Berlin radio claimed last night that German troops had reached the Volga on a two-mile front.)

Some 30,000 German infantrymen, rested by the week-end lull which Berlin broadcasts had implied was a preliminary to the abandonment of shock operations for the season, clustered irregularly in the shelter of firing points.

Hundreds were killed and more than three dozen of their tanks were knocked out of action in the repulse of seven attacks yesterday, the Red Army's High Command declared.

The Russians executed their retreat in the early morning, under cover of darkness and took positions to meet a resumption of the attack at the chill dawn.

With their backs to the Volga, the Russians fought stubbornly to frustrate the enemy efforts to drive a spearhead to the river and split Stalingrad's defences.

Dive-bombers, level bombers and fighters backed up the ground attacks. Two Nazi infantry divisions supported by 100 tanks were reported in the midnight communique to have moved ahead slightly in fierce fighting and further inroads were reported in the noon war bulletin.

16 Nazi Planes Downed

"Sixteen German planes were brought down by Soviet fighter planes and anti-aircraft gunners," it was announced.

At the same time the information bureau said attacking Russian troops improved their positions in local fighting against Axis flanking forces both northwest and south of of the Volga River city, in its 53rd day of siege.

A Red army detachment advanced somewhat northwest of Stalingrad and occupied more advantageous lines, the communique said, adding:—

"The Germans counter-attacked twice, but were hurled back."

Artillery batteries and patrols were active in other sectors.

Russian defences before the mountain passes and oilfields of the deep Caucasus were reported successfully maintained, despite the threat of a new armor-tipped wedge pushed into one sector of the Mozdok area.

"Our tanks beat off an enemy attack, smashed four German tanks, eight trucks and four guns and wiped out about 250 of the enemy," it was announced.

"In another sector a German infantry battalion, supported by eight tanks, tried to capture a height, but it was forced to retreat to its initial positions after losing a company."

(The Berlin radio claimed the Germans had captured the Dzerhinsky tractor factory and "broken the cornerstone of the Russian defence system in the northern sector," occupying the west bank of the Volga River along a two-mile front.

Reds Still Crossing River

(Quoting DNB reports, the radio said two formidable Russian fortresses remained in the same general area. These are the converted industrial plants "Barricade" and "Red October." It acknowledged that Red army reinforcements were still crossing the Volga by night; that the defenders still held blocks south of the Dzerhinsky plant and the downtown sector of the city.)

Aerial scouts reported the Germans had erected a number of dummy fortifications in an attempt to bluff off attacks by the Russian relief army northwest of the city.

Russian shellfire was reported to have dispersed enemy infantry which had concentrated for an assault.

"On other sectors our units attacked the enemy and occupied an advance line of enemy fortifications," the midnight communique said. "About a company of enemy infantry was wiped out."

A reconnaissance detachment operating on the Brysank front southwest of Moscow was credited with killing about 300 Germans and capturing a gun recently.

Provost Training Centre Formed At Camp Borden

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 16—(CP)—To keep up with the demands of the expanding army for provost men a new provost training centre is being established at Camp Borden, Ont.

There the men who do the internal police work for the army and look after its traffic control will get instruction in things a provost man has to know, such as provost duties and procedure, map reading, motorcycle riding, traffic control, "judo", the army's modified form of ju-jitsu, first-aid, weapon training, investigation, defence against aircraft.

Getting suitable provost men is one of the more acute internal manpower problems of the army.

Insofar as his duties relate to maintaining order and discipline among the troops he is expected to solve most of his problems by tact and intelligence.

Provost men are among the more important factors in keeping things running smoothly whether the army is in camp, on the march, on the battle field or on leave. They are guides, friends and counsellors to the troops and aides to good relations between the troops and the civilian populations.

16 Companies in Canada

The Canadian Provost Corps has some 16 companies in Canada and is responsible for 21 detention barracks. In addition it is responsible for supplying reinforcements for provost companies serving with the troops overseas.

Members of the corps patrol streets in cities where any sizable number of soldiers are on leave and ride on trains with troops. In the railway stations they man information booths and keep soldiers advised about train schedules and accommodation.

They are also responsible for escorting prisoners of war from ports to camps and on transfers between camps.

Due to their services complaints about the conduct of troops on leave which were rather frequent back in 1940 have been reduced to a minimum.

Trace Deserters

One of the biggest jobs of the corps is tracing and picking up deserters and absentees. Recently the job of locating men who received 30 days' compulsory training and were recalled but failed to report has been turned over to the corps.

The provost men are among the first into hostile territory and the last to leave it. The provost corps had men at the Battle of Dieppe and they suffered heavy casualties.

When the army as a whole moves into battle the men of the provost corps on their motorcycles will be in the van. They will be standing at street corners, waving trucks and tanks through under fire. They will be keeping tab on civilians in newly-occupied territory, finding out those who are on the side of the enemy and utilizing the services of those who are friendly.

THE MINISTER HELPS

He praises God and passes the ammunition. True, the ammunition is in the form of scrap at the moment, but the Rev. Anthony C. He is smashing up an old boiler into handy pieces for salvage.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night, and after supper we were building things with my Bolder Dam Erector Set while pop was reading the paper, me building a grain elevator and Artie building a suspension bridge, and Artie reached for something in the box and his elbow went right into my grain elevator and knocked the whole thing over as if I had never started, and I said, Aw hay, now look at that, you big clumsy baboon.

Easy, easy, pop said. Mistakes will happen among the best contractors and builders, he said, and I said, Well good night I told him about 4 times to keep over where he belonged, the dum hippopotamist.

Let's keep our animal friends out of this entirely pop said. If you look at the affair reasonably you are bound to admit that the occurrence was sheerly accidental without the slightest suspicion of malice or sabotage. So rather than being unfair to Artie and your own higher instincts by venting your spleen on an innocent party, why not be philosophical and simply rail against the fates? That's what the Greek poets of old used to do, and their golden railings are being studied by college students all over the world to this day, he said, and I said, Okay, pop, I'll be philosophical.

Which I was saying to Artie, Oh well, I guess you couldn't help it. It's just the fault of the fates you were born to be such a naturally clumsy jerk you cant take 2 steps without tripping over your own feet unless there's somebody else's feet around to trip over, I said, and pop said, Just a minute, please, that sort of thing probably sounds better in Greek after all. Do you speak any Greek? he said.

No sir I said, and pop said, Then you may have the choice of operating in silence or going to bed.

The result being operated in silence, starting to build my grain elevator over again with a fierce look at Artie every once in a while.

University Women Hold Opening Meeting Of Club Season

The University Women's Club of Belleville and District met on Thursday, Oct. 15, in the Collegiate with Miss A. C. Sweeney presiding.

An interesting resume of the minutes of the general executive of the Canadian Federation of University Women which met in May in Regina was read by the secretary. "There is a Land," was rendered by Mrs. Burgoyne and proved a most appropriate introduction for a paper given by Miss Billings concerning "Military Awards."

Considerable time was then spent in club business and discussion.

All women graduates of any university are urged to contact Mrs. Taylor 153 George Street, secretary, or Miss A. C. Sweeney, Bellevue Apts., president.

STEAMER CARIBOU TORPEDOED IN CABOT STRAIT

Blackest Maritime Tragedy in History Of Naval Warfare

137 Persons Perish As Steamship Caribou Rent by Terrific Explosion Oct. 14

101 RESCUED

By BOB DALDORPH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 17 (CP)—An Axis torpedo launched in the predawn dark has sent the steamship Caribou to the bottom, and 137 persons have perished in the loss of the passenger vessel on her run across Cabot from Nova Scotia to Newfoundland.

The blackest Maritime tragedy in the history of naval warfare off Canada's coast was lightened only by the Canadian navy's rescue of 101 out of the 238 men, women and children who had started off on the 101-mile trip only six hours before their ship was rent by an explosion on the morning of Oct. 14.

Fifty-four Canadians died in the travail of explosion and plunging ship and icy cold of strait water. Thirteen Americans were lost, and the dead included, too, a large group of Newfoundlanders and a number of Royal Navy seamen.

Sixteen women—one of them the first Canaian navy nursing sister to die on duty—were counted among the 135 missing and undoubtedly dead. Fourteen children — three of them from one Newfoundland family—were victims of the U-boat.

Of the Canadian dead, 35 were members of the army, navy and air force Eighteen were civilian passengers, and one was a member of the Caribou, operated by the Newfoundland government.

R.C.A.F. Lost 18 Men

The R.C.A.F. lost 18 men. Another 10 were lost from the army contingent aboard. Seven navy seamen died.

The Newfoundland crew of 46 gave up 31 men, fighting to the last to push their ship at the surfaced U-boat in an attempt to ram her. Capt. Ben Taverner, the Newfoundland skipper, went down with the two sons who served under him as officers.

The U-boat after launching its torpedo from under water, came to the surface to watch the end of the Caribou. As she broke water directly beneath a lifeboat and one or two life rafts, she upset them, and more victims were tossed to the waves.

For three hours the survivors struggled in the sea, dying one by one until daylight brought Canadian naval craft. It took another two hours before all those who still lived were taken aboard ship.

One lifeboat had started off with around 60 persons. When the rescue vessel pulled alongside, six in it were alive. The others had drifted off as the boat capsized several times. One man in it died just as the naval vessel hove alongside.

14 Children Fail to Reach Safety

Two persons were picked up alive, only to die on the way to shore. W. A. Glasgow, a Canadian Naval seaman from Verdun, Que., was one. The other was a blond boy of 15 months, whom nobody knew. He will be buried today, his identity still a mystery.

Only one of the 15 children aboard the Caribou lived to reach shore. He was 15-months-old Leonard Shiers of Halifax, who was carried away three times but managed to find a new rescuer each time. His mother was saved, too.

The Caribou's complement had only a few minutes to leave the sinking ship, and scores must have been carried down without ever reaching the deck. The explosion plunged the vessel into darkness, adding to the confusion.

Some of the survivors said she broke in two before slipping under. And half her life-saving equipment was smashed when the torpedo drove into her starboard side just before four o'clock in the morning, six hours after she had left North Sydney for Port Aux Basques, Nfld

The trip across the strait is an eight-hour haul, and the Caribou was near the shores of Newfoundland when death struck from below. Thirty-four bodies of those aboard later were picked up by Newfoundland ships and brought to that island.

Most of List Service Men.

The largest single group among the victims were servicemen, who numbered 57, including the Canadians; Britons, Newfoundlers in the Canadian army and navy and eight

"No Mistake About What Happened" Rescued Gunner Tells of Torpedoing

A FEARFUL NIGHT

Ottawa, Oct. 17—(CP)—Through the words of Gunner A. R. Fielding of Toronto and his wife, National Defence Headquarters last night gave the nation a dramatic picture of the torpedo-sinking of the Newfoundland - Nova Scotia ferry Caribou.

"I was asleep in the ship's lounge when the window suddenly shattered on top of me," said Fielding, in hospital in an East Coast Canadian port. "The explosion shook the whole ship and there was no mistake about what had happened.

"As fast as I could, I rushed below to see if my wife was out of her cabin. She was sharing a cabin with another lady. On the way I picked up a lifebelt. I got Zoe (Mrs. Fielding) up on deck; she had no lifebelt so I gave her mine. I threw her overboard. I didn't see her again.

"Some lady had her baby. She gave it to me and went below to get her other baby. I didn't see her again.

"I gave the baby to some fellow on one of the ship's rafts. I didn't see them again.

'Somehow or other I got on a lifeboat. It had been blown in half and the rest of it was turned upside down in the water. In fact, four lifeboats had been blown off the ship. We stayed on the upturned boat for hours. We were the last to be picked up five hours later.

"There were 12 of us when we started — six men and six women. Only two women and three men came through.

"We put the women on top of the boat. The men hung on to the rope. I was in the water all the time. The sea wasn't so bad when we were hit but it began to get rougher later on.

"I didn't see the submarine. It was pitch dark when we were hit. I didn't hear or see any machine-gun fire, just the depth charges from the escort ship. There was no light at all."

Fielding's wife was in another hospital at the same East Coast port.

"It was the first time I've ever been on a boat. I'd been sleeping when the woman who was sharing my cabin cried out 'Wake up! What's that?"

"I said, 'Oh, nothing.' I didn't realize what had happened. I wasn't in a hurry.

"Then the water came in. The woman who was with me wouldn't let me put my lifebelt on her. She had said before the lifebelts weren't any good. She slapped my face when I tried to put it on. Then my husband came. I didn't see her again.

"My husband took me up on deck. He put his lifebelt on me and threw me overboard. Is he all right? I didn't see him again.

"I was swimming around in the water for about an hour. Then some soldier picked me up and put me on a raft. He swam along beside me; then he disappeared. About three hours later a navy ship picked us up. They threw a rope to us.

"I lost everything I had. How am I going to get home?

"I was told where my lifeboat was. When I went up on deck it had been blown to pieces The water came in so fast nobody had a chance.

"They were all sleeping when it happened."

GASOLINE RATION FURTHER CUT BY OIL CONTROLLER

Value of Coupons Reduced From Four To Three Gallons In Five Provinces

EFFECTIVE MONDAY

Ottawa, Oct. 17 —(CP)— To conserve Canada's diminishing supplies of gasoline, the Munitions and Supply Department announced late yesterday a reduction in value of gasoline ration coupons in Ontario, Quebec and the four Western Provinces from four to three gallons.

The reduction, effective after the close of business tonight, means that gasoline coupons will have a uniform value throughout the Dominion. In the Maritimes, the unit value already is three gallons.

When gasoline rationing was first introduced last spring, the value was five gallons everywhere in Canada. Since then, there have been a number of regional alterations to meet local supply shortages.

Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle, who issued the reduction order, recalled that Munitions Minister Howe had said in a speech Sept. 17 that Canada's reserves of gasoline were then about 20,000,000 gallons lower than a year previously and that stocks of crude oil and unfinished petroleum products were lower by 40,000,000 gallons.

Situation Not Improved

"Unfortunately," Mr. Cottrelle said, "the position has not improved and our supplies are still dwindling."

Available transportation facilities at present are not adequate to bring in enough crude to meet current demands.

The Oil Controller said demand for oil has increased to record proportions and added "as long as this falls short of total requirements, the motorists of Canada may expect to receive less and less gasoline."

The newly-announced cut means that motorists in "AA" category everywhere in Canada will receive from 48 to 60 gallons to last them until next April 1. Altogether 225,000 drivers are being reduced from "A" category to "AA"—the new rating for those using cars for non-essential purposes.

The annual allowances for drivers in higher categories under the reduced value will be as follows: "A" — 180 to 243 gallons; "B" — 180 to 348; "BX" — 396 to 516; "C" — 504 to 648; "D" — 840 to 1,083 "E" — 1,164 to 1,500.

2 Naval Officers Receive Mention

Ottawa, Oct. 17 — (CP) — Two officers of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, Lieut. F. E. K. Udell of Montreal and Sub-Lt. T. D. Hyslop of Hamilton, have been mentioned in dispatches, Navy Minister Macdonald announced.

Lieut. Udell was mentioned for "good service in action with an Italian submarine."

'He displayed great resource and determination as the gunnery control officer during a surface action with the Italian submarine," his citation said. "His orders were clear and his judgment accurate and a considerable measure of the success of our gunnery was due to his direction."

Lieut. Hyslop was mentioned for "good service in escort of a convoy to Malta." He was recommended "for devotion to duty, cheerfulness in trying conditions, and untiring and efficient service"

Food Used as Weapon By Germans to Force Co-operation of Captives

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Oct. 17 (CP)—In all history there is nothing to compare with the inhuman cruelty now being practised by the Germans on millions of men and women throughout Europe—forcing them to work in the fields, factories and mines of the Reich or starve.

The Nazis are using food as a weapon, just as they use the firing squad and the concentration camp, to force collaboration from the captive states of Europe. They need men and women to take the place of the millions now in their armed forces, particularly to make up the material losses created by the Russian campaign and the Allied bombing raids on German factories and arsenals.

To get these workers, Germany is drawing the rack tighter and tighter on the captive countries. When Goering told the German people that before they went hungry the peoples of the occupied lands would be allowed to starve, he was not only reassuring the Germans but also was emphasizing his blunt threat to the captive nations.

The Germans are planning that hunger, cold and physical threats will get them the slave labor they must have this winter to prepare for the inevitable two-front war or multi-front war they will face in 1943. Their plan is simplicity itself: Drain all food from France, Belgium, Holland, Norway and such Balkan countries as Yugoslavia and Greece and workers will "volunteer" for jobs in the Reich in order to escape starvation.

Face Suffering, Death

It was expected here that Europe, with the exception of Germany, will face suffering and death this winter on a scale never experienced before in all its history. It is likely that hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, will die of hunger and malnutrition and that future generations will be scarred by the privations and sufferings of those who survive.

As for Germany, itself, there probably will be no actual suffering this winter. Before the war, the Reich was at least 85 per cent self-sufficient in food and most authorities here agree that it has an adequate supply, perhaps as adequate as Britain. The severe winter and late spring may have injured German food production to some extent but, as an offset to that, the Nazis have under their control practically all the arable land of Europe.

The Ukraine probably has not yielded anything like the return the Germans expected, one reason being the thoroughness with which the Russians destroyed crops and machines and scattered and evacuated skilled workers. But it has added to Germany's potential resources, if the war lasts long enough.

Italy Stripped.

It is difficult to say what European countries will suffer most this winter but authorities here suggest that Greece, Belgium and Yugoslavia probably occupy that unenviable position with Norway, Holland and perhaps France not far behind. Even Italy, once proud and boastful member of the axis, has been stripped of surplus food by the GeGrmans and rations are low, even allowing for the frugality of the normal Italian diet.

Authorities here sometimes are frankly dubious of Russia's ability to feed all her people this winter, considering the vast agricultural lands that have been lost to the Germans and rations are low, even have been wrong before in their estimate of the realiience and stamina of the Russian people and in their under-estimates of Russian preparations for this year.

Meanwhile food is being shipped to Russia by both Canada and the United States and there is no outward sign of acute shortages.

CREST OF FLOOD AT WASHINGTON, FOUR KNOWN DEAD

Seawalls Are Strengthened Against Raging Potomac and Its Tributaries

MANY HOMELESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 — (AP) —The rolling, debris-laden crest of the worst flood in Washington history roared down on Washington early today, leaving a mounting toll of dead, homeless and damage in its wake over nearby lowland areas of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

With full force of the record flood yet to strike, a miniature army of men and machines — mobilized by presidential order—worked through the night and early-morning hours, raising and strengthening seawalls against the raging Potomac River and its swollen feeder streams.

And as the water crept up inch by inch, gaining on the workers, more and more threatened areas were evacuated, adding to the emergency flood and shelter problems of the already hard-pressed Red Cross crews.

Scores Missing

While official reports listed only four known dead, scores were missing in the tri-state area and the homeless ran into thousands. Officials said damage already is being reckoned in terms of millions of dollars.

Front Royal, Va., remained marooned and both Winchester and Culpepper, Va., were still isolated early today as were several smaller cities and communities throughout the flooded territory.

With the Rappahannock River also on the rampage, Fredericksburg, Va., was reported hardest hit. Although the 45-foot-high flood waters that brought its worst disaster in history and left at least 200 families homeless had begun to recede, the city remained in dire straits.

It had no electric power, its drinking water supply was contaminated and there was little hope of either being restored within the next two days. More than 10,000 typhoid inoculations were being given, and citizens were ordered to boil all drinking water.

NAZIS TO TREAT ALL PRISONERS WITHOUT FAVOR

Reprisals Will be Taken on All Allied Prisoners for Any "Mistreatment"

NO DISTINCTION

London, Oct. 17 (CP) — The Berlin radio, quoting the German high command, said last night the German government has decided to treat its prisoners as a unit and any "mistreatment" of German prisoners on any front "will have to be paid for by the entirety of war prisoners taken by German soldiers without regard to such prisoners' nationality."

The controversy over the shackling of prisoners thus was advanced another step by the German high command, which said it felt obliged "not only to protect the honor of German soldiers, but also to secure the humane treatment of German prisoners in the hands of the enemy . . ."

The Berlin announcement said that if German soldiers were "mistreated" on the Russian front, reprisals would be taken on Allied prisoners in German hands, whatever their nationality.

The fettering of prisoners as a reprisal was started by the Germans last week. The Germans said 1,376 British and Canadian prisoners in Germany were fettered in reprisal for the binding of German soldiers during the Canadian-led raid on Dieppe August 19. Britain and Canada then took similar action against a like number of German prisoners of war.

Prime Minister Churchill announced Tuesday that German prisoners in Britain would be unchained if the Germans took the same action toward British prisoners. Pending a report from Switzerland, the intermediary in the dispute, there has been no further action. Canada also is attempting to seek a mutual agreement with the Germans.

Authoritative British sources declined to comment on the latest German statement.

Three Youths Trapped and Burned To Death in Disused House in Weston

Toronto, Oct. 17 —(CP)— Three youths were trapped and burned to death today in a fire at a disused building in the suburb of Weston. Police said the building was formerly the site of an "athletic club" which had been padlocked under anti-gambling laws.

How the trio got into the building was not known. Their bodies were found when firemen broke in to subdue the blaze.

The victims: Robert Duncan Campbell, 17; John Hopkins, 19 Kenneth Rhodes, 16.

FACTORY DISTRICT IN N. STALINGRAD TAKEN BY NAZIS

Fourth Withdrawal Of Soviet Troops Announced by Noon Communique

CONSTANT ATTACKS

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Oct. 17 (AP).—Stalingrad experienced her darkest hours of siege today with announcement of the fourth in a series of Red army retreats before a German field force hammering through suburban factory areas toward the Volga.

The Germans occupied an industrial settlement which had been a battlefield for weeks north of the city's heart and attempted to expand both north and south against the Soviet flanks.

Although the Russians were forced to abandon the settlement under German bombing, tank attacks and the fire of some 30,000 infantrymen, the newspaper Red Star said they checked the enemy outside that district. The invaders regrouped.

Later in this fourth day of the new German offensive the Soviet information bureau announced a withdrawal in one sector, not specifically identified, and dispatches said the battle was intensified as further Nazi reserves swung into line to bolster the shock forces already numerically superior.

Advance At Heavy Cost.

A fourth withdrawal of Soviet forces at Stalingrad was announced by the noon communique, which also reported that "at heavy cost, the Germans managed to advance slightly" in a plane-supported attack southeast of Novorossisk.

"In the Stalingrad area our troops beat off constant enemy attacks," the communique said in a summarizing sentence, and it reported the Russians defending one street had killed 350 Germans and destroyed 23 tanks.

But following that came the statement that "in another sector a Soviet detachment withdraw to new defence positions."

The Red army's high command—reporting the third Russian retreat within 48 hours before the revitalized Nazi offensive—announced at midnight that "after stubborn fighting, our units withdrew from one of the city's settlements."

Large Enemy Fleet Sighted Near Shortland Islands

Major Sea Battle Greater Than Midway or in Coral Sea Shaping Up

RADIO SILENT

Washington, Oct. 17 —(AP)— An apparently decisive conflict for domination of the southwest Pacific raged in the Solomon Islands today between American forces and strengthened Japanese troops supported by a heavy invasion fleet.

The enemy's effort to dislodge United States Marines and army troops from the important Guadalcanal airbase which the Americans seized last August brought heavy fire from newly-landed Japanese artillery and bitter ground fighting.

In addition to enemy transports which have poured reinforcements to the Japanese-held north shore of the island and the warships which have shelled American positions, the navy reported yesterday that a large enemy fleet concentration had been sighted near Shortland Islands, 260 miles northwest of Guadalcanal.

Naval quarters saw likelihood of a major sea battle, possibly even greater than at Midway or in the Coral Sea. But the navy carefully guarded its fleet movements and gave no indication immediately as to what counter activity might be under way.

Allied Australian headquarters, however, reported last night (today, Australian time) that Allied planes, continuing to support American forces in the Solomons had bombed a large enemy merchant ship at Buin across the passage from Shortland Island. The results were not learned.

The navy announced also that some of its motor torpedo boats were engaged in the Solomons action and said they had attacked enemy warships shelling the American positions on Guadalcanal, the night of Oct. 14-15, and reported a probable hit on a cruiser.

Helds Press Conference

While army and navy officials awaited word on progress of the fighting on Guadalcanal, Navy Secretary Knox said "there's no concealing there's a good, stiff, tough fight on which has not yet been determined."

Replying to a press conference question yesterday whether he thought the positions could be held, Knox declared:

"I certainly hope so. I expect so. I don't want to make any predictions, but every man out there, afloat and ashore, will give a good account of himself."

While the Americans fought to hold their Guadalcanal springboard for an aerial offensive against the rest of the Japanese-occupied islands, the enemy invaders in the Aleutian Islands at the opposite end of the Pacific war front were undergoing a terrific bombardment.

The navy reported that on Thursday explosives and incendiaries were rained on Kiska, the last Japanese foothold in the islands. Many large fires were started and three enemy seaplanes destroyed on the water.

Planes, operating from the army's advanced base in the Andreanof group of the Aleutians, met no resistance from enemy planes but one American fighter was lost, apparently by anti-aircraft fire.

Canadian airmen are aiding in operations in the Aleutians area but the navy communique did not say whether they took part in the latest action.

Nazis Redistribute Their Air Strength

London, Oct. 17 —(CP)— Advices from neutral sources, the Daily Express said today, indicate the Germans recently have redistributed their air strength, sending strong reinforcements to Italy, North Africa, the Ruhr and Rhineland, Northern Norway and the Stalingrad front.

To reinforce these theatres, a considerable number of planes apparently were withdrawn from the Balkans, the central sector of the Russian front and northwestern Germany, declared Basil Cardew, air correspondent of the Express.

According to the best available information, Cardew said, Germany's first-line planes now are grouped approximately as follows:—

Eastern Front — 2,500 planes, with nearly half of these in the Stalingrad area.

Mediterranean — 8800 planes, nearly half in Southern Italy and Sicily.

Western Europe — 800, including 550 fighters and 250 bombers.

Northern Norway—300, mostly fighters and torpedo carriers.

Germany — 300 to 500, including a large number of night fighters.

Pilots Commended for Exemplary Conduct and Devotion to Duty

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Forces in Alaska, Oct. 17 — (CP) — Out of the remote regions of Canada's Western front line of defence there came today the epic story of how Flt. Sgt. Frank M. Baily of Montreal and Flt. Lt. Dick Preston of Ottawa won commendations for exemplary conduct and devotion to duty.

It is the story of the crash of an R. C. A. F. plane on a communications flight from a West Coast Canadian station July 21, of an 11-day trek through the Alaskan wilderness by Baily and two companions and of Baily's direction of a rescue plane flown by Preston to the scene of the crash where two others of the crew were found alive.

The plane crashed into a mountainside in dense fog 200 miles from its station. Publication of the story was held up due to delay in gathering data for a court of inquiry.

Members of the crew were: PO. Pete Gault of Montreal, pilot; Bailey: Cpl. J. P. Donald of New Westminster, B. C.; Sgt. R. Roberts of Seattle; AC1 J. MacIntosh of Penticton, B. C.; AC1. T. Maylor of Toronto and AC1. T. Silberman of Vancouver.

Donald was killed in the crash. MacIntosh was drowned attempting to ford a glacial stream. Maylor and Silberman accompanied Baily in his 11-day walk to safety while Gault and Roberts were brought out by the rescue plane.

After the crash, which occurred in late afternoon, Baily was the first to regain consciousness. Although injured and groggy himself, he gave first aid to his comrades and helped bring Gault around with artificial respiration. Part of the metal of the cabin had to be chopped away to free the pilot.

The crash scattered parts of the plane over a wide area and the members of the crew were able to find only one box of emergency rations.

Baily took charge of the party. He sent Silberman, who had suffered a fractured jaw, and MacIntosh on patrol in search of some sign of habitation. He told them to leave bits of torn papers on their trail so he could follow them at the first opportunity. Gault was laid on an improvised stretcher of boughs and ferns and they Baily put splints on Roberts' leg, which had been fractured.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

GLEN ROY CREAMERY ENTERED AT NIGHT

Robbers broke and entered the Glen Roy Creamery, Pinnacle St., early Saturday morning, but were not rewarded for their efforts. Entrance was gained by breaking the glass of the main office door window and reaching inside to unlock the door. Inside the office the robbers ransacked the building as desk drawers were found strewn about. The robbers also knocked the dial knob from off the front of the company safe, but failed to gain entrance into the steel safe. While patrolling city police discovered the break-in and notified Mr. W. D. McNiven, creamery manager, who later investigated and stated nothing of value had been taken.

USED PEA-SHOOTERS TO ANNOY PATRONS OF LOCAL THEATRE

Two youthful pranksters opened the Hallowe'en season rather early this year as they were apprehended shooting peas through a pea-shooter in a local theatre Friday night. Occasionally a muffled cry would be heard above the sound pictures, as patrons would feel sudden stinging shots as they were hit by peas being shot in the darkness of the theatre. After several patrons had been hit, the theatre management finally apprehended two youthful lads in the gallery armed with pea-shooters and having the time of their young lives annoying other patrons. They were turned over to police and the pea-shooters confiscated. "It was fun watching the people jump when hit on the back of the neck," admitted one lad, but apparently the recipients saw no fun attached to the practice.

TUBING REMOVED FROM ALL SIGNS

For protection purposes the glass tubing of all Neon signs in Belleville is being removed and stored for the duration. With restrictions placed on electric power and store signs being abolished by government order for the duration of the war, the Neon Sign Company is removing all glass tubing for protection purposes only. No electric advertising lights or signs are permitted for the duration of the war.

School Attendance For September Is 93.7 Per Cent

Extracts from the reports of the Public School Principals of the schools of the City of Belleville reveal that during the month of September the school attendance average was 93.7 per cent, a slight increase over last year's average. The Board of Education and school principals of the city are engaged in a program to increase the school attendance of pupils in Belleville, and the first month's report received at the Board meeting last night proved encouraging, Secretary-Administrator L. A. Kells revealed.

The enrolment at each city school and attendance percentage is as follows for September:

	Total Enrolment	Attendance percentage
Queen Alexandra	453	93.16
King George	349	94.01
Queen Mary	373	93.72
Queen Victoria ..	448	93.08
Auxiliary (QAS) ..	15	98.82

For the year 1941-42 certificates were given to 42 pupils in Belleville Public Schools for perfect attendance records and the absence of tardiness from school. Listed by schools the number of pupils who were neither late nor absent during the school year, read as follows: Queen Alexandra 6; King George 11; Queen Mary 9, and Queen Victoria three. Similarly by schools the number of pupils who were not absent but late during 1941-42 read as follows: Q.A.S. two; K.G.S., four; Q.M.S. four, and Q.A.S., three, making a total of 29 pupils who were neither late nor absent and 13 who were not absent a single day, but late.

Night War Workers Being Disturbed By Unnecessary Noises

It is a recognised fact that every muscle must be stretched and every ounce of energy put into the effort to assure ultimate victory for the United Nations in this titanic world struggle. However, if civilian war workers are to be expected to work with the utmost of efficiency and keep the production of war materials at a peak level, they must have their quota of rest while not employed.

Recently families of war workers in Belleville have sought the assistance of the city police in an effort to have less disturbing noises in the vicinity of where war workers are sleeping during the day time. The continued barking of dogs is one of the principal abuses confronting night war workers, the police authorities were told. Citizens are requested to assist in assuring less disturbances in the vicinity where war workers are sleeping during the day, Chief R. W. Probert urged today.

Unidentified Baby Buried With Honors

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 17 (CP). — A blonde baby boy whose name nobody knows will be buried here today—the only unidentified victim of the steamship Caribou's sinking to be brought ashore here.

The boy, about 15 months old, died while a rescue ship was bringing him into Sydney after he had been picked out of the waters of Cabot Strait. He had been rescued by Purser Thomas Fleming of the Caribou, the ship's only surviving officer.

A signet ring with the initial "P" was the only possible mark of identification about the infant. Apparently the adult he was travelling with had been lost in the sinking.

A naval detachment from the dock yard here will march at his funeral. The Navy League and other organizations will be represented, too, at the funeral.

A two-piece life saving suit that can be donned in half a minute has been invented to keep a victim of a marine disaster afloat in water.

Loan Canvassers Told Canada Must Not Fail to Provide The Money to Finance War

Salesmen and canvassers of the Hastings County Victory Loan campaign who on Monday morning will begin their canvass in all parts of the county, received final campaign instructions and listened to inspirational addresses tokening early realization of their objective as they attended a pre-campaign supper at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday evening.

Chairman of the county campaign, Mr. James Barclay, acted as chairman for the meeting and presented a brief general picture of the campaign. He stated the campaign had been broken down into four principal phases — Special Names; Payroll Savings Section, open to all firms employing 50 or more persons; General Sales and Public Relations. Chairmen of the various committees were introduced to the assembly by Mr. Barclay.

The objective of $2,100,000 for Hastings County seemed like a lot of money, stated Mr. Barclay, but he prophesied if canvassers and salesmen carried their full weight, "it would not be such a big job."

Big Job Ahead

Charles McCutcheon, divisional organizer, Toronto, spoke briefly and declared in the words of a young British war guest that the successful completion of the Third Victory Loan would mean "this is not a some other time job."

"We have a big job ahead," warned Mr. McCutcheon, "but we went into this war of our own free will. We ask for, soldiers offer their all, their lives, and we must not fail in our part."

"Canada is asking for $750,000,000 but we are going to raise it," stated the speaker. "This time there is more money in the banks and greater co-operation will be received from the bank managers. There is the inducement of a greater rate of interest from bonds."

"All that we Canadians hold dear is at stake," continued Mr. McCutcheon. "Our very lives, our way of living and our religious beliefs. The occupation of European countries by the Nazis was only a means toward an end—and that end was the North American continent."

Much Depends on Salesmen

"We are going to get this money because we have got to get it," concluded Mr. McCutcheon. "Canadians could never live down the shame if the necessary arms were not furnished our fighting forces. It depends upon the salesmen Their's is a great responsibility—but a glorious responsibility."

Other speakers of the evening were committee chairmen and included Jack Trudeau, Jack McVeigh, Lorne McDougall, W. Ireland, Trenton; Erle Denyes, W. E. Tummon, Rev. Dr. Howard and W. B. Deacon, who was chairman of all three victory loans during the last Great War

Mr. Jack Trudeau as chairman of the General Sales committee spoke a few words of instruction to the salesmen claiming "the minimum share was the utmost of ability."

"Work hard, work together, and do the job," were his concluding remarks.

See Pictures

Prior to the supper hour, salesmen from all parts of the county witnessed two war pictures at the McCarthy theatre. The first of the two short reels "The World in Action" depicted the many world nations in total war in all three elements. The second reel "The People's War", showed the intensive preparation, factory production and army training taking place in the Allied countries that the Axis powers might be defeated.

The final scenes of the last picture were taken from the renowned war picture "Mrs. Miniver" and showed the parish priest calling for the utmost effort of the people in this, "the people's war," as he speaks to his congregation from the pulpit in his bomb-wrecked church.

The gymnasium at the Y.M.C.A. was appropriately decorated with flags and Victory Loan posters for the supper party attended by the salesmen and committeemen. A break in the evening's long list of speech-making was provided by a period of community singing with Harold Carruthers acting as song leader and Leo Riggs at the piano. The Women's Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. provided the supper, with the evening being concluded with the showing of a third picture "Free Canadian Way," depicting the contrast between the present Canadian way of life and the oppression and brutality now reigning in countries of occupied Europe. The picture was shown through the courtesy of the Coca-Cola Company.

Obituary

MRS. MARGARET ELIZABETH EVANS

After an illness of about two years' duration, Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Evans, widow of Charles L. Evans, died at her home, 47 Alexander Street, on Friday afternoon, Oct. 16th.

The late Mrs. Evans was born eighty-three years ago in Brantford and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hitchon. The greater part of her life was passed in Brantford and for the past twenty-five years she made her home in Belleville. In religion Mrs. Evans was a member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church and when age and health permitted she took an active part in church work and was highly esteemed.

Surviving her are two sons, Mr. Frank W. H. Evans and Mr. Harry A. H. Evans, both of Belleville; one sister, Miss Frances Hitchon, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

(Brantford paper please copy.)

Community Service Headquarters Moved To Local Y.M.C.A.

Campaign headquarters of the Community Service appeal for the Y.M.C.A., the Salvation Army and the local V.O.N. just recently completed, have been moved to the Y.M.C.A., it has been announced by campaign officials.

Canvassers who have not yet completed their canvass or who have not turned their reports in, are requested to do so as quickly as possible, reporting to the Y.M.C.A., as it is desired to close up the campaign as quickly as possible.

The amount received during the campaign is still considerably below what is required to enable the three organisations (Salvation Army, the V.O.N. and Y.M.C.A.) to carry on their program of work and more money is urgently needed, it was stated by officials.

Any persons who have not been approached or who have not contributed, and would still like to contribute toward this worthy fund are asked to leave their contribution at the Y.M.C.A. or telephone 413. If convenient to call at the Y.M.C.A. a representative will call at the home.

Although the work of the campaign is still not completed the officers and committee take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of the canvassers and others who assisted in the campaign, also to those who so kindly contributed toward the campaign. The personal thanks of Mr. C. B. Morgan, general chairman; J. E. Shortt, secretary and M. P. Duff, treasurer, is extended to all taking part.

Restoration of Statutory Holidays in Ontario Schools Recommended by the Board

Resolution Will be Forwarded to Minister of Education at Toronto

OTHER BUSINESS

The Belleville Board of Education approved of a resolution recommending to the Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario the restoration, within the schools of the Province, four statutory holidays of definite Empire significance which were recently cancelled by order-in-council of the Dominion Government, at the Friday evening meeting of the Board. Mr. H. B. Fetterly introduced the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

The following resolution was adopted and forwarded to the Minister of Education:

"Whereas the Dominion Government, by order-in-council, has eliminated all statutory holidays of definite Empire significance;

"Therefore, be it resolved that the Board of Education of the City of Belleville respectfully requests the Honourable, the Minister of Education to order due observance of Empire Day, Victoria Day, the King's Birthday and Remembrance Day in the schools of the Province of Ontario."

The Board granted Mr. Elton Burgess, B.A., mathematics teacher at the Belleville Collegiate, leave of absence for the duration in order he might take up instructional duties with the R.C.A.F. immediately.

Quota for Loan Set

Chairman B. C. Sisler announced that the quota for the school staffs of Belleville for the forthcoming Victory Loan had been set at $9,000.

The report of the Advisory Vocational Committee revealed there would be no night school operated by the Board for the duration, or at least during the period while the War Emergency Classes are functioning at the Collegiate. A similar set-up of night classes operated under the War Emergency Training will be introduced, Acting Principal W. S. Turner reported. The Board approved of certain vocational classes being permitted to visit local industrial plants, in a body, for the purpose of observing industry in full production.

The admission of Grades VII and VIII pupils to the Vocational School from Belleville Elementary Schools was adopted thus including students from St. Michael's Academy. Already seventeen pupils from Elementary Schools in the city to a pre-vocational class have been received, the committee added.

The reports of School Attendance Officer F. D. Wiggins and School Nurse Gordon were received with favor.

Resolution Adopted.

Under school management discussion was heard regarding the minimum age of beginners in the public schools at the recommendation of the local public school principals the following resolution was adopted:

(a) "That pupils be admitted for registration only at the opening of school in September of each year, unless they are eight years of age or over.

(b) "That in September no pupil be admitted unless he is six years old, or will be six years old before January 1 following."

The names of Mrs. Emma Bristol, Mrs. Ivy Rikley and Mrs. Lena Elliott were added to the list of supply teachers for the city public schools. Chairman Sisler moved the adoption of the Advisory Committee report, C. D. Crosby the public school management, E. A. Geen the collegiate management, W. J. Harrison the property and supply and H. Legate the finance committee report. All accounts were ordered paid.

A plan for the admission of pupils from St. Michael's Academy (High School section) to the defence training courses in the Belleville Collegiate Institute was adopted. The program was outlined by Principal Turner's report to read: "Seven periods a week can be opened to the students of St. Michael's Academy and it would only be necessary to combine classes from the Collegiate with those from St. Michael's in only three periods of our defence training programs."

To Date From Sept. 30.

Regarding teachers joining the armed services the Board moved "that in the future, when leaves of absence for military service are granted to employees, reinstatement is to date from the first of September following the application for such reinstatement; and that employees applying for reinstatement must have their applications in the hands of the secretary by the 30th day of June immediately preceding the new school term."

Mr. George Tilley, caretaker at the Collegiate for the past 20 years, was recently forced to resign owing to ill health, the matter of employing a new janitor was left in the hands of Secretary L. A. Kells and Acting-Principal W. S. Turner. The lady teachers of the city were granted the use of the Collegiate gymnasium one evening a week for the playing of badminton. The permission was given subject to arrangements with the school principal. Acting-Principal Turner's, request for a sound projector, which also could be used for a public address system at a cost of $495.85 was referred to the Finance Committee upon motion of Mr. Geen.

French Text Book Changed

The Board granted a change of French text books in the Collegiate, the newly-approved French grammar, known as "Cours elementaire de Francais." The local unit of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary was granted the use of the Collegiate auditorium for the evening of Oct. 26th when Captain Hood, of the Civilian Defence Committee will be the speaker to address a public meeting on the need of preparedness for air raids.

The Board also authorised a new accounting system to equitably divide and separate its bank accounts as to Collegiate and Vocational and Public School accounts. The request of the Elementary School Teachers for a cost-of-living bonus was referred back to the Public School Management committee for consideration.

Public School Inspector J. R. Pickering presented a report of inspection of King George School that revealed seven pupils in the school had a perfect attendance record for the school year 1941-'42. The pupils named were: Donald Ashley, Lois Wood, Douglas Soule, Jack Ethier, Marie Marinoff, Ronald Sullivan and Douglas Vanderwater.

The entire personnel of the Board: Messrs. B. C. Sisler, C. D. Crosby, F. G. Cushing, E. A. Geen, H. B. Fetterly, W. J. Harrison, Arthur Hill, J. H. Legate, R. R. Stiver and J. McIntosh, was present.

Regional Holstein Championships At Roseneath

Prize winners at local Black and White Days held in eight Central Ontario counties competed for the Regional Championships at Roseneath, Friday, October 9, with forty-six exhibitors showing 133 cattle. Top animals are eligible for consideration for the all-Canadian selections that are to be made this year for the first time by a committee composed of judges at the leading Canadian shows. The quality of the animals shown was excellent and Judge T. R. Dent, Woodstock, Ontario, had to make a number of very close decisions.

The Senior and Grand Champion Female was Tilly Rag Apple Triumph, the winner in an outstanding class of aged cows. She was shown by James C. Nelson & Son, Campbellford, who also brought out the Senior and Grand Champion Bull, Inka Supreme Posch, who headed the aged bulls. He will be remembered as the 1941 Reserve All-American three-year-old. Showing in fine form again this year, he made a great Grand Champion. The Reserve Senior and Reserve Grand Champion was the winning three-year-old, Eaton Hall Chieftain Fayne, shown by Archie Muir & Sons, Courtice. The Reserve Grand Champion Female was Cedar Dale Man-O-War Carol from the herd of M. J. Tamblyn, Orono. The Junior Champion Female was Dorothy Jewel Pontiac, shown by Lemmon Bros., Odessa, in the Senior Yearling Class, with reserve honors going to the Junior Yearling, High Point Patty Supreme, brought out by Smith Bros. Port Perry. Montyle Lochinvar 3rd, owned jointly by the Ontario County breeders, Harold Honey, Smith Bros., and Webster Bros., and winner of the Senior Yearling Class was named Junior Champion, while the Prince Edward County bull calf, Glenafton Admiral, owned by Fred Hubbs, A. Ronald Hyatt, B. R. Leavins & F. J. Webster was made reserve. Rivalry was keen in the County Herd Class with the first prize finally going to Durham and Northumberland second and Ontario third.

Earl Burnside, Madoc, won second and fifth prizes in the class for four-year-old cows, John Burnside, also of Madoc, had the second prize bull calf, while James Eagleson, Harold, took second prize in the senior yearling bull class.

SMALL RAID ON BRITAIN

London, Oct. 17 (CP)—German planes scattered bombs along the northeast coast of Britain during the night, causing some casualties and damage, but authoritative quarters said the raids were on a small scale.

One Nazi plane was shot down off the south coast this morning.

The R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. which attacked Calogne in force Thursday night, apparently did not return to the assault on Germany last night.

BLACKEST

American servicemen identified only by name.

The 49 civilian dead included Canadians, Newfoundlanders and Americans. There were 22 men, 15 women and 12 children among the civilian passenger dead. The children ranged in age from eight months to 16 years. Nova Scotia was hardest hit among the civilians, 11 from this province dying, including a crewman, Second Mate James Prosper of North Sydney.

Of all the communities that gave up lives to the torpedo's devastation, the little Newfoundland village of Channel suffered most. It lost sixteen men, fifteen of them members of the ship's crew and the sixteenth a civilian passenger.

Survivors said most of the crewmen stuck to the ship to the end, helping passengers off and trying to keep order in the milling mass of passengers. The one woman in the crew, Stewardess Bride Fitzpatrick of Newfoundland, was carried down with the Caribou.

The survivors themselves all were dressed in nothing but night clothes as they left the settling vessel. None had managed to cling to any personal possession in the long hours they fought for life in the dark.

Superintendent of Mines Lost.

Best known of the identified dead was Hugh B. Gillis, 61, mining engineer from Sydney. He was superintendent of mines and quarries for the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation and a former president of the Nova Scotia Mining Society.

Another victim was Nursing Sister Agnes Wilkie of Ardath, Sask., first Canadian Navy Sister to die on duty in this war. She held to a capsized lifeboat until exhaustion loosed her hold and the waves swept her away.

Navy Minister Macdonald said of her last night, "She died, in truth, in action."

One of the Royal Canadian Air Force men who perished was PO. J. H. Barrett of Curling, Nfld., who was on his honeymoon. His bride of two weeks, a Calgary girl, was saved. Barrett had received his wings only a fortnight before at Brantford, Ont.

Another couple, from Toronto, had better luck. Gnr. A. R. Fielding of the Canadian army and his wife were separated for hours, but eventually they found each other alive.

Fielding had gripped the slithery bottom of a capsized lifeboat for hours, watching as seven of his companions at intervals fell off, to die. He rescued a baby, too, but did not know what happened to it after he had passed it from the plunging ship to some people on a raft.

Most of those taken ashore here, a few hours after the sinking, were in good condition. About 25 were taken to hospital, most of them women, but none were in serious condition.

NEW APPOINTMENT

R. W. Keast, who was recently appointed a Vice-President of The Coca-Cola Company of Canada, to be in charge of the Company's advertising and sales promotion. Mr. Keast has for a number of years been head of the Contract Bottlers' Division of the Company, and will continue to head that group in addition to his new appointment.

FACTORY DISTRICT

Settlement Not Identified.

The communique did not identify the settlement, but the industrialized northern suburb was named previously as the target of a three-day-old drive by two German infantry divisions and auxiliary armored and aerial forces along a one-mile-wide salient.

Despite the setbacks, Russian troops "are repulsing furious attacks by numerically-superior enemy forces" in the area of the battered city, the communique announced in this 54th day of the siege.

Forty-three German tanks were declared added to the scrapheaps of war yesterday while about a regiment of infantry died in the struggle to decide whether the swastika or the Red flag was to fly above the ruins.

Red army artillery and infantry detachments demolished 28 blockhouses and various war material and annihilated about two companies of Nazi riflemen in local actions northwest of Stalingrad, the communique said.

Rumanian Troops Repulsed

"On another sector," it reported, "Rumanian units which were attempting to restore lost positions were driven back under the blows of Soviet troops. More than 200 enemy dead were left on the battlefield."

Large scale artillery and patrol activity was indicated on several front. The communique said scouts and snipers killed about 600 enemy officers and men in that area yesterday.

Details of the give-and-take battle of the central Caucasus were obscure, but it was announced that "in the mosdok area, fighting continued against enemy tanks and infantry."

"The men of 'X' unit killed about 200 enemy officers and men, destroyed five tanks and blew up an ammunition dump," the communique said. "On another sector, men under the command of Markin annihilated about one company of German infantry."

Novorossisk Sector Active.

Two other engagements were said to have cost the Germans more than 300 dead in this arena west of the Grozny oil fields.

The noon communique had this to say of the battle of the Western Caucasus:

"Southeast of Novorossisk enemy infantry, supported by aircraft, attacked our positions. At a cost of heavy losses the Germans managed to advance slightly. The men of 'X' unit repulsed enemy attacks, killing some 300 Germans."

Guerillas were reported active behind axis positions in the North Caucasus. Without specifying the period of time, the communique said they had killed 3000 Germans, derailed an ammunition train, blown up four bridges "and drained many tons of gasoline from German tanks."

Far northern troops of the Red army were said to have captured a Finnish strong point on the Karelian front.

"The Finns counter-attacked several times, losing about 200 killed," it was announced. "Soviet troops blew up enemy blockhouses and dugouts and captured a quantity of war material."

Belleville Section of W.M.S. Convenes in Plainfield United Church for Annual Fall Meeting

Ideal weather favored the meeting of representatives from the auxiliaries of the Belleville section of the United Church W. M. S. when they gathered for the Seventeenth Annual Fall Rally in Plainfield Church on the morning of October 14th, 1942, with Mrs. C. Macklin of Stirling presiding.

Morning devotions were in charge of members of the Aikens Auxiliary under the leadership of their president, Mrs. F. Westover, assisted by Mesdames Spafford and Hubble in prayers of Thanksgiving and Dedications; and by Miss Ruth Spafford leading in the responsive reading of Psalm.

Conveners for Nominating and Courtesy Committees were appointed, and press reporters for the Stirling, Trenton and Belleville papers.

Speaking on behalf of the Plainfield Church and Auxiliary, Mrs. (Rev.) Mackenzie cordially welcomed the delegates, saying that all W. M. S. representatives were exceedingly welcome because of "your Christian work in spreading the Gospel of Christ at home and abroad." Some people skeptically remark that missionary work does not accomplish much, but in the opinion of the Generalissimo and Madam Chiang Kai Shek of China the missionaries are much appreciated in that land because "thro' their ministrations they reach the hearts of my people."

In the absence of Mrs. W. S. Gordon, Presbyterial Literature Secretary, Mrs. Arthur McCreary of Eldorado presented the new literature for Bands, C. G. I. T. Groups, Mission Circles and Auxiliaries, emphasizing the books "Fit as a Fiddle," and "The New Canadian Loyalist" from the book shelf.

Mrs. W. F. Osborne, Presbyterial Secretary of Community Friendship opened her appeal for a wider use of this department of the W. M. S. interest by quoting from the Book of Books, "In as much as ye have done it to one of the least of these ye have done it unto Me." She said we must make our life a Friendship Road. To obey Christ's injunction "Go ye into all the world" might mean just to visit a neighbor across the street, to show our Christian interest and love toward all mankind.

Temperance Discussed

The challenge of an all out Temperance program for Canadians was vigorously presented by Mrs. Arnold Way, Presbyterial Secretary for temperance and good citizenship. Temperance is not a popular topic of conversation in our land these days, partly because it has to do with personal liberty, and Canadians are very proud of their national freedom and personal liberty. This department now includes Social Welfare, Racial Brotherhood and World Peace. No other department more closely touches the lives of individual W. M. S. women which should be standards of Faith by the Grace of God.

We are told that last year $250,000,000 was spent for liquor and that this year the sum will probably increase to $290,000,000; but we are glad to hear that some legislation is under consideration for remedying this waste of money and let us never lose hope that some day, somehow, our statesmen will become thoroughly convinced of the degrading effect of alcohol upon the younger generation, and the necessity of making our homes safe for our future Canadians. Fifty-three per cent of all voters are women. What could we not do if we cared enough? Above all things let us pray, after the capitulation of the German army in 1918, General Byng said, "Someone has been praying."

Mrs. Macklin announced the hymn "Let There Be Light," after which the morning offering was presented and dedicated by Mrs. Foster Wilson.

Missionary Talks on India

Mrs. S. Spafford, president of the Belleville Presbyterial introduced the guest of the day, Miss Dorothy Pierson, on furlough from India.

Reviewing the work of the pioneer missionaries to India and their many trials and discouragements, Miss Pierson said that God's power is always a marvel in accomplishment, considering the material He has to use. Our early missionaries worked first in and around Bombay, but later moved farther north where some Anglican Brothers were abandoning their stations because of seemingly impossible conditions. Dr. Campbell took over the work and later started twelve other stations with small buildings owned by the church but built on leased land, as nobody in India may own land except the natives.

Some people say that in India the missionaries have too good a time going to social functions and hobnobbing with officials and native princes. As teacher in a girls' school Miss Pierson's day began at 6 a.m. and often lasted until 11 or 12 o'clock, midnight. Missionaries are human as well as Canadians at home, and their health demands some recreation and an occasional break from work. It is always necessary that we keep on friendly terms with government representatives and with the Indian princes, for in many ways they can be of great assistance or hindrance to our work. Besides if the missionaries do not accept an invitation to social functions the Indian officials simply do not recognize the missionary when next they meet. Often when attending some social function the missionary has an opportunity of asking for and receiving some favor which will greatly facilitate the advancement of mission work.

Not Responsive

Indians are inclined to be friendly to the missionaries, but are unresponsive to the Christian religion. We have, however, no way of telling through what strong under currents of thought our influenbe is reaching; for not long ago a non-Christian prophesied that Indore with its population of 60,000, and approximately 800 Christians, will, within a decade, become a Christian city. From the missionary's point of view this seems hardly probable, but we cannot understand the working of the native mind. In 1906 a revival in Neemuch resulted in a new mission being opened in Banswara, for work among the Bhil people, which became a marvellous adventure and is still growing. There are many Christians in small villages surrounding the city and to reach these the missionary must live from twenty-five to fifty miles distant, because of a Christian's inability to secure land for building purposes; but we cannot always judge results by present appearances, so we must look ahead three or four generations for the results of today's labors. Miss Pierson related several moving incidents of the faith of Christian natives and their power for good.

Indian Women Courageous

On the whole, Indian women are more courageous than men. When strangers come to their villages it is the women who go out to meet them, while the men hide. They will yet be the leaders of their country, because they seldom say "can't," but are willing to try to do anything asked of them. Indian women have more character than the men and if given an opportunity to accept responsibility will face the world and will make of India one of the earth's outstanding nations. Everything done for the education of Indian women is extremely worth while for they are eager to learn and will put everything they know to good use. Compared to Canadian women, they are more energetic, poised and even more handsome.

During the afternoon session Miss Pierson spoke again telling more of the habits and customs of the Indian people.

Displays Indian Costumes

Interest in this afternoon address was greatly enhanced by the display of solid silver jewelry for toes and ankles, and the donning of a native sari as worn by ladies in Southern India.

Miss Pierson showed costumes of vivid color combinations as worn in different sections of the country. In the north, wide pajamas are worn by both men and women, gathered about the waist and ankles; in the central portion, wide petticoats are the fashion, with short blouses and saris of rather quiet hue; but further south the saris are more brilliant in color and are extravagantly embroidered with wide bands of real silver thread. Some missionaries don the native costume, but Miss Pierson does so only on the special occasions when she attends social functions of the government officials, or is the guest of a native prince or maharajah. Nevertheless the costume was most becoming and the effect very attractive.

Mrs. E. Farnsworth conducted the meditation period during the Quiet Half Hour, using the hymn "Take Time to be Holy" and taking verse 10 of Psalm 46 as the foundation for her remarks, "Be still and know that I am God."

More Religion Needed

We women of Canada with full liberty of thought, speech and movement, surrounded by comforts, luxuries and with money to purchase all our needs, how are we showing our gratitude for these blessings? Our churches are almost empty! We read of strikes, lotteries and places of pleasure that are full to over-flowing night and day. Will such conditions bring in God's Kingdom? Can Canada ever be used for His purposes under these conditions? Compare our surroundings with those of Russian women! which, think you, will build the stronger characters? Let us not forget that other nations and empires with greater civilizations than ours have passed out of existance. What can happen to Canada? Have we ever thought that God may be able to use a defeated Canada for the advancement of His cause, better than He can use a victorious one? Mankind anywhere can turn to God and be used by Him.

Mrs. Farnsworth closed her remarks with an allegory of an angel who wished to be a saviour of men, but learned by experience on earth that to do so meant living with men and sharing their pain, sorrows and even sins though the eyes become dimmed, the heart broken and the hands stained with blood.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session opened at one-thirty with a worship service conducted by ladies from the Gilead - St. Andrew's Auxiliary. The speaker closed her remarks with these closing lines:

"But let me seek with earnest care
To have my thoughts go with my prayer."

Over 200 Attend

The roll call was answered by representatives from thirty-one auxiliaries making a total attendance of well over the two hundred mark, which more than reached the expectations of all interested, owing to existing gas restrictions and the wide scope of territory covered by the Belleville section.

The secretary, Mrs. Harrison, then gave the story of the year's accomplishments in her usual interesting and inspiring manner, disclosing practical results of work well done throughout the section. Some people ask, "How much good can groups of W. M. S. ladies do in times like these?" History has shown that the Church of Christ has always gone forward during persecution and disaster, and during the past year our auxiliary membership and givings have increased, and we thank God that this is so. But, even with this increase, only sixty-one percent of women in our United Churches are engaged in missionary work. Aikens reports ninety-eight percent of women belonging to the W. M. S.; Carmel, Gilead, West Huntingdon and Zion report seventy-five percent. Let us increase our membership, and our potential usefulness! It can be done.

Systematic Giving

Systematic giving is used in all auxiliaries to some extent. Let us not forget that "Today's tasks are greater than yesterday's vision." We learn of our accomplishments through the reports in our Blue Book and our monthly magazine. Cannifton auxiliary ranks highest in subscriptions.

Our supply department is very popular and many women, even non-members, help to supply clothing and quilts for the needy, for through our gifts to others we learn practical Christianity.

Two auxiliaries are without press secretaries, and two report having made press scrap books. The Community Friendship Department is well organized. Associate Members Department is the recruiting centre for active forces, and these ladies are usually willing to assist with programs and social activities.

Different auxiliaries reporting on their most interesting meetings display a variety of programs from a twenty-fifth anniversary to a visit to a Chinese village; from the use of a temperance playlet to an Easter program with special speaker; from the Department of Christian Stewardship to women's work in England.

Junior Organizations Important

Mrs. Harrison stressed the importance of junior organizations. The enthusiasm of youth placed in proper positions is the foundation upon which our future church will rest. "The Empire marches forward on the feet of little children." Someone has said the Mission Band is the lantern in the W.M.S. sky.

Some auxiliaries keep the lantern
burning brightly,
Some auxiliaries keep the lantern
burning dimly,
And some auxiliaries let the light of the lantern go out.
What kind of auxiliary is yours?

Mrs. Arthur McCreary, pinch-hitting for Mrs. F. J. Nickle, Presbyterial secretary for Missionary Monthly, said that this magazine is a vital necessity for every auxiliary. Our study books this year have their background in the Missionary Monthly. It makes a fine Christmas gift for a shut-in friend, and vies with the Readers Digest in dispensing information concerning world conditions.

Mrs. T. F. Townsend of Hoard's rendered the solo "Let Us Have Peace."

A discussion period on methods for overcoming the problems of auxiliaries was directed through various channels of thought by Mrs. H. Froats of Belleville. Plainfield Mission Band in a short dialogue told what happens to "The money that wanted to go into the gift box."

Reports were received from the nominating committee, selecting Mrs. Ralph Sills of Zion Auxiliary as sectional secretary for the ensuing year, and from the courtesy committee expressing sincere gratitude to Plainfield ladies for their spontaneous hospitality during the day, to Miss Pierson for her interesting and educational addresses, to the pianists, and to all assisting with the day's programs.

Mrs. Macklin asked that all join heartily in the singing of the National Anthem, and closed the session with prayer.

Miss Phyllis Davis Elected President Frankford C.G.I.T.

Frankford — The C. G. I. T. group of the Frankford United Church held its opening meeting for the season of 1942-43 at the Parsonage on Wednesday evening. The call to worship and Scripture reading were followed by the singing of the C. G. I. T. hymn. A story "Tis Missions" was told followed by a hymn.

The business of the meeting was conducted, the main item being the election of officers for the new year. The new officers are President Phyllis Davis, Vice pres. Betty Dickson, Secretary, Dorothy Acton, Treasurer, Maxine Davis, Press Reporter, Marjory Embury, Pianist, Betty Dickson, Red Cross Supply Sec'y., Barbara Harrison.

It was decided to hold the meetings every other Wednesday evening at 7:45 at the homes of the members.

The study on "Nationalities in Canada" was very interesting. After the hymn "Day is Dying in the West" a game was played. "Taps" brought the evening to a close.

Recreational Exercise

Whenever we hear a man recite some of the activities he indulged in when on his holidays and either he or his wife say that they were so busy having a good time that, "John was so tired when he got home that he had to rest up for a day or so," we wonder just how much good John derived from his holiday, particularly if he is a man well past his youth. Other times after the deer hunting season is over and we listen to the tales of the hunt, and how the hunters had to carry a heavy buck a mile or more over rough country to the camp and how tired they were when the task was over, again we wonder if these men ever give a thought to the damage they may do to themselves by their unaccustomed labor.

We are not implying that exercise is not good for one but when a person works hard during the year and he takes time off to rest and otherwise enjoy himself is it using good judgment to spend that time in doing things for which he is not accustomed. It is all right that a young man should indulge in games and sport he likes to the fullest extent of his physical capacity but it is not the young man we have in mind, but rather his father.

Recently we were interested in reading an article written on recreational exercise in the advancing years of life by Dr. F. A. Willius of the Mayo Clinic. He counsels moderation saying that each year death claims an amazing toll from heart disease among sedentary persons in middle and later life during periods of excessive physical activity. Such persons, even though their younger years may have permitted athletic pursuits for general bodily health, allowing them to engage in arduous exercise without unusual fatigue with no ill effects, soon lose this reserve when subjected to sustained physical inactivity.

Their memories, however, readily recall their prowess and they forget that the ensuing years have occasioned an expenditure of vital reserve which cannot be regained, and that certain parts of their bodies, notably the heart and arteries, have undergone certain changes which accompany the aging process. In addition to this many sedentary persons acquire an excessive body weight which in itself imposes an extra and unnecessary load on the already less adaptable circulatory system.

The years of relative physical inactivity, increased nervous tension, excessive and indiscreet diets and immoderate indulgence in alcoholic beverages and tobacco frequently hasten the various forces of physical decline. On countless occasions these persons meet their nemesis during an ill-plamned vacation or other period devoted to recreation.

Amongst other things, Dr. Willius includes golf in the list saying "the already exhausted person who possesses the conviction that his vacation must be spent playing golf morning, afternoon and evening. The golf course which may be hilly and far more strenuous than the accustomed one, is entirely ignored. Such physical debauches are not confined to the vacation period but are indulged in in the gymnasium when the middle-aged man becomes exercise conscious. Here he goes in for violent exercise in the hope that he may reduce his weight.

Relaxation has almost become a lost art in the abnormal tempo of an efficiency-mad world. Pauses or rest are in no sense of the word periods of wasted idleness. The writer comments how useless is the scientific research to eradicate and control infectious diseases which in the past killed countless infants and children as well as adults, if the only effect of these accomplishments is to permit these people to live into the years in which heart disease prematurely interrupts their existence.

This problem is of much importance from the standpoint of the community and the man's family for often when the breadwinner of the family is removed either by illness or death there is the added problem of support which sometimes becomes intolerable. Moderation in all things is a wise course to follow in most things and we think that applies to exercise just as much as it does eating and drinking. It is well to reflect on the fact that a sick man is a liability and a dead man is a total loss, even though his life is amply insured,

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

OCTOBER

I saw October walking by the sea.
Her dress was colored like the wheat.
Her scarf was like a flaming tree.
The grass was yellow at her feet.

I heard October sing her song
As the wind moved and the leaves fell,
And a blue haze filled the dreaming air
As the warm sea fills a white shell.

We said no word as she passed by
Under the wide arc of the sky . . . .
But we both heard the same sound
Like a word lost and a word found . . . .
The sudden music of the first frost
Stepping in silver shoes upon the crystal ground.

PROCRASTINATION

A stumbling block which wrecks many a promising career before it fairly gets started is procrastination. The habit of putting off until tomorrow that which you should have done last week or last year or a score of years ago is a habit that can gnaw at the very vitals of your being. Nothing worthwhile can be accomplished until it is thrown off.

The place to begin developing the habit of action is in the small, commonplace things connected with your work. Go about every day with the definite aim of facing and solving every problem as it presents itself.

Regardless of what you are doing, there is always an opportunity, outside the course of your regular duties, to be of service to others. Render this additional service of your own accord, and without the object of receiving monetary pay. Perform the service because it provides you with a means of developing and making stronger an aggressive spirit.

You must substitute "do-it-now" for "do-it-later" if you are to become an outstanding figure in the affairs of your chosen field. —Ediphone.

ALL THE THINGS THEY WANT AND A SECOND FRONT

There are some people who like to talk about the "second front" without proper consideration of what it entails, like "Second Fronter," writing in the Montreal Star, as follows:

"I want a second front."
"I want an invasion of Europe."
"I want Berlin bombed every night."
"I want more naval action."
"I want an expeditionary force in Russia."
"I want more men for the army."
"I want more men for munitions."
"I want no complacency."
"I want more compulsion."
"I want women conscripted."
"I want AN EXEMPTION."

RUMOR

Thomas P. McDonnell in an editorial on "The Meaning of Rumor" in the Hyde Park Tribune recently wrote: "Rumor is you and I talking too much about things we do not know and things we do know. In either case, it is bad business . . . Rumor is a feather in the cap of the enemy . . . Rumor is someone with big ears listening to someone with a big mouth . . . To keep the sea lanes open, keep your mouth shut."

"I REMEMBER once," said the soldier, relating his experiences, "when a big explosion tore up the main road."

"And what did you do?" asked one of his listeners.

"I tore up a side street," replied the soldier, emptying his glass.

"DIDN'T YOU HEAR the siren?" asked the ARP warden advising an old countryman to take cover. With enemy planes droning over-head, the man was still strolling about the streets.

"Yes I heard 'un," said the old man, "but that ain't nothing to do with me. I live at younder village, five miles away."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

October 17th., 1922.

At the tournament held by the Nelson, B.C., Golf and Country Club in which many West Kootenay players took part, the championship trophy was won by P. McL. Forin, age 19 years, the youngest contestant, and his father, Judge Forin, the oldest contestant, won the cup for the third flight. It is interesting to know that the Judge and his late brother, Capt. P. McL. Forin, laid out the first golf course in Belleville some thirty years ago. It consisted of six holes and was situated on the commons north of Bleecker's Grove, which at that time was unfenced from the grove to the old cemetery, and was so favorably situated that the brothers played over the course on the same day that they laid out the holes. The course with some added holes was afterwards used by the first organized golf club here and a small club house was erected on the north side of the grove.

Mr. Harry Corby, ex-M.P., has been called to the Senate and will take his seat in the Upper Chamber when Parliament meets in November. He will fill one of the vacancies caused by the death of Senator Wilson and the death of Sir Richard Cartwright. The Hon. Harry Corby is a son of the late Henry Corby, M.P.P., for East Hastings, and he was born in Belleville on May 2nd., 1851. He entered Parliament in 1888, having been elected by acclamation on March 17th., of that year as successor to the late Alexander Robertson. On March 5th., 1891, he was re-elected after a contest by the handsome majority of 360. In 1869 he was re-elected by a large majority, and his ability and energy were such that he was chosen by the Conservatives of the Bay of Quinte District in convention assembled, as the organizer of the party in the district. The legion of friends whom he has not only in this city and district, but throughout the Dominion of Canada will unite with the Intelligencer in congratulating him upon his appointment as a Senator, a position which he is in every way qualified to fill with dignity and to the benefit of the country at large.

A notice signed by Mr. John G. Frost, president, and Mr. John Williams, secretary, has been issued calling a meeting of the Hastings Reform Club in the club rooms on the evening of October 21st.

The West Belleville Male Quartette is attracting much favorable attention and numerous engagements have been made to take part in entertainments in this district. The quartette, which sings in Holloway Street Methodist Church every Sunday, is composed of the following: Messrs. George Grills, George, Pierce, Stephen Roughton and Prof. Canfield.

THE NEED

A little faith when doubt is great
That right will triumph, soon or late;

A little courage, day by day,
When hard and dangerous seems the way;

A little wisdom to be sane
When fools and selfish men complain;

A little vision—just enough—
To glimpse the gold in coarser stuff

And past the difficulties see
The better life that is to be.

When millions of us these possess
God's cause is certain of success.

Capital Closeups

BY JOHN DAUPHINEE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 17 —(CP)— After six years, the Transport Department is being centralized under one roof. The move is the greatest physical change resulting from the recent Cabinet appointments.

Transport was organized in 1936 when the Departments of Marine and Railways and Canals were amalgamated under Hon. C. D. Howe, now Munitions Minister. Marine and the civil aviation and radio branches were in the modern, square-shaped Hunter Building; canals and railways were in the mid-Victorian West Block on Parliament Hill, a quarter of a mile away.

Mr. Howe, as transport minister, preferred a West Block office overlooking the Ottawa River. Many of his senior officials were in the other buildings and through the years they have covered miles with armsful of documents for conferences with Mr. Howe and his successor, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, who resigned last spring.

Then, a fortnight ago, Fisheries Minister Michaud was moved to transport and Ernest Bertrand, member of Montreal Laurier, became head of fisheries. In half an hour they accomplished what six years of urging by departmental officials had failed to do.

So fisheries branches are moving to the West Block from the Hunter Building—and all the transport offices are moving the other way.

It's a break with the past for transport. The railways and canals offices have been in the same West Block offices since the original department was formed in 1879. Many employees have been in the same offices for a score or more of years.

And talking of moving . . . We heard about one high naval officer whose headquarters for two years has been a kitchenette in a former apartment block. Now he'll be moving into the new navy building with plenty of space and light.

"I'm not sure I'm going to like it," he said with a grin, "I'm getting attached to this hole in the wall. Outside light will blind me."

A House of Commons sub-committee was listening to S. Godfrey, Wartime Prices and Trade Board administrator of used goods talking about bottle salvage. He said the big problem was sorting and cleaning old bottles for movement to market.

It was too much for four members of Parliament, all punsters at heart.

"Just another bottleneck," they chortled in one voice.

Selective Service headquarters is responsible for allocating manpower to all industry and soon will be taking over the military draft as well. But even Selective Service has its problems.

One of the lads was complaining about delay in getting some important work cleaned up.

"Honest," he said, "you won't believe it, but we're suffering from a manpower shortage."

To most people the new 12-sided nickel is just that—five cents. But to some folk in Canada and the United States it's more than that.

Bank of Canada spokesmen tell us hundreds of inquiries for coins of the new issue are expected from collectors. Scores of letters have come in already. In 1936 there was a tremendous demand for the Jubilee silver dollar and the freak nickel is expected to equal it.

The charge for uncirculated coin samples is the face value of the coin plus mailing charges.

A new name is being used in the United States for the Alaska highway. They're calling it the "Alcan Highway," the first syllables of Alaska and Canada. Whether it will stick is causing some comment on Parliament Hill. Like the highway, it's at least a shortcut.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, is normally a sympathetic man but once he didn't feel too badly even though his two elderly aunts were deluged in tears. It happened last year when he was on a flying visit to the United Kingdom. His aunts had just received a blunt order to turn in an ornamental fence as scrap to be used for munitions.

"It was there when your grandfather was alive in 1852," they wailed.

But Mr. Coldwell admits he thought it a good thing—and he suggests ornamental fences in Canada ought to go to the steel furnaces, too. The way scrap situation is tightening up he might see it happen.

Major Battle At Sea Now On Or Brewing

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The jaws of the Aleutian "rat trap" are being pressed home on Japanese invaders by Allied airmen, but what is happenig far to the southwest in the Solomons neither Washington nor Tokyo seems yet to know fully.

There had been no Japanese mention when this was written of the action to recapture Guadalcanal which began days ago and into which powerful enemy fleet units, including battleships, had been thrown. Only a meagre and cryptic American running story of the fight was available in navy bulletins.

They are sufficient, however, to indicate that an air-sea clash of greater size and significance than the battle of the Coral Sea and Midway is in prospect or in progress, as well as to reveal a Japanese-American fight to the death ashore for possession of Guadalcanal, strategic key to the Southwest Pacific.

Silence Significant.

The very silence as to the naval forces engaged was significant. It implied a blackout of fleet radio communications to cover battle dispositions. There was little to indicate that the High Commands in either capital had more specific information on the progress of the struggle than had been revealed in Washington announcements.

And those, as the hours passed to intensify public eagerness in the United Nations for news of the battle, dealt only with the situation on or close about the Guadalcanal focal point. They had revealed much of enemy activity by land, air and sea, including some indication of the powerful naval force he had concentrated to cover successful landing operations. They gave no clue whatever as to the whereabouts of United States heavy ships or their assigned mission.

Guadalcanal Is Prize.

Guadalcanal represents the objective, the core of the struggle, but does not define its scope. A major sea fight for its possession might radiate hundreds of miles from that core.

Freedom of manoeuvre, sea room, is an axiomatic requirement of naval warfare where fleet action is involved. Fleet commanders shun restricted waters like the island-dotted Solomon Archipelago for themselves, yet endeavor to manoeuvre the enemy into long-locked seas.

If, as seems possible, the greatest sea fight the Pacific has ever known is to be waged for Guadalcanal there is no foretelling where its main action might be fought. No hint of main fleet dispositions would be permitted to leak by radio while air and surface scouts group for contact.

That tends to make an otherwise disturbing lack of naval activity reports from the Solomons battle zone only another indication that a major sea action is on or brewing.

SKIMBLE SKAMBLE STUFF

"The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton."

That famous quotation is ascribed to the Duke of Wellington, who commanded the British and their allies at Waterloo.

It is really only a polished up version of what the Iron Duke said.

Ten years after the battle of Waterloo, while watching a cricket match at Eton, the Duke of Wellington was overheard to say: "The battle of Waterloo was won here."

Of course, the victor of Waterloo did not mean literally that Eton men had won the battle.

He merely meant that the games and sports at British colleges developed those qualities in men that made good soldiers.

Most of our popular games and sports are merely mimic warfare.

Incidentally, the Duke of Wellington and Napoleon never met personally, although they were once within a quarter of a mile of each other during the battle of Waterloo.

Cautious, dilatory military tactics are called "Fabian." The word alludes to the Roman general Quintus Fabius Maximus, who was surnamed "The Delayer" because he foiled Hannibal in the Second Punic War by avoiding pitched battles and wearing down the Carthaginians by minor engagements, withdrawals, marches and countermarches. General Washington was known as the American Fabius because he adopted the same tactics against the British.

A civilian soldier, a man who leaves his work to fight in defence of his country, is sometimes referred to as a "Cincinnatus." This is an allusion to a legendary Roman general in the fifth century B.C. who twice left his farm to defend Rome and both times resigned his office to return to his farm. George Washington is also known as the American Cincinnatus, because he left his plantation to command the Revolutionary army and returned to Mt. Vernon after final victory. General Israel Putnam, according to tradition, was actually plowing when he heard the news of the battle of Lexington and left his plow in the furrow and rode the horse to join the American forces around Boston.

It is a little known fact that Mark Twain served several weeks in the Confederate army.

B. C. I. & V. S.

Assembly: October 14

With the strains of "Colonel Bogey" ringing in our ears, we entered the auditorium for a period of pleasure and relaxation. Mr. Davidson read a passage of scripture followed by the Lord's prayer, after which the hymn "My Own Dear Land" was sung.

Mr. Hill, on behalf of Miss Dwyer, made an urgent appeal to the girls to join a Red Cross group and he then presented a very clear report on the sale of Stamps and Certificates for the week. Last week's sales amounted to $158.50, and the total sales to date amounted to $621.00. Surely we can do better than that?

The Band favoured us with that short but sweet selection, "Dance Grotesque."

Mr. Turner made a few brief announcements, especially bringing to our attention the fact that Belleville schools have the lowest attendance record of any city in the province. Incidentally, the uniforms of a soldier sailor and airman are wanted for the Victory Loan play which is to be produced on Friday, October 23. The uniforms will be needed also, for dress rehearsal.

The tea-dances may be attended by students of Albert College and St. Michael's Academy, but no former students, etc, are to be admitted.

Mr. Mott announced that the first Junior Rugby game (B.C.I. vs. St. Mikes) was to be held on the campus at 4:20. But "we don't talk about that."

Dramatic Notes:

The search has ended; After more tryouts than those for Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" they have finally selected an Emily Webb for the Collegiate production of "Our Town." It's a nice juicy part for any young up-and-coming actress. In all, thirty girls were tried.

The play itself is, as you probably know, a really dramatic one, with plenty of scope for the amateur artists. That is where the trouble came in. The only experienced actor in the cast, to date, is Phillip Flagler, who has the role of a small-town editor, Mr. Webb. The leading role is that of the Stage Manager (Kaye Martin) who acts as narrator for this highly unusual play. All action takes place on a relatively empty stage, and the narrative clears up a few points here and there.

Gordon Bankier has been cast as Dr. Gibbs, with Vera Flindall as Mrs. Gibbs and Helen McLean as Mrs. Webb. Most of the remaining (fifty) parts have not as yet been cast.

Emil Webb—oh, yes! It's Barbara Bews.

Short Sport Shots:

Rugby: St. Mikes defeated B.C.I. 17-0. That's all, brother, there just aint no mo'.

However, one suggestion is offered—give Bruce Philip, easily the best player we had when given his chance, a thorough lesson in the rules and fine points of the game and then let him loose with the ball.

Next game is on Monday with B.C.I. at Albert College. Hey, you fellows with cars, how about filling it up with students instead of just your best friend, when you go up to witness the game.

The first Senior game is on Thursday next, with B.C.I. at Albert College.

J.E.R.R.Y.

A sing-song was conducted by Mr. Maybee, which livened us up considerably. The popular number "Till We Meet Again" and the hymn "Praise My Soul" were practiced.

The National Anthem brought to a close a very pleasant Assembly.

Tea Dance:

On Friday, October 30, XIII-B will hold a Tea Dance in aid of the Elton Sills' Memorial Fund. The price is only 10c. All students are invited, including those of St. Michael's Academy and Albert College.

Hope we'll see you at the most different tea dance to date.

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Sir:

I noticed in last week's issue of "Collegiate News" a scornful reference to the absence of experienced players on this year's Junior Basketball team, and to the absence of last year's stars. I would like to state here that the Junior team will do wonders without those "stars." The team is composed of a group of inexperienced younger players this year, but they have got fighting spirit, and after all, that is the main thing. Watch our smoke!

Gordon Bankier.

Gen. Auchinleck Arrives in India

New Delhi, Oct. 17—(CP)—Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, former commander of the British 8th army in North Africa, has arrived in New Delhi, it was announced today.

(The dispatch did not reveal the official capacity in which Gen. Auchinleck, who was relieved of command of the 8th army last Aug. 18, had travelled to India. At the time he was replaced in North Africa by Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, authoritative sources in London indicated Gen. Auchinleck would shortly be assigned to a new post.)

VICTORY LOAN DRIVE FOR $750,000,000 OPENS MONDAY

We will push on to Victory!

WHEN FRANCE FELL, and British hearts groped in black despair, one strong jaw jutted out, and the grip of one clenched fist shook the Empire.

It was Churchill hurling Britain's decision across the channel. Quit?... Never!... Fight?... Yes, through the hell of adversity till victory is won.

• • • • •

Today Canadians face challenge after challenge with the same unconquerable spirit. Today we are asked to do without so that our fighting men will have everything they need—when they smash straight into the heart of enemy defences.

Canada's ringing answer to this latest challenge will be: "Yes, we'll fight with the last ounce of our strength, and the last dollar we can earn and save."

Canada's Victory Loan drive opens Monday. Canada's Victory Loan representative will ask for your answer soon.

Will it be "No, I do not choose to do my part"?

Or will it be "Yes! Yes!! Yes!!! I will buy Victory Bonds! I will lend all my support to help make victory sure."

HOW TO BUY

Give your order to the Victory Loan salesman who calls on you. Or place it in the hands of any branch of any bank, or give it to any trust company. Or send it to your local Victory Loan Headquarters! Or you can authorize your employer to start a regular payroll-savings plan for you. Bonds may be bought in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1000 and larger. Salesman, bank, trust company or your local Victory Loan Headquarters will be glad to give you every assistance in making out your order form.

WEDDINGS

HUBBEL—MASTERS

Wooler—Autumn flowers decorated the rooms of the United Church parsonage, Wooler, on Wednesday, October 14, 1942, at 2 p.m. for a charming wedding when Eva Jean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnley Masters of Wooler, became the bride of Mr. Alex James Hubbel of Morganston, eldest son of Mrs. Hubbel and the late Mr. Elijah Hubbel. Rev. W. T. R. Delve officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was attractive in a commodore navy silk crepe dress of street length with accessories in black and white, while she wore a corsage of dark red Briarcliffe roses and bouvardia. She was attended by Miss Gwen Elford of Wooler, gowned in dusk rose crepe with wine and white accessories, wearing a corsage of pink roses and bouvardia. Mr. Harry Hubbel attended his brother as best man.

The bridal party journeyed to Brighton where a buffet luncheon was served at Rene's White House.

The groom presented a brown leather purse to the groomsman and the bride presented a gold brooch set with pearls to her bridesmaid.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Hubbel left on a wedding trip to Lakefield and points north, the bride travelling in a black tailored suit with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Wooler.

MORTON—BATEMAN

Thomasburg — On Wednesday afternoon, October the 7th at two o'clock a very pretty wedding took place in Thomasburg United Church when Marion Irene, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Bateman was united in marriage to Mr. Harold Kitchener Morton, B.A., of Toronto, son of Mrs. Mary Bye and the late Mr. William Morton of Kisby, Sask.

Rev. H. B. Harrington of Newburgh, was the officiating clergyman assisted by Rev. A. S. Doggett of Thomasburg.

The altar of the church was suitably decorated with autumn leaves and flowers for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was becomingly attired in a floor length gown of white chiffon with a floor-length veil embroidered, falling from a sweetheart head-dress and her bouquet was composed of sweetheart roses.

Acting as bridesmaids were Misses Evelyn and Mearle Bateman, sisters of the bride, attired in pink and turquoise blue chiffon floor-length frocks with matching hats. Each carried bouquets of yellow and white baby chrysanthemums. Miss Ruby Bateman, also a sister of the bride and Miss Joyce Morton, cousin of the groom, were junior bridesmaids dressed in long powder blue and pink crepe dresses with headdresses of net, each carried a nosegay of pink carnations and white chrysanthemums

The groom was attended by Mr. John Willett Pitman of Frankford, while Messrs. Stanley Geen and Donald Richardson were ushers.

Miss Lucille Herrington of Newburgh, close friend of the bride, very sweetly sang "I Love You Truly" and during the signing of the register she sang "Until." Mr. Fred Porter presided at the organ.

A reception immediately followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Bateman was attired in a dress of British navy with black accessories and a corsage of yellow roses, while Mrs. Bye, mother of the groom, chose wine transparent velvet with black accessories and corsage of roses.

A dainty buffet lunch was served by four girl friends of the bride.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet and to the bridesmaid gold bracelets, to the junior bridesmaids gold necklaces, to the soloist a string of pearls and to the organist and best man gold set tie pins and bars.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on a honeymoon through Algonquin Park and points west.

The bride chose for travelling a dress of British tan with top coat of English tweed and accessories to match. On their return they will reside in Toronto where the groom has a position in the head office of the Dunlop Tire Co.

Guests were present from Campbellford, Tweed, Belleville, Thurlow, Kisby, Sask., Frankford and Toronto.

Women's Institute To Convene Here For Annual Meeting

"Women's Institutes working for victory and Women's Institutes planning for peace" will be the theme of the annual convention to be held in Belleville this month when delegates from the combined districts of Hastings, Northumberland, and Prince Edward will meet. Mrs. J. Black, Warkworth, is area chairman, Mrs. R. Bush, Consecon, vice chairman and Mrs. A. Mitchell, Belleville, is area secretary.

In addition to reports of the year's work there will be addresses by Mrs. C. Holmes, Belleville; Mrs. J. Black, Warkworth; Mrs. E. A. Duke, Port Carling, president of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario; Miss Mary A. Clarke, Toronto, superintendent of the Women's Institutes, Dr. O. S. Dafoe, Belleville, and Mrs. R. Bush, Consecon. The sessions will convene on Thursday and Friday.

Entrance Graduates Of King George School Given Certificates

Entrance graduates of King George School were presented with their graduation certificates in the auditorium of the school on Friday evening when the Home and School Club tendered the children their annual supper party and graduation exercises.

Approximately 30 of last year's entrance pupils were presented with their high school entrance certificates by Mr. J. R. Pickering, inspector of public schools for this district. Mr. Pickering also addressed the graduating class briefly, he being introduced to the assembly of parents and children by Mr. Charles Brown, principal of the school.

Mrs. A. G. Greenwood, president of King George Home and School Club, presided during the evening's program which included the presentation of instrumentals, solos and dancing numbers by various of the graduating class. A period of community singing was led by Miss Phyllis May with Mrs. Veley at the piano.

A number by a boys' choir, consisting of Ronald Sullivan, Jack Ethier, Earl Taylor, Jack Dawson, Cameron Hitchon and Allen Vance drew an appreciative round of applause, while other children taking part in the program included Grace Veley, piano solo; Earla Wilson, vocal; Muriel Duffin, recitation; George Ward, recitation; Winnifred Kellar, piano solo; Marie Marinoff, vocal solo. Impromptu addresses were heard from a number of teachers, club members and pupils.

The evening's program was concluded with lunch being served by the club members.

Test Shows Lack of Vitamin C Slows Healing of Wound

Vitamin C is sometimes described as the vitamin that is important in holding the tissue cells together. Lack of it causes bleeding and hemorrhage, because the cells appear to lack the quality of sticking together. Vitamin C is supplied by such foods as oranges, lemons, grapefruit and tomatoes.

Sometime ago, I reported an experiment which a physician carried out on himself to show that a lack of vitamin C interfered to a great extent with the healing of wounds.

Now Dr. Marshall K. Bartlett and his co-workers of Boston have done some animal experiments which give additional evidence that a lack of vitamin C will interfere with the healing of wounds. These doctors carried out their tests by putting a needle into the abdominal cavity of the animal and blowing air into the abdomen, thus increasing the pressure. They did this to cause the conditions similar to those which occur in the healing of wounds, following operations.

Two groups of animals were used. One was given a normal diet and the other a diet lacking in vitamin C. From time to time the tissues in the abdominal wall were studied to see if normal healing was occurring. It was found definitely that when vitamin C was included in the diet, the strength of the tissues in the wounds was greater, that there was less tendency for the wound to pull apart when the pressure within the abdomen was increased.

Analysis of the tissues for the amount of vitamin C present showed that when the vitamin was not given, the tissue content of vitamin C was below normal. When large amounts of vitamin C were given before operation, the amount of vitamin C in the wound tissues after operation was above normal, but the quantity in the skin farther away from the wound was lessened.

Another interesting fact is that the amount of vitamin C found in the tissues was greater when the vitamin C was given after operation than when given before. This, of course, indicates that the process of operation causes some of the vitamins C to be used up. It has become the modern practice, in many instances prior to operation, to give patients all of the various vitamins in concentrated form.

This is done to improve the patient's condition and to aid in the healing process. Of the vitamins, it would appear that vitamin C is the most important from the standpoint of wound healing. However, all of the vitamins are needed to maintain normal health.

A person who plans to have an operation should make sure that for a period prior to the surgery he receives a well-balanced diet containing all of the necessary food parts.

DIFFICULT TO GET RID OF WHALE

Sagamore, Mass., Oct. 17 (AP)—This town is finding it difficult to get rid of a dead whale—about 47 feet long and weighing an estimated seven tons. The mammal was washed ashore on Sagamore beach. The Board of Health called coast guardsmen who pulled the whale out into the bay by a rope and shot it full of holes. But the unwelcome visitor has floated back onto the beach.

TACKLED BY DOG

Kansas City, Oct. 17 (AP)—John Brulja, 19, went into a store to telephone. He remained in the booth so long the store owner forgot about him, closed up and went upstairs to bed. Brulja finished his talk and was tackled by a German shepherd dog, left to guard the store. Brulja needed slight repair work on one leg and considerable repair work on his pants.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Toast, and Reply

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I know that when a toast is proposed to a person, the person does not drink the toast. But I do not know why. What is the reason?

2. Also what is the proper reply to make when a toast is drunk to you?

Bob.

1. When a toast is proposed to you it is in your honor; you would not honor yourself by drinking to yourself. After the other guests have finished drinking the toast, then you may sip from your glass.

2. The person to whom the toast is drunk is to smile pleasantly and say, "Thank you." But there are some special occasions, of course, when this isn't enough, and the person adds any appropriate remarks.

Salad Plate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When salad is served with the main course at dinner or luncheon on which side of the plate should the salad plate be placed?

2. Is it necessary to place a special salad fork when the salad is served with the main course?

Marie.

1. Either side is correct. I prefer to have the salad plate at the right of the dinner plate, because it seems easiest to reach on that side. But often there is more room for the salad plate on the left side. In restaurants, the salad plate is almost invariably placed on the left side of the dinner plate, but it's quite correct for the diner to change the plate to the right side if this is preferred.

2. While it isn't really necessary to place a salad fork (or a medium sized fork) for the salad, careful hostesses do this.

Aisle Precedence

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a girl and man go to the movies together, which one should walk first down the aisle?

Polly.

If there is an usher to find the seats, the girl follows the usher, or the girl and the man walk together behind the usher. If there is no usher, as in the case in most movie theatres, the man precedes the girl, to find the best available seats.

Acknowledging Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

So many girls I know say, "Pleased to meet you" when they acknowledge an introduction. I had always thought this was incorrect, but since I hear so many girls saying it, I wonder if it really is correct.

D. E.

Don't let the number of girls who use this distressingly incorrect form of acknowledging an introduction persuade you that it is correct.

The proper way to acknowledge an introduction is to say, "How do you do," adding the name of the person being introduced if one is sure one "caught" the name correctly. These correct words can be said with a world of graciousness.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Friendship Ring From Soldier

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 years old and have been going with a young man for about three months. He says he loves me very much, but I think I'm too young to even think of falling in love.

This young man, who is 21, is going into the service very soon and wants to give me a friendship ring. Do you think I should accept this token of friendship or is there any meaning attached to it? I don't want it to tie me down so I can't go out with other boys, as I'm not in love with this one.

Puzzled

A friendship ring means just what the name implies. I think it would be all right to accept this remembrance, if it isn't very expensive. You might tell the young man that you want to feel free to go out with other boys, and that you will be glad to see him when he returns. You will probably want to correspond with him while he's in the Army.

Wants Her Old Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend and I decided we wanted to be free and go out with other boys and girls. It was my idea, really, as I felt I was too young to date only one boy.

One day I saw him at a concert with another girl, and it just made me feel faint all over; I had to leave the hall. I see what a mistake I made and want to make up with him. Some friends of mine tell me that he would like to come back too, but I'm too proud to apologize. What is your suggestion?

Anne

Since it was your idea originally, I think it is up to you to take the first step toward a reconciliation. You don't have to apologize. Phone him, or write him a note and ask that he come to Sunday night supper, which is always a pleasant and simple little festivity.

COFFEE IS LOOT TAKEN

Boston, Oct. 17 (AP)—The action was reminiscent of a prohibition era hi-jacking. A driver halted his truck yesterday and went into a building on a business call. Another truck, apparently trailing it, drove up and its crew stole the first truck's load, placed the loot in the second vehicle and sped away. The loot? Fifty-six cartons of coffee.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S NICE to get out of work-clothes or uniform into a pretty dress and soft hat. An after-dark beauty is of almond green felt with peach rose bouquets in front and back with pale pink veiling.

There's a change in the classic box coat designed for sports wear. Now it is a year-round coat with its button-in warm lining. Red diagonal tweed has a detachable lining of white lamb.

Good times ahead for the sweater now that it is all dressed up with glitter touches. A high, round-necked, short-sleeved sweater in black chenille wool has a butterfly embroidered in front of the shoulder and another in back, opposite. The butterflies are fashioned of multi-colored sequins.

First favorite with young things is the modified dirndl skirt, done in colors. A new model, of spun rayon, has a belt band of pale beige, then a band of darker beige, then a wider band of luggage tan, then a very wide green hem band.

Lucky the girl who is able to have a nice wedding and wear the traditional wedding gown, something that is the exception rather than the rule these times. A lovely gown, for some fortunate maid, is of cream satin, the wide skirt shirred onto a bodice that dips lower in back. Pearl necklace collar, with seed pearl tabs and seed pearl bracelet cuffs finished with wide tassels.

Here Are Four Reasons

Medical treatment is a serious matter and you want to know why you can depend on the medicine selected. Read these reasons for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

1. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a tonic laxative. The effect is the same without increased dose.
2. They increase the amount of bile secreted by the liver. Aid in absorbing fats and stimulating the colon or large bowel.
3. They hurry the bile through the intestines and afford prompt relief for constipation and chronic indigestion.
4. They are diuretic—release water and solids for filtration by the kidneys and do not irritate the kidneys.

Why not profit by the experience of many thousands, and keep regular, all the time, by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

What I like about this

What I like about this Country—

As I was saying to my friend Bill who works alongside of me in the shop,
"What I like about this country of ours is that a man can blow off steam by 'beefing'."
Not that it helps the meat shortage,
but it does keep the pressure down.
Now you take when the new taxes came out.
Boy, did I hit the roof.
Then I grabbed a pencil
and did some quick number-work.
Then I dusted off all those fancy words the boys in the shop sometimes use and gave them a good work-out.
And that night I told Helen (she's my wife)
that it was "scratch" from here in.
And I told her when that last Victory Bond is paid for—we're through.
Helen justs looks at me and says nothing.
Then one night we're sitting around the radio listening to the war news and somebody is beating the drum for the new Victory Loan,
and suddenly Helen says:
"It's nice that the kids have lots to eat."
I looked at her astonished
"What—" I began, but she continues,
"And it's nice we have this comfortable home, and a little in the bank."
Then she says: "Fred, we're going to buy another Victory Bond."
And before I can get my say in about the taxes she goes on:
"Look Fred! The new taxes have been coming out of your pay for about two months now.
We're still living and eating and putting a little away.
Maybe we can't buy all the things we want but at that we still have a big edge on all those poor souls over in Europe . . .
and we want to keep it that way."
All the fight has gone out of me by this time and I'm nodding my head
every time she scores a point.
And the next day at the shop
I sign up again for another Bond.

I'm telling Bill about it, and he grins and says: "Me, too."
It's like those ads say
"You can't underestimate the power of a woman."
Anyway—we're buying Victory Bonds again!

O.H.L. APPROVES 2 SENIOR GROUPS

Season Will Start Nov. 10 and Playoffs on February 15

Toronto, Oct. 17 — (CP) — Approval of a senior A Ontario hockey association setup to include two groups of four teams each was given last night at a meeting of an O. H. A. sub-committee.

All teams in group one are from Toronto — one each from the three armed services and the fourth representing Research Enterprises Ltd. Group two includes St. Catharines, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Port Colborne. Both divisions will start the season Nov. 10.

Playoffs will start Feb. 15 with the first three teams in each group qualifying. In addition to the regular schedule, the Ontario group teams will play an international schedule of exhibition games with Buffalo.

In the junior O. H. A., Oshawa, St. Michael's College, Marlboros and Young Rangers will play in group one. The second division will comprise Hamilton, Brantford, Stratford and a fourth team not yet named. The groups will play an interlocking schedule and playoff arrangements are the same as in the senior series.

Annual meeting of the O. H. A. was set for Nov. 21.

CHICAGO OPENS CAMP AT HIBBING

Will Stay in Training for Two Weeks Prior to Opening of Season

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 17 (AP).—Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League are expected to arrive at camp here today for two weeks training before engaging in practice games with the University of Minnesota and later the University of Illinois teams. The players left Chicago last night.

The Hawks open the season here against the Boston Bruins Nov. 5.

The party was in charge of Manager Paul Thompson and Coach Johnny Gottselig, manager of the Kansas City farm team last year. Twelve players will report directly from their homes in Canada.

HANDED FOURTH DEFEAT

Winnipeg, Oct. 17 (CP)—University of Manitoba Bisons were handed their fourth successive defeat in the Winnipeg senior rugby football league last night when the Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers scored a 27-16 victory.

The win sent the airmen back into a first-place tie with Bombers and banished any hopes Varsity had of making a playoff berth. Only two more league games remain to be played.

N. H. L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

Leave it to Walter (Turk) Broda to do the unusual. The broad-beamed, Toronto Maple Leaf netminder is sharpening his eyesight by playing — of all things — an hour of handball every day. And he says pucks look like footballs to him now, after following the flight of the 1½-inch pellet used in handball.

It develops that Ray Getliffe wasn't holding out on Montreal Canadiens, after all. All he wanted was time to find someone to manage his Stratford, Ont., shoe store. Now he has located a suitable proprietor, he's on his way to the Montreal training camp.

Passport trouble is pestering Terry Realdon again. Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins says he thinks he can obtain a passport for Terry this season. Last year, Reardon was "farmed out" to Canadiens for their home games because the government wouldn't let him leave Canada.

Don't be surprised if Douglas (Red) Garret of Maple Leafs becomes the rookie of the year. Even Coach Happy Day admits "We've got something of a possibility" in the strapping 18-year-old defenceman from Toronto Marlboros of the Junior Ontario Association. Railbirds say he packs the color of a Wally Stanowski, the wallop of a Red Horner, and breaks away from his defence post like a rocket leaving a May 24th firing pit.

Alf Pike, at home in almost any position, may be moved permanently to New York Rangers defence. Ranger circles say Pike, big enough to step into an oncoming forward, fits into the Lester Patrick system of favoring the rushing defenceman.

The Bruins - Canadiens series in California is definitely on. The teams will carry 14 players each on a tour sponsored by United States war loan officials. They will go by train to New York and from there to Los Angeles.

In one respect, Canadiens already have an edge on Bruins. They pounded out a variety of base hits to beat the Rossmen 14-4 in a softball game in Montreal.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 17 — (CP) — Moose Jaw turns up with a good story about the world series, told by Tom Crane in a letter to his father, Charlie Crane, manager of a Moose Jaw hotel. The younger Crane and two former Reginans, Miss Mary Loughlin and Murray McDougall, left their jobs in Washington to see the first game of the baseball classic in New York but they couldn't get seats. Dejectedly, they pondered the problem. Casually, Miss Loughlin remarked that Leslie O'Connor, secretary to baseball Commissioner Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, was her first cousin, 'but would that do any good?" Would it do any good! Mr. O'Connor gave Crane and McDougall his last two tickets and "would Miss Loughlin mind sitting in a box with Judge Landis?" Miss Loughlin didn't mind. After all the Judge had the best pew in the ball park. St. Louis won and that, too, from the letter, pleased the prairie trio.

The expert says:

Jim (Toronto Globe and Mail) Coleman: "Art Ross of the Boston Bruins has announced that he will donate four of his team's home gates to the Red Cross ... but the N. H. L. (National Hockey League) head office still hasn't said anything about arranging at least one game for war charities ... since hockey got the 'green light' from Ottawa, the league apparently believed that its sole duty is to bolster public morale."

Incidentally:

The Macdonald's Brier Canadian Curling Championships will be held at Saskatoon next March — unless government restrictions on unessential travel throw a hitch into arrangements ... C. S. Richardson, secretary of the Brier competition, announces that all prizes for the Consols provincial playdowns will be provided as usual ... Kitchener, Ont., will be without artificial ice in its rink because of the Federal "freezing" order on pipe required to repair the auditorium ice plant.... but there's talk of erecting a new rink in Moncton, N B, to give the city hockey ... Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle says Gaye Stewart, the former Port Arthur junior hockey star, is the best left winger turned up with Toronto Maple Leafs since Busher Jackson.

Toronto, Oct. 16 (CP)—A decision of the Quebec Senior Hockey League to limit to four the number of former National Hockey League players on any one team is of vital importance to the amateur game during the impending season.

The question was whether one team should be permitted to ice a solid lineup of proven stars, regarded in some expert circles as almost a shoo-in for the Allan Cup championship, or whether major league talent should be divided to make for better competition during the season.

In the interests of public morale, the government requested that hockey continue to operate during the war as a major competitive sport. Yet, it is established that one-sided competition holds little or no interest for the public. The Royal Canadian Air Force recognised this principle when its sports director, Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher, announced that the air force will not "pack" hockey teams this season.

Conacher spoke from experience, since last spring's Ottawa's R.C.A.F. Flyers swept aside all opposition with a team of stars featuring Boston Bruins' kraut line of Milt Schmidt, Porky Dumart and Bobby Bauer. The krauts, a trio of good, clean-playing youngsters, were booed by the fans at every opportunity. The conclusion was that the public resented any hint of a packed team.

Coached by Alex Smith, a former N.H.L. star himself, Ottawa Commandos sought to take over the Quebec League. Commandos' tentative player roster included four former New York Rangers, goalie Jim Henry and forwards Alex Shibicky and Mac and Neil Colville; forward Jack McGill of Boston Bruins and defencemen Joe Cooper of Chicago Black Hawks and Ken Reardon of Montreal Canadiens. All are in the army. Other former professional players are stationed in the Capital and could round out this already powerful club.

Against such power, dozens of other clubs in Canada would be willing to concede Commandos the Allan Cup. Without the hope of a national championship at the season's end, it is possible interest of players and public elsewhere than in Ottawa would be lessened. All parts of Canada would be affected.

Naturally, the Commandos, whose executive leader is the veteran sportsman, Jim McCaffrey, opposed the obvious attempt by the Quebec League to break up their team by restricting the number of former N.H.L. players. Commandos asked for time to reconsider their entry.

Whatever the true situation, there is no doubt that operation of the Commandos' present lineup as a hockey unit would bring charges of "packing", and the charges might reflect on the army. It would be a sacrifice for any group of sportsmen to break up such a team as the Commandos—sacrifice or, perhaps, a duty.

GRID STAR

Angelo Bortolo "Bert" Bertelli, the passing whiz of Notre Dame, is singled out as the grid star of the week following his magnificent aerial accuracy in the Irish win over Stanford, 27 to 0. The Italian junior from Springfield, Mass., pitched four touchdown passes against the Stanfords and connected on nine straight heaves! His record was 14 completions in 20 shots.

GORDIE DRILLON AFTER 25 GOALS THIS SEASON

Former Leaf Star Shows Well in Practice With Canadiens

CAN PLAY HOCKEY

By HAROLD ATKINS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Oct. 17 —(CP)— Big Gordie Drillon, stepping off the forum ice here last night after a stiff workout, said he believed that the old adage "a change is better than a rest" will work in his case and confidently predicts that he should be good for 25 goals with Canadiens this winter.

The six-foot Moncton lad whom the Habitants hold as a key player in their National Hockey League title chances this season, appears to have taken on a new lease of life in his Montreal surroundings and railbirds who watched him turn on the heat last night think Toronto Maple Leafs will rue the day for turning this prize package loose.

Looking somewhat disconsolate when reminded of the hounding the wolves of Maple Leaf Garden gave him last winter when they accused him of not showing enough fight, Drillon said "I hope I can convince them I can still play hockey the first time I'm there with Canadiens."

Drillon said, however, he holds no animosity against any of the Toronto hockey fans and as far as he is concerned "that's all behind me now. I'm looking forward to this season."

Working on a line centred by Buddy O'Connor and Leftwinger Su Smith, Drillon has been potting goals almost at will in recent workouts and also been doing his share in backchecking.

Katan Keeps Title When Watson Disqualified

Toronto, Oct. 17 — John Katan successfully defended his British Empire heavyweight wrestling title here when "Whipper Billie" Watson, the favourite of some 7,500 patrons, was disqualified in a title match. Katan wrested the crown from Watson three weeks ago and failed in his first attempt to regain the title.

Watson became enraged at Referee Ernie Powers, of Hamilton, and tossed the ring official for a good 100 yard loss. With Powers writhing on the mat the cagey Katan heaved Watson over the prostrate Powers before bedlam broke loose and officials and preliminary rasslers swarmed the ring in what resulted in a free-for-all scrap with no person being hurt, except Watson's feelings when he was disqualified.

Another Canadian aiming at Katan's crown is "Big Earl" McCready, the Regina cowboy, who meets Watson in an elimination bout in Belleville next Wednesday night. Both McCready and Watson are former Empire titleholders and the Canadian wrestling eyes are focussed on this important meeting.

"Y" is Opened For Fall Term

Following the summer vacation period, during which time repairs and decorations were completed, the Y.M.C.A. opened for the fall and winter semester this week. Special classes are being arranged by General Secretary J. E. Shortt to accommodate war workers and provide a degree of recreation evenings, while business men's classes will be arranged to suit the desires of the present-day business man. All other classes from Preps to seniors, as well as gymnasium groups for employed boys and students have been drafted by Ed Shortt, physical director at the "Y." Tuesdays and Thursdays are ladies' nights on the gym and in the redecorated swimming pool. Special groups will be introduced at the "Y" this year for the purpose of gymnastic teaching and life saving programs.

QUEBEC OFFICERS ADOPT RULING RESPECTING PROS.

Only Four N.H.L. Players Allowed to Play on Any One Club

AFFECTS COMMANDOS

Montreal, Oct. 17—(CP) — The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association last night adopted a ruling that no club should have more than four former National Hockey League players on its roster for the coming Q.A.H.A. season.

The resolution was similiar to one adopted earlier in the week by the Quebec Senior Hockey League and which caused Ottawa Commandos to ask for time to reconsider their decision to enter a team in the senior circuit. Commandos have until next Wednesday to decide.

The Q.A.H.A., in addition to making the ruling covering teams under its jurisdiction, forwarded the resolution to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association with the recommendation that it be adopted generally in Canada.

The resolution read "That no hockey club in this organization be permitted to sign more than four National Hockey League players, and by N.H.L. players is meant any man who participated in any N.H.L. fixture in the 1941-42 season. This is to cover both civilian and armed services clubs. This does not apply to commercial clubs which are not eligible for the Allan Cup."

The branch later voted to purchase $1,000 in bonds in the forthcoming Victory Loan.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 17 —(AP)—With all those football teams stranded by floods in Richmond yesterday it looked as if the South's favorite gridiron song would be "Carry Me Out of Old Virginny." . . . It just goes to show you, however, some of the perils of trying to move teams around the country these days . . . In normal times they could have chartered a few planes after the rails were washed out and arrived ahead of time . . . instead, they almost had to stay where they were and play each other . . . Maybe that's the way they'll schedule games before long . . . The graduate managers will get on the phone and say, "Let's you and us play a game. We'll both start Thursday morning and play when and where we meet."

Puzzler.

Race fans got something to argue about all winter when Mrs. A. Crouch's Happy Note ran away during the post parade at Jamaica the other day . . . The horse slipped between the starting gate and the rail and ran clear around the track before he was caught, so the stewards excused him from the race and ordered bets refunded . . . Then they discovered a claim had been entered and awarded Happy Note to Mrs. G. J. Carrol's stable . . . The question still in the air is whether the horse really was a starter and if he had been hurt during the runaway, who would have to shoulder the responsibility?

Persuasion.

When the Bears played the Cardinals in Chicago last week, they announced that footballs kicked into the stands and returned by the fans would be donated to army camps . . . Most of the bleacherites willingly tossed them back, but one hung on to the pig-skin despite a hearty booing . . . After the game three sailors came up to announcer Rocky Wolfe and said: "Here's that ball . . . The three of us convinced that guy he should return it."

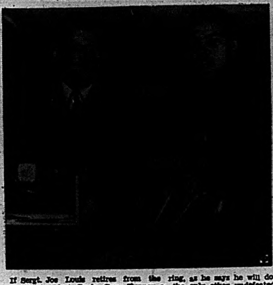
Sportpourri.

There'll be 2,200 military secrets at Baker Field for the Army-Columbia game today . . . Army has announced the cadets will be there, but the trip from West Point comes under the head of "troop movements" . . . Writing a dope story on today's rugby game at Oklahoma City between the English - Welsh squad and the Irish - Scottish cadets from the R.A.F. Flying School at Ponca City, a cadet author explained that a previous encounter "was typical international struggle, Scotland and Ireland finishing the game with 11 men and their opponents with 12." A rugby team starts with 15 players.

NOT THIS WINTER

..Pat Egan, just purchased by the Red Wings from the defunct New York Americans, will not play hockey this winter, according to a report from Vancouver, where Pat is working in a Vancouver shipyard. The National Selective Service Board says "no," according to the report, Pat must stay building ships.

LOUIS TO FOLLOW TUNNEY'S LEAD?



If Sergt. Joe Louis retires from the ring, as he says he will do, he will join Lieut.-Cmdr. Gene Tunney as the only other undefeated heavyweight champion to retire. Tunney, shown with Louis during an awards' dinner last January, retired in 1928. Jim Jeffries retired in 1904 as heavyweight champion but came back later in an attempt to regain it. He failed to do so.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

IN A LETTER HOME SERGT. Don Thomas, of the C.A.S.F. in England, writes regarding the sporting activities of some of Belleville softball players. Sergt. Don has been umpiring softball games overseas along with "Mag" Loucks and Davie Young of Napanee and Picton respectively. It seems the 47th L.A.A. Bty., in which many Belleville and district boys enlisted in the summer of 1941, boasts of a highclass softball team. So-much-so that they won their divisional championship and advanced to the Canadian army finals. Don says it was like an "old boys'" reunion of Bay of Quinte district when the 47th Battery won their division title. He and Mag Loucks umpired. On the battery team were Harold Reid (Belleville) at third, Joe Jocko (Napanee) at short, Walt Gerow, Jr. (Belleville) at first, Lum Carson (Belleville) and Tyle Ball (Cobourg) pitchers, Geo. Elliott (Napanee) catcher, Porky Moffat, (Napanee) and Leo Goyer (Belleville) outfield.

SERGT. THOMAS SAYS THEIR officers really back their team, one officer having wagered £70 on the title game. "I would like to see our battery team meet the Army and Navy Vets, team back home. It would be a real tussle," writes Don, but that was before he found out what a miserable showing the Vets made against Kingston, —no doubt. Don's letter was dated Sept. 20th exactly a year from the date he sailed from Canadian shores overseas.

Incidentally we also received a letter from Ken McAdam, former Y.M.C.A. athletic director at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base sometime ago. Ken is organizing sports in the R.C.A.F. in England and enclosed a snapshot of himself and Don Dell of this city. Other letters to this department have been received recently from Capt. Pte Beach in England, and Sergt. Addison Lloyd, who was on the Pacific Coast at that time. (P.S.—"There's some swell daisies here now, Don.")

ALONG THE FOOTBALL ROW—Jack Doran is taking his St. Michael's Academy senior six-man football squad to Kingston today where they play an exhibition game versus the Regiopolis College sextette.

Coach Harold Mott is shaking up his B.C.I. junior line-up, according to reports. Several players in Wednesday's lineup may be benched for the Collegians' game with Albert College next Monday.

The standing of the Belleville Interscholastic Rugby group reads:

	W.	L.	F.	A.
St. Mikes	1	0	17	0
Albert College	0	0	0	0
B.C.I.V.S.	0	1	0	17

REMEMBER WHEN THE GREYhound, the world's champion trotter retired from racing at Indianapolis one year ago today? The nine-year-old gelding had established 17 world's records and had been undefeated since he was two years old.

WRESTLING FANS HAVE A real treat in store for themselves next week when Whipper Watson and Earl McCready tangle. There'll be none of the dock-walloper stuff, but on the contrary good orthodox wrestling will be dished up to the patrons for a change. This rough-house business may be alright for the occasional diversion but it's not a healthy regular wrestling diet. Both Watson and McCready are popular ringmen in Belleville and doubtless will provide better than usual entertainment.

FOR THE THIRD CONSECUTIVE year, not a single National League batsman finished the campaign with a total of 200 or more base hits. High man in the senior major league circuit for 1942 for bingles was Enos Slaughter of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals with a grand total of 188 safe hits.

In the American League, two batters finished with 200 or more safeties. Freshman Johnny Pesky of the Boston Red Sox smacked out 205 and Flychaser Stan Spence of Washington collected 203.

Not since 1939 have the final N.L. averages included one or more 200-hit collectors. In that year, Frank McCormick of Cincinnati made 209 hits and Joe Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals bagged 201.

THIS AND THAT—Reg. "Red" Horner, former Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman, will toot a referee's whistle in the N.H.L. this winter. . . . It will appear strange for "Reg the Red" to be thumbing players to the sidelines instead of getting the heave to himself. . . . Buck (I get around) Newsom has played with twenty baseball clubs in his lifetime and had two stays with the Browns, Senators and Brooklyn. . . . The Yanks and the Giants have each won 13 pennants since the turn of the century. . . . Dick Barrett, of the Syracuse Chiefs, was the leading pitcher in the International League just closed in the matter of games won. . . . There wasn't a 20-game winner in the loop, Barrett registering 19 to lead the pack. . . . Ed Shortt is planning a baseball league for experienced players over at the "Y". . . . Incidentally with its face all washed and spick and span the "Y" opened for the fall semester on a larger scale than ever. . . . Floods in Virginia area threaten today's American football games, as teams were stranded by flood waters late Friday. . . . Tell me pal, it ain't so.

Canada's Athletes at War

By MIKE GREENSTEIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 17 — (CP) — The Fort Erie senior softball league has something to boat about when it comes to recording enlistment achievements.

Already 31 members of this league have joined the armed forces of Canada and the United States. This split enlistment setup is a feature especially applicable to a border community like Fort Erie which has a large American resident population.

Latest enlistees in the American forces are: Bob and Bill Marshall, Don Byers, Willie Wilcox and Bill Casey.

The north zone section of the Camp Borden basketball league got under way the other night and a star of the evening's performance was Trooper D. Abrahams of Truro, N.S. He was the pacesetter in a cage contest which saw the 23rd Army Tank Battalion defeat the 2nd Canadian Army Tank Brigade 32-2.

Twenty-year-old Lou Melnar, one of Brantford's leading young golfers and champion of the Arrowdale municipal club in that Western Ontario city's precincts, has enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Ernie Mundey, former Montreal and Washington Eagles hockey ace who holds the rank of sergeant in the Canadian army, is now sports director at Huntingdon, Que. Basic Training Centre.

Mundey is very interested in the centre's entry in the Quebec Rugby Football Union and he's quoted as saying he'll have the best conditioned team in the league.

It seems the team is never too tired to dress for evening football drills even after regular daily military training periods.

Among the lads turning out for the team is Johnny Rinddy who formerly played for Ottawa St. Pats.

Tommy Osborne, a newcomer to the game of football, but no newcomer to boxing fans in Montreal, is another one of the soldiers trying for a place on the team.

Bob Rand and Eddie Dyson, well-known Vancouver basketball players both are in the R.C.A.F.

Y.M.C.A. WAR SERVICES .....

Belleville—The Saturday night Red Triangle Club dance this week will again be held in the Y. Gym and hostesses are requested to be on hand about 8.15 p.m.

Sunday's program will include a sing-song at 8.30 p.m. During the day the lounge and games room will be available for men and women in the services.

Miss Mary Forster is again actively teaching the dancing class on Monday night at 7.30 p.m. in the games room and any serviceman interested in obtaining first-class instruction is welcome to attend.

Tuesday evening the concert party practices start in the games room under Miss Forster and anyone with talent desirous of joining this group which is to entertain troops in this district should get in touch with Tom Hill at the Y. or attend Tuesday evening.

Wednesday dances are being continued at the Y. and in addition to modern dances Bert Blissette and Charles Thorn are conducting square dances during the evening.

Hostesses are in attendance each evening at the Red Triangle Club and any service man or woman is heartily welcomed to the nightly events.

Many thanks to those who have phoned in requesting that service men be sent to their homes for meals or overnight accommodation and also to those who keep us supplied with magazines.

R.C.A.F. Trenton News

On Wednesday the members of the Belleville Hospitality Club held a dance in the Collegiate for the personnel of Trenton and 5 I.T.S. with the R.C.A.F. orchestra supplying the music. An enjoyable evening was had by both the men and hostesses.

Many invitations were received this week from the ladies of Cobourg to have men spend their weekend leaves in their fair community. This weekend we look forward to having with us Mr. Reginald Godden, an outstanding Canadian pianist, who will give a recital on Sunday evening.

This week saw the inaugural work outs for the station basketball teams. The Women's Division has been practicing each night with great enthusiasm and we look forward to having one of the best girls' basketball teams in Canada.

The Trenton "Flyers," Airmen's team, have only had two practices but there appears to be a wealth of material for a successful team.

The Bay of Quinte Sports League met at No. 6 R.D. this week and plans were completed for the badminton tournament to be held next Wednesday at No. 6 R.D. The Inter-station Basketball League will commence the first week of November and close competition is looked for, judging by reports submitted by all stations as to the quality of their teams.

Picton engaged Trenton in a soccer match and the game finished in a 2-all tie. It was a great game, "nip and tuck" all the way.

Following the game, both teams enjoyed a hearty supper in the airmen's mess and a good time was had by all.

This station will participate in the Third Victory Loan and Saturday October 24th will be visitors day, the station being open to the public from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

AT THE CAPITOL

"MEN OF SAN QUENTIN"

(First Belleville showing.)

The first really authentic drama of prison life, "Men of San Quentin", starts Sunday midnight at the Capitol.

This thrilling story actually filmed with many exterior and interior shots of the famous California penal institution, has an unusual quality of realism due to the fact that the inmates are seen in much of the action.

Previewed right in the great mess hall of the prison before several thousands of the convicts, the picture was received with great enthusiasm by these hard-boiled critics, who certainly are the best judges of life behind penitentiary walls. Their reactions were of interest to the newspaper reviewers and special feature writers who attended the unusual performance, for the convicts applauded impartially when a guard or a prisoner got shot or beaten up. They only demanded strong and convincing action, and as this was supplied to them in large chunks, they made the rafters ring with their unqualified approval.

Impressive performances are given by Dick Curtis, Jeffrey Sayre, Art Miles and George Breakston in their roles of convicts. The story is by Martin Mooney, America's Number 1 crime reporter.

"Come Live With Me."

Heavenly Hedy Lamarr continues the comedy flair she first revealed with Clark Gable in "Comrade X", in "Come Live With Me", this time in the company of James Stewart, the new picture marking the first appearance together of two of the screen's most popular stars. Filmed under the direction of the noted Clarence Brown, "Come Live With Me" will be shown starting Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre as the second great attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Moscow Strikes Back"

"Moscow Strikes Back" the first feature-length picture of World War II, open at the McCarthy theatre. It cost the lives of 5 cameramen to make this film and unless you are prepared to witness the most shocking and horrifying scenes of truthful happenings ever photographed this picture should be passed up for some other milder screen-fare. "Moscow Strikes Back" offers the stark-naked truth of war as it is waged by lustful Nazism, actual pictures that will forever stamp one nation as a generation of murderers—the other as the most heroic in all human history. Off-setting the grimness of this thrilling film, the program also includes the musical-comedy full-length feature "Jail House Blues" featuring Nat Pendleton, Anne Gwynne, Robert Paige, Warren Hymer and Samuel S. Hinds. In the newsreel which also will be presented at all performances the highlights of the opening game in the world-series between the New York Yanks and St. Louis Cardinals, are shown.

AT THE BELLE

"Crossroads"

Suspense takes a front seat in MGM's "Crossroads", the thrilling drama now playing at the Belle Theatre. Thoroughly believable and entirely engrossing the film unfolds a story of romance and intrigue in Paris just prior to the present war. It stars William Powell and Hedy Lamarr, with Claire Trevor, Basil Rathbone and Margaret Wycherly heading a sterling supporting cast.

Powell plays a French diplomat married to the glorious Miss Lamarr. Their happiness is threatened when Rathbone and Miss Trevor engineer a blackmail plot against Powell. They charge him with masquerading under a false identity and claim that he is really a murderer and a thief. The chain of evidence proving Powell to be the ex-criminal is built up in masterly fashion under the skillful direction of Jack Conway.

The situation is loaded with suspense as Powell endeavors to prove his true identity and expose the blackmail plot. With the ghost of his forgotten past looming ominously, Powell probes for the solution.

The picture is a tightly-written, plausible drama. It's characters in addition to those portrayed by the stars and Miss Trevor, Rathbone and Miss Wycherly, are finely drawn and expertly played by such outstanding actors as Felix Bressart, Vladimir Sokoloff, Sig Rumann, H. B. Warner, Guy Bates, Post, Reginald Owen, Frank Conroy, Philip Merivale, Fritz Leiber, James Rennie, and Mitchell Lewis.

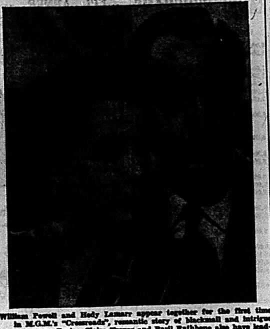
The film, produced by Edwin Knopf, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is brightened with enchantingly beautiful sets as the background for the luxurious life of modern Parisian society. Miss Lamarr and Miss Trevor appear in many stunning gowns, created by Kalloch, noted MGM Fashion designer.

Powell is superb in his first serious role in some time. Miss Lamarr gives a sympathetic, highly effective portrayal. Basil Rathbone was never more suave and cunning as the blackmailer, while Miss Trevor turns in a surprise performance as the sultry cafe singer and blackmail accomplice.

A color fun cartoon, "The Bear and the Beavers", the Belle News of the Day, from Home and Abroad, and a timely and thoroughly entertaining multiole-reel film "For the Common Defence" completes the program.

Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE BELLE



William Powell and Hedy Lamarr appear together for the first time in M.G.M.'s "Crossroads", romantic story of blackmail and intrigue in pre-war Paris. Claire Trevor and Basil Rathbone also have leading roles. The film is now showing at the Belle Theatre.

Actor Named Defendant In Rape Charges

Erroll Flynn, Hollywood Actor, Released on Bail of $1,000

TRIAL OCTOBER 23

Los Angeles, Oct. 17 (AP).—Actor Errol Flynn, who has won many a fair maiden's heart on the silver screen but wasn't able to make a success of his own marriage, today was defendant in a rape charge involving a 17-year-old stage-struck girl, who said he told her he "was very fond of me and would get me a job".

A complaint, issued on instructions from District Attorney John F. Dickweiler, alleged that on the night of Sept. 27 Flynn raped Betty Hansen of Lincoln, Neb., during a party at the fashionable Bel Air home of Fred McEvoy, wealthy British sportsman and former Olympic bobsled champion.

"He told me he would call me the next night," Juvenile Officer Dorothy Pulas quoted the girl as saying. "I waited for three nights, but he never called."

Father of a 17-months old son, Flynn, divorced last April by screen actress Lily Damita, was released under $1,000 bail pending preliminary hearing October 23.

"I can't understand what all this is about," said the 33-year-old British-born actor in denying the charge. "I hardly spoke to the girl, and certainly I did not harm her."

Sister of Girl Signs Complaint.

The complaint against Flynn was signed by Mrs. Jack Marsden, a sister, with whom Miss Hansen lived. It also charged three youthful film studio employees with making subsequent morals attacks upon the girl.

Listed as Armand Knapp, 18, Morrie Black, 22, and Joseph Geraldi, 20, they already are in custody.

Under California law, a sex offence against a girl under 18, regardless of consent, constitutes rape.

Policewoman Pulas said Miss Hansen told her she was working in a drug store when Knapp offered to introduce her to Flynn, then took her to the McEvoy party.

"Flynn began showing me attention," Miss Pulas quoted the girl as saying. "He told me he was very fond of me and would get me a job.

"He asked me to go upstairs with him . . . later he went back downstairs and he told me he would call me the next night, but he never called."

Flynn was among several witnesses who appeared Wednesday before a county grand jury. No indictment was returned.

"The grand jury obviously ignored the evidence in this case," said Dockweiler in ordering the complaint issued.

AT THE McCARTHY

Nat Pendleton, Anne Gwynne and Robert Paige featured in the laugh hit "Jail House Blues," which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to "Moscow Strikes Back," the first full-length picture of World War II.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in physiology Miss Kitty was telling the class about the human stummick, saying, The human stummick is a pear shape bag. It is a branch of the Alimentary Canal and has a capacity of one quart, she said, and I said, Not Puds Simkins's stummick.

Saying it louder than I thought, and everybody laughed like everything, and Miss Kitty made me stay after school and gave me a note to take home saying I displayed a lack of seriousness tords my school work, and ma showed it to pop against my advice, and I said, Well G wizzickers, pop, everybody laughed except Miss Kitty, so that proves it was really funny, dont it?

It proves a small minority generally has the deciding voice in human affairs, pop said. When things turn out well, the small minority is known as government by aristocracy, and when things turn out badly it is called despotism or tyranny. The incident also proves that a sense of humor is a dangerous thing and has often ruined the most promising careers. One time when I was courting your mother I found her in her front parlor conversing with a young chap named Horace Entwhistle with long curly locks, and in a spirit of pure good natured humor I asked him if he ever found birds eggs in his hair. I really thought your mother would never forgive me, and of course if she hadn't it would of made a decided difference in your name, identity and residential address. So please remember what a narrow escape you had from the effects of humor the next time you feel —a burst of it coming on, pop said.

Now William I believe you're still jealous of Horace Entwhistle, and that incident never happened, and his hair wasn't curly, it was wavy, ma said, and pop said, Do you see what I mean, Benny, now do your lessons.

Which I did.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

CHAPTER 28

He grinned. "It's never been held against me before. Do you suppose I could convince her family it wouldn't be such a bad idea for her to marry me? I'd promise to stop laying around and quit the drinking. But, damn it, I won't promise anything if she won't come back to me! Feelings! Suppose you look at mine, Judith. I don't know where I've been and I don't care where I'm going — if Emily won't come back to me. She is the dearest—she's my girl and it'll be for keeps. Do you believe me?"

"Yes, I do, Tim."

"Thanks. And about my family. My mother knows. She hasn't told me but she knows. She knows her son. And my father. . . . he'd be delighted because then I'd show up at the office every day. Now get this straight. They're no snobs. They're thoroughbreds. I know. And Emily will be received as the daughter they've always wanted. My parents are normal people who want their son to be happy and they'll love the girl who can make me happy. Are you with me, Judith?"

She smiled. "Of course. You know, it doesn't usually end this way."

He chuckled. "I know. Usually the little girl goes home and marries the village blacksmith." He got to his feet and grinned. "Well, that's that. I'm going places and I've got to get busy. Going to the office and break the news to Dad and then run out to the country and tell mother. Should I let Emily know of my honorable intentions in advance?"

"I'm not Emily, but if I were, I'd want you to surprise me even if I weren't wearing a pretty dress and didn't have on any lipstick. Emily is lovely without lipstick and in the plainest of dresses."

He laughed. "I'll take you to the station and talk to you until your train comes in. That is if you can stand hearing about Emily and me. I'm going to get married."

Judith thought, "I'm heading home. I won't look back at this when I go out the door."

Tim and Emily Marry

Driving Judith to the station, Tim said, "Maybe I'm too sure. Maybe Emily has changed her mind."

"She hasn't changed her mind about you."

"I'm all jumpy inside and my thoughts are running over each other. I've got to buy her an engagement ring and a wedding ring . . . I wonder where she'd like to go on a honeymoon or where she'd like to live."

"She'd like a house of her own, I think."

"She'll have it. Do you think she'll want a fancy wedding?"

"She'll want it simple. She just wants you and not the trimmings of marriage. Keep her happy, Tim. Keep her happy."

He glanced at her sharply. "What about you? This idea of yours to go home."

She looked at the streets teeming with people. "They left, all the ones who mattered, left. Tell Emily this when you tell her I've gone home. Tell her that—that Max has gone."

"Max?"

"The reason why I stopped bringing work home with me in the evenings."

In the station Tim said, holding her hand, "I'm sorry its turning out this way for you, Judith."

She smiled. "You think I'll go home and marry the village blacksmith? I'm not going to marry anybody. And as for you and Emily I'm terribly happy for you both. It's one of those rare cases where love is mutual. I had begun to think that it never is. Good-bye and start heading West.' '

Everything was blurred after that—Tim's handsome face, the passing faces, the steps going down to the tracks, the inside of the train. She thought, "Tim has found his feelings. I wish I could lose mine."

The next day her mother called her to the telephone, saying, "It's long distance, dear." Judith stopped still in the centre of her room, a hot flush coloring her face. Long distance? Max? She could not get to the telephone in the downstairs hall quickly enough.

But it was Phyllis. "Hello, Judith. I wanted to call you before you left but—but you know how it is. I simply couldn't believe it when Ames said you were going home."

Phyllis, curious and suspicious, was throwing out bait.

Judith's heart returned to normal. Hating the sickening disappointment because it wasn't Max, she said, "I think I'll be happier here now, Phyllis. I intend to be." Then she said, "Tim is on his way to ask Emily to marry him."

"Tim? Really?" Phyllis did not believe that Tim would marry Emily.

"Yes. He missed her and loved her more than he realized. So Emily will be coming back to New York with him. She deserves all of it."

Phyllis laughed softly. "Little Emily, our little Emily, catching Tim Stevens. Who'd have thought of it? It's wonderful, of course. . . I'll get in touch with her. Oh, I almost forgot . . . Fay Hathaway called me. Remember the attractive woman at my party?"

Did she remember Fay Hathaway? "Yes, I remember her."

"Well, she asked what had become of you. Your phone was disconnected. She said she liked you so much and wanted to see you again. Isn't she a lovely person?"

She grasped the telephone tightly. "Is she—is she married?"

"Why, no, I don't think so. Why, was she planning to be married."

"No. it's nothing. I thought perhaps she would be."

When the conversation ended, Judith returned to her room, closed the door and walked to the window. Max had not married Fay. No matter what had happened in Venezuela he had not married Fay. How strange it was to feel a little sorry that Fay must go into her eleventh year of waiting for Max to make up his mind to marry her. Sorry for Fay's sake. . . . But to feel sorry was to think of Max as two men, the one she, Judith, loved and the one Fay loved. Sorry and glad, all at the same time, and glad because Max was still free. He'd come back, Fay had said. He always came back. And somewhere in that series of tomorrow she, Judith and Max would be together again. It was as if she'd been told. And on that day she would solve the enigma of Max who had said, "Doubt everything and everyone, if you must, but never doubt my love." She thought, "He bound me by his last words. Did he know that? He bound me because I shall never be released until I know what he meant. And perhaps he didn't mean anything at all."

A few days later she received a telegram from Emily. She and Tim were married and were going to California for six weeks.

Within a week she was working at Overton's under Ralph Field, a personable, amusing, capable young man who had been glad to add her to his staff. That same week she met Katherine Stoddard, Ralph's fiancee, an attractive, interesting, dark-haired girl who had studied and traveled widely and was now teaching in Clinton's best art school. Ralph and Katherine asked her to luncheon. They were all to become very good friends.

Stephen had resigned. Harriet had told her with a mixture of sadness and joy, the former because Stephen undoubtedly would be leaving Clinton, the latter because Larry, Harriet's husband, had been made Forbes' assistant and had been given a sorely needed increase in salary. And Judith thought, "Stephen won't call me again. He's proud and he's a young man without a job." She was touched and had a few moments concern over him since he had taken her into his confidence and she understood fully the reasons behind his resignation and remembered his great ambition. Would he cling to the latter despite discouragement and unemployment and a dwindling bank account? Would he achieve "the best" now? He came and went in her mind as all things came and went in her mind these days, all things except Max. Max remained stubbornly steadfast there, rooted with her memories of those three months into which she had so happy poured "the best" of herself.

She was lunching alone in a hotel cafeteria one day when she saw Stephen carrying a tray, he stood still and smiled rather weakly, looking confused, embarrassed.

"Mind if I join you?" he said.

"Not at all. I hate eating alone."

He was still confused and embarrassed a few minutes later when she said gently, "We thought you had gone back to Baltimore, Stephen. But we didn't think you'd go without saying good-bye." She had to be kind to him and she wished she could think of something even kinder to say to take his look of discouragement and hurt and shaken confidence.

"I wouldn't go away without saying good-bye to Harriet and Larry and—and you. I've been trying to get a job here." He shook his head. "No luck."

"Your bad luck was Larry's good break." Harriet had a maid three days a week now and a new coat of which she was touchingly proud.

He tried to smile. "I guess I'm too particular. How are you doing? I heard you were working at Overton's. I was surprised."

"Were you?"

"I didn't think you'd ever leave New York."

"Stop being surprised at the things people do." She thought, "you're afraid, Stephen. Your confidense has been shaken and you're afraid. This can ruin you, cheat you out of everything you want and are capable of doing. Isn't there anyone to give you a pat on the back and tell you the things women tell men they love when the men are discouraged? Why doesn't your mother tell you?" She said, "They say you can't hold a good man down, Stephen. Harriet said that a man can be too smart for his job and that you were too smart for yours. You still want the best, don't you?"

He smiled. "Hadn't I had a few drinks when I said that?"

"Yes, but you meant it and you can still get it."

"You're so sure? You wouldn't kid me, would you?"

She shook her head.

"I have an appointment this afternoon with an executive who freezes you with one glance. Maybe I will take some of this coffee."

"That's much better. Don't let him know he's freezing you. Don't look too anxious for the job. I hate to rush off, but my time is up."

Grade 'A' Eggs Hold at 50 Cents Dozen on Market

Grade "A" eggs held at their previous high level of 50 cents the dozen on the local produce market this morning. Attendance, both by farmers and purchasers was down from last week, due no doubt to the threatening weather.

Medium grade eggs were quoted at 28 cents the dozen with pullets ranging from 35 to 40 cents. Chicken prices held at the usual 32 cents for spring fowl with mature birds bringing 27 to 30 cents. Top price for fowl was $1.75 to $1.80 with the average bird bringing $1.25 to $1.35. Butter sold at two pounds for 85 cents and at 40 cents the pound.

McIntosh apples brought up to $2 per hamper for top grades with Talman Sweets being quoted at $1.75 per bushel. Cookers, all varieties, ranged from $1 to $1.25 per bushel. Grapes were offered at 45 and 50 cents the basket.

Potatoes held at $2 per bag with tomatoes bringing $1 the bushel or 25 cents the six-quart basket. Carrots, parsnips and beets sold at 40 cents the peck and onions at 60 cents. Cauliflower ranged from 10 cents up to 30 cents each. Celery and cabbage brought the usual prices.

Whitefish sold at 28 cents the pound with only a small quantity being offered.

Twenty-one farmers offered young pigs on the market with prices ranging from seven to eight dollars each.

Experimenters in Denmark have found that string, weavings and fine braids can be made from the fiber of the garden variety of palm lily.

Five Members Of One Family Lost on Caribou

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 17 —(CP)— Five members of one family—a husband and wife and their three children — were wiped out in the torpedo sinking of the Newfoundland government steamship Caribou.

When the Caribou steamed out of North Sydney for Port Aux Basques, Nfld., Tuesday night, it carried John Tapper, a Newfoundland seaman in the Canadian Navy; his wife, and their three youngsters, John W., 9; Lillian, 7; and Donald, 2. When the lists of survivors were compiled here, there were no Tappers in the row of 101 names.

It was the greatest single family loss of the sinking that claimed 137 lives. Navy Minister Angus L. Macdonald singled the Tappers out for special mention in a statement he issued at Ottawa last night.

But there were other multiple family losses. Mrs. Gordon Allan, 26, a native of Bathurst, N.B., was taking her two children to Newfoundland to join her husband, an Adventist pastor in St. John's.

She and the children, Caroline, 5, and Constance, 15 months, all were lost.

Mrs. Richard J. Skinner of Halifax had taken aboard her two children, Basil, 4, and Nancy, 2. All failed to live through the torpedoing.

And in the ship's crew itself, the captain and two of his sons gave their lives. Captain Ben Taverner, a Newfoundlander from Channel, had his son Stanley as first mate and another son, Harold, as third mate. All went down, sticking by the ship as the skipper made a hopeless attempt to ram the attacking submarine before his torpedo-torn craft went under.

Trenton and District

Police Court

Trenton (Special)—Fred Deline who was apprehended by Trenton police about 1 a.m. on Friday morning peaking in a bedroom window on Dundas Street East appeared in police court n Friday afternoon before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd and was sentenced to one month in the common jail, charged with vagrancy.

D. Labey appeared charged with driving through a traffic signal and was fined $2.00 and $2.50 costs.

S. Andrews on a similar charge was fined a similar amount.

Kenneth Allore for having liquor in an illegal place paid $25 and $3.00 costs while Earl McKeown and B. LaRocque were assessed $10 and costs for consuming.

Margaret Robinson for being drunk $10 and costs.

Two careless driving cases up some time ago were again laid over for another week, and one case under the War Measures' Act was enlarged for a week due to the defendant being ill.

A minor for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk was fined $1.00 and $1.00 costs.

First Canadian Nurse to Die From Enemy Action

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 17 (CP)—Two Western Canadian girls in Canada's navy were aboard the Steamship Caribou when she was torpedoed October 14, but only one won through to safety.

Margaret M. Brooke of Ardath, Sask., managed to hold to a capsized lifeboat until rescue ships came. But Nursing Sister Agnes Wilkie of Winnipeg, was lost when her strength gave out as she held on to the same boat. She was the first Canadian nurse to die from enemy action.

Miss Brooke told here how she and her companion fought for life after the torpedoing. "The torpedo hit stunned me," she said, "but Agnes got up quickly and we rushed to our lifeboat on the port side.

"It had been shot away.

"Agnes didn't know how to put her lifebelt on, so I did it for her, and then helped her onto a capsized lifeboat. There were about a dozen of us. We clung to the ropes.

"The waves kept washing us off, one by one, and eventually Agnes said she was getting cramped.

"She let go, but I managed to catch hold of her with one hand. I held to her as best I could until daybreak. Finally, a wave took her.

"When I called to her, she didn't answer. She must have been unconscious. The men left tried to reach her, but she floated away."

Miss Brooke said she, herself, was so far gone she didn't know how she got aboard the rescue ship. She was told later that one of the sailors had dived off the vessel to help bring her aboard.

CHILD IS BITTEN ON FACE BY DOG

While attempting to play with a neighbor's dog, four-year-old Lionel Enright, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Enright, 50 Catherine Street, was bitten on the face near his home Saturday morning. As the little lad bent over to pet the dog, the animal snapped at him inflicting teeth wounds above and below the right eye. Mr. Enright reported the incident to police authorities, stating he did not imagine the injuries would have any ill effect.

First War Veterans Given Position Of Honor in Ceremony at Cenotaph To Veteran of the Present War

A veteran of the present war, flanked by two ex-service men, veterans of the First Great War, will comprise the "Dagger Party," which will head the Victory Loan parade here Sunday afternoon.

This important feature of the parade was given to President Thomas York, and his fellow veterans of the Belleville Branch, 201, of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, and the "old soldiers" immediately gave the position of honor to a member of the new army.

Indicative of their efforts on the present national crisis, is the fact that the war veterans, to a man, offered their services in any capacity to assist in not only the inaugural ceremonies of the Third Victory Loan but in the campaign as a whole.

The famous Commando Dagger will be carried by these veterans to the Cenotaph where it will be officially presented to a representative of Hastings County. Returning, the veterans will again carry the weapon and at the point of dispersal, officially turn it over to a city representative. The Dagger will be on display in various parts of the city during the forthcoming Victory Loan Campaign.

Air Commodore McGill Gives Talk To Life Underwriters Association

The Life Underwriters Association of Belleville and surrounding district, under the leadership of President Frank Webb of the London Life Co., opened the fall season with a luncheon at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday. The attendance was large and memberships have soared to new heights. Thirty members of the Association, representing nearly ever life insurance company doing business in Belleville, were present and the meeting was one of the most enthusiastic yet held.

Major B. C. Sisler of the Argyll Light Infantry (Reserve), gave an interesting outline of the activities of the Home Guard and made a strong appeal for recruits.

Mr. Gilbert Stackhouse, District Manager of the Manufacturers Life Co., introduced the guest speaker.

Air Commodore Frank J. McGill, commanding officer of the Trenton Central Flying School, is a veteran of the last Great War. He stated that the Trenton Air Station was one of the most important in Canada and outlined in general detail the various courses of instruction available for every branch of the service and the final period of disciplinary training which has enabled Canada to produce one of the finest air force armadas in the world.

The appreciation of the Association for the outstanding address of Air Commodore McGill was extended in a vote of thanks by Mr. J. Bruyea, District Manager of the National Life Co.

Mrs. C. Calvert, accomplished pianist of the city, rendered a number of instrumental selections.

Mr. F. J. McArthur, District Manager of the Great West Life Co. and secretary of the Life Underwriters Association, was in charge of organization of the meeting.

Peterboro Detachment Of O.V.C. to Visit City

The Peterboro detachment of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary will be in the city tomorrow and will parade with the Belleville squad for inspection by a high ranking officer of the organization, it was learned today.

While members of the Belleville detachment of the O.V.C. have volunteered for police duty in connection with the Victory Loan parade on Sunday afternoon, the remainder of the squad will, it is believed, take part in the afternoon ceremonies with their fellow constables from Peterboro. Approximately ninety members of the O.V.C. will be in the city and augment the military parade to the Cenotaph.

R. Lockyer, J. Lee Land Two Nice 'Lunge on Thurs.

Taking one last fling with the hook and line before the October 15th deadline ended the bass and muskie fishing for another season, Ray Lockyer and Jack Lee again proved that Muscote Bay is the Izaak Walton's dream of a fisherman's paradise, when on Thursday afternoon they hooked eleven and fourteen-pound 'lunge respectively.

After Lockyer's fishing luck on the previous Monday, the catch on Thursday seems almost too good to be true, but "seeing is believing" and the two fishermen claim the muskies were hooked at exactly the same moment. Just how the boys managed to keep their lines from tangling in the ensuing struggle was not mentioned.

3-Storey Building Destroyed by Fire In Hamilton

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 16 (CP)—Damage running into several hundred thousand dollars was estimated to have been caused by fire, smoke and water in a blaze that started early today in the basement of the Garvin Hardware store on Catherine Street north.

The fire wrecked a three storey building and the equipment and stock of the Kent Tile and Marble Company, the City Linotype Company and the Multigraph Sales Agency. Burning paints and oil made figrefighters' task a difficult one but with nearly 100 firemen and auxiliary workers engaged the blaze was brought under control at 10 a.m., five hours after the outbreak.

Dense clouds of smoke from the fire, which destroyed all stock and fixtures of the four firms occupying the building, rolled over the area and downtown traffic was almost halted when visibility was reduced to a few feet.

Only one man was injured in the fire, fireman George Chiswell being removed to hospital for treatment of hand lacerations.

Sub-Building Yards At Trondheim Burned

London, Oct. 16 (CP) — A Moscow broadcast, heard here by Reuters, said today that a big fire had put the Nazi submarine-building yards at Trondheim, on Norway's Atlantic coast, out of operation for a long time.

The Russian radio said that Josef Terboven, Nazi commissioner for Norway, had flown to the scene of the trouble and that a high member of Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo had arrived in Oslo.

Gold Mining To Be Curtailed States King

OTTAWA, Oct. 16 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a prepared statement today said the government has found it necessary "to issue instructions that plans be formulated for further curtailment of gold mining, as well as other non-war industries."

The policy was adopted to meet "the urgent and immediate need for men and materials required by Canada's war effort" and did not indicate any lack of confidence by the government in gold or in the future of the gold-mining industry, the Prime Minister said.

Curtailment of gold mines would form part of a "comprehensive program of curtailing civilian activities" and would be worked out in consultation with management and employees. In transferring to an industry more important to the war effort, workers would be making a valuable contribution, Mr. King said.

He indicated the curtailment would not affect gold mines producing "substantial quantities of minerals or metals essential for war purposes."

DIEPPE HEROES GET ROUSING HOME WELCOME

Prime Minister King Addresses Public Rally at Montreal Park

OTHER SPEAKERS

Montreal, Oct. 16 (CP)—Returning Canadians who took part in the Dieppe raid heard their praises sung by Dominion and Provincial parliamentary leaders and fellow soldiers last night, to conclude what probably was their most strenuous day since they left the blood-soaked beaches of the French town.

Air Minister Power, Justice Minister St. Laurent, Premier Godbout and members of the Dieppe group were the speakers at a civic welcome in Lafontaine Park as Montreal paid tribute to those who had returned and to those who had not.

The open meeting climaxed a busy day of engagements that included a mass press interview, a luncheon, a parade, speech-making and a public reception. A party of 17 Dieppe heroes had arrived in the morning from an east coast United States port, and four others were among a party of 200 servicemen on a mid-day troop train. Most of those on the train were medical category cases and officers and N.C.O.'s returning home for training and instruction.

Speaking at the open air meeting, Air Minister Power said that the exploits of the men at Dieppe had become an inspiration to Canada's war effort. He told the soldiers that it was their duty "to remind the men of this country that their first and prime duty is to serve in the armed services if they are physically fit to do so".

Premier Adds Tribute

Prime Minister Mackenzie King added his tribute by telegram, read at the meeting by Maj. Power. The Prime Minister said that "by the gallantry, devotion and sacrifice of Canada's men at Dieppe, far-reaching service has been rendered all the United Nations, and an imperishable page has been added to our country's history".

Mr. St. Laurent called for a greater war effort on the part of each individual, saying "should we not fear the outcome of the common effort, if in examining our consciences we find that we are not ready to do our part?"

Premier Godbout said that at Dieppe men "from all provinces in the Dominion, men of all languages, men of all religions, united in a common effort for the defence of our country. Although our English and French ancestors fought for the possession of this country, Dieppe reminded us that it is our duty to join hands and try to build a great and better Canada in common effort.

Colonel Speaks For Men

Speaking for the returning Dieppe men, Lt.-Col. Dollard Menard, D.S.O., Officer Commanding Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal in the raid, said "the men who returned from the hell of Dieppe would go back tomorrow. They know now that the Huns can be beaten and will be beaten when we come to grips again".

Maj. Armand Sabourin, padre of Les Fusiliers who was mentioned in Dispatches for his work at Dieppe, said the men who fought there "were inspired with the ideal that they were going to fight for their homes, for their mothers, for their girl-friends, for their wives and for their children. It was this conviction that gave them the courage and the heroism which they so brilliantly displayed".

Seven Missionaries And Catholic Bishop Massacred by Japs

Melbourne, Oct. 16 (CP) — A Roman Catholic bishop and seven other missionaries were massacred by the Japanese July 13 on The Netherlands East Indies Island of Kai, it was announced today by The Netherlands East Indies government information service here.

According to eyewitness accounts, the information service said Bishop Johannes Aerts, 62, and the seven others were herded onto the wharf at Langgoer, Kai's principal port, and slaughtered by Japanese soldiers.

The fate of remaining priests and nuns on the island who are known to have fallen into Japanese hands is not known. The bishop had lived on the island most of his life, the announcement said.

The populations of Kai and of the neighboring Tanimbar group of islands were said to have become enraged over the act.

It is believed here that Bishop Aerts and his companions were killed because the Bishop ordered the destruction of a motor launch prior to the arrival of the Japanese.

H. Morgenthau Visits London

London, Oct. 16 — (CP) —Henry Morgenthau, United States Secretary of the Treasury, was disclosed today to have arrived by plane in Britain yesterday, the first United States cabinet member to come here since the start of the war.

Morgenthau's arrival was unheralded. He is expected to give some indication of his mission at a press conference this afternoon. He went to a London hotel and conferred with United States Ambassador John G. Winant.

One possible point expected from conferences with British officials would be "reciprocal aid," the reverse part of the lend-lease plan, under which Britain is giving the United States war supplies involving many millions of dollars in book-keeping exchange.

The visit also was in line with the evident Washington policy of giving high American officials first-hand familiarity with the Allied war effort, a policy which brought such men as Harry Hopkins, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States army, and others here.

FURY OF HUN ATTACK AT STALINGRAD LESSENS

Enemy However Adds Block To Holdings in City

Russians Move In Fresh Troops To Blunt and Defeat Nazi Assault

DANGER TO CITY ACUTE

MOSCOW, Oct. 19 — (AP) — German troops, advancing over the bodies of hundreds of their dead, added a new block of Stalingrad's crumbling buildings to their holdings within the city today as the Russian defenders moved in fresh troops in a desperate effort to blunt and defeat the latest Nazi assault, now in its sixth day.

Nevertheless, the force of the onslaught seemed lessened from the fury of attacks earlier in the siege, and some observers here questioned whether this was due to an exhaustion of forces or to a German shift of strength to the west to face a possible second front.

The danger to Stalingrad still remained acute, with the German attack concentrated into narrow salients in a desperate effort to achieve a final break-through.

Fiercest Fighting in North Factory Area

Earlier reports had placed the fiercest fighting in the besieged city in the northern factory area and it was assumed that the new German gain was registered there.

"Hundreds of enemy dead were left in the street and 18 tanks were knocked out," the mid-day communique said.

Fourteen German planes supporting the German assault were brought down by Red Air Force pilots and anti-aircraft fire, the communique said, indicating the intensity of the German drive toward their objective.

Among the Axis troops thrown into the battle for Stalingrad, the Russians said, was the Croatian Legion of 4,000 troops, forming part of the German 100th Light Infantry Division.

200 Only Remain Of 4,000 of Croat Legion

Pravda reported that of the original 4,000 members of this Legion only a single company of approximately 200 men remained as the German commanders relentlessly pushed their troops toward the Volga River.

The fighting northwest of Stalingrad was only of local importance, the communique said, but it added that a German concentration of infantry preparing for attack in that area was dispersed by Red Army artillery fire. German attacks in other sectors of this area were repulsed, it was reported.

Red Army troops resisting the German drive toward the Grozny oil fields in the Mozdok region wiped out three companies of German infantry and destroyed 11 tanks in repulsing an attack here, the mid-day communique said.

Stalingrad's Danger

The fighting in the Caucasus, at Mozdok and Novorossisk, the German-occupied naval base on the Black Sea, was pushed into the background by the dramatic defence of Stalingrad.

Sunday alone, said the midnight Soviet communique, 2,500 Nazi soldiers died for Hitler's unfulfilled dream of taking Stalingrad. But the city, now in the 56th. day of Siege, was still in grave danger.

The Germans were reverting to frontal assaults in the city and its immediate suburbs. The Russians said they destroyed 45 German tanks Sunday in the course of bit-

STRANGE SIGHTS IN DIMOUT

Ilwaco, Wash., Oct. 19—(AP) — Strange sights are to be seen these nights — if your eyes function in a dimout. Deer graze on front yards and the high school lawn. Night Marshal U. S. Lucas met (and left) a bear in front of the hospital the other night; they've been stealing apples. A skunk slipped in the back door of a theatre but couldn't keep his secret. Townspeople blame it on the dimout.

LAFLECHE TO RUN IN OUTREMONT

Minister of National War Services Will Contest Riding on November 30

Montreal, Oct. 19 (CP)—Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, Minister of National War Services, agreed Saturday to run as candidate in a by-election in Outremont constituency, Nov 30. The by-election is made necessary by the appointment of Thomas Vien, former member for the division, who recently was appointed to the Senate.

Gen. LaFleche was presented with petitions bearing names of more than 3,000 residents of the constituency at a reception held at the home of Senator Vien.

In accepting the candidature, he said that those who wanted him as their candidate "must accept me as one determined to go the limit to help achieve victory."

In the 1940 general elections, the former member, a Liberal was reelected with a plurality of 9,955 votes over his nearest opponent.

He baited a hook with this minnow and cast with his new $25 rod, forgetting to hold onto the handle. It sank in 40 feet of water. Bengert was startled a few minutes later to see the little minnow struggle to the surface, still wearing the hook. He scooped it out of the water and hauled in 50 feet of line and his rod.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 19 — (AP) — "I'm a faster man with one of these than any Jap I'll ever meet," John Ellington told the missus as he reached for the pistol in his hip pocket. "Just watch me draw!" But John was quicker on the trigger than the draw. An explosion tore away the seat of his britches and his army induction at Fort Logan has been delayed pending healing of a bullet wound.

159-Day, 1,500-Mile Journey Made By Officers Escaping Philippines

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Oct. 19 — (AP) — Capt. William Lloyd Osborne of Los Angeles and First Lieut. Damon Gause of Winder, Ga., have arrived safely in Australia after a dramatic escape from the Philippines and a 159-day, 1,500-mile journey by foot and small boat.

"We arrived here not by expert navigation but by the grace of God," Osborne said.

During their long southward trip, which ended Oct. 11, the officers hid by day and travelled by night, several times escaping by a narrow margin encounters with Japanese troops and ships.

They survived a machine-gunning by a Japanese plane almost within sight of Australia and once sailed right by two Japanese cruisers which ignored them.

Despite the vicissitudes they endured, both men put on weight during the long, hazardous trip.

The final lap of the voyage was made in a 22-foot native-build motorboat, in which they set out Aug. 15. They completed their journey by making a landfalls within 15 miles of the point they had set as their goal.

Osborne, an infantry officer, fought on Bataan peninsula in the Philippines with a Filipino unit. The American forces were forced to capitulate, he elected to make a break for freedom with a Filipino officer and two Filipino privates. They finally found refuge in the wilds near Taal volcano, where they separated.

Osborne began a two-months existence as a fugitive living on native foodstuffs, wild fruits and vegetables and always, seeking a means of escape.

En Route to Front Line

Gause, an airman assigned temporarily to service with ground troops during the battle of Bataan was en route to the front lines shortly before the capitulation. He was captured by the Japanese.

"I figured that if I was going to get away I'd better go before the Japs got organized and rounded up the prisoners under guard," he said.

"So I made a break for it and swam to a boat anchored some distance off shore. They spotted me while I was swimming and fired a few rifle shots, but missed."

Later he learned from natives that another American was seeking to escape. He and Osborne finally came together.

They began planning their flight from Luzon and secured a motorboat with a cranky Diesel engine from the Filipinos, who were afraid to run it. They rigged a sail for added power in case of emergency.

On Aug. 15 they set sail on a voyage which was to last 58 days.

U.S. GUADALCANAL FORCES BRACED FOR LAND ASSAULT

Enemy Moves Artillery Into Postition And Places Troops On N. Shore of Island

SUPPLY DEPOTS BOMBED

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP) — Fending off aerial attempts to soften them up, American forces entrenched on Guadalcanal Island braced themselves today for an expected full-scale assault by Japanese land fighters.

As the enemy moved his artillery into position and placed troops and equipment at strategic spots along the island's north shore, Allied headquarters in Australia sent out four waves of heavy bombers to harass Nipponese supply lines and depots in a wide sweep over the northwest Solomons.

Whether the vigor of these bombings was delaying a frontal assault by land troops could only be conjectured.

Heavy concentrations of supporting enemy ships in the Buin-Shortland area to the northwest were the special target of Allied bombers which were believed to have hit three cruisers and several other vessels.

A communique from Allied headquarters, reporting the second successive night attack on Buin, said the airdrome used by the Japanese in their Solomons operations was bombed heavily.

After lighting up the crowded harbor with parachute flares, the Allied raiders spilled 22 tons of

FORMER PREMIER FERGUSON INJURED

Suffers Slight Injury When Knocked Down by Car—Condition "Fairly Good"

TORONTO, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Condition of G. Howard Ferguson, former Premier of Ontario and Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, was described today as "fairly good" by hospital authorities here. Mr. Ferguson was slightly injured Saturday night when knocked down by a car near his home in North Toronto.

He had gone out to mail letters and was struck by the car as he stepped off the curb. He was able to walk to his home but after a restless night was removed to hospital yesterday.

On Average the Combat Performance of U. S. Aircraft Good, Improves

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 — (CP) —Coupling unvarnished criticism of American fighter planes with an overall analysis of all army and navy air types, the United States office of war information concluded today that "On average the combat performance of United States aircraft is good" and improving.

In a 10,000-word report to the public designed to dispel the fog of confusion concerning American planes the O. W. I. said "The truth lies between the two extremes" of adverse and favorable criticisms.

Specifically, it said:—

1. The Curtiss P-40, Bell P.39 (Airacobra), and North American P-51 (Mustang), standard army fighters already in action, have many good points but are definitely inferior to foreign types in high-altitude combat. Improved types are in production but haven't been battle-tested yet.

2. Chief fault of United States fighters is the tardy and incomplete development of the Allison liquid-cooled motor.

3. For daylight precision bombing Flying Fortress B-17s and Liberator B-24s are unsurpassed.

4. Medium bombers, Mitchell B-25s and Martin B-26s have no competitors.

5. Latest navy fighter, dive-bomber and torpedo types already in action are the best carrier planes in the world.

6. Other types — patrol, reconnaisance, cargo and transport, artillery fire-spotters, and so on — are "satisfactory in quality" within their own fields.

Stressing that only results in battle provide valid standards of criticism, the report suggested no full appraisal will be possible "until the war has been won."

It told how alternate superiority of Britain and the United States in various types gave the United Nations, as a team, a better choice of weapons than the enemy.

The report declared that "in the vast revision of ideas of design after the war began in Europe, the United States owes a vast debt to the Allies, particularly to the British, and to the lessons they brought to America from the battlefield."

FRENCH MUNITION WORKS SMASHED IN DUSK RAID

R.A.F. Lancasters Dump Tons of Explosives on Schneider Works

NO FIGHTER ESCORT

LONDON, Oct. 19 — (AP) — Allied bombers intend to disorganize the Nazi transportation system in Holland by smashing at railroad yards and canal shipping, the Netherlands government in London warned the home population last night as a lightning-like R. A. F. raid on the Schneider Armament Works in occupied France emphasized anew the tremendous power and possibilities of the Allied air arm.

Saturday's flight of 94 heavily loaded R. A. F. Lancaster bombers to the Schneider Works at La Creusot, and the precise and devastating seven-minute attack on that important target was discussed enthusiastically here today as a new advance in Allied bombing technique.

Coming after the daring daylight raid of Oct. 9 by 115 United States Flying Fortress and Liberator bombers on Lille, the attack was regarded as a heartening indication of the Allied ability to defeat the Nazi continental defences.

The four-motored Lancasters, with no fighter escort, depended on surprise for the success of their mission. They approached the target from a tree-top height and dodged all but the smallest defence

U.S. TO SET PRICE CONTROL ON POOL ROOMS, BOWLING ALLEYS

Washington, Oct. 9 (AP)—Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced today that billiard parlors, pool halls and bowling alleys would be placed under price control about Nov. 1, and that fees would not be allowed to advance. "These are places where workers in the war effort and members of the armed forces by the thousands find relaxation after a day's work," said Henderson. "We are going to see to it that they will not be made to pay too much for their recreation."

20,000 WITNESS CEREMONY

Winnipeg, Oct. 19 (CP)—An estimated 20,000 persons gathered at the Manitoba Legislative Buildings yesterday to see a commando dagger, symbolic of the $750,000,000 third Victory Loan campaign opening in Canada tomorrow, being presented by Brig. R. A. MacFarlane of Military District 10 to Hon. R. F. McWilliams, Manitoba Lieutenant-Governor.

STOREKEEPER NOW CONVINCED

Montreal, Oct. 19 —(CP)— Jack Freedman, grocery-store owner, is convinced today that a robber always returns to the scene of his crime. Saturday, two men held up Freedman at the point of a gun and took $75 from the cash register. He told police the pair were the same men who held him up for a similar sum a month ago.

2 JAP DESTROYERS PROBABLY SUNK BY U. S. BOMBERS

Fly So Low Pilots Had to Pull Up to Clear Masts of Ships

HEAVY A.A. FIRE

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Headquarters Alaska Defence Command, Oct. 19 (AP)—United States B-26 bombers, flying so low they had to pull up to clear the masts of the ships, have reported the probable destruction of two Japanese destroyers a few miles west of Japanese-held Kiska in the Aleutian Island group.

The attack was made Oct. 16.

The report said the first destroyer was struck with at least five bombs loosed from almost deck level. The second destroyer took at least four hits.

The fliers faced heavy anti-aircraft fire as they pressed their attack for 45 minutes and when they left they said the decks of both ships were littered with large craters.

They saw the crew of the first destroyer go overboard after a series of explosions, one of which, just behind the stack, was especially heavy.

The floundering Japanese sailors were seen strung out in the water in the wake of the wreckage. Some of the crew of the second ship also were observed in the water as the attacking planes turned homeward.

Smoke belched from both ships and more explosions were heard, this time from the second destroyer, which was lying dead in the water. It appeared to have been fired in the stern.

Five bombers took part in the raid.

Reconnaissance by army planes has disclosed that the Japanese are reinforcing their Kiska garrison, building new installations on the south side of the island, at Gertrude Grove.

Second Assault Launched

Somewhere in New Guinea, Oct. 18—(Delayed)—(AP) — Allied airmen hurled their second big assault in as many days against Japanese bases in the Solomons before dawn today in an offensive aimed at easing enemy pressure on American forces fighting on Guadalcanal.

Flying fortresses struck heavily at a big concentration of Japanese ships at Buin and probable hits were reported on three Japanese cruisers and a number of other vessels. Seven flying boats were destroyed.

The raiders loosed 22 tons of bombs, including many 1,000-pounders, despite unfavorable weather and one of the strongest concentrations of anti-aircraft fire ever tossed up by the enemy.

Low-hanging clouds prevented observation of all the results, but pilots reported a large explosion shattered one of the ships which suffered a direct hit at Buin.

OCCUPIED LANDS FEEL WEIGHT OF GERMANS' HANDS

500 Gestapo Agents Made Citizens Of France in Effort To Recruit Manpower

LAVAL TO ASSIST

London, Oct. 19—(CP)—Mutinies, desertions, suicides and general lowering of morale are on the increase among the 200,000 Germans troops of occupation in Norway, the Norwegian government was informed today in fresh reports brought out of the country.

Two large concentration camps were reported opened for mutineers along the Finnish frontier and at least 1,400 Nazis were said to be confined in one of them.

One authoritative account said that 1,000 German soldiers stationed north of Kirkenes rebelled against an order for them to go to Russia and that one out of every 10 were ordered executed. The order had to be countermanded, this report went on, because Nazi firing squads refused to shoot the men and the Rebels were sent to concentration camps instead.

Suicides were declared mounting at an "alarming" rate, and resorters were reported leaving in increasing numbers, making their way across the Finnish frontier along routes outlined in leaflets dropped from Russian planes.

Growing Unrest

Accounts of Hitler's troubles within its own army were coupled with growing unrest among the conquered peoples of Europe rebelling at the Nazi campaign to recruit labor for war industries.

In both occupied and unoccupied France the Nazis were increasing their pressure with 500 Gestapo agents reported assigned the task of rounding up workers in the Vichy-ruled zone alone.

Norwegian circles here attributed the slackening Nazi morale in Norway to the severe climate, particularly in the far north; to virtually no home leaves, fears of being sent to the Russian front and the cold-shoulder attitude of 98 per cent of the Norwegian people.

In Belgium, 600 Jews have been sent to the French coast to labor on anti-invasion fortifications, the Belgian news agency reported.

German and Italian troops were said to have fired on a crowd of Greek transport workers in Athens. The number of casualties was undisclosed.

CHARGE OF THEFT LAID

Kentville, N.S., Oct. 19 —(CP)— A charge of theft of more than $1,000 from the officers' mess at nearby Greenwood Airport has been laid against LAC. Joseph Godbois, Royal Air Force, yesterday by Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Godbois had been missing from the airport since last September, and was apprehended in the United States.

SALVAGE 3,250 POUNDS OF LARD FROM 6 YEAR OLD WRECK

Owen Sound, Ont., Oct. 19 (CP)— The motorship Hibou, which sank in Georgian Bay six years ago, has made a contribution to the war effort. Aboard the ship were 3,250 pounds of lard which have been salvaged and sent to Toronto for the manufacture of munitions.

Several Large Orders Send Drive Off to Good Start

Reports From Many Places Across Canada Indicate Good Reception by Public

SOME PASS OBJECTIVE

Ottawa, Oct. 19 (CP)—With two small Alberta centres over their objective on the first day of the loan and with four large subscriptions totalling more than $2,000,000 reported, canvassers in Canada's Third Victory Loan campaign set out cheerfully today in their quest for $750,000,000.

Stettler, Alta., was the first community in the west known to have gone over the top, although its objective was 30 per cent higher than in the second Victory Loan last spring. The other Alberta town to exceed its quota was Pincher Creek.

"Stettler knows there is a war on," said National Loan Headquarters in its morning statement for the press. "Thirty men were reported casualties in the Dieppe raid and B squadron of the Calgary tank regiment was in the vanguard of that famous attack."

Four Large Subscriptions

The four large subscriptions announced officially here today were Robin Hood Flour Mills Co. Ltd., of Moose Jaw, Sask., $625,000; Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, $500,000; City of London, Ont., $750,000; and Wawanesa Mutual Insurance Co. of Wawanesa, Man., $300,000.

Pincher Creek passed its objective despite the fact harvesting is in full swing and farmers were very busy. Loan workers, however, talked to the farmers as they did their harvesting. Headquarters said many canvassers gave various farmers a helping hand.

Before noon today the municipality of Richmond, B.C., near Vancouver, reported subscriptions from 100 per cent of its municipal council, the office staff of the board of works, waterworks and Provincial Police. Including the municipality's own subscription of $20,000, the total for the first few hours mounted to more than $30,000.

Spectacular Air Display

Citizens of Saint John, N.B., saw a spectacular display of Canada's airpower in Victory Loan ceremonies yesterday. During an open-air commando ceremonial, they witnessed a parade of naval, military and Royal Canadian Air Force men. An honored guest at the ceremony was Lieut. Ronald Chapman, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, hero of many raids on Nazi-held territory.

In White Rock, B.C., Rod Pringle, 13, was selected to typify British Columbia children who have set an example to all by investment during the past two years of more than $500,000 in war savings. He christened a P.B.Y. Catalina patrol bomber. Investment by British Columbia school children was sufficient to purchase two such bombers.

Power Officiates

In Montreal, Air Minister Power presented wings Sunday to 10 complete bomber crews before a crowd of more than 16,000 troops and civilians in Montreal baseball stadium in a Loan ceremony. It was the first wings parade held outside of the grounds where airmen receive training, and was followed by a monster military parade.

Maj. Power urged the public to buy Victory Bonds to offer "you a share in the ruined rubble of Cologne and the shattered remnants of Emden and Dusseldorf."

In Toronto, Mayor Fred Conboy presented a commando dagger—symbol of the loan—to Maj.-Gen. C. F. Constantine, District Officer Commanding Military District No. 2 Toronto, in a ceremony attended by 6,500 people Sunday night.

Prime Minister Takes Salute

In Ottawa Prime Minister Mackenzie King stood beneath the peace tower on Parliament Hill Sunday to take the salute as 6,000 men of the Army, Navy and Air Force, with units of the Royal Canadian Air Force (women's division) and of the Canadian Women's Army Corps marched past.

The troops marched to Parliament Hill for a commando dagger ceremony preceding the march-past. Three veterans of the present war, J. W. MacDonald, A. W. MacFarlane and D. W. Smith stood before the arrayed troops, and near them stood AB. Dan Boebler of the R. C. N. V. R., Pte. Melvin Carnriche, a veteran of the first great war, and LAC. A. McCabie of the R. C. A. F.

The six men met, with MacDonald carrying an open box in which lay the commando dagger. The hands of the six crossed over the dagger. Then it was accepted by the trio representing the armed services and handed over to Mayor Stanley Lewis.

15,000 Salesmen

The sum of $750,000,000 represents and minimum objective of the campaign. It is the biggest loan in Canada's history.

The canvassers—15,000 experienced salesmen, aided by another 15,000 workers—plan to call at every home in Canada before the drive ends. Simultaneously, more than 70,000 war loan workers in plant-committees in shops and factories began persuading their employees to contribute through the payroll savings plan.

Farmers are being asked to do their share, either by buying in cash, or buying with farm produce for future delivery under what is called the "victory ticket" plan.

French Officer Killed In Air Fight Off African West Coast

New York, Oct. 19 (AP) — A Vichy dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio asserted yesterday that Lieutenant Commander Bailliere, French officer killed in an air fight off the African west coast, October 11, was hit while flying as an observer in a French plane which was attacked by a United States pursuit ship.

The French officer, according to the dispatch, had been ordered to make a reconnaissance flight south of Dakar "to obtain reliable information about the strength of United States reinforcements landed at Freetown recently."

Freetown is on the coast of the British West African colony of Sierre Leone, and the Vichy account indicated the purported air fight started over or near British territory.

Six Million Chinese Reported on Verge Of Starvation in Province of Honan

CHUNGKING, Oct. 19 — (AP)— Stricken by one of the worst famines of modern times, Chinese are dying by thousands in the battlefield province of Honan where 6,000,000 persons are reported to be on the verge of starvation.

Reports brought to Chungking by officials of the government and relief workers said that 18,000,000 have become famine refugees and that the clogged roads from Honan into Shensi and Hupeh provinces are strewn with the dead and dying.

The situation was intensified by the necessity of supporting a large military force to hold the present front through the province against the Japanese. The famine extends into Japanese-held territory, but exact information on conditions there was not available.

The famine was attributed in part to two years of drought conditions, crop-killing spring frosts and locust and rabbit plagues, but this was coupled with the Japanese invasion of some districts last October causing the abandonment of the rice crop and delay of wheat planting.

In a vast program of relief, the government has remitted taxes in the area and increased those in richer sections to provide funds for aid. Loans amounting to $400,000 have been advanced to help farmers buy seed, and large sums are being allocated for other relief work.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

DOOR PANEL WINDOW BROKEN AT THEATRE

Following the breaking of a door panel window in the front entrance to the Belle Theatre late Saturday night, Freeman Parks, 8 Doyle's Terrace, was apprehended by city police when identified by eye witnesses. The plate glass panel window was valued at $19.50 stated Mr. George Forhan, Belle Theatre manager today, as charges of causing malicious destruction of property were preferred against Parks. The matter will be presented in City Police Court this week, police officials added.

KINSMEN REALIZE $721.83 FROM THEIR TAG DAY

Thousands of quarts of milk were guaranteed the babies of Britain as the result of the splendid response of citizens during Saturday's Kinsmen Club "Milk for Britain" tag day. President Buster LaBarr announced that the sum of $721.83 had been realized from the generous response of the public to the Kinsmen's war program project. The sum collected will ultimately result in 7,218 quarts of powdered milk being subsequently sent to the babies of bombed Britain. Today President LaBarr extended the thanks of the Kinsmen Club to the ladies who assisted in the drive by selling tags and also to others who lent material assistance in making the tag day the success it enjoyed.

CARS COLLIDE HEAD-ON NORTH OF STIRLING

Four persons sustained minor injuries when two motor cars collided head-on on Highway No. 14 two miles north of Stirling on Sunday. The vehicles were driven by James Spry, of Bonar Law and James Barron, R.R. No. 3 Stirling. According to Provincial Constable Arthur Kellogg, who investigated, Barron drove his motor car from out a side road directly into the path of Spry's south bound car and failed to stop. The vehicles met head-on, resulting in extensive property damage.

Injured in the Spry car was Rita, age 8 and Ruby, age 4, both suffering head lacerations from flying glass, while Mr. and Mrs. Barron suffered bruises and minor abrasions. Medical assistance was obtained in Stirling. Mr. and Mrs. Spry, their 7-year-old daughter Dorothy and a twin sister of the injured Rita, Roma by name, escaped without injury.

PUBLIC INVITED TO VISIT SCHOOL

As a measure to acquaint Belleville and district residents with what goes on inside an initial training school of the Royal Canadian Air Force and to afford appreciation of the tremendous amount of money it takes to "keep 'em flying" open house will be held at No. 5 Initial Training School on Saturday from two till five in the afternoon. The open house is being held in connection with the Third Victory Loan campaign which opened this morning.

With Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, officer commanding the station, having granted permission, the public is invited to visit the training school and will be shown points of interest throughout the station.

CAR MORE DAMAGED THAN DEER IN COLLISION

Goderich, Ont., Oct. 19 (CP)—Radio announcer Bill Beattie doesn't want to meet any more deer on the road. His car collided with one while he was driving from Wingham, Ont. The deer limped away and Beattie climbed out of his wrecked car.

Fire Hose Arrives For Portable Pumper

Two thousand feet of one-and-one-half inch hose for the portable gasoline pumper furnished to the local Civilian Defence Committee, has arrived in the city, it was announced this morning by Fire Chief William Lynch. The pumper was received from A.R.P. headquarters several weeks ago but no hose was received with the unit. Suitable nozzles for the pumper will be along in a few days, according to officials.

With the arrival of the hose for the pumper unit preparations are going ahead for starting instructional classes of volunteer fire fighters to handle the equipment should the necessity arise.

Fire Chief Lynch this morning issued an appeal to local residents, especially merchants and those connected with local industrial concerns, to volunteer for the fire fighting service of the Belleville defence organization. Merchants and employees of industrial firms will undoubtedly be in the majority of those offering themselves for this phase of A.R.P. work, but other citizens will be welcomed to take the instruction and familiarize themselves with the fire fighting equipment.

Owing to the lateness of the season it is particularly desired by Chief Lynch that the classes get under way as quickly as possible and he suggests that although the basic training course of lectures is now underway, those wishing to offer themselves for this phase of the service may volunteer immediately.

1,000 Germans Killed in Wedge

The Germans earlier had driven a wedge into the Russian positions in this factory area. Yesterday, the Russians said 1,000 Nazi officers and men were killed in a costly and unsuccessful attempt to widen this advantage.

In another sector, the Germans sent tanks and infantry supported by aircraft thundering at the Russian positions, but Red army troops held firm and destroyed "28 tanks, eight guns, 10 motor batteries, 10 trucks and about three battalions of enemy infantry," the communique said.

(The Berlin radio reported last night that "an outstanding effort to get Winter equipment to German troops in Eastern Europe to all practical purposes was already completed." Apparently with bitter recollections of last Winter's suffering by German troops, the announcer asserted "the German armies this time have been made absolutely safe against all surprises of even the abnormally-cold Russian winter.")

Heavy Fighting on Mozdok Front.

Heavy fighting was reported from the Mozdok front in the Caucasus where the Germans are attempting to drive to the Grozny oil fields and in the region southeast of Novorossisk.

At Mozdak, the communique said, Russians frustrated several German attacks and killed 500 soldiers. Southeast of Novorossisk, the Germans broke through Russian defences in one sector, but the communique said Russian troops were resisting stubbornly and "dealing counterblows to the Germans."

The capture of some German positions there was announced and one Soviet unit wiped out about two companies of German infantry.

Colorful Military Parade Features Official Opening Of Third Victory Loan Drive

Commando Dagger Presented to the County at Cenotaph Ceremony

MANY LINE STREETS

With approximately eleven hundred members of the armed services forming one of the most colorful military parades ever seen here, ten thousand people lined the streets here yesterday afternoon to witness the official opening of the Third Victory Loan in Hastings County.

The famous Commando Dagger, symbolic of the Loan, was officially presented to the county at the Cenotaph on Station Street in a brief but impressive ceremony.

A special Dagger escort party comprised of President Thomas York of the Army and Navy Veterans' of Canada, Belleville branch No. 201; Past President William Ford of the same organization, a member of the present Canadian army and two airmen, presented the dagger to the Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College, who represented the county for the occasion. He was assisted by Major the Rev. A. B. Payne, padre of the Argyll Light Infantry

Thousands Line Route of March

Thousands of people, close-packed about the Cenotaph witnessed the simple yet impressive ceremonies, which were of a religious-military nature. Dr. Howard in a short but eloquent address pointed out the symbolism of the Dagger and the duty of the people of this county in supporting the Victory Loan so that the dagger may be sent overseas to a representative of the county there.

"On behalf of the people of this great and loyal County of Hastings, Dr. Howard said, the people of city, town, village, hamlet, and concession lines, I accept this symbol emblematic of a great challenge.

We shall retain this symbol until we are able to hand it back to you signifying that our task has been successfully completed. And at such a time we trust that this symbol, with similar symbols from all parts of Canada may reach the Motherland safely in order to tell our boys over there that we are with them 100 percent.

As to the task, we are not unaware of its magnitude, neither are we dismayed by its magnitude. On the contrary we intend to face it with the same determination and courage and with the same spirit with which our boys meet the enemy. And we shall win out as will they.

But such a victory cannot be won by the few doers and a great many wishful thinkers and well wishers.

"Let us then gentlemen address ourselves to our task not in any way underrating its tremendous difficulties but in good heart and sober confidence do our duty, God helping us to the end."

Hymn is Sung

Previous to the ceremony proper, the assembled crowd led by the Belleville Municipal Band under Lieut. Fred Jobson, sang the National Anthem. This was followed with prayers offered by Major Payne. The Dagger was returned to Dr. Howard and the crowd sang two verses of "O God Our Help in Ages Past," and "O Canada."

At the conclusion of the parade the Dagger was officially presented to the County of Hastings through Sheriff John D. O'Flynn. This brief ceremony took place on the Collegiate Campus with reserve army units in attendance. Sheriff O'Flynn thanked the Dagger Party and officials for the honor conferred on him and briefly urged his listeners to support the nation's war effort by contributing to the Victory Loan.

The parade itself, as has been said before, was one of the most colorful assemblies of its nature ever to march through the city streets.

It was symbolic of the unity of the members of the armed services of the present war, both active and reserve, the grand old boys of the last war, and the civilian population.

Fine Turnout of Veterans

Outstanding in a parade that was marked with precision and color, was the fine turnout of the veterans of the last war. The colors of Canada's fighting divisions of Ypres, Passchaendale, Vimy and the Somme, swung in the afternoon breezes, as the veterans headed the marching columns of eleven hundred members of the armed forces. In the parade were two automobiles carrying wounded veterans who were unable to march.

Led by the Belleville Municipal Band, the parade swung away from the Collegiate Institute campus shortly after three o'clock. Behind the band came the official Dagger Party preceded by the colors of the Army and Navy Veterans supported by six veterans Then came the veterans themselves, smart in berets and medals. With them marched the veterans of the Canadian National Railways.

Practically the last word in precision were seven hundred members of the No. 5 I.T.S., Royal Canadian Air Force, under the command of Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger. The airmen gave ample evidence of intensive training and enthusiasm and evinced the admiration of the thousands of spectators who lined the streets along the route of march. Also efficient and immaculate in their trim uniforms was a flight of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division.)

Local Units Parade

Next in line came the 34th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, under the command of Captain S. A. Sword; the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) under Major B. C. Sisler; the C.W.S.F. under Captain Marion Harden; the Belleville Squadron Air Cadets and detachments of the Belleville and Peterborough Ontario Voluntary Constabulary under Inspector Frank Gardner, O.P.P. Besides the Belleville Municipal Band the pipers of the Argylls and the fine drum and bugle band of the I.T.S. R.C.A.F., provided martial airs during the parade.

The marching columns swung along Bridge Street to Front Street to the Cenotaph. Perfect weather conditions brought out thousands of people. Automobiles lined the route of march. Overhead formations of R.C.A.F. planes roared in the brilliancy of the afternoon sunshine, providing a perfect setting for the parade beneath them.

At the Cenotaph the troops were lined up in a square for the ceremonies. Behind them stood close-packed crowds of people.

Returning, the parade marched along Station Street to Church Street, up the hill to Victoria Avenue to George, and south on George to Bridge Street. Here the members of the I.T.S. swung straight ahead to their station with other units turning north on Church Street to the campus where the Dagger was formally handed to the county. The reserve army units then marched to the Armouries where their ranks were dismissed and given treats of soft drinks.

Three Workmen Severely Injured When Struck by Falling Metal Sheets

When a wooden scaffold rack collapsed at the Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company here Saturday, three workmen sustained severe injuries when struck by heavy sheets of falling steel. The men were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital as an emergency call brought into action all local ambulances. The names of the injured men were given as Elgin Crawford, 274 George St.; Clifford Barriage, 79 Church Street, and Frank Sparks, 222 West Moira Street. At the hospital the men were attended by Dr. G. H. Stobie and Dr. F. R. Ross. A fourth employee escaped with minor bruises as he leaped clear of the falling sheets of steel.

Hospital officials today announced that Crawford was the most seriously injured, having sustained a fractured pelvis, lacerated left leg and internal injuries, while Sparks sustained a fractured left leg and arm, broken ribs and heavy lacerations to the body. Barriage sustained a compound fracture of the right leg.

Reliance officials said today that workmen first heard the sudden cracking of timber and several were able to leap to safety. The scaffold wooden racks are used to store large sheets of steel used by the company in the manufacture of their war industry production. The racks are built in a triangular shape with heavy sheets of steel being stored on either side to counter balance the weight on the racks.

Company officials paid tribute to the fine work of an emergency rescue squad which was formed directly following the accident. Sixty men worked in relays to remove the twenty tons of sheet steel which covered one of the injured men and partly covered another. In seventeen minutes the entire weight of steel was removed and in twenty-five minutes from the time the accident occurred, the injured men were on their way to hospital.

An inspector of the Workmen's Compensation Board, who investigated the accident yesterday, stated that the affair was of a purely accidental nature.

Missions at Home And in Africa Topics of Addresses by Rev. J. Arnup At Holloway St. Church Services

Large congregations featured the annual anniversary services at Holloway Street United Church with Rev. Jesse Arnup, D.D., former secretary of foreign missions, being the guest preacher for both morning and evening services.

In the morning Rev. Arnup spoke on Home Missions in Canada and the important part they were playing in the development of Christian fellowship among the people in the rural districts. During the evening service he spoke on Missions in Africa and recounted personal experiences among natives in the African jungles while posted as missionary in that country.

In answer to critics who have stated white Christians should leave native Africans to their own way of life, Rev. Arnup claimed an enforced period of residence in a heathen African village would completely transform this misplaced opinion. Christian missions have done wonderful work in the treatment of leprosy victims and in bringing the word of God to the Dark Continent, he said.

Church services in Tabernacle United Church and in Bridge St. United Church were cancelled permitting members of the congregations to attend anniversary services at Holloway St. Church. Many of the congregation took advantage of the opportunity thus afforded. Rev. J. A. Dilts had charge of both services with Rev. Ralph Spencer of Tabernacle, assisting in the evening.

Special music was provided for the occasion by Choir Leader S. M. Anglin and Organist William Connor. At the morning service Mr. Don Horton of Albert College rendered a violin solo with Mr. Connor playing the accompaniment on the church organ.

Obituary

ROBERT INGRAM DAFOE
(Crookston)

Ill only one week with an attack of pneumonia, Robert Ingram Dafoe, of Crookston, Ontario, died at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. William R. Dafoe on Saturday evening. He was in his 27th year.

Robert Dafoe was born at Crookston and had lived all his life in the community. He had recently been employed as a sectionman with the Canadian National Railways. Popular among the younger set of the community, his passing will cause much regret in the district.

Surviving him to mourn his passing besides his parents, is one brother, William A. Dafoe of Tweed. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. FLORENCE ROSENPLOT
(Trenton)

Trenton, Oct. 19 —(Special)— The funeral of Mrs. Florence Rosenplot, widow of George Rosenplot, took place on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 18th., from the Cobley Funeral Home, Trenton. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Mount Evergreen Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. G. McKee, pastor of Grace United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Paro, Percy Scarlett, George Gibson, William Deshane, Ryson Harvey and Harry Wannamaker.

There were many friends present at the service and the floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

The late Mrs. Rosenplot, who had been residing in Toronto for a short time, died in St. Michael's Hospital in that city on Thursday, Oct. 15th., after an illness of four weeks' duration. Prior to going to Toronto to reside she lived in Trenton and in the regard of many friends she held a high place. In religion she was a member of Grace United Church and took a leading part in church work.

Mrs. Rosenplot was born in Frankford fifty-one years ago and made her home in Trenton for a considerable time.

Surviving her are six daughters, Mrs. Charles Ireland, Glen Miller; Miss Ollie Rosenplot, Toronto; Miss June Rosenplot, Trenton; Miss Betty Rosenplot, Trenton; Miss Joan Rosenplot, Toronto, and Miss Barbara Rosenplot, Toronto; two sons, Mr. Jack Rosenplot, Toronto, and Mr. Garnet Rosenplot, now serving with the R.C.A.F. overseas; one sister, Mrs. Lawrence, Toronto. Her husband died six years ago.

LATE MRS. DANIEL CULHANE

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel Culhane took place this Monday morning from the family residence, 290 Albert Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G., who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in St. James' cemetery.

Many friends were present in the church and at the close of the Mass, Mr. Edward Brown sang a solo in keeping with the occasion.

The bearers were Messrs. Maurice Callaghan, J. J. O'Connor, Frank Wims, Joseph Wims, Martin Naphin and Michael Naphin.

There were many spiritual offerings and the floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

Mr. Leo Culhane, son of the deceased, is a member of the Belleville Fire Department, and the following members of the department acted as a guard of honor at the house, church and graveside, and also toted as flower bearers: Chief William Lynch and Messrs. James McDonald, Charles Greatrix, F. H. Post, Al Wilson, F. Post, L. Rump and J. Grills.

Blood Plasma Used In Accident Case To Save Airmen's Life

The necessity of blood plasma and the importance of the use of blood as a life-saving agent was brought home to this district recently, more forcefully, perhaps, than words or pictures can express.

It was learned Sat., from official sources that one of the victims of a recent accident at a district airport when a bomb cartridge exploded, seriously injuring four airmen, owes his life to the immediate transfusion of blood given through the medium of the dried plasma.

Blood amounting to the equivalent of that given by fourteen donors was injected into the veins of the seriously injured man, and doctors attending the case unhesitatingly stated that the blood transfusion was one of the main contributing factors in saving the man's life.

This story is not written as an advertisement for the local Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic, but is based on actual facts. Suffice it to say then, that the appeal of the Blood Donor's Clinic here should not go unanswered. The district now has factual proof of the benefits to be obtained through the medium of blood donations.

FORTY KILLED AS POLICE FIGHT DEMONSTRATORS

French Protest Shipment of French Workers to Germany

GRENADES USED

New York, Oct. 19 — (AP) — Forty persons were killed and 200 wounded at Lyons and 15 were killed and 200 wounded at Amberieu Friday when Vichy French Mobile Guards, police and legion storm troops fought crowds demonstrating against shipment of French workmen to Germany, the BBC said today, quoting a dispatch to the Times of London.

The Mobile Guard and the Legionaries used rifles and machine-guns, it was said, and the police threw hand grenades. Several cars of a train being assembled at Lyons to take workers to Germany were demolished by an explosion, it was reported.

"German Gestapo officials were sent to Lyons, and they have 80 automobiles at their disposal," the London Dispatch added.

CBS in New York recorded the BBC broadcast.

Youngster Lost Three Times After Ship Torpedoed

SYDNEY, N.S., Oct. 19 — (CP) —While her 15-months-old son punched holes in an orange with a reporter's pencil, Mrs. Gladys Shiers of Halifax told here how the youngster was lost three times in the sinking of the steamship Caribou, only to find a different rescuer each time.

Lucky little Leonard and his mother were on their way to St. John's, Nfld., to visit his father, Elmer Shiers, a Canadian Navy shipwright, when their ship was torpedoed in Cabot Strait. He was the only survivor of the 15 children aboard the ship.

He and his mother were thrown out of bed by the explosion. "When I got up from the stateroom floor," Mrs. Shiers said, "I grabbed the baby, but by that time the water was pouring into the ship and entering so fast I was swept off my feet. The boat was going down."

She made her way through a cloud of steam gushing from the engine room. "Once the baby was swept out of my arms," she related, "but a navy man, I think from Dartmouth, N. S., picked him up. I don't know his name."

In making her way to a life raft, Mrs. Shiers lost the baby. It was picked up by Vivian Swinemar of Woodside, N. S., but then Miss Swinemar lost the boy.

When the mother finally reached the raft, it was to find the baby safe in the hands of Mrs. Elizabeth Northcott of Burgeo, Nfld. Both Miss Swinemar and Mrs. Northcott were saved.

About 20 people were clinging to the raft that saved the three women. "The men sang hymns," Mrs. Shiers said, "and someone said a prayer to keep our spirits up."

Lifeboat Upset Again and Again

Glace Bay, N.S., Oct. 19 (CP)—William Metcalf told his cabin mate he had "a funny feeling that something is going to happen to this ship tonight."

That was Tuesday night. A few hours later the water was engulfing the 240 persons aboard the steamship Caribou. A torpedo had torn her open, and 137 persons were to die.

As he told about it Metcalf was in bed here, his body covered with bruises and his hands and legs skinned. The cabin mate, Hugh Gillis, a prominent mining engineer from nearby Sydney, was dead.

One of the last things they looked at together was a calendar with the date, Oct. 13. Then the torpedo hit.

Not Even Standing Room

"I grabbed a rope and slid into the last lifeboat I could see," said Metcalf, a tunneling contractor here. "There must have been 60 people in it. There wasn't even standing room."

A few minutes later the lifeboat capsized. Less than half managed to climb back once it had been righted.

The boat upset again and again, Metcalf said, until finally only six were left. One man, who was being helped by Metcalf and a Newfoundland seaman, died just a minute before a rescue vessel arrived.

After the boat's first upset, Metcalf said, a woman clung to him. "I tried to speak to her but she couldn't answer. The next minute the boat upset again. That was the last I saw of her."

Every lifeboat and raft on one side of the ship had been smashed by the torpedo explosion, he said.

Equipped with a gas generator, explosion cylinder, spark plug and compression pump, a gun fired by acetylene gas has been invented by a Pennsylvanian.

Nurseries for the propagation of rubber trees have been established by the United States Department of Agriculture in twelve Latin American countries.

"WHY SHOULD I BUY VICTORY BONDS?"

"WHY?... I'LL TELL YOU WHY!"

"BECAUSE Victory Bonds are a sound investment—the soundest investment you can buy today—backed by all the wealth and resources of Canada, and by this country's record of paying every obligation in full, both principal and interest! They yield a fair rate of interest, you can borrow against them; and they are readily available when you need the cash.

"Now, as never before, we must not falter or fail in our war effort. Think of our men who went to Dieppe. Would you have had them go lacking the most deadly armament that we can provide? Buying Victory Bonds supplies these men the weapons they need . . . aye, and cares for their wounds. You are asked to lend, not to give . . . and you'll be paid interest for your money!

"Taxes? Of course we're paying taxes . . . heavy taxes, too. But man, what are they compared to what Canadians are giving over there?

"We're lucky! We're only asked to lend money. You say you can't do any more? Take stock of yourself. Figure out the things you can give up, and put their cost into Victory Bonds. There isn't one of us who can't do more than he thinks he can!

"And the money you lend . . . lend, mind you! . . . will give these valiant Canadians overseas the weapons of Victory with which they can save your dearest possessions from the ravaging, grasping brutes that threaten your family, your home, your garden, your job . . . all that you've got, even your life itself."

A Barbarous Act

The senseless sinking of the Caribou is just more evidence of the character of the foe that the United Nations are fighting. The torpedoing of a vessel that was no more than a ferry boat with large loss in lives shows that most of the German submarine commanders come from the same type of people as their Nazi masters who take delight in butchering hostages and defenceless civilians.

Such acts of colossal stupidity and cruelty only serve to steel our hearts and determination to smash the rotten system of a nation responsible for such warfare.

Canadians are having it brought home to them in small measure something of what the people of Poland, Greece and others are experiencing and who have but a meagre oportunity of getting back at the monsters who hold them under the iron heel of occupation.

Fortunately, we have that opportunity at the present time and the more we can contribute to supply the sinews of war to bring about the downfall of Germany the greater will be our satisfaction that we have had a share in avenging such acts as the sinking of the Caribou.

Handkerchiefs and Sneezing

While we have had a great autumn there also seems to be an unusual number of people suffering from colds. Colds mean sneezing and coughing, and it is well to observe some precautions to avoid spreading such a contagious disease. It appears that if one member of a family gets a cold not infrequently most of the other members are laid up with it or suffer from the cold to a greater or minor degree.

Surgeons wear masks in operating rooms, nurses looking after new-born babies are required to observe the same precautions. They know the nasal and oral openings are never free from bacteria and the act of talking and breathing frees large numbers of bacteria in the air so that there is great danger of contaminating sterile fields of operation or infecting babies whose resistance to disease is very low.

If this is true of talking and breathing consider how much greater is the danger of passing disease germs when we sneeze and cough. Just opening the mouth and "letting 'er go," and to heck with the consequences or what discomfort that may result from such carelessness is the thoughtless attitude of many people.

In regard to sneezing, the Monthly Science News devotes an article on this subject with special reference to sneezing as a prolific cause of colds. Experiments were conducted by the Medicinal Research Council in which methods have been developed of photographing the many thousands of germ-laden droplets emitted in a sneeze. It was discovered that a vertical culture plate held three feet away from a person sneezing may speedily grow over 10,000 colonies of bacteria, each from a single droplet emitted in the sneeze. On the other hand, a similar sneeze well covered by a handkerchief, caused so few droplets to escape that none can be seen in the photograph, and only one was found on the culture plate exposed as before. It has also been discovered that a single vigorous sneeze releases sufficient bacteria-carrying particles to create danger of infection for fully twenty minutes after an uncovered sneeze in a closed room.

Talking also has a part in spreading colds. The same tiny droplets are emitted during conversation, particularly by the forceful speaker, and medical men term this "conversational spray." The person suffering from a cold who talks right in your face needs to have his toes stepped on or some other act of mayhem committed that would teach him better manners.

If all sufferers from colds have any regard for their friends and family they should use a handkerchief to sneeze into whenever possible, and when talking to anyone turn their head so that the poor victim will not get the full charge of their cold. Colds are one of the most prolific causes of absenteeism in factories working on war orders and no one is helping his country by failing to observe some of the sensible precautions pertaining to the rules of health.

CANADIANISM AND UNITY

This city, perhaps not observed by the casual man on the street, saw a demonstration of unity and Canadianism that perhaps will make a record for all time.

Ten thousand people lined the thoroughfares of the city yesterday and saw twelve hundred representatives of the armed forces of Canada parade in a spectacle that, we feel safe in saying, has never before been witnessed here.

Th parade was incidental. There was color, music, marching feet, the glamor of air force and military uniforms, the brave gallant divisional colors of the fine old boys of the last war, all mingled up in something that spelled unity and Canadianism.

The thousands of spectators saw a colorful military parade. True there were the bands, the airmen, the reserve army, and the Women's Corps, not to mention the Air Cadets and the members of the Ontario Voluntary Constabulary. That, in itself was the picture.

BUT, the underlying currents brought out something that was never before demonstrated in this city.

It brought out the fact that there is unity; that there is Canadianism here. It was demonstrated in the magnificent turnout of the veterans of the First Great War. It was proven in the ten thousand people that lined the route of parade. It was definitely shown in the "Dagger Escort" comprised of the president and past president of the Army and Navy Veterans here, and three representatives of the New Army.

In short, it was a practical demonstration of the deep underlying feelings of the people of the County of Hastings, and especially the citizens of Belleville, as regards their duty, as such, in the present Empire crisis.

PARACHUTE HUMOR

Of the recent soldiers' stories this is the best I have heard. The officer gave instructions to the paratroop man. "I'll repeat what you've got to do. The parachute is an old sort of type. It may not open at first, but you've got two cords—one on your right, one on your left. Good! Well, if it doesn't open after you've dropped a hundred feet you pull your right cord—rip! If nothing happens then, after you've dropped another hundred feet you pull your left cord—rip! Then you'll land at a road; keep on to the bend in it. and you'll find there a small motor-van with a machine gun. Got it? Right!"

So the soldier dropped. Nothing happened. He pulled the right cord—nothing happened. Another hundred feet. He pulled the left cord—nothing happened. Then the soldier said: That's the British army all over. I don't expect there'll be no small motor-van with a machine gun at the bend of the road neither.—From Manchester Guardian.

A TIRE IS A HORSE

Every now and then there are little item in the news of the city about a tire, or tires, being stolen, says the Montreal Herald.

Time was when the horse thief in the west was promptly strung up to the limb of a tree as soon as his captors were reasonably assured of his guilt. Westerners made the punishment fit the crime for the simple reason that stealing one's horse deprived one of a means of transportation as well as the ability to carry on one's vocation.

Now the stealer of the tire of an automobile places himself in exactly the same category. He is robbing a person of something essential to transportation and which cannot be replaced by ordinary commercial processes.

The law should be made to fit the crime, and those found guilty of stealing rationed articles, should suffer a double penalty.

As a substitute for the cowboy penalty of death by strangulation this age should provide for incarcerating the guilty one in the penitentiary for a substantial period.

MOTHER PRIDE

Very, very proud are they
Who have sent their sons away;
Bravely stood and said, "Good bye,"
Turned to hide the misty eye,
And, until the war shall end,
Have an empty room to tend.

Question: Where is Jim or John?
Answer: Off to war he's gone!
Gone are his companions, too,
All those smiling lads we knew,
Now on land, or sky or sea
Serve the cause of liberty.

All the mothers everywhere
Have this common ache to bear:
Loneliness, and night times long,
Void of laughter, jest and song,
But though little do they say,
Very, very proud are they.

Read their letters, snipped and blurred,
Some forbidden line or word.
Read aloud that all may hear!
That is pride which conquers fear,
Deep and lasting, brave and good,
That's the pride of motherhood.

The Problem of Adolescent Labor

New York, Oct. 19—In the President's last speech he emphasized the need of mobilizing high school students for vacation work on farms. This is a small segment of the total manpower problem, but it is, at least, a problem that can be met, creating a source of extra labor in a most distressed area of our economy, provided action is taken now, months in advance of the time when this youthful labor will be available.

In this field I have something more than a journalist's knowledge, because I have been associated before and during the last vacation period with what was, I believe, the only attempt to find a solution for this problem under something approaching laboratory conditions — taking a certain number of carefully recruited city high school students and placing them on farms in a limited number of rural counties, under supervision, and with a careful checking of the results. I refer to the work done in Vermont and a bit of New Hampshire by the Volunteer Land Corps.

Like every problem involving the lives and work of human beings, the problem of putting adolescents to work in an environment strange to them, is much more complicated than it seems at first sight. Unless the whole matter is handled with intelligence, sympathy, understanding of youth and understanding of farmers; unless provision is made for adjustment of human relations; unless an esprit de corps is created amongst the recruits; unless both farmer and recruit are mentally conditioned to the new relationship; unless provision is made for insurance; unless communities are organized to welcome the recruits and brought into collaboration with them in such problems as recreation — unless these and many, many more problems are foreseen and provided for, the maladjustments and the turnover as a result of such maladjustments can render the program useless.

People Are Not Things.

For people are not things. It is easy to talk of "rationing" manpower; but it is infinitely harder to ration people than it is to ration sugar or machine tools. People, as it happens, have lives of their own — tastes, wills, capacities, ideals, demands, desires, and all sorts of other flesh-blood-mind attributes which resist "rationing."

Adolescent youth is no exception. Yet, if the schools would co-operate by shortening the school year, as has been suggested by the president, and if the organization of 16 and 17-year-olds is properly conceived and executed, the exodus of such youth to farms can not only supply the nation with millions of man-hours for the production of food, but can be the basis for a great youth movement, based upon patriotism, work, honor, health, home, and happiness — the last named being the famous Four H square of values animating what is already the greatest movement of country youngsters in the United States.

Furthermore, there is an already established agency of Government with long and deep experience, which could take over this problem and solve it in a great constructive way. To my mind, and after intimate experience with the problem last summer, there is only one such Federal agency. That is the Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture.

Department Well Equipped

The department has all that it takes to handle this problem: Inspired and imaginative leadership under M. L. Wilson; experience with the organization of youth—the four "H" Clubs; techniques of integration with educational institutions, through the land grant colleges; understanding of decentralization—integration between Federal and State agencies; long established contacts with every rural community in the nation, through the county agents; and, finally, an elastic administration that understands the nature of drawing in and working with voluntary committees.

All these integrations, together with a long experience, make it an ideal agency to handle this problem. No new bureaucracy, starting from scratch, and making every conceivable error out of sheer inexperience is necessary. In this field duplication of effort — the curse of our new war bureaucracies —can be avoided, because the extension service is already intimately connected with the Federal Employment Service and the Department of Education, the collaboration of both of which are essential to the solution of this problem.

Only Green Light Needed.

All that would be needed to start the mobolization of high school students in city and country for vacation work is a green light to the Extension Service and an adequate appropriation from Congress. And this should be done immediately.

For if we wait until next spring, when the shortage of farm labor will be very serious, it will be too late to handle the problem properly. It will be too late to have mobilized and selected or rejected recruits, either on a compulsory or voluntary basis. It will be too late to have provided the necessary physical and spiritual conditioning for the work; it will be too late to have organized the rural communities for the reception of recruits and provided the machinery for adjustments.

In the spring there will be a problem yelling for solution, and again we will dash in with half-baked measures where angels fear to tread—unless we start right now and put the matter in the hands of those equipped to handle it.

GRANARIES DESTROYED

Russell, Ont., Oct. 19 — (CP)— Damage estimated roughly at $25,000 was caused when fire of unknown origin destroyed four granaries located near the New York Central Railway station in Russell early Sunday.

Three granaries owned by MacEwen and Stevenson, all filled with flour, feed and grain, were burned. The other building destroyed was owned by McArthur-Warner. It was only about one-quarter full of grain, which was removed before the flames reached it.

THE POLL TAX

"Poll" in "poll tax" is a very old English word meaning head.

When mad Ophelia, in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," sang of her father Polonius,

> "His beard was white as snow,
> All flaxen was his poll," she was using the term in its original sense.

A poll tax is simply a head tax. It is levied directly on the individual, regardless of differences in ability to pay, rather than on his property or the merchandise he handles. This type of tax is also known as the capitation tax, which means the same thing, from Latin "caput," head.

The first general poll tax in England was a groat a head, voted in 1379, voted by both clergy and laity.

Watt Tyler's peasant revolt of 1381 was begun largely as a protest against payment of the poll tax.

From time to time thereafter for several hundred years England imposed poll taxes to raise money in emergencies, such as national defence or the prosecution of a war, but this system of taxation was never popular. The last poll tax imposed in England was voted in 1698.

Most of the states of the Union at one time had poll taxes. These capitation, or head, taxes generally amounted to only $1, $2 or $3 a year for each adult male. In many states the receipts from the poll tax were set aside for specific purposes, such as schools and public roads.

From the beginning it was customary to make the payment of the poll tax a requirement for voting.

Gradually, one by one, the states began to abandon the poll tax as a method of raising revenue and to substitute systems of taxation based on the ability to pay.

The present controversy on the subject does not revolve around the merit of the capitation tax as a system of raising revenue, but around the merit of making the payment of such a tax a requirement for voting.

Eight Southern States — Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia—still require the payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting for both state and federal candidates.

Forty states, including three Southern states—North Carolina, Florida and Louisiana — have abolished poll-tax payments as requirements for voting in both primary and regular elections.

Recently Congress passed and President Roosevelt signed a bill providing that persons in the armed forces may vote by mail for federal officers without paying a poll tax.

The Canadian Red Cross Asks for Blood For the War Wounded - - - YOUR BLOOD IS NEEDED!

JOHN J. TRUDEAU
President of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, sponsors of the Canadian Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic in this city.

JAMES A. BARCLAY
Chairman of the Auxiliary War Services Committee of the Kiwanis Club. This committee has the responsibility of securing donors for the clinic.

Airmen waiting their turn as donors at the special clinic held recently for over 30 men from No. 5 I.T.S., Belleville, volunteering as donors.

F/L. Nicholls of No. 5 I.T.S., and Mrs. B. C. Sisler, one of the volunteer nurses taking blood from an airman. This procedure usually takes from 8 to 10 minutes.

Several airmen from I.T.S. being served refreshments by Mrs. C. A. Cameron after giving their blood as donors. Notice the smiles on their faces. They are almost saying, "Well, that wasn't hard to take, after all."

The Nazi sky raiders had gone, fought off by British interceptors, but not before they had dropped their deadly eggs. So that London street was a reeking ruin, its shattered houses leaning crazily together, when a man emerged from one cellar door. "He's so badly shocked he can't speak. Look at his legs". Then a Red Cross ambulance came clanging up the blitzed street. A doctor and a nurse leaped down from it. "He needs a transfusion," declared the doctor after a brief examination, and grabbed a bottle from a rack. In that bottle was a substance that looked exactly like brown sugar. The doctor added water from another bottle, shook the mixture vigorously. It now looked like orange shellac. Then he and the nurse rigged up a rubber tube which ran from the bottle to the boy's arm. The contents of that bottle and another and another flowed into the boy's veins. A flush came to the pale cheeks and in a minute or two the child stirred. "Thank God!" exclaimed the father. Miraculous rescues like this are being staged every day in this war-torn world. But the earthly benefactor may be you or your next-door neighbor or the man who delivers your milk, for such victims—not only civilians injured in air raids but soldiers and air-force men and sailors aboard ships engaged in hunting down U-boats—owe the new grip on life supplied by that stuff which looks like brown sugar but is in reality dried human blood serum.

All "red-blooded" Canadians have an interest in efforts which are being made to assist those who are really in the front line in this war. Since the middle of June when the "Canadian Red Cross Bloor Donors Clinic," sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, opened in Belleville, over 950 citizens showed tangible assistance by voluntary donation to this great cause. They have come from near and far, from air-force, navy and army, from factory and office, from schools and clubs, all eager to help by giving their blood.

But, we need more and more to carry on, WON'T YOU HELP? Study the pictures on this page, Yes, you know them all. They are citizens you know, all giving their services willingly and freely—as you can see by the expressions on the faces of the donors, there is nothing to it. It doesn't hurt, it leaves absolutely no after effects, and it only takes one half-hour of your time. Clip out and mail the coupon on this page, to the "Canadian Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic." Make it one more effort on your part to help in this great cause, and do it NOW.

WEDDINGS

BEATTY—MORTON

Miss Dorothy Morton, Toronto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Morton, Stirling, and Mr. John Griffiths Beatty, Toronto, son of Mrs. Beatty and the late A. J. Beatty, Hamilton, were married in Deer Park Chapel, Toronto, with Rev. A. D. Waite officiating. Mr. Robert Crosby was at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a suit of Royal blue trimmed with grey fox, navy accessories and corsage of Sweetheart roses, swansonia and forget-me-nots. Miss Margaret Croft, bridesmaid, wore a rose wool frock with corsage of roses and chrysanthemums. Mr. Howard Tate was groomsman.

COX—CRONIN

An interesting wedding took place on Friday evening at St. Michael's Rectory when Miss Frances Cronin of Winnipeg became the bride of LAC. Albert Cox, R. A.F., Mountain View, Flight-Lieut. D. J. Mulcahy, Mountain View officiating.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hill held a reception for the bride and groom at the home of Dr. J. J. Robertson, Pinnacle Street. About twenty-five guests were present, Mrs. A. B. Collins assisting in receiving.

The bride and groom will reside in Belleville.

ROGERS—HALL

A charming autumn wedding took place at ten-thirty o'clock Saturday morning at the home of the bride's mother, Centenary, when June Bertha, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Hall and the late Clifford Hall, became the bride of Graydon Arthur Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers, Belleville.

Evergreens and autumn flowers made an attractive background for the ceremony which was performed by Rev. W. E. Mercer. Wedding music was played by the bride's aunt, Miss Myrtle Hall, Campbellford.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Ray, made a lovely picture in her street length dress of pink sheer with shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses and maiden hair fern.

Miss Doreen Hall was bridesmaid for her sister and wore a street length dress of pink sheer and a corsage of pink roses. Mr. Mac Carson, Belleville, was groomsman.

A reception followed, Mrs. Hall receiving in a blue crepe dress and a corsage of red roses, assisted by Mrs. Rogers wearing a rose crepe dress and a corsage of Lester Hibbard roses. The dining table was centred with a wedding cake and lighted tapers.

The waitresses were girl friends of the bride.

The bride chose for travelling a brown crepe dress with brown accessories.

The happy couple left on a wedding trip to Ottawa and points east. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

STEENBURGH—LAIN

Marmora (Special) — A quiet autumn wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lain, Stanwood, on Saturday afternoon when their eldest daughter, Doris Genevee, was united in marriage to Christy Harold Steenburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Steenburgh, of Belmont. The Rev. J. R. Holden officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length dress of Romance blue crepe romaine and a corsage of Peerless red roses, delphinium and fern. She was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Lain, who wore a dusty rose sheer dress and a corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groomsman was Mr. R. Johnston, Peterborough, brother-in-law of the groom. A buffet luncheon was served to the immediate families following the ceremony.

Later the couple left on a trip to eastern points, the bride wearing a brown wool dress, beige polo coat and brown accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belmont.

Mrs. C. Davis Wins Lady's Championship, Belleville Golf Club

How Homes Can Be Improved With Non-Critical Materials

NOW'S the time, while a few weeks of good weather remain, to give your property a careful inspection inside and out. Make a list of essential repairs and desired out how many can be accomplished without running afoul of priorities.

You'll probably find that most of them are possible, by using non-critical materials.

To this house have been added the screened porch and bay window shown, also an extra bedroom in back, as indicated in the diagram. Lumber, bricks, cement and wood shingles, all priorities-free, made up most of the material, all but screens, metal flashing, wire and nails.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wife Need Not be Younger Than Husband If Both Are Truly Adult

Several letters that have come to me recently remind me afresh of the unfortunate diffidence on the part of sensitive women who fall in love with younger men and then develop panic

"Must a wife be younger than her husband?" they ask. It usually happens that she is, but there is no "must" about it.

In choosing one's life partner there are so many points to consider that are of far greater importance than age that I should like to advise all worrying women that a few years seniority on the part of a bride need not in the least affect the success of the marriage.

Girls ask me if they will be thought of as cradle-snatchers? And if they will be able to "hold" the youthful husband should his eye light on a woman nearer his own age? Read the following letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My fiance is 23 years of age, while I am 28. We became engaged just before he went into the Navy. Thinking it over, I'm afraid that he really should not have tied himself to a woman older than himself. He loves me devotedly, and has all the best qualities of any man.

"He tells me that he knows our marriage will be happy, and wants me to wait for him until after the war. When he says this, he does not hesitate; he is absolutely certain.

"Will our happiness last? Will it be possible for me to keep his love, knowing that he'll meet lots of younger girls and that they'll be at hand while I'm far away?

"Martha B."

The truth is, you see, that Martha B. is a worry victim. If she is afraid of actually looking older than her fiance, she should take special care of her hair and complexion, follow regular exercises and wear becoming (though not necessarily expensive) clothes.

I have known of many happy marriages where this difference in age existed. I have even known happy wives who were ten years older than their entirely contented husbands

A man unquestionably finds a certain peace in marriage with an older woman. He is soothed and flattered by her steady devotion. There is really only the slightest danger of his attention straying to frivolous girls.

Her attitude to a younger husband is a double devotion—wife plus mother. If she's sensible enough not to let her love become too possessive or too cloying, she has every chance of being happy.

I would suggest a man should be at least 25 before he marries an older woman, so that he may thoroughly understand what he is doing. It is as well not to have the age difference exceed seven or eight years.

After children arrive, it will be their birthdays that will occupy the foreground of family life. Love and understanding are indispensable to married life and, indeed, to completely successful parenthood. Parity in birthdays may be overlooked.

Obituary

MRS. CLIFFORD CARLEY.

(Melville)
(Contributed.)

On Monday Sept. 21, after an illness of a few weeks following an operation in Prince Edward County hospital, Melinda Reddick, beloved wife of Mr. Clifford Carley, Melville, passed into rest in her thirty-seventh year.

Of a pleasing and cheerful personality, the deceased was a favorite with young and old. She was a member of Melville United Church and a devoted worker in the local Ladies' Aid, the W. M. S. and the Red Cross.

Surviving are her husband and daughter Muriel; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Reddick, Salem; a sister, Mrs. Will Adams, Wellington, and a brother Mr. Lloyd Reddick, Picton. Also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carley at home. A brother Mr. Perry Reddick paid the supreme sacrifice at Vimy Ridge. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of a host of friends in their loss.

The funeral service was conducted from the family residence to Melville United Church on Wednesday afternoon with the pastor, Rev. Mr. Tiller in charge. The church was filled to capacity by sorrowing relatives and friends. Mrs. Garfield French, with Mrs. George Valleau accompanist, sang "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross," a favorite hymn of the deceased. Other hymns included "Abide with Me" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Following the solemn and impressive service the cortege proceeded to Burrs' Cemetery where interment was made in the family plot, the bearers being Fred Morton, Gerald Brooks, Garfield French, Arthur Kinnear, Harold Bovay and Clayton Palmer. Rev. Mr. Shier, Picton, assisted Rev. Peter Tiller at the graveside service.

Friends were present from Toronto, Quebec, Picton, Belleville, Bloomfield, Frankford, Wooler, and other outside points.

On some far shore she stands and waits—
For loved ones who will cross the tide,
To welcome them at Heaven's gate,
This dear young friend who late has died.

WINNIPEG GREETS DIEPPE VETERANS

Winnipeg, Oct. 19 —(CP)—Mayor John Queen and civic officials were among friends who greeted soldiers of the Dieppe raid on their arrival home during the weekend. The men included Capt. W. E. Osler and CSM. George Gouck, both of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Prospective Mother-in-Law Ask Several Questions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My son is being married in the near future, and we would be grateful if you will answer a few questions for us.

1.—My son would like to know about the procedure of a toast proposed at the reception to be held after the ceremony. Who usually proposes the toast? Should my son reply to this? If so, what is a fitting reply?

2.—I would like to know if it is the groom's mother's place to attend a shower in case one is given for the bride-to-be or the bride. Also if she does, should she offer to supply some of the refreshments?

3.—What are the duties of the groom's mother at a church wedding? At the reception?

Groom's Mother

1.—The best man usually proposes the first and most important toast—to the bride and bridegroom. The bridegroom responds to this toast, for his bride and himself. All he really needs to say is, "Thank you", or, "Anne and I thank you for your good wishes. To these words he may add anything he wishes.

2.—If the shower is a more or less general shower (that is, not given, for example, by a group of the bride's co-workers or the members of her club) the mother of the groom-to-be is customarily invited, whether or not she knows the hostess. The groom's mother is usually an honored guest at a bridal shower.

You should not offer to supply any of the refreshments.

3.—The groom's mother and father are escorted by an usher (just before the bride's mother is escorted to her seat) to their seats in the first pew on the right of the aisle. You and your husband are given places in the pew on the right of the aisle because you are the guest of honor at the wedding.

After the recessional, an usher (after the head usher has returned to escort the bride's mother and father down the aisle) comes to escort you down the aisle, your husband following.

The bride and her mother will also probably invite you and your husband to be members of the receiving line at the reception. First in the receiving-line will be the hosts, the bride's mother and father; then your husband, and then you, next to your son. You greet the guests you know and acknowledge introductions to those you don't know. If there is a parents' table at the reception, you will have the place of the woman guest of honor . . . at the right of the bride's father, the host; and your husband will have the man's place of honor. . .at the right of the bride's mother, the hostess.

Allergy Held Responsible For Asthma-Like Coughing Attack

Not many years ago doctors were puzzled by a coughing disturbance in certain of their patients. The cough did not seem to be caused by any of the usual things. Today, however, these coughs are suspected of being due to sensitivity to something the person eats or breathes.

According to Dr. Samuel J. Prigal of New York, this cough comes on in attacks which may last from a few minutes to several hours. The person does not look or feel sick. He usually complains of an itching or scratchy sensation in his throat. It is this which seems to bring on the coughing spell, which is much like that which occurs in asthma.

Persons who have this cough usually belong to families wherein there are other members who have allergy. Those who develop the cough generally have other disorders too due to allergy, such as eczema or asthma.

To determine whether or not the cough is due to allergy, skin tests should be carried out by injecting extracts of the various foods, pollen and dust into the skin, and noting whether a reaction in the form of a red swelling occurs.

It is usually found that those with an allergic cough are relieved by injections of epinephrin or by taking ephedrine. If the person is found to be sensitive to certain dusts and pollen, and can be removed from contact with them, the coughing attacks usually stop. Furthermore, sensitivity can be lessened by giving injections, in gradually increasing doses, of the substance to which the person is sensitive. Some of those with the cough have the condition the year round. Others, who perhaps are sensitive to ragweed pollen or grass pollen, will have their attacks only at certain seasons.

It is the opinion of Dr. Prigal that difficulty in these cases lies in swelling of the lining membrane deep in the throat, possibly involving the larynx. There may be periods of hoarseness. He thinks that the so-called smoker's cough in many cases is due to sensitivity to tobacco and smoke. Foods are much less frequently responsible for the allergic cough than are the dusts and pollen.

A person who has continued attacks of coughing should be examined to make sure that his trouble is not due to allergy.

BREAKFAST PANCAKES ANTIDOTE FOR BLUES

PANCAKES for breakfast eliminate the early morning blues these war days, says W. W. Swinden, general superintendent of dining and sleeping car service, Canadian National Railways. "When our dining car passengers smell flapjacks, well, the world just looks brighter," Mr. Swinden says in announcing the C.N.R. dining car service is "pushing pancakes" these days as a war measure as it allows for use of some of the surplus wheat crop plus the saving of sugar as a sweetening through the use of maple syrup or honey as cane sugar substitutes.

W. W. Swinden and Chef

The English way of serving pancakes, sometimes used on C.N.R. diners, allows for baking of cakes with butter and jelly or butter and marmalade. They are piled one above the other, then cut in wedge-shaped pieces, pie fashion, to serve.

Jasper Pancake

Mix 1 cup flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, a pinch of salt, 2 whole eggs and 1 egg yolk. Add the grated rind of ¼ orange, ⅔ cup milk and ¼ cup melted butter. Mix well and fry pancakes 6 inches in diameter. Melt Campfire Marshmallows in a double boiler and spread over the pancakes. Roll the pancakes, sprinkle with sugar, cover with syrup and glaze in a hot oven.

Oatmeal Griddle Cakes

One cup cooked oatmeal, 1 cup white or whole-wheat flour, 1½ cups milk, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 tablespoon butter (melted).

Method: Add milk, yolk of egg, salt and melted butter to the cooked oatmeal; beat for three minutes, then add flour and baking powder, which have been sifted together. Add white of egg, stiffly beaten. Fry on a hot, well-greased griddle or thick frying pan. The batter must be very thin. Serve with syrup.

Cream of wheat, or rice, or almost any cooked cereal can be used up like this.

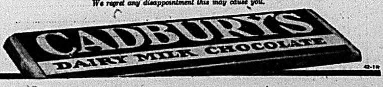
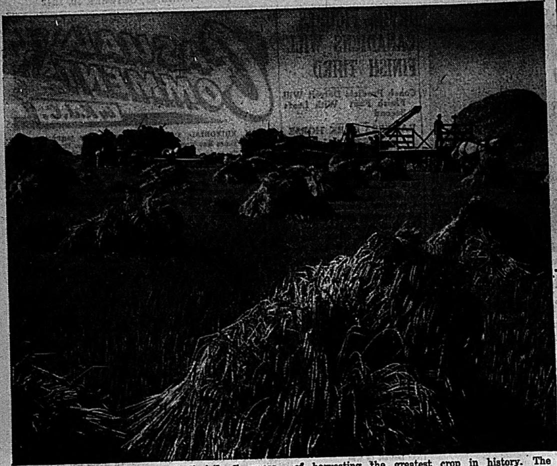
Chocolate is FOOD

Cadbury's Dairy Milk Chocolate, made with the highest quality chocolate obtainable, sugar and fresh whole milk, is a compact energy-giving and body-building food. When you enjoy the delicious flavour of this popular Cadbury bar, remember you are also helping to keep up your stamina and resistance in wartime.

Owing to rationing and Government orders, we cannot always keep the candy counters fully supplied. We regret any disappointment this may cause you.



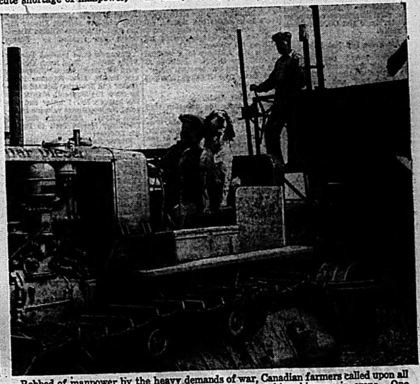


Scenes similar to this were duplicated all across the Western prairies this fall as Canadian farmers, working shorthanded, pitched in to the immense job of harvesting the greatest crop in history. The closeness of the stooks in this photo gives some idea of the yield, averaging 28 bushels per acre.

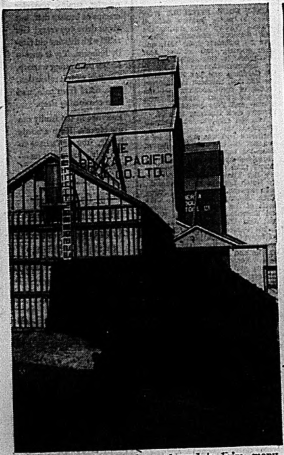
Mechanized armies also fight on the agricultural front. Drawn by tractors, three combines roll over a wheatfield. Meeting an acute shortage of manpower, farmers took full advantage of modern machinery this year by sharing equipment and helping each other in a variety of ways. Townspeople also helped with job.

Symbolic of the way in which Canada's heterogeneous population joined hands to reap the nation's greatest harvest is the above photo, showing Harold Sharp Adze, an Indian, Norman Brumwell, a high school student, Terrio Marukami, a Japanese.

William Pinaud, veteran French Canadian harvester, was one of the thousands who contributed their sweat and brawn to the job of gathering the record "war crop".

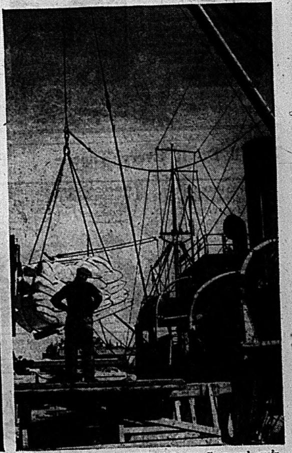


Robbed of manpower by the heavy demands of war, Canadian farmers called upon all available persons this year to help harvest the record-breaking grain crops. One of the many youngsters who helped was twelve-year-old Ike Lanier, tractor driver.



With regular storage places plugged to brim, many farmers stored grain at home or in annexes built beside elevators, such as one shown in this photo.

End of the day. Harvesting is hard work and hard workers require good food. Here you see a typical gang gathered around the dinner table. Roast beef, potatoes, corn on the cob and plenty of fresh milk provide a good enough meal for any man. The milk, besides being a healthy drink, helps conserve tea.



Vital as any other munition of war, flour and grain flow in a steady stream from Canada's ports to our allies across the seas, thanks to our sturdy farmers.

Navy Tames Hamilton Wildcats In Biggest Upset of Season While Hurricanes Beat Panthers

Toronto Beaches Tie for Second Place With Navy and Wildcats

NAVY MEETS FLIERS

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Victory Loan officials in charge of publicity for the forthcoming Air Force-Navy football game owe a hearty vote of thanks today to Hamilton Wildcats.

For weeks now, these officials have been working on plans to make Wednesday's floodlight show in Toronto Maple Leaf Stadium (capacity: more than 20,000) a super attraction. They'll have bands, parades, military displays, maybe a Hollywood glamor gal or two. So far, the only element lacking to make it a really intriguing spectacle has been the element of competition. On paper, Air Force outclassed Navy.

That was all changed Saturday when Navy tamed the Wildcats 13-0 at Hamilton's Scott Park in the closest approach to an upset the Ontario Rugby Football Union has seen this season, and the R.C.A.F. Hurricanes had to send their armada all out to conquer the tailend but stubborn Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers 18-7.

Wildcats, secure in second place, were established slight favorites against Navy but were never in the picture. Led along the ground by Coder Elwin Morris and OS. Sandy Milne and in the air by OS. Hugh Cuddie, the H.M.C.S. York entry took a 6-0 lead at the half on OS. Bob Goldham's single and a Cuddie-to-Morris touchdown pass, added a single in the third and applied the finishing touches in the final 15 minutes on another Goldham single and OS. Pat Reid's touchdown.

Air Force Did Not Shine

If Navy looked good against Wildcats, Air Force certainly didn't shine against Panthers. They led 18-0 at the half and may have coasted after that, but a team with Flyers' reputation had no business being pushed around by the winless Panthers in the final quarter. Kitchener had command most of the last half and finally exploited their territorial advantage on a 78-yard touchdown gallop by Gus Schiers—their first major score of the season. PO. Jack Alexander led the Air Force attack with two touchdowns.

In the third game Saturday, Toronto Balmy Beach opened the scoring throttle wide after a wobbly start to suppress Toronto Oakwood Indians 17-7 and move into a three-way tie for second place with Navy and Wildcats. Fleet Ed Jakubowski, who scored three touchdowns last week, sparked the late-starting Beach attack with two touchdowns. Earl Selkirk, making his first start for Indians after seven seasons with Toronto Argonauts, accounted for Indians' only try.

Bernie Bierman's Iowa Pre-Flighters Beaten by Irish

New York, Oct. 19 (AP). — The uninterrupted march of the navy pre-flight football powers through intercollegiate competition came to an abrupt end Saturday in another dizzy series of results that likewise saw Colgate, Vanderbilt, Duquesne and Tennessee all beaten for the first time.

Biggest shock of the day came at South Bend, where Bernie Bierman's Iowa pre-flighters, who had beaten Kansas, Northwestern, Minnesota and Michigan in a row, were trounced by a Notre Dame outfit once beaten and once tied. The score was 28-0. Jerry Cowhig, out of the Notre Dame lineup with injuries, returned in time to score two touchdowns that really weren't needed.

Crowley's Team Loses.

At Boston, Jimmy Crowley's North Carolina pre-flighters, unbeaten but tied once, dropped a 7-6 decision to Boston College.

Colgate, hailed as one of the East's most potent aggregations could do nothing right at Buffalo and took a shellacking from Duke's Blue Devils, 34-0. Duquesne, which had run up a streak of sixteen straight victories, bowed at Chapel Hill to North Carolina's unbeaten Tarheels, 13-6.

Vanderbilt's defeat by Mississippi State could not be classified as any upset, but the 33-0 score was a distinct surprise. Tennessee, on the other hand, put up the stalwart defence most critics had figured, but could not match Alabama's power and the crimson tide walked off with an 8-0 victory.

This left Alabama in a position to challenge Georgia's Bulldogs at the top of the Southeastern conference heat. The Bulldogs larruped Tulane 40-0.

Illinois Wins Again.

Rolling along the unbeaten trail along with Georgia, Boston College, and Alabama were Ohio State, Wisconsin and Illinois in the Mid-West, Army, Syracuse and Brown in the East, Georgia Tech in the South, Texas Christian in the southwest and Washington in the Far West.

Illinois, upset conqueror of Minnesota a week ago, fought off a last-minute drive by Iowa for a 12-7 decision. Wisconsin came from behind to whip Great Lakes 13-7. Ohio State, ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press poll last week, soundly trounced Purdue 26-0 before a crowd of 45,943, the day's largest. Tom Kuzma returned to action for Michigan and the Wolverines crushed Northwestern in a heavy scoring duel, 34-16. Minnesota whipped Nebraska of the Big Six, 15-2.

In the Big Six, Missouri and Oklahoma hung up conference triumphs, the former walloping Kansas State, 46-2, while Oklahoma stopped Kansas 25-0. Marquette's new star, John Strzykalski, was the whole show as Marquette whipped Michigan State, 28-7.

Army Routs Columbia.

Army showed real strength in routing Columbia 34-6 in the East, where Princeton's feat in holding unbeaten Penn. to a 6-6 draw was the day's biggest surprise. Al Cameron led Navy to a 13-6 victory over Yale, while Dartmouth picked up momentum in the late stages to whip Harvard, 14-2. Brown, beating Lafayete, 7-0, and Syracuse, halting Holy Cross, 19-0, remained in the unbeaten class.

In the Southwest, Texas Christian maintained its winning pace with a 7-2 triumph over Texas A. and M. as the University of Texas trounced Arkansas, 47-6.

In the Far West, Washington's Huskies romped at Montana's expense 35-0.

Washington State, previously unbeaten, was thrashed by Southern California 26-12, while U.C.L.A. coming along at a great clip, routed California, 21-0. Stanford rolled up a 54-7 count on Idaho.

42 GRADUATES OF A. A. ADVANCE TO MAJOR LOOPS

Twenty-Three Go to the American League and Nineteen to National

MUD HENS SEND 8

Columbus, O., Oct. 18. (AP)—Forty-two players from American Association clubs will get a chance to make the major-league grade in the 1943 baseball campaign.

Twenty-three of the players go to the American League and nineteen to the National, twenty-four by direct sale and the others recalled from option.

Mudhens Lead the List

Toledo's Mudhens lead the list by sending up eight players, seven to the parent St. Louis Browns and one to Washington. The Browns recalled First Sacker Charles Stevens, and purchased Outfielder Milt Byrnes, Infielders Mark Christman and Bob Dillinger, Cather Ardys Keller and Pitchers Fred Sanford and Archie McKain. Pitcher Ewald Pyle was sold to the Senators.

The Columbus Club was next with seven. The parent St. Louis Cardinals recalled Pitchers Harry Brecheen and George Munger, and bought Pitchers Elwin (Preacher) Rowe and Theodore Wilks and Infielder Louis Klein. Cincinnati Reds recalled Outfielder Eddie Lukon, and New York Giants recalled Outfielder Howard Moss.

Six go up from each of Kansas City, Louisville and Milwaukee. The Blues send all six to the parent New York Yankees, Pitchers Charles Wensloff and Herbert Karpel via the sale route, and Pitchers Rinaldo Ardisola and Allen Gettel, Catcher Kenneth Sears and Infielder Ed Levy being recalled.

Cubs Get No. 1 Hitter

Louisville sold Outfielders John Lazor and Andrew Gilbert Pitcher Louis Lucier and Catcher Verne Richards to the parent Boston Red Sox, who also recalled Pitcher Anton Karl. Shortstop William Wietelmann was recalled by Boston Braves.

Chicago's Cubs recalled Pitchers Vallie Eaves, Emel Kush and Edward Hanyzeski from Milwaukee, and bought First Baseman Heinz Becker and Shortstop Edward Stanky from the Brewers. Stanky was the league's No. 1 hitter and was voted the loop's most valuable freshman player. Milwaukee also sold Outfielder Harold Peck to Brooklyn Dodgers.

Pitcher Raymond Poat was recalled by Cleveland Indians from Indianapolis, and Brooklyn called in Pitcher Alfred Falzone from the same club. Indianapolis also sold First Baseman Johnny McCarthy to Boston Braves, and Infielder Joe Bestudik and Pitcher Earl Reid to Brooklyn.

Minneapolis and St. Paul lost two men each. Pittsburgh recalled Infielder Alfred Anderson from the Millers, and the Giants called in Pitcher Reuben Fischer while St. Paul sold Outfielder Guy Curtright and Infielder James Grant to Chicago White Sox.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 19—(CP)—Enthusiastic, well-considered executive work can do wonders in sport. The Edmonton Softball Association started in 1940 with exactly $6.72 in the coffers. Since then it has built and paid for Kingsway Park, valued at $2,500 not including the land. And this year Kingsway sent forth the Edmonton Walkrites who won the Western Canada girls' softball title. Alex Graham, Vancouver golfer, scored a par four on the 365-yard seventh hole at Vancouver's University golf course without once touching fairway or green. Graham sliced his drive into the rough, his second was still on the long grass and his third was pitched into a bunker beside the green. From there he blasted into the cup on the fly.

The expert says:

Gnr. Ted (Toronto Telegram) Reeve, backfield coach and star player of Toronto Oakwood Indians in the Ontario Rugby Football Union and a sports writer for a Toronto paper to boot: "The busiest man we have seen on a football field in many years is Annis Stukus, coach-quarterback and cheer leader of the Indians. As he is also tackler-in-chief, does their forward passing and placement kicking and probably in his profession as sport scribe is their press agent, you can gather that Large Stuke is full of hustle and bustle this autumn. . . . Coach Stukus of the Indians has Quarterback Stukus of the Indians on the jolly old jump."

Incidentally:

Harry (Calgary Albertan) Scott recalls that Johnny Longden, the Taber, Alta., jockey, predicted two years ago that he would quit race riding after another year or two in the saddle and buy himself a few horses. Longden is returning to Alberta for a vacation next month but Harry figures the famous jockey won't retire until after the Kentucky Derby next spring. Longden has had the mount on Count Fleet with that son of Reigh counted an early favorite for the Derby. . . . Tracy Shaw, who moulded the great Oshawa Generals junior hockey teams of the past four years, is reported likely to be named coach of the Toronto army hockey team and Cy Wentworth, former Montreal Maroons star, is under consideration as coach of the Toronto Navy Club. . . . Corporal Johnny Chad, former Chicago Black Hawks hockey star, is stationed at the R.C.A.F.'s No. 2 Wireless School at Calgary and is expected to play with the Air Force team there this winter.

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Oct 19 (CP)—It looks as though speed and Hank Hanton just won't be separated. He was a blossoming star in the fastest game on earth—hockey—until he enlisted in the R.C.A.F. and now he's at the controls of one of the world's fastest combat planes, the Mustang.

Hank is Pilot Officer H. A. Hanton now, serving as an operational pilot in an army co-operation squadron led by Wing Cmdr. R. C. A. (Bunt) Waddell of Peterborough, Ont. Hanton was playing professional hockey with Boston Bruins and Hershey before he enlisted but he barely made the pro plunge before he was out of it again

Before that he played for his hometown Kenora (Ont.) Thistles, runners-up to Oshawa Generals for the Memorial Cup in the spring of 1940. Halfway through the following season, after playing several games with Boston the R.C.A.F. called him. Now he hopes to have his skates out again when winter sets in at his air station and the squadron turns its recreational attention to hockey. Last year his squadron won the R.C.A.F. overseas title and this season there are new fellows like Hank and pilot officer D. M. (Bitsy) Grant of Calgary to give them just that much more zip.'

Big Four football fans will remember Ben Brooks of St. Lambert, Que. He's over here in Britain now and has just been jumped up from Warrant Officer to Pilot Officer with a Canadian night fighter squadron. He is one of the mainstays of the squadron's softball team. This is the squadron led by Wing Cmdr. Paul Davoud of Kingston, Ont., who starred on the gridiron with Royal Military College and Queen's University teams in the mid-thirties. Paul still hops into the squadron's softball lineup.

Flt. Lt. M. M. (Tiny) Smith, the squadron's engineering officer, played big four football for Montreal. Tiny, a star with the champion Springbok rugger team in South Africa when he was a mining engineer, has been playing the infield with Davoud's night fighting softball team. Another athlete in the some lineup is LAC. W. N. Murray of Montreal, brother of Canada's Davis Cup man, Bobby. Bill is a radio mechanic with the squadron.

N. H. L. Training Notes

By The Canadian Press

The youth movement is getting places already at the Toronto Maple Leaf camp. Working with the first squad are defencemen Douglas (Red) Garrett of Toronto, Doug Baldwin of Winnipeg and George Boothman of Calgary, last year with Sydney Millionaires of the Cape Breton league. Still another youngster, Don Webster of Toronto Marlboros, is being used at right wing on the third line.

Some hockey players have a strict training diet but New York Rangers eat just about what they want. The management insists, however, that they retire at an early hour.

Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins no sooner started to practice on Forum ice than they had to vacate. The Forum is tied up with a wrestling match and rehearsals for a Victory Loan show. Canadiens will drill at Verdun, Que., and Bruins will do their conditioning for the time being in Cornwall, Ont.

Canadiens with fingers crossed are Elmer Lach, Maurice Richard and Tony Demers. Last season, Lach injured his arm, Richard suffered a broken wrist and Demers was injured in an automobile accident. But they're all going along fine now in training spins.

Lester Patrick has signed Ott Heller, Rangers veteran defenceman. How many other players have signed is not known.

One of the shining stars at the Ranger training camp has been Bob Kirkpatrick, dark-haired, 24-year-old centre from New York Rovers who established an Alberta senior league scoring record a few years ago. Railbirds say Kirkpatrick may earn a regular pivot berth with Rangers.

Another bright Ranger prospect is Gordon Davidson. The husky defenceman starred with Regina Rangers two seasons ago when they upset Sydney Millionaires to win the Allan Cup.

Last National League team to start training are the Chicago Black Hawks. Eighteen players were on skates yesterday for the Hawks first workout.

IRVINE FIGURES CANADIENS WILL FINISH THIRD

Coach Predicts Detroit Will Finish First With Leafs Second

RANGERS DARK HORSE

By HAROLD ATKINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Like baseball managers who figure on a strong line "down the middle" as a basis for their title chances, so Richard (Dick) Irvin has a system to judge his Canadiens. If his calculations are right, then he believes Montreal should wind up in third place in the National Hockey League standing this season.

The coach's system is based on the number of goals scored by his team and in a nutshell here's how he allots the 155 points he thinks his clubs should get this winter:

"First line, 55; second line, 45; third line, 40; the rest, 15."

There are provisoes in the pigeon fancier's reckoning, however. Most important is if his club isn't weakened by wartime manpower orders; secondly, if the club isn't plagued by injuries and if his top snipers continue to snipe.

In considering all these issues, Irvin said "We should finish three notches above last year's club." Canadiens last winter nosed out the now defunct Brooklyn Americans for sixth place.

Picks Detroit to Win

By placing his squad in third slot, Irvin said Detroit should finish on top with Toronto in second place. "Detroit looks strong at this point", commented Irvin. "They haven't lost many of their players from last year."

"Toronto has lost a half dozen good men, but they still have considerable power and I think they'll be able to put out a strong club."

The Habitant mentor believes New York Rangers will also have to be reckoned with despite the loss of the Colville-Shibicky line and in speaking of Boston, Irvin said any club with a goaler like Frankie Brimsek "Already has a jump on the rest of the teams." Of Chicago, Irvin said "I don't know just what their setup is yet, they've lost good men in (defencemen) Joe Cooper, John Mariucci and (goaler) Sam Lo Presti."

Mariucci and Lo Presti are in the United States armed forces and Cooper is in the Canadian army.

New York, Oct. 19 — (AP) —One of the big questions to be settled at the A. A. U. meeting this winter will be how to create more track and field competition, which has been fading out in athletic club circles ever since the last war ... the only solution in sight is an appeal to the district associations to help stir things up and to the clubs to return to their old status of athletic clubs instead of being just social organizations ... closing of the armories hereabouts was a serious blow to indoor track, but A. A. U. officials hope to borrow the colleges' outdoor board tracks to run a few informal meets.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

IN AN EDITORIAL IN THE New York Times last week appeared an article under the heading, "World Champion," which is timely and reads as follows: "It was Joe Louis, in a manner of speaking, who began our war with Germany. He did this on June 22, 1938, by knocking out Max Schmeling in the first round of what every one knew was a grudge fight—about three months and a half before Munich, a little over fourteen months before the invasion of Poland. Joe Louis was not a highly educated young man. He was not given to arguing about the wave of the future. He did know, on June 22, 1938, what was wrong with Max Schmeling and he did something about it—and not entirely for money.

And now Joe Louis says he will not appear in the ring again. He has taken like a soldier the cancellation of his proposed bout with Billy Conn, which was to have cleared up some of his debts. He carried the colors on Sunday at a precision drill between halves of a football game at Omaha. Who will say he did not do them honor? In eight years as a prizefighter he received $2,228,000. If he had been allowed to continue he might have earned as much more. He is cheerfully giving up that much, minus his Army pay, to serve his country. If any of us resent our present and prospective burden of war taxes we might think of Joe Louis' contribution. His championship now is more than the prize ring: he is a champion citizen."

VETERAN HOCKEY FANS well remember when Bill Cook played for the old Kingston Frontenacs and the great ice battles staged between Captain Jim Sutherland's Limestones and the Belleville Intermediates of the roarin' 20's. Commenting on the hockey prowess of Bill Cook, Kingston Scribe Bill Walshe comes up with the following interesting chatter, as hockey looms on the sports horizon. Bill says: "Bill Cook turned professional 20 years ago this week and any person watching him work on his St. Lawrence River farm will bet that he could still hold his own with the average pro of today. Cook is conditioning his Cleveland Barons in Windsor and mixes in the drills, probably ready to play if needed next winter. The Saskatoon Star in a feature "20 years ago this week" reported: "The Soo whirlwind, Bill Cook, rated one of the best amateur hockey players in Canada was signed yesterday (Monday) to play with Saskatoon Crescents, professional hockey team."

"Cook has been in the headlines of hockey since he started with the Kingston Frontenacs after his return from the First Great War. He was a sensation with the Soo Greyhounds in the senior amateur ranks, led the Western Canada league in scoring for two seasons and continued his brilliant play with his brother, Bun, when they went to New York Rangers in 1926. He led the N.H.L. scoring two years and with Bun and Frank Boucher formed one of hockey's greatest forward lines. In 1936-37 he coached the Ranger team that ruled hockey and in 1937-38 he went to Cleveland to manage the Barons and form one of the strongest clubs outside N.H.L. ranks."

ONLY FOUR PITCHERS WON places in major league's baseball 20-game Victory Club during the 1942 diamond campaign. There were no repeaters from 1941, and oddly enough, two of the four newcomers to this select group are freshmen—Johnny Beazley of the Cardinals and Tex Hughson of the Red Sox. Hughson tied Morton Cooper of the Redbirds for the most big league wins—22—with Beazley and Tiny Bonham of the Yankees each finishing with 21.

Thus the flag-winning Cardinals presented two 20-game winners. Hughson's feat was the first by a Red Sox twirler since Wes Ferrell broke the tape in 1936.

Previous membership in the 20-Victory Club totaled 23 among active Big Time hurlers. Included are Dutch Leonard of Washington, Bobo Newson, Whit Wyatt, Kirby Higbe, Johnny Allen and Curt Davis of the Dodgers; Ted Lyons and Thornton Lee of the White Sox; Lon Warneke, Bill Lee and Claude Passeau of the Cubs; Hal Schumacher, Carl Hubbell and Cliff Melton of the Giants; Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer of the Reds; Vernon Gomez, Charley Ruffing and Jim Turner of the Yankees; Luke Hamlin of the Pirates; Mel Harder and Vernon Kennedy of the Indians, and Tommy Bridges of the Tigers.

The Dodgers lead with the most 20-game winners—five.

ACCORDING TO REPORTS emanating from Toronto "Whipper Billie" Watson, York Township's popular rassler, assumed a new role when he met Empire Champion John Katan last week. Watson put on the villain's cloak and did himself proud as a pugnacious ringman, so much so that the popular "Whipper" rendered Referee Ernie Powers, former matman of parts, hors de combat. Watson hadn't better try any ring villain tactics on Earl McCready at the Hume Arena Wednesday night, as the big Westerner means business in his drive for a shot at Katan's crown. Promoter Tunney, in keeping with his practice of late, is introducing another new face Wednesday in the person of big Jack Wentworth, who meets Villain Martinez.

London Given 3 Brief Alerts

London, Oct. 19—(CP)—German daylight raiders, taking advantage of low clouds, attacked several points on the east coast of Britain today, causing considerable damage and some casualties and giving London three brief alerts.

The Nazis, flying singly and far apart in an apparent attempt to confuse the ground defences, machine-gunned and bombed scattered areas.

The shopping district of one town was bombed by a low-flying plane, which circled back to spray the main street with machine-gun fire. A number of persons was believed trapped in wreckage.

Hardest hit was an area in East Anglia near the Thames estuary. In one coastal town a raider machine-gunned a train from a low altitude as the engine was pulling into a station. Several coaches were damaged but no casualties were reported.

Another train was machine-gunned near an inland village. Two serious casualties were reported there.

Qualified observers said the German Air Force, making the most of the weather, apparently was carrying out "reprisals" for recent heavy raids on Nazi war industries in northern France.

No bombs were dropped in London itself. The alerts were the first daylight alarms sounded in the capital since Oct. 10.

FRENCH MUNITION

fire. The bombs were dropped just at dusk so the return home could be made under the cover of darkness.

Met Little Opposition

The Lancasters met little opposition and lost only one plane as compared to four U. S. bombers lost on the Lille raid.

In other offensive action Saturday and Sunday, R. C. A. F. fighter squadrons swept low with machine-guns and cannon blazing to attack German troops, railway targets and anti-aircraft posts across the channel. All planes returned safely. The R. C. A. F. communique showed the principal targets were heavy freight trains.

Netherlands railway workers were warned by their government to stop work immediately when air alarms sounded and civilians were advised not to use railway trains during the evening hours.

The statement acknowledged that the attacks would increase the difficulties of the home population, but said it was counting on approval of the measures and added: —"The Allies will, of course, spare the civilian population as much as possible."

While the main weight of bombs probably will be delivered by night bombers, the Saturday raid indicated that specialized jobs will be carried out in daylight with the technique and equipment best suited for each target and mission.

In the midst of these heartening signs, however, the people did not lose sight of the constant threat of mass German attacks on Great Britain.

Prime Minister Churchill warned yesterday that the German attacks this winter "may be heavy and menacing enough to call for everything that civil defence can produce to defeat it."

STILLWELL'S CHINESE SOLDIERS

Still wearing the German-type "coal scuttle" helmet, these Chinese soldiers on parade in India, are typical of the Chinese army of American General Joseph Stillwell, now reorganized and equipped with American weapons. General Stillwell is training his army somewhere in India for the second battle of Burma. About 40 per cent of the men are veterans of the first Burma campaign, which ended when Gen. Stillwell led his men on the now-historic trek to India.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

(Associated Press War Analyst)

You can talk about your new weapons with staggering efficiency, but this world conflict produced no greater marvel than the adaptability of young airmen—most of them mere boys in years—to the complicated science of waging war from the skies.

We have seen this in the battle with the barbarians of the Pacific. And we are seeing it now as bombers scourge Hitler's defences in western Europe.

The vast majority of our air forces aren't even veteran fliers. Yet we see them taking to the air in great four-engined bombers which they wouldn't have been allowed to touch before the war.

Did you ever see one of these lexiathans? In matter of mechanical equipment they are like submarines on wings.

Life and death run side by side through the mutiplicity of delicate instruments which solve higher mathematical problems with a facility which must make even an Einstein raise his eyebrows.

Yet fledgling birdmen are taking to these grim giants as though they were the incubators which hatched them. They fly 'em and make 'em fight.

Now this transition of an airman from a novice to a proved farrior is more or less an instantaneous thing. It is a mental reaction which comes when he first goes under fire.

Upon the reaction depends whether his mind automatically becomes a cool, sure, fast-thinking machine or whether it collapses. And no man can tell in advance how his mind will act.

It is a fascinating study and I've been talking with a lot of airmen on the subject. So what I have to report here has to do with their first reactions in bombing operations rather than with the damage done to enemy targets. Accounts already published make it clear that raids are terribly efficient and will grow more so.

Naturally the period of preparation for the first raid causes fierce nerve tension. That probably is true of every airman and many of them always experience considerable strain no mater how many times they "go over the top."

That's easy to understand. Think of an actor and his first night, or a runner waiting for the gun, or a patient waiting for the surgeon's knife or even for the dentist. Multiply these comparatively trifling nerve strains a thousand times and you begin to see how the airman feels — provided you don't overlook he is about to undertake juggling with his own life and the lives of his comrades.

You find the first pre-raid tension involves three things: fear of being afraid; fear of doing something which will endanger one's comrades or the safety of a great warplane; and fear of failing to execute the expected coup against the enemy. The thought of personal safety is so deeply submerged beneath these other things that it is difficult to find.

One airman told me that while he was waiting for his first raid he was sick with the thoughts of the civilians who might suffer from the bombs dropped by his machine.

"That feeling probably dates back to my training days," he remarked. "We had it hammered into us constantly that in practice we must watch out for the folks beneath us.

"This reason persisted during my first three raids. Finally I got used to the idea but I am cautious. When I look at a 2,000-pound bomb in the bay of my ship I know a lot of people may get hurt. My anxiety is for the women and kids."

The Colonel paused for a moment and his eyes sought the faroff horizon. They he added, hesitantly:—

"You see, I have a three-year-old boy of my own at home. I hate to think of him playing near a bombed factory. That makes me careful."

We find this feeling about civilians cropping up strongly in many airmen.

Canadians Give British Farmers Helping Hand in Harvesting Crop

Troops Strip to Waist and Tackle Greatest Harvest Job

(By WILLIAM STEWART)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Oct. 19 (CP)—Canadian troops, many of them brought up on farms, pitched in to give British farmers a hand in harvesting a record crop this year.

The extent of Canadian soldier help with the harvest has not been estimated in man-hours because it was offered mostly on voluntary basis but British farmers themselves acknowledge its importance in the country's biggest food yield.

Just as it did with British troops stationed in farming areas, help with the harvest took precedence over training with the Canadians. A Canadian army order which placed the added harvest labor at the disposal of the farmers recognized the vital role of Britain's war-expanded agriculture.

The soldier help was made available to the farmers at their request. They paid the government one shilling an eight-hour day for every soldier employed and in addition provided each soldier with food and liquid refreshment. The troops' units provided them with transport to and from the farm fields.

Troops Anxious to Help

Among the units whose men stripped to the waist and tackled the great harvest job were the 17th. Duke of York Hussars of Montreal, the Royal Montreal Regiment, the Royal 22nd., the Carleton and York Regiment from New Brunswick, and the West Nova Scotia Regiment. Troops of every Canadian unit stationed in the vicinity of help-needy farms were available and the men were anxious to help.

Appreciation for assistance given the farmers was expressed to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton in a letter from the chairman the War Agricultural Committee of one county.

F. W. Thomas writing in The London Daily Star quoted one Canadian soldier as saying of one farm, small by western Canadian standards:

"Now back in Alberta where I come from, we grew corn by the square mile instead of by the yard. Look at these little square patches and tiny ricks, like toys. Just like a toy farm I had when I was a kid."

U.S. Soldier Killed When Car Overturns

Kemptville, Ont., Oct. 19 —(CP) —Pte. Carroll J. Howes of the 71st Field Artillery Brigade, Pine Camp, U.S.A., was killed and two other persons seriously injured when an automobile overturned on the Ottawa - Prescott highway Saturday night.

The injured are Pte. Ernest J. Reese of C Battery, 258th Field Artillery, Pine Camp, and Reginald Johnston of Prescott. Both were taken to Brockville General Hospital.

Police said Johnston was driving the car. The two soldiers apparently had been picked up by him somewhere between Prescott and Kemptville. Pte. Reese suffered head injuries, cuts and bruises. Johnston, who recently returned from overseas, where he had broken both his legs, had both legs broken again.

Committed for Trial On Murder Charge

Blind River, Ont., Oct. 19—(CP) —On the evidence of five witnesses one of whom described an allegedly fatal quarrel on the night of Sept. 23, Arthur White, 22, Blind River, was committed for trial at the conclusion of his preliminary hearing here Saturday on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Joseph Simpson, former Spragge Indian, whose body was found on the separate school grounds at Blind River.

White, according to the testimony of the one eye witness of the quarrel, was in the Indian's company the night of his death and knocked him down repeatedly during a street fight.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma picked up a book off the living room table, saying, My, I wish your father would finish this book so I can start it in peaceful comfort. How anybody can dawdle over a murder story is really one of the mysteries of nature, she said.

Which just then something fell out of the book and ma said, Oh my goodness there goes his marker, I've lost his place and that's one of the major calamities for your father.

Are you going to tell him, ma? I said, and she said, He'll find out all too soon.

But G, ma, as long as you did it dont you think it would be the most honorary thing to tell him? I said, and ma said, I hardly think that would be an act of kindness in his behalf. If he thinks he forgot to mark his own place it will be a much more gentle shock to his temper than he thought somebody else lost it for him, and one of the most basic essentials in family life is to avoid stirring up needless friction, as you will find out for yourself when you get older, she said.

Maybe I'm old enough now, ma, I said. I mean pop forgot his front door-key today and I was playing with it pretending it was a skeleton key and trying to open different locks with it, and it got bent a little and maybe it wasn't very good for it. So anyways, ma, I've admitted it to you so that makes my conscience clear, but do you think you better stir up useless friction by telling pop? I said, and ma said, Well of all things, that's entirely different.

Why is it, ma? I said, and she said, Never mind, we'll see.

Meaning she probably wouldn't. Which she didn't.

"Come Live With Me"

With James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr sharing romantic honors in one of the most interesting films to be shown this year, "Come Live With Me," opened Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

Seldom has Hollywood produced a story so well fitted for its choice of stars. The plot deals with the plight of a beautiful Austrian refugee who marries a penniless young author in order to obtain a quota number and thus prevent deportation to her native Austria. The complications which develop from the marriage make for extremely amusing entertainment.

As the young author who finally decides to cease dreaming up plots and write from actual experience, Stewart is superb. His scene in the office of publisher Ian Hunter is one of the high spots of his screen career. Miss Lamarr as the girl caught in the web of indecision plus romance reveals a new side to her glamorous personality. She is real, human and sympathetic and does a grand bit of work throughout the entire film.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Men of San Quentin"

(First Belleville Showing)

Here is a very unusual motion picture starring J. Anthony Hughes and Dick Curtis crammed with exciting action and human sentiment that will appeal to men and women alike. Outstanding performances are contributed by Dick Curtis as a convict going mad in solitary confinement; Jeffrey Sayre as the trusty who kills the crooked deputy warden and then commits suicide; and Art Miles as the master brains who plans a jailbreak that meets with an unexpected ending. A strong and fast-paced thriller.

"Moscow Strikes Back"

The first feature-length picture of World War II, "Moscow Strikes Back" is now on the McCarthy Theatre screen. This picture is not for weaklings. Its horrifying scenes will test the nerves of even vigorous men! But here are facts that must be told to every man and woman who is hoping and praying for a better world to come. "Moscow Strikes Back" brings to the screen the first authentic pictures of those momentous hours when aged men and women took arms to drive back the Nazi hordes. "Moscow Strikes Back" brings to the screen the actual scenes of defenceless women and children victims of the depraved Nazi method of warfare. Five cameramen lost their lives photographing the scenes that will shock and horrify you, but this film presents the actual war on the Russian front, a gallant tribute to all its defenders. In addition to "Moscow Strikes Back," the musical comedy hit, "Jail House Blues," featuring Nat Pendleton, Anne Gwynne and Robert Paige, also latest Universal News events is now on the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Crossroads"

A combination of swift-moving action and powerful, believable drama, plus the presence of Wm. Powell and Hedy Lamarr, make M.G.M.'s "Crossroads" now on the Belle Theatre screen one of the year's most entertaining pictures. The production has pace, balance, suspense and is expertly acted from the leads down to the smallest bit part. Every role is in the hands of an expert. The sure, meaningful touches so necessary for a smart, smooth film are injected in just the right quantity by Director Jack Conway. And the build-up to the smashing and unexpected climax is one the neatest cinematic achievements of all time.

"Crossroads" is studded with big names of the stage and screen. In addition to Powell and the alluring Miss Lamarr, the film has a stunning cast of favorites including Claire Trevor, Basil Rathbone, Felix Bressart, Margaret Wycherly, Sig Ruman, Vladimir Sokoloff, H. B. Warner, Guy Bates Post, Reginald Owen, Frank Conroy, Philip Merivale, Fritz Leiber, James Rennie and Mitchell Lewis.

The action takes place in Paris in 1932. Powell, a successful French career diplomat, is victimized by a blackmail gang, headed by Rathbone and Miss Trevor. They prove Powell is masquerading under a false identity and that he is really a thief and murderer of fifteen years before. They threaten to expose his past unless he pays heavily for their silence.

Powell makes the transition from the flip Nick Charles of the "Thin Man" series to the harassed diplomat of "Crossroads" in splendid style. Miss Lamarr, as Powell's wife, gives a sympathetic performance. Basil Rathbone handles the menace role cleverly and with restraint, while Claire Trevor, as a night club singer and Rathbone's accomplice, makes a sultry but shrewd siren.

The sets are lovely and the background music by Bronislau Kaper add much to the mood of the story.

The Belle Newsreel, a colorful cartoon, and "For the Common Defence", an entertaining and thoroughly enjoyable Crime Doesn't Pay story precede the feature attraction.

CHAPTER TWENTY THREE

Tragedy

He rose with her. "If I get that job this afternoon, I'll call you. If I don't, I'll call you anyway—to say good-bye."

She walked away, not seeing the look of determination in his face. She forgot him the instant he was out of sight. Always, when she pulled on her glove, she felt that bracelet Max had given her.

She was wearing the bracelet that evening when Stephen called and said, trying to control the excitement in his voice, "Well, I landed that job."

"He didn't freeze you then?"

"Maybe it was the coffee. He was swell. Underneath all that dignity was a sense of humor. And it isn't just a job. There's a chance to do some really creative, constructive work. Not the routine sort of things I had at the other place. This is a big company. I haven't anybody to celebrate with me if you won't."

"Tonight?"

"What's wrong with tonight?"

"Nothing. We'll make it tonight. At eight." And she thought, "I mustn't hurt him. If I find he's caring for me, I won't see him. I'll never hurt anyone as Max has hurt me."

He was there before eight and in the living room talking with her parents when she came down. And he was the Stephen who wanted terribly to be liked who took her dancing at Clinton's best hotel.

"Nothing is good enough for tonight," he said, looking at her acrcss a small table. "It must be champagne."

"I hope you always have the best."

"You said I would, didn't you?" He frowned. "You always wear that bracelet, I've notcied. I've never seen you without it."

"It was a gift."

"I thought so." He studied her an instant. "You're a funny girl."

"You mean you don't understand me?"

"I mean you always make me talk about myself so that you won't have to talk about yourself. I've told you more about myself than I've ever told anyone. You make me want to talk. It's not very interesting to you."

"It's your night to celebrate, not to analyze me."

"Okay. Shall we dance?"

So it was not champagne for reunion with Max, but champagne with a young man named Stephen Larrabee who had got a job that day.

It was July. Judith had been asleep on a bench. She woke up and looked at small white clouds gaily chase one another across a blue sky. She and Stephen with Katherine and Ralph, now married, had come to the small seaside resort for the week-end. Doubtlessly they had gone back to the hotel to dress for dinner after deciding not to awaken her.

Sitting up, she drew her tanned legs up under her, adjusted the strap of the blue satin bathing suit and shook her hair loose. The scene about her was a typical seashore summer scene—people stretched out full length in the sun, tiny brown children digging ferociously in the sand and filling buckets only to spill out the sand and fill the buckets again; the vivid bathing caps of those in the surf.

July . . . . To review the past months, which fortunately would never come again, was to think of a series of pleasant working days and pleasant evenings in Isobel Barth's splendidly managed home or with Katherine and Ralph and Stephen. As in her childhood, no sharp dramas had punctuated the serenity of recent days and nights. As in her childhood, too, there was only the drama in her, though now it was a clearly defined conflict. It was Max—still real and vital and demanding, still a mystery, still loved, despite distance and silence, capable of stirring in her a sharp longing.

It seemed incredible that what had existed only three months had been and was the strongest force of her life. How simple and easy it would be for a bystander to say, "Forget him. How can you be so foolish as to go on caring for a man to whom you were only an amusing side-issue? Forget him." But how could you forget that to which you had given the best of your thoughts and love even though it last only a day?

Emily's letters from the small stone house in Connecticut that she and Tim had bought gave her an inner glow. Emily was very happy. She had been accepted by Tim's parents as the daughter they had always wanted. When was Judith coming up to see them? Judith had written that she would not be the third party in a honeymoon house. Actually she had a dread of New York. Occasionally Emily saw Phyllis, but Judith knew that the reason they did not see each other more frequently was due to Phyllis' indolence rather than to any sense of superiority Emily might feel toward an old friend of her less affluent days.

Knowing that Emily would not question her about Max, Judith had written, "Max is in Venezuela and it isn't likely I shall ever see him again. Most observers would say I had made a great mistake. I disagree with them. It's over and finished and I've been hurt, but perhaps only you of my friends will understand when I say I'm still in love with him."

The small white clouds were still gaily chasing one another across the sky though now mothers and nurse-maids were frantically collecting the tiny brown children and carrying them, kicking and screaming, from the beach. The air was cooler and soon another magnificent sunset would color the churning sea. Soon lights would be turned on along the boardwalk; and in the small hotels and cocktail lounges girls who had looked brown and boyish in abbreviated bathing suits by day would look utterly feminine in dancing frocks by night.

Katherine, Ralph and Stephen probably were waiting for her. Stephen. . . Her mouth curved into an amused smile and her eyes softened when she thought of him. For it was tenderness and pride that he inspired in her, as though he were something she had made. She was proud of his rapid progress in his new job and had listened to every phrase of it and every forward step he had taken in it since April. Frequently he apologized for talking about it, but continued to talk, happily forgetting his previous apologies.

Never were their conservations intimate, for rarely had they been alone since he met and liked Ralph and Katherine. A party of four is scarcely conducive to intimate talk. Moreover, Stephen seemed to enjoy Nicholas Barth's company so much that often Judith and her parents and Stephen spent an evening in the Barth home. And yet the fact that she was not the only girl he saw and that he seemed to make a special point of telling her casually about his other "dates" strengthened her growing belief that he was not in love with her and that therefore she could not hurt him. Also both Harriet and Katherine mentioned seeing him with other attractipe Clinton girls.

She told herself with a little amusement that she had flattered herself when she had believed that he cared for her and to relieve Harriet's anxiety over the situation she had said, "I'm Stephen's listening-post. He's never tried to kiss me." And Harriet had remarked, laughing, "I should think you'd be very annoyed not to be kissed. Don't brag about it."

Now the beach was almost deserted and there were shadows on the ocean. Judith picked up her sun glasses and bag and stood up to put her arms into the white beach robe. She thought, "I'll be fresh for a long evening after a nap," when she saw Stephen in a fresh white linen suit step from the boardwalk to the sand and hurry to her. He seemed queer. His eyes and a wild look in them. He wasn't smiling. Usually when he walked toward her and their eyes met, he would smile a little shyly even after all these months.

"Judith!"

"What is it? What."

"My brothers! I just had a telephone call. . . . My brother Dick's been killed! . . . Plane crash. . . He bought an old crate—" Stephen turned his head away from her, bit his lip and shook his head. "Dick, my kid brother. . . I told him not to buy that old crate, to save up for a better plane. Now. . . My mother. . . ." When he looked at her again, tears were glistening in his eyes. "I've got to go home at once. Nothing's been taken care of there. They are waiting for me."

Judith put out her hand and touched his arm. "Can I help? Is there anything I can?"

He hesitated. Then, "You could come with me. . . . It won't be pleasant."

"I've been in things that weren't pleasant. Have you told Katherine and Ralph?"

"Yes. They're waiting at the hotel for us."

"Then let's not waste time. I'll have Katherine call my mother."

"There's no train out of here. We'll have to drive. Are you sure you want to do this?"

"You said I could help. I want to help you."

"Thanks."

Half an hour later they were driving silently through the twilight. Of the tragedy he could not speak, she thought, lest the hurt little boy in him cry, lest the memories of a younger brother cause his hand on the wheel to become unsteady.

When darkness dissolved the twilight, he said, "If you'd like to stop somewhere for dinner. . . I suppose we'd better. I don't imagine at home they've thought of eating."

They had dinner at a roadside restaurant and were soon on the highway crowded with Saturday night traffic.

Only then did he speak and then hoarsely, jerkily. "Dick was a sort of favorite of mine. We were pals even though he was the one who was always getting into jams and accidents. He used to laugh about getting the wrong breaks. Mother begged him not to buy that plane. It was worn out. She'd never go out and look up at him when he said he'd be flying over our home. I can't believe it! I can't. . . . If we could just get through and not be held up this way!"

"We've only about two more hours. Try to be patient."

"Dick said that this was too slow a way for him to travel . . . I'm afraid it's going to be pretty bad for you at home."

"It isn't bad for me at all, Stephen. There are things I can do, answer the telephone and the door and talk to people—things your family won't feel like doing."

"And she raised him for this to happen to him! I can't understand these things! It isn't right! It isn't fair! He's bigger than I am, six feet, three, and with everything to live for!"

"You aren't supposed to understand these things."

"I guess you thought I looked awfully funny when I came to you on the beach."

"I knew something was wrong."

He said, "Dick," under his breath and shook his head.

She knew how interminable the journey must seem to him and in the silence that settled between them again it occurred to her that a year ago she would not have come with him. The self-contained, satisfied Judith of a year ago who had never been hurt by anything would have regarded his suggestion to accompany him to a grief-stricken family as a breach of good manners. Were her sympathies nearer surface than they had been a year ago? Because a year ago the ache of loss had been something of which she had only heard and read about. Funny, that she had to meet and love and lose Max so that she could be of small service to Stephen Larrabee in distress.

The Kinsmen Club wish to thank the citizens of Belleville for their generous response on Saturday to their Milk for Britain Tag Day; also the ladies who unselfishly gave their time as taggers. O19

IN MEMORIAM

SIMMONS — In loving memory of a loving husband, father and son, Wallace D. Simmons, who left us in sorrow, October 19, 1939.

The days have been long and dreary—
The pain no one can tell.
The heart aches, the sorrow still lingers with us here.
For we have lost a dear one
But God knows all things best
And some day we hope to meet you
In that eternal rest;
For death can not separate those who truly love;
Each lives in the other's mind and speech.

Sadly missed by your wife; son Ira; daughter Grace; Father and Mother. O19
